How They're Hitting

Oliva, Minnesota Twins' sophomore outfielder and the circuit's defending batting champion, has taken over the lead with a .317 average. He has been sidelined since last Wednesday when he was hurt during a game against Kansas City Athletics.

Since Oliva's injury, Yastrzemski had collected only two hits in 16 times at bat for Boston Red Sox, lost seven points and dropped into the runner-up position at .315.

The winning AL average this season could be the lowest in the majors since George Stirnweiss of New York Yankees established an top mark .309 in 1945. Pete Runnels of Boston led with .320 in 1960; Yastrzemski with .321 in 1963 and Oliva with .323 in 1964.

Fred Whitfield of Cleveland Indians rushed up to tie Baltimore Orioles' Brooks Robinson for third place in the 1965 competition last week. Each is hitting .306.

CLEMENTE LEADS

In the National League, Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente holds a nine point lead over Hank Aaron of Milwaukee Braves. Clemente fell one point to .335 with five hits in 18 trips last week. Aaron dropped two points to .326, collecting seven safeties in 25 tries.

Willie Mays of San Francisco Giants held third place, boosting his average three points to .320 on an 8-for-31 showing. He is followed by Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds with .313 and Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs with .311. The figures include Sunday's games.

Mays slammed three home runs, lifting his leading total to 49. Deron Johnson is the runs batted in leader with 104, six more than he had a week ago. Braves' Tony Cosigliaro hit two homers, increasing his AL leading figure to 30. Rocky Colavito, Cleveland's veteran slugger, is the RBI leader with 102. He drove in five runs in last week's games.

Will Hold World Regatta

By CRAIG SWAYZE
St. Catharines Standard

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Official sanction has been received for the holding of a world rowing regatta here in 1967.

Announcement of the approval, granted by the International Rowing Federation (FISA), was made public here Monday by the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen. FISA is governing body of world rowing.

The regatta, to be known as the Canadian centennial North American rowing championships, will be Canadian rowing's way of marking Canada's 100th birthday. Crews and sculls from various parts of the world will be brought here to compete in the four-day affair.

However, in giving unanimous approval to the Canadian event, scheduled for Aug. 10-13, FISA officials said the current Henley course remedial program must be completed to their satisfaction.

The federal government now is working on the final part of a $400,000 dredging program along the St. Catharines course. First steps toward equipping the site with international class rowing facilities will be taken soon.

Are you the one person in three who might benefit from a low-cost Seaboard Mortgage Loan?

Borrow up to $10,000- as long as 10 years

What is a Seaboard Mortgage Loan? It is a low-cost loan for people who own, or are in the process of buying a home. The money you have invested in your property is excellent collateral for a Seaboard Mortgage Loan. And this means you get one of the lowest rates of interest to be found anywhere, because real estate offers such excellent security. A Seaboard Mortgage Loan has the added advantage of letting you borrow up to 80% of the value of your property, as compared to approximately 66⅔ for most conventional mortgages.

When should you take out a Seaboard Mortgage Loan? Only when it's to your advantage. This can be worked out between you and your Seaboard manager. You and he may find that a Seaboard Mortgage Loan can help you, as it has other people:

- To reduce your monthly mortgage payments.
- To pay off high-cost charge accounts and loans for furniture, car, clothing, etc. Often articles which you think you are buying at a saving are actually costing you an unnecessarily high price because of the variety of service and interest charges.
- To put your children through university or to make home improvements.
- To help you purchase a new or older home if you are having difficulty in raising the necessary mortgage money.
- To assist you in selling your home if a prospective buyer has difficulty in raising cash to your mortgage.

How much can you borrow? You can take out a Seaboard Mortgage Loan up to $10,000 or 80% of the fair valuation of your home. What's more, monthly payments can be planned to fit your budget and leave you with extra cash each month.

How about monthly payments? You can take up to 10 years to repay your Seaboard Mortgage Loan and monthly payments can be arranged to suit your budget. Interest rates are low—approximately 12% a year computed monthly on the unpaid balance. This means that each payment you make reduces the amount of interest you pay.

- Your contract can be renegotiated anytime.
- Special low-cost life insurance available that pays your contract in full in event of death.
- Contract can be repaid at any time.
- No brokerage fees.
- No "balance" or "balloon payments."
- Minimum registration, appraisal and legal fees.
- All terms fully explained so that you completely understand your contract.
- Seaboard's years of experience in the mortgage loan business.

Phone or write for all the details about the low-cost Seaboard mortgage loan. Or, better still, call in for a personal interview with your Seaboard manager. Evening appointments can be arranged.

Wife of David McCallum Starting Out on Her Own

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The faces in the MGM commissary bore the same message: Who is that brown-haired beauty in the large white hat?

The first was that many of the studio workers knew her as Mrs. David McCallum, wife of the star of The Man from U.N.C.L.E. and most of the time a blonde.

"It's a wig," she explained. "I'm not quite sure why I wore it, but I thought it might be fun."

As Jill Ireland, the reason for her being at MGM was not to visit her husband but to prepare for the role of a Russian astronaut in My Favorite Martian.

"I'm working simply because I want to work," she said. "I like to act and I've got to make it on my own, without David's help."

A FORMER DANCER

The actor came doing fine even before the Scottish actor came into her life. Trained in the ballet, she was dancing on English stages from the age of 12. At 18 she was tapped by J. Arthur Rank for a star buildup. During the filming of Robbery Under Arms she met a young actor named David McCallum.

"He drove me home from the studio every night," she recalled. "One night he talked about what a wonderful, exciting life we could have together in our business if we got married. I was 21 and he was 23 and we were both full of youthful enthusiasm. We got married six days after we met."

Three sons arrived during the next five years, and Jill followed her husband to America, where he came to play Judas in The Greatest Story Ever Told. They stayed on when he signed for U.N.C.L.E.," which has resulted in an almost Beatlesque following for David.

"Now it is time for me to tend to my own career," Jill confessed. "The last week of shooting with David, nothing like that. It's simply that a woman must have her own life nowadays, even though she is a wife and mother."

No Contract Conacher Quits Camp

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Rookie Brian Conacher, unable to obtain a two-year contract and reassurance he would remain in the National Hockey League, left the Toronto Maple Leaf training camp Monday.

"Conacher has the potential to be an NHLer," says manager-coach Punch Imlach, "but whether he could play in the league or needs further seasoning is another question."

Imlach said it would be unfair to other players if he offered Conacher a contract after only three practices.

Son of a former hockey great, the late Lionel Conacher, the 20-year-old left-winger said this week he would decide by Thursday whether to give pro hockey a tryout or return to university.

He played two years for Canada's national hockey team while attending university. He apparently left the camp for London, Ont., to enrol at the University of Western Ontario.

Computer Says Twins, Giants

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It's still San Francisco Giants versus Minnesota Twins in the World Series, according to Franklin Institute's baseball-oriented computer.

The Giants are a 20-to-1 choice to beat out Los Angeles Dodgers while the odds on the Twins' triumph in the American League are so high now the Honeywell 1400 stopped computing them.

The computer figures the Giants will end the season with a 95-67 record, followed by Los Angeles with 92-70. Tied for third will be Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates at 89-73 and Milwaukee Braves follow in fifth with 88-74.

Chicago White Sox will be second in the AL, the computer predicts, followed by Baltimore Orioles, Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians.

INCREASES LEAD

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Ukraine increased its National Soccer League lead by gaining a 1-1 tie with Toronto Hakoah Monday night. The result left Ukraine with 32 points in the standings, three more than second-place Sudbury Italia. Hakoah, now with 27 points, moved within a point of third-place Toronto Hungaria.

Diefenbaker Outlines His Farm Policy

By KEN KELLY

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson Monday night that if he heads a Conservative government after the Nov. 8 election, wheat sales will be expanded and livestock producers helped to meet the growing demands for their product.

The Progressive Conservative leader outlined some of his party's agriculture policy, including a national dairy commission and wider diversion measures, at a meeting which unanimously nominated him candidate for Prince Albert constituency for the sixth time.

Repeating an earlier pledge to "clean up the mess" at Ottawa, he said a Conservative administration would take quick steps to bring back "Bonnie Hat Banks" from the United States, Russia, Communist China and the Seafarers' International Union, fled Canada after his conviction on charges arising out of Great Lakes violence.

"If we take office . . . I think there will be a petition presented to bring back that man so that justice shall not be denied."

APPLAUD REFERENCES

The references announced at more than 1,000 gave Mr. Diefenbaker applause to Mr. Pearson's description of him as a "one-day parliamentarian" and to Judge Aiden Meunier of Montreal while on bail pending appeal of a criminal conviction and Banks.

The Liberal government cannot be trusted, he said, to keep honesty in government, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

The people of Canada want to know what he (Prime Minister Pearson) is going to do to clean up the mess at Ottawa, a press conference.

On agriculture, the Conservative leader said the Liberal government lost the western farmer $140,000,000 on the Canadian Wheat Board's initial payment to producers.

He promised a Conservative government would take steps to raise the price of milk and cream to encourage production.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a Conservative government would set up a national dairy commission to see that legislative measures are taken to meet the growing demands for dairy products.

He promised to set up a royal commission to study the problems of Indians that their treaty rights have been abrogated would be heard and adjusted.

IS DISAPPOINTED

The Conservative leader disappointed John Diefenbaker bowed to the decision of Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin not to join him as a PC candidate in the federal election.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Roblin's decision will make no difference to the outcome of the party's fortunes, however lost in the 1963 federal election.

He expressed his regrets that Mr. Roblin won't be at his side as a candidate. He said Mr. Roblin is a man of high principles who "having been elected to do a job in Manitoba decided that job could not be left undone."

"I'm sure he'll take his usual part in the campaign," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

The Roblin decision appeared to be a serious blow to the hopes of many Conservatives, including Mr. Diefenbaker. They wanted the 46-year-old Manitoba leader to go to Ottawa in preparation for the day when the party picks a successor to Mr. Diefenbaker.

After receiving news of Mr. Roblin's decision, Mr. Diefenbaker cancelled plans to do some door-to-door campaigning here before his nominating convention.

Douglas Finds Unexpected Rift in Ranks

By DENNIS OECHARD

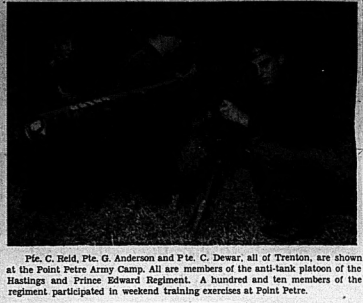
PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—Tommy Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, preached his first speech of his initial election campaign swing Monday night with an apology for the unexplained absence of the party's candidate in this Cariboo constituency.

Mr. Douglas had intended for candidate Fred Atkinson was flying on the platform at Mr. Douglas addressed a crowd of about 500 in a 1,000-seat school auditorium.

The NDP leader told the rally he hoped Mr. Atkinson would reconsider the personal reasons expressed in a radio resignation Monday morning, less than 24 hours after his nomination had been made at Cariboo riding candidate in the Nov. 8 federal election.

In his speech, Mr. Douglas reiterated a platform outline delivered last week to a regional conference in Vancouver of the International Woodworkers of America (CLC). It included a 50-per-cent increase in tax exemptions, a massive public housing program, a comprehensive manpower training program and a plan for universal medical care.

He said the federal government must lead the way to develop a second Trans-Canada Highway.



Douglas aides hunted all afternoon for Mr. Atkinson.

Fred Atkinson said he had received several phone calls after his nomination Sunday in a two-way contest with Ken Kiernan of Prince George.

Mr. Atkinson, business agent here for the Pulp and Sage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, won by seven votes. Mr. Rutherford, a school teacher, drew 12.

An earlier party official said several party members felt Mr. Atkinson, a member of the old Social Credit Party in 1963, was not in July, had not been a party member long enough to stand former Bill 43 minister for the Nov. 8 election.

Mr. Rutherford and several of his supporters were in Dawson Creek, 50 miles south of Dawson Creek, 50 miles south of Dawson Creek, 50 miles south of

Paper Says Offer Made to Shareholders

STRATFORD (CP) — The Beacon-Herald says a conditional offer was presented last week to buy control of British Mortgage and Trust Co.

Shareholders of British Mortgage, in financial difficulty since last July because of its involvement with Atlantic Acceptance Corp., voted a week ago to merge with Victoria and Grey Trust Co., of Lindsay, Ont.

The Beacon-Herald says the conditional offer—not revealed to shareholders when they voted at a special meeting to approve the merger—was contained in a telegram sent by H. E. Monquette, president of North America Trust Co., of Montreal.

In Toronto, a company spokesman said the conditional offer had been considered "of no benefit to the shareholders." The spokesman said the shareholders' meeting had been called specifically to consider the proposed merger with Victoria and Grey.

There was no indication who North America Trust Co. was acting for in making the conditional offer.

MOTORISTS LEAVE

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)—A late-summer storm which brought up to 18 inches of snow in parts of Wyoming late last week is lingering, with unseasonal cold temperatures and overcast skies. However, all roads have been opened and no stranded in Rawlins Thursday estimated 4,000 motorists might have left.

110 Hasty Pees Members Attend Training Exercises

PICTON (Staff) — One hundred and ten troops, including officers, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Militia, this weekend attended training exercises at Point Petre. They arrived at the camp on Saturday at noon and stayed until late Sunday afternoon. The Prince Edward County Camp at Pointe Petre was fairly bristling with troops on Sunday and the exercises they conducted in the foggy weather conditions were most realistic. Training was conducted on anti-tank weapons, the new N.A.T.O automatic rifle FNC and a signals platoon were operating the latest portable transceivers.

Healthy appetites were displayed by the young men of the regiment when they came to it from their exhaustive routines. However most of them were happy with their weekend experience. This was something real, a real taste of army life.

The plan and method of training for this year is considerably different than in previous years. Rather than have the usual two-hour per week course for the militia a monthly week-end of practical manoeuvres is on the agenda. This will greatly affect the training aspect giving a much more practical training as well as providing more interest for the militiamen.

Saturday night the men slept outside and some on the bare wooden floors of the camp buildings. A medical doctor was in attendance and cooking was done out of doors, in true army fashion.

Lt. Col. K. D. Willcocks, Commander of the Regiment, said the new plan was working out splendidly. Much more could be accomplished with the uninterrupted time allotted on the weekend rather than confining the training to the two hour a week period. Strength of the regiment is holding up well. Young men are attending from Port Hope on the West to Napanee on the East Prince Edward County membership is surprisingly low, in spite of the fact that the county is the "Home" of the regiment. Among the ranks were troops from Campbellford, Trenton, Hastings, Port Hope, Picton and Napanee.

Cider Slaking Thirst of B.C. Drinkers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The taste of cider is slaking the thirst—and in some cases the temper — of many parched persons in British Columbia's beer strike.

With only two small Interior breweries still operating, most of the province's beer parlors have been closed for weeks.

But a few have remained open, selling apple cider instead. There are some who have expressed amazement at the result. Others talk of the "cider revolution."

"I haven't seen a row in this bar for three weeks since we started selling cider," one hotel owner here said Monday.

"When beer was the main attraction we spent most of our time settling disputes and ejecting belligerents."

CLAIM IT COOLS

The cider sippers claim their brew cools them and leaves them happy. Beer, they say, used to make them feel rowdy at times.

Whatever the reaction to the supercharged apple juice, all agree its kick is much more potent than beer.

"I used to drink 36 to 40 glasses of beer at a sitting," said a man who can handle no more than seven pints of cider.

"As far as I'm concerned beer hits you in the head and cider hits at the knees.

"You can't drink it (cider) as fast. You remain calm until you get up for a walk then you feel it in the knees."

MAY BE SHORT LIVED

The 12 Lower Mainland hotels which have been serving cider have been too successful. The supply could run dry in a matter of days.

Wineries also report increases in sales.

Police find the switch by traditional beer drinkers to something stronger has its drawbacks. Impaired driving arrests were unusually high this weekend—for the third straight weekend.

The union is seeking a 10-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract. The companies offered 28 cents over two years. The present rates range from $2.50 to $3.10 an hour.

Those Montrealers

One Caught, One Flees

Uncle Sam Convicts Rivard - - - But Georges Lemay Escapes

LAREDO, Tex. (CP)—Lucien Rivard's strolls through the law and along the shady side of the political street were at a dead end in the sacrus country today as he awaited sentence on narcotics charges that could bring 50 years in penitentiary.

The notorious Montrealer—one of the "biggest" with everything a Texas jury could hand him Tuesday, three Canadian co-defendants were hit with single-count convictions and face up to 20 years.

The four, accused in what the U.S. government charged was a vast international conspiracy to pump heroin into the retail veins of some $200,000,000 into the United States by way of Canada and Mexico, will come up for sentence in 30 or 40 days.

Meanwhile, it was expected they would be moved to a new and secret location and kept under the tight guard that made their seven-day trial in this town on the Mexican border the most heavily protected in the history of the southwest.

The two with Rivard—whose break from Montreal's Bordeaux jail last March foiled U.S. authorities once—and his fellow prisoners may be taken for sentence to Houston, 300 miles away and seat of the southwest Texas federal district district. Judge Ben C. Connally will await a report from Canadian authorities on their pasts.

Rivard, accused as director of at least a section of a many-country network, was convicted on both charges against him. One was that he conspired with the three Canadians and others to smuggle heroin into the U.S. The other was "causing"—with two men still unscaptured—the smuggling of the particular 96-ounce shipment seized here on Oct. 10, 1963.

Single counts of conspiring were aimed on Charles Emile Groleau, 56, described by the prosecution as Rivard's "executive officer"; Julien Gagnon, alias Jerry Massey, 36, a former beauty shop operator, and Joseph Raymond Jones, 28, former salesman. The last two were alleged to have run drugs into Montreal from Europe.

After three hours and five minutes of deliberation, an all-male jury emerged late Tuesday through a phalanx of guards with guns on the hip and into an air-conditioned courtroom where the four accused were waiting stoically.

The chances of light sentences appeared scant. The minimum is five years on each count, without probation or parole though with time off for good behavior. Self-styled dope courier Joseph Michele Cleron of Montreal, whose testimony spun the major part of the web around the four, got 10 years when he talked and pleaded guilty after being taken into custody here with 76 pounds valued at some $50,000,000.

MIAMI, Fla. (CP - AP) — Georges Lemay of Montreal, who lived a life of luxury as a fugitive for four years before the Early Bird satellite put him in a cell, is again at large.

The dapper Canadian, accused of leading the gang which looted a Montreal bank in 1961, smashed an unbarred window on the seventh floor of the Dade County jail and slid 90 feet down a cleaning hose to the ground Tuesday night.

Waiting for him were three men in a new sedan. Minutes after jailers missed him, the car was spotted speeding away to the north. It was only the second escape from the four-year-old jail on the edge of downtown Miami.

How did Lemay get from his cell on the fifth floor to the seventh?

"That," said a police lieutenant, "is the $64 question."

Authorities were looking into the possibility that Lemay, a never short of money, had a little help on the inside.

Police and the FBI haunted the hangouts of Lemay and his friends in Miami Beach, but if their sergeant turned up missing, they weren't talking about them.

Lemay is a skilled sailor and there are hundreds of secluded coves along the Florida coast from which he could put to sea.

Lemay was arrested last May 9 aboard his fancy yacht in Fort Lauderdale. Before police led him away, he paid his marina bill, peeling off notes from a fat-sized roll of $100 bills.

Since then, he has been in jail while fighting deportation to Canada. The immigration service is trying to kick him out of the United States on the grounds that he has no valid country illegally. Lemay had said he had no objection to deportation, he just didn't want to go to Canada.

The cleaning hose, a Siamese cable connected to an electric wire and a high pressure cleaning device, was normally kept on the 20th floor, Lemay said they did not know how it got to the seventh floor.

A warrant has been issued for Lemay on charges of breaking and entering and theft of $300,000 in connection with a theft at a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in 1961.

A total of 377 safety deposit boxes at the branch were broken into, but the exact amount was not established because of the reluctance of the box owners to talk.

The stocky, five - foot - eight, college - educated Lemay became Canada's most wanted person. He was hunted all over the world for four years but not discovered until the RCMP flashed his picture on the first Early Bird satellite television program.

Chinese Declare India Dismantles Posts On Border

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — The threat of a border war between India and China in the Himalayas eased today shortly before a second Chinese ultimatum was due to expire.

China gave India until noon EDT today to dismantle its military installations on the remote Sikkim - Tibet border or "face grave consequences."

But Tuesday night a New China news agency report from Peking said Indian troops had retreated from four passes on the frontier after destroying border installations. The implication of this was that India had complied with the Chinese demand.

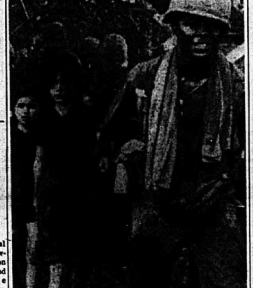
However, an Indian spokesman said today that if any military installations were destroyed, the Chinese "must have done it themselves."

The Indian spokesman added that China could hardly expect India to send troops into Chinese territory to destroy anything.

Peking's report said the four passes involved in the alleged Indian withdrawal were Nathu La, Jelep La, Cho La, and Tungchu La, all between the Indian protectorate of Sikkim and Chinese-controlled Tibet.

Nathu La was the area Tuesday in which there were reported exchanges, of fire between Indian and Chinese troops.

The Peking report said all "intruding troops in the four passes have fled" and added: "The Chinese side of the inside control of the site of the intruding Indian troops."



The Chinese-Indian war of nerves was being waged against a background that saw India and Pakistan early today agree to a ceasefire in the undeclared war over Kashmir.

Pearson Outlines Platform

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government will wage a low-key campaign for re-election on a platform of new welfare and education programs, Prime Minister Pearson said Tuesday.

Speaking at a meeting of 365 candidates and party workers that formally kicked off the Liberal campaign, he said he will avoid discussing "Tory slanders" and personalities.

Canadians were "tired of ravishbuckling politics and manufactured doom" and wanted a strong central government that would maintain economic growth.

He indicated that the big planks in the Liberal platform will be the following:

—Increased aid to universities.

—A "massive" program of job training for the unemployed and unskilled workers.

—An integrated welfare program, designed to fill gaps between several existing plans, planned for early next year.

"In all these, and many other matters, there must be federal-provincial co-operation," he said.

Hard bargaining with the provinces was planned on taxsharing and "economic and constitutional matters." Far-reaching and relatively unknown.

His return to active politics 24 years after he quit the Diefenbaker government was cemented Tuesday night as a meeting of 300 Northumberland riding Conservatives chose him unanimously as their candidate in the Nov. 8 federal election.

The 55-year-old former trade minister said it was the proudest moment of his life. Signaling an all-out fight to recapture Northumberland from the Liberals, he promised to appear "promptly at 9 a.m. today on Cobourg's main thoroughfare to start getting to know you people."

After representing the riding of Toronto Broadview in the House of Commons from 1950 to 1963, the wealthy and urbane Mr. Hees last week accepted an invitation from the Conservative association in predominantly - rural Northumberland to stand as its candidate.

Two others bowed out at the Tuesday night nominating convention to assure him of an acclamation. In his acceptance speech, he said he would try to

Committee Favors Auto Bill

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate finance committee has voted a minor change in the bill to implement the auto agreement with Canada, Republican Everett Dirksen said Tuesday.

The committee completed five days of public hearings Tuesday and immediately launched private meetings to discuss various proposals for amending the bill.

No major changes are expected because President Johnson has made the agreement with Canada a priority item for Congress.

Dirksen, Senate minority leader, told reporters the committee decided to make congressional approval necessary before Johnson can offer to extend the arrangements made with Canada to any other country.

The agreement ends tariffs for North American production of most vehicles and original parts. The bill would have enabled the president to do the

Two Die In Blast In North

NORTH BAY (CP)—An explosion Tuesday night at an explosives manufacturing blockhouse of Du Pont of Canada near here killed two men and seriously injured another.

Dead are Eric Booth, 29, of Trout Creek Ont., a father of five; and Bruce Hayward, 31, of Callander, Ont., a father of four.

In hospital here is Mervin Smith, 22, of South River, Ont.

The two dead men were working in the production building and Smith was just outside.

Witnesses said an orange-colored flash shot straight up and then a thunderous blast by an intense shock wave. The blast was heard five miles away.

A fireball went about 300 feet into the air and was visible for 30 miles.

The building was completely demolished and small fires that started, extinguished themselves. Du Pont sealed the plant off and used their own firefighting equipment on the scene.

Cause of the explosion was not immediately known.

A second blockhouse was damaged in the blast. The blockhouses — several hundred feet square—are two of several that handle separate stages of the explosives manufacturing process.

A company spokesman said they are surrounded by high banks of earth where any hazard is involved.

"That way, if they explode they go up instead of sideways," he said.

About 30 other men were working at the plant at the time.

Jim Long of Langton, Ont., said he saw the explosion from about 30 miles north of North Bay.

Pakistan To Quit UN Later Unless Kashmir Solved

By BORIS MISKEW

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Pakistan and India agreed early today to a ceasefire in their three-weeklong undeclared war over Kashmir, but Pakistan also threatened to withdraw from the United Nations unless the Kashmir problem is solved.

Both Prime Minister Shastri of India and President Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan announced that orders had gone out to their military commanders to stop fighting.

Pakistan's acceptance of the Security Council's ceasefire order came at a pre-dawn meeting of the council almost at 3 a.m. EDT, the deadline set by the council in the wee hours Monday.

India previously had notified the UN it would stop shooting if Pakistan would do so.

The council agreed to move the ceasefire hour forward to 6 p.m. EDT today, a 16-hour delay.

WILL BE COSTLY

Secretary - General U Thant reported to the council that it will take a team of military observers, plus 60 civilians, to supervise the ceasefire and withdrawal of troops. He estimated the cost for three months will be about $1,645,000.

U Thant said also the council that it would leave the UN if the world organization does not find a fair and honorable settlement of the Kashmir dispute "that has not beenside by side this in the last 18 years.

Pakistan insists on self-determination for Kashmir, predominantly Moslem like Pakistan, India, which controls four-fifths of Kashmir, does not want to grant such a request.

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the Pakistan foreign minister, told the council that his country would set a time limit for such a settlement. But he did not specify how long and he insisted this was not an ultimatum.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, council president for September, said the ceasefire agreement was a great day for the United Nations.

"This is an important day in UN history, and the history of

George Hees Unopposed As PC Candidate in Northumberland Riding

COBOURG, Ont. (CP)—Candidate George Hees set out today to begin meeting the people in a county where his family has had a farm for 51 years but where he himself is personally relatively unknown.

His return to active politics 24½ years after he quit the Diefenbaker government was cemented Tuesday night as a meeting of 300 Northumberland riding Conservatives chose him unanimously as their candidate in the Nov. 8 federal election.

The 55-year-old former trade minister said it was the proudest moment of his life. Signaling an all-out fight to recapture Northumberland from the Liberals, he promised to appear "promptly at 9 a.m. today on Cobourg's main thoroughfare to start getting to know you people."

After representing the riding of Toronto Broadview in the House of Commons from 1950 to 1963, the wealthy and urbane Mr. Hees last week accepted an invitation from the Conservative association in predominantly - rural Northumberland to stand as its candidate.

Two others bowed out at the Tuesday night nominating convention to assure him of an acclamation. In his acceptance speech, he said he would try to

Auto Workers Reach Pacts With de Havilland, Rambler

TORONTO (CP) — Company and union representatives have reached agreements that could end strikes here and in nearby Brampton involving more than 6,000 workers, an executive of the United Auto Workers (CLC) said Tuesday night.

George Burt, regional director for the UAW in Canada, said the agreements with de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. and American Motors (Canada) Ltd., whose workers have been on strike since last month, were made at separate meetings with management.

Terms of the settlements, withheld by the union, will be submitted to separate meetings ship ratification meetings Thursday morning, Mr. Burt said.

If the workers accept the terms, the 4,800 de Havilland workers and 1,200 Rambler workers will go back to work. American Motors was struck Aug. 25, de Havilland Aug. 26.

The union's demands at de Havilland included a wage boost in the first year of a three-year agreement, plus fringe benefits comparable to those negotiated in the auto industry.

Wages before the strike were $2.09 to $2.77 for production and non-skilled workers, to $2.43 to $2.85 for skilled trades. The company had offered six cents an hour in direct wages before the strike.

At Brampton, the strike has centred on union demands for wages and benefits at American Motors to match those of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.

Members of Local 1285 walked out just before the start of production of 1966 models.

Hourly wage rates range from $2.16 for labourers to $2.75 for the highest-paid skilled workers. More than 30 meetings have taken place since negotiations began last May.

'Relief' From Warm Weather Is Promised by Weathermen

TORONTO (CP) — Southern Ontario's unseasonably warm weather of the last five days spread north of Georgian Bay today but cooler air moving south across the upper Great Lakes promised relief by Thursday.

Overnight minimum temperatures reached record highs in several Ontario centres Tuesday night.

In North Bay on the northern edge of the hot-air blanket, the temperature overnight rose to a record high of 65 degrees compared to a previous high of 62 set in 1961.

The overnight temperature in Ottawa and Hamilton was 71 degrees breaking previous records of 59 and 67 respectively. In London a high of 68 tied the previous record reported in 1961.

In Toronto the overnight temperature was 69 degrees and in Windsor, 67, breaking previous records of 66 in both cities.

Meanwhile a front of cool air began moving into the southern regions of the province today and the weather office forecast of showers and thunderstorms over most of the region by Thursday.

Belleville Has Poor Image, Its Citizens Just Criticize Jaycee President Charges

Mr. Zdenik Kvarda, Ontario president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, told the Belleville Jaycees last night that he is sometimes ashamed to admit he is from Belleville.

He says that Belleville has a poor image in the eyes of other centres in Ontario. While most communities are expanding with new industries and go ahead ideas, the citizens of Belleville just sit and wait, he charged. Instead of going to council meetings and offering constructive ideas, they criticize and moan about the way the city is being run.

He told the Jaycees that it is about time they did something, such as going to council meetings, helping candidates in elections or running for council themselves.

He said most centres are getting new industries and business because the organizations in these cities and towns are co-operating. He urged the Jaycees to get behind the city and promote it.

In the near future the city is going to burst wide open and it is up to the citizens to make sure it bursts the right way.

He urged the Jaycees to get out and round up new members to strengthen the unit and lead the way.

Speaker was Mr. Ron Kristianson a Jaycee, Mr. Kristianson is business office manager of the Bell Telephone Co. and spoke on communications of the past, present and future. He explained the advance from Alexander Graham Bell's first telephone to the newest Telstar and future push button phones. Mr. Kristianson, born in Banff, Scotland, moved to Canada in 1953 and in 1963 moved to Belleville where he now resides.

No Evidence To Support Woman's Story

TORONTO (CP) — Elizabeth Bradt told a judicial inquiry into city slum conditions Tuesday that she had been offered $5,000 not to tell what she knew.

Mrs. Bradt was testifying on the second day of the inquiry sparked by charges from Ald. June Marks that slum conditions in Toronto were either through the "ignorance or connivance" of city employees.

But under witness, Detective Donald B. Banks, told the inquiry he could find no evidence to support the woman's claim of attempted bribery and threats.

Mrs. Bradt said she had seen the city housing commissioner, J. A. Sole, sitting in a club bar with her landlord, William Stein, on May 12. She said a waitress identified as Sole to her and said the two men met there with others every Wednesday.

Mrs. Bradt said she believed this was how Mr. Stein obtained his welfare tenants.

The $5,000 bribe offer had been made to her after a number of threats from her landlord and anonymous phone calls threatening the safety of her children, she said.

Mr. Stein offered her $5,000 to forget her testimony or leave town and told her Ald. Marks could not buy her a house but the money would, she added.

British Labor Govt. Plans To Nationalize Bldg. Land

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor government today announced plans to nationalize building land in a bid to halt the rising cost of housing.

A white paper said a land commission will be created with wide-ranging powers to buy land compulsorily. The commission will be able to buy any land for which permission to build on has been granted.

This is to ensure that the right land is available when it is needed to carry out local and national housing projects.

The white paper also announced that persons selling land for housing development will have to pay a special levy, ranging as high as 50 per cent of the appreciation value of development land.

CURB SPECULATION

This move is designed to curb speculation and make sure the community benefits from soaring land prices caused by pressures for new housing.

The plan is the second major measure announced since Prime Minister Wilson's labor administration took office nearly a year ago.

The first, a controversial plan to nationalize the steel industry, was a major issue in the June election. It was quickly shelved after it provoked widespread opposition and sparked revolt within the Labor party itself.

But today's announcement said that early legislation will give effect to the land program, which formed a central plank of the party's election platform last October, and is closely linked with plans to build 500,000 new houses a year by 1970.

Oil Workers May Strike Against Shell

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An oil workers strike against British-American Oil Co. refineries and plants cut further into company operations Tuesday amid the threat of a strike against a second petroleum giant.

The BA strike, which began Sept. 14 and spread to five refineries and dozens of storage depots from Vancouver to Toronto, Tuesday forced closure of a large waterfront plant in Vancouver.

At the same time, the striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (CLC) announced a government - supervised strike vote Thursday among workers at the Montreal refinery of Shell Oil Co.

A union spokesman said the Shell refinery would be the first against Shell.

The union has said that an agreement with BA will form the basis of an industry-wide settlement that will involve all petroleum companies, including such giants as Imperial and Shell.

The OCAW and the striking Independent Gas and Oil Workers Union seek wage increases of 55 cents an hour over two years and job security. BA has offered 34 cents in a 27-month contract.

House Approves Principle To Allow Intervention

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The principle of intervention by any Western-hemisphere country in the affairs of another if the objective is to forestall communism has been approved by the United States House of Representatives.

The act is a toothless gesture, taken Monday in approving a resolution by the margin of 312 votes to 32 in the house.

But it is one more of the recent examples emphasizing the militant political mood a b o u t keeping the hemisphere ideologically pure, Cuba excepted.

Last week, Senator J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign rela t i o n s committee, brought an enraged outcry with a stem-to-stern indictment of the American intervention in the Dominican Republic.

He was belabored as irresponsible and was consigned back to President Johnson's doghouse.

But what he previously had emerged over his views on Viet Nam.

Kiwanis Club Members Talk Of Key Clubs

Key Clubbing was the main item of business at the regular weekly Kiwanis Club meeting yesterday.

Phil Allcorn, chairman of Kiwanis' Key Club Committee, spoke to the meeting on Key Clubs and presided over a discussion period later.

E.A. Orr, Superintendent of Secondary Schools, along with the principals and staff advisers to Key Clubs of Belleville's high schools, attended the meeting.

Mr. Allcorn said, "Our youth work as a club is closely tied up to our Key Clubs. We must have more people in our club spending more time with the Key Clubs." (The Belleville Kiwanis Club sponsors the Key Clubs in Quinte, Moira and BCI.)

"At least two Kiwanians should be at every Key Club meeting prepared to give counsel and, better still, giving an example to the Key-Clubbers of good citizenship."

A panel composed of Kiwanis advisers to the Key Clubs, Wally Collis, Don Davenport and Ross White, assisted by Mr. Allcorn and the high school principals, Mr. Orr and staff advisors, answered questions from the floor on Key Club activities.

Answering a question on how to avoid discriminatory practices in selecting members of ships, a problem that has plagued Key Clubs in the past, Mr. Allcorn said, "If you have good leadership, you have a good club. In the past we have had some discriminatory problems, but only because of bad leadership."

Key Clubs recruit members by inviting all students in Grade 10 or higher with an average of at least 60 per cent to join their ranks. All a person has to do is let the club know he wants to join.

CLUBS VARIABLE

When asked what value Key Clubs are to the school, James Musgrove, Principal-to-be of the new Centennial Secondary School, said "The Key Club is a group of students receiving training in being service minded. Other organizations give this kind of training, but are more dedicated completely to it like the Key Clubs are.

"Often projects come up in the Key Clubs that have to be handled and I have often turned to the Key Club for help. They have always risen to the challenge."

Mr. Allcorn summed up: "The Key Clubs are building better citizens for the future. I am not completely happy with the way we have used the full potentials of service to our youth in the Key Clubs. We have not made full advantage of this wonderful opportunity to help our youth become better citizens."

In other Kiwanis business, Wally Collis drove around the Kiwanis Centre on a Honda to promote the Kiwanis-sponsored motorcycle racers coming Saturday on Highway 2, three miles east of Belleville.

A large crowd is expected to view the exciting spectacle, as many top riders will be on hand to race over the tricky course.

Downtown Area Will See Renaissance as Hub of Community Club Told

The downtown area will see a renaissance as the hub of community living in the city of the future, a business expert told Belleville businessmen last night.

Carl A. Lawrence, assistant professor of Marketing at Queen's University School of Business blanded the prediction to Belleville Sales and Ad Club, many of whose members are downtown merchants concerned with the consumer drift to the suburbs.

Professor Lawrence envisioned a future we "nucleated cities, with housing and industrial belts ringing a central core planned for shopping, recreation and cultural pursuits.

"Any other kind of city will not work," he added.

In this downtown-of-tomorrow shoppers may press computer buttons to discover where the bargains are. Most startling of all, perhaps, would be the absence of car parking.

"There will be no cars. People will walk again."

Already, he said, such schemes were being advanced in the United States in such cities as . . . Pennsylvania.

"I don't think this is too far off," said Professor Lawrence.

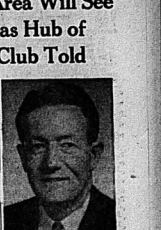
He also forecast the growth of communities in a connected series — as is already the case along the U.S. eastern seaboard spanning from Boston to Virginia.

GOOD PLANNERS NEEDED

"It points up a need for good city planners in all our cities," he added.

He also had some business pointers for the retailers in his audience reminding them "the consumer is still king."

He also played up the theme again in question - answer when the speaker spent some time on recent point of controversy among city retailers.



"The consumers are going to decide what your store hours will be," said the professor.

He even forecast the possibility of Sunday openings.

"If people want to shop on Sunday some give somewhere it is going to open his store and do business."

Merchants might lobby against store hour amendments — and even delay them, he suggested, but never been able to stop the consumer from satisfying his needs," he said.

The talk was the last of the seventeenth-season of the club at Columbus Hall.

Two Schools Will Hold Night Classes

Again this year more than forty evening courses are being made available for the benefit of citizens of Belleville and district who are not, at the moment, attending any Secondary or Elementary school.

Besides the usual courses in art, auto, electronics, many new courses are being offered this year.

Perhaps the most important courses are those being offered in the Advanced Technical Evening classes. These enable candidates to become qualified as Technologists or Technicians.

Those adults who have completed one or two of their Grade 13 Mathematics courses, should take this opportunity to study the geometry course. This is very important as the courses in Grade 13 Mathematics will be changed beginning in September 1966.

Anyone who has been away from mathematics for a period of time and intends to complete his work for a diploma should start this year with the Mathematics Grade 11 course. Anyone who has either Grade 11 or Grade 12 Algebra will be given credit for a Mathematics option on his diploma if they complete this course.

Information and brochures about all courses are available at B.C.I.V.S. and Moira Secondary School. Registration is next Monday at Moira Secondary School and Tuesday at Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

Many Attend Fish and Game Club Meeting

Forecasting another good season over 200 members attended the 1965 inaugural meeting of the Belleville Fish and Game Club at the Club Canara last night.

Several fine hunting and fishing films were enjoyed with many taking home the door prizes. The "Big Award" of the night, a 12-gauge Winchester shotgun, went to Paul Brushie of 324 Coleman St.

Director George Woodhouse in charge of the club's "Operation Greenhead" spoke to the club regarding the recent shooting and wounding of the project's geese.

Mr. Woodhouse voiced his disappointment at the fine levied.

He expressed regret and chagrin at the action of those who wilfully wounded the birds.

"They are Canadian game. What red-blooded native of this country does not get a thrill when he looks skyward at the southern-bound geese and sees the bonkers in all their flying glory?"

He had hoped, he said, to establish a flyway south from the Belleville district for geese and put the name of this club and city on the hunting map.

He admitted his disappointment in the recent turn of events that cost the club this valuable geese, saying the continuance of poaching and destruction of the birds would mean a loss of money to the club.

He expressed his appreciation of the co-operation of the club members and those who visited the project during the summer.

Plans were made for a group from the local organization to attend a regional Red Cross workshop to be held in Peterborough on October 28th.

Government Weed Cutter Used First Time in Harbor, Surrounding Bay Area

Belleville harbor today is yielding a new kind of harvest — weeds.

Operating here for the first time in Canada's only waterweed cutter, under contract to the federal Department of Transport.

It arrived from Trenton on Monday night, began sweeping the harbor and immediate bay area yesterday and was scheduled to end its operations today—leaving a cleaner water area in its wake.

It was first introduced to Canadians last year when the government pressed it into battle against a chronic weed problem in the Trenton district.

The success of that clearing operation resulted in an expanded program this year, with the area supervised by Belleville Harbor Commission listed on the schedule.

Driven by paddle wheels and highly manoeuvreable for use around docks and narrow inlets, the harvester reaps submerged weed beds from the bottom. These are carried to the surface by conveyor, deposited in a hydraulic basket and later dumped on a service barge, which is a companion equipment piece to the cutter. When full, the barge takes the load ashore for ultimate disposal.

GOOD FERTILIZER

Below surface the oxygen-consuming weeds threaten water life. On land, left to dehydrate they are a fertilizer with high protein content.

And local farmers are welcome to haul away the loads taken from Belleville harbor, Aquatic Controls president Edward Horton said yesterday.

Mr. Horton also looks forward to increasing demand for the harvester.

The weed problem has been mounting yearly and the pressure for solutions grows with the population. Demands are increasing for recreational, irrigation and commercial use of the waterways.

Controlled cutting, not complete destruction of the weeds, is the best solution says Mr. Horton, since it does not upset the balance of nature.

Admissions To Hospital 798 in August

Belleville General Hospital had a total of 798 adult and children admissions during the month of August. In addition there were 11 newborn.

The average length of stay for adults and children was 11.14 days and for newborn 8.14 days.

Outpatient visits included 500 for the Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy departments; 15 for cardiology; 527 for radiology; 163 pathology and 1,264 visits to the emergency department.

'Town' Housing Approved At City Council Meeting

"Town" housing, a new type of attached dwelling previously not allowed in Belleville, was given approval this week by Belleville city council.

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board two weeks ago recommended approval of row housing to city council but the matter was tabled for two weeks. Monday council passed the recommendation and the matter will now come back to council in by-law form.

Mayor Jack Ellis described town housing as a most desirable form of housing noting that it would allow for a desirable increased density of population in all parts of the city.

Alderman Frank Murray, however, wanted to know whether there was a demand in the city for this type of housing while Alderman Jack Deacon took exception to the minimum 100 foot frontage requirements.

Mayor Ellis replied that there was a demand for this type of housing with a contract for two four - unit developments already having been let. The developers were waiting only for approval by council, he said.

Previously there has been objection to row housing in the city but Alderman Don Whalen said this apparently arose because of the old type tenement style house.

Town housing, on the contrary, is most attractive, he said.

Plan Board On Admission To Colleges

FREDERICTON (CP)—Canada's education ministers have agreed in principle to establishment of a university admissions board that could have the effect of standardizing high school curricula, Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie of Quebec said Tuesday.

In an interview after closed sessions of the standing committee of education ministers, Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said the ministers considered only the type of board to be set up.

Courtemanche Will Oppose Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Henri Courtemanche, once a member of the Diefenbaker government, announced Tuesday he will attempt a comeback as an anti-Diefenbaker, independent Conservative candidate.

Mr. Courtemanche, who resigned from the Senate in 1961 after being criticized by a Quebec royal commission, said he will oppose the official Conservative candidate in Labelle riding in the Nov. 8 election.

In a telephone interview from his law office in Mont Laurier, Que., about 50 miles east of here, he said the Conservative leader hates French-Canadians.

He agreed with a statement by his former cabinet colleague, Leon Balcer, who retired from federal politics last week saying there is no room for French-Canadians in the Conservative party under Mr. Diefenbaker.

Won't Resign Unless Named To Cabinet

TORONTO (CP) — Robert H. Winters, chairman of the giant British Newfoundland Corp., says he is under "no obligation" to resign his business positions unless he becomes a cabinet minister if the Liberal party is returned to power in the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Winters, seeking the Liberal nomination in York West riding, was commenting on a statement by Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland that Mr. Winters must resign as Brinco chairman as quickly as possible.

Link With West Indies

John Compton, a 43-year-old lawyer from St. Lucia in the West Indies has made an interesting proposal. He says a treaty should be worked out whereby Canada would establish free trade with a new West Indies federation and look after the islands' diplomacy and defence.

Mr. Compton is the chief minister of St. Lucia. He broached the idea of a formal Canada-West Indies link in talks with officials in Ottawa last week and is hoping it will be taken up at government level following the November 8 election.

The idea has merit, particularly in view of the vacuum that has existed in administration of the smaller islands of the Caribbean since the break-up of the original West Indies federation and in view of the tenuous links remaining with Britain.

Mr. Compton said the Windward Islands (St. Lucia, Granada, Dominica and St. Vincent) are urgently seeking united government and Canadian support to replace the old federation and expiring colonial ties with Britain.

The minister said Britain was determined to get out and would likely withdraw completely "within the next 18 months."

If Britain relinquishes its responsibilities in the Caribbean then Canada should give earnest thought to filling the breach. Mr. Compton views the matter with even more seriousness. "Canada has a duty," he said, "to see no dangerous political vacuum is created on her doorstep."

He said the Windward Islands and possibly the Leeward Islands were anxious to develop close political and economic ties with Canada.

Ottawa should not let such a proposal go by default. To do so would be to invite the attentions of the communist world in the Caribbean area (where it is already entrenched in Cuba.)

Big Plant for Kitchener

The Kitchener-Waterloo area, already prospering with its widely-diversified manufacturing establishments, has taken another leap forward with the acquisition of a new $20,000,000 enterprise. The Budd Company of Philadelphia has begun construction of a plant in Kitchener to manufacture car chassis frames.

The firm, a leader in its field, expects the 225,000 square-foot plant in the Huron Industrial park will be in production in April 1967. Excavation work is already under way. Initially, the plant will employ about 400, mostly semi-skilled workers in heavy assembly jobs. Negotiations with a major auto manufacturer may mean the plant will open with a work force of about 800 and total more than 3,000 in a few years.

The impact of such an enterprise on any community is incalculable, and Kitchener is to be congratulated on its success. Although it was common knowledge in the area for some time that a big firm planned to establish a plant there, the official announcement came only last week.

The Budd company, which also manufactures railway equipment, bought an option on the land from Kitchener following extensive surveys of possible sites from Windsor to Oakville. Other factories may follow and Kitchener Chamber of Commerce says that the number of inquiries has grown following increased promotion of the area.

In September

This is a mellow season of the year when the early morning is misty and damp with dew and a dream of autumn lies all around. Another year goes into decline, but before it does there is this promise of the fall season. Here is the ageless, fabled scene, the perennial September magnificence.

It was like this Sunday, here and around Prince Edward County. The latter region and the autumn season are perfectly matched. It has a tranquil quality and folks there live a stable, ordered existence that is reflected in the careful and devoted cultivation of the soil. Even in summer Prince Edward is seldom crowded and young people can walk along the roads without being imperilled by traffic. There is time in Prince Edward for country pleasures and for families to sit around in their gardens on weekends.

One other sign of Prince Edward's outgoing ways is the canine population. Every home, in the rural parts at least, seems to have at least one well-fed, healthy-looking dog. And lying contentedly on the lawn, as they are wont to do, they lend further credence to the image of the county to the south as a good place to live.

Why should not students have more responsibility for discipline and behavior in schools? The chief reason, I submit, is the authoritarian and bureaucratic nature of our school administration, which inevitably turns out organization men who thrive on conformity and security. If we want something else, we had better begin by changing our school system.—High School teacher in large Ontario city.

B.C. Drunks Pose a Problem

Vancouver Sun

Concern at the appalling wastage in Vancouver's system of dealing with public drunks seems to be reaching some sort of crescendo. It's hard to see how any further delay in improving this expensive and self-defeating situation can be tolerated.

By all reports the provincial government's alcoholic unit on the Alouette has proved a godsend. But at best it can hold only an infinitesimal fraction of the 21,000 drunks whom Vancouver police expect will be gathered off this city's streets alone this year. Whether or not these drunks go to Alouette or Oakalla or simply into the city jail drunk tank, they all must be processed — arrested, transported, booked, fed, housed—and it adds up to a prohibitively costly operation.

A number of other countries, notably Russia and Japan, have long ago abandoned this expensive, and fruitless, formality. They have sobering-up stations from which common drunks are released when they are in adequate shape, and there is no formal arrest as such.

Something along this line—an alternative to the drunk tank anyway—has now been suggested by a special civic committee set up to look at this problem.

Its recommendations, currently being studied by the board of administration, call for establishment of special city hostels where drunks who aren't in trouble otherwise may be taken by police without the rigamarole of arrest and trial.

No matter how cynical one might be about the odds involved in truly rehabilitating our public drunks, the savings involved in eliminating court procedure surely will be appreciated.

If Vancouver must effect such a program on its own, clearly it would be in its interests to do so. But it goes without challenge that this city's skid row is a boiling pot for the entire province and that, further, the determining factor in the whole sorry business is the liquor trade from which the provincial government enreams ever-increasing profits.

The government, which to its shame spends a pittance on alcoholism compared to Ontario with its only slightly higher proportion of problem drunks, seems singularly bound to give any new Vancouver program all the help it needs.

Wanted—Better Parents!

Windsor Star

The Ontario Legislature has a select committee peregrinating about the province studying the problems of youth. Its chairman is Mr. Syl Apps, former professional football player, who always has been an inspiration to youth whether he was on or off the field. He particularly praised the briefs presented at Brantford.

Modern youth has been critici-ized and condemned. At Brantford it hit back. A high school group blamed parents for the lack of guidance. A YM-YWCA group said what young people need most is better parents.

A Community Welfare Council presentation, by inference at least, put itself on the side of youth. It did so by emphasizing that most temptations put out in the way of youth today (apart from those inherent in their own beings) are the work of adults.

This is true. The liquor trade and its promotion (even by governments) is in the hands of adults. The cigarette industry is run by adults. The salacious literature and films are the products of adults. The provocative music and dances are contrived by adults and revealing clothing is designed by adults.

Our religious institutions, and whatever shortcomings they may have, are run by adults. Our business and professional life, and its sometimes lack of ethics, are the responsibility of adults. So are our educational and political systems.

Our children are reared in an atmosphere controlled by adults. We adults are to blame to the extent that our social climate makes it difficult for youngsters to be paragons of virtue.

Our young people are growing up in an environment of temptation and even of contamination. It is not surprising if all of them are not all that they should be.

This argument on behalf of youth of course can be exaggerated. By the time youngsters reach their teens many already have developed, on their own a character, a conscience, a self-support and an intelligence of their own. They should know quite apart from adult influence what is obviously right and what is obviously wrong.

Sir Hilary Blood, one of the famous figures of the Renaissance, died of wounds 370 years ago today—in 1595 —after the battle of Zutphen, in Holland. ## U.S. Is Not Inventive Leader

By Sydney J. Harris

An article I wrote some time ago on the "100 greatest American" and his debt to the rest of the world, drew a few indignant letters from star-spangled readers. Most of them objected to me for ignoring America's tremendous "inventive genius" in modern times.

So far as I can determine, America's chief claim to fame is industrial, not scientific. It is true that our creation and development of the mass-production system has revolutionized industry throughout the world.

Kaempffert's "History of American Inventions" discloses that Henry Ford's "invention" of the steamboat was anticipated by about 30 steamers built in England and on the Continent.

Very little of the automobile turns out to be American. Isaac de Rivaz patented a gas-driver car in France in 1807; Lenoir built one in 1860. Siegen s de Marcus drove a gas-driven car in Vienna in 1875, until the police shut it because of noise. Daimler and Benz developed cars in Germany between 1883 and 1885.

Four-wheel brakes were invented by the English in 1904. The Italian Lancia had "precaction" as early as 1922. The straight-eight cylinder engine was introduced by Isotta-Fraschini in Italy, and the V-type descends from De Dion and Bouton in 1913 in France.

"The American car is American," points out Kaempffert, "because of mass - production methods and not because it is American in mechanical conception."

Similarly, in aviation, telegraphy, the telephone, motion pictures, steel-making, incandescent lamps, the reaper, the sewing machine, the elevator, the internal combustion engine, the photoelectric cell, and even television — all were contributed mainly to scientific invention — not to revolutionary advances in collaborative and international venture, in which no nation can claim dominance.

One hundred-and forty-eight major scientific discoveries were considered noteworthy in different parts of the world, making a mockery of any nation's patriotic pretensions to "leadership" in creativity.

Public Loses

New York Times

In their testimony before House and Senate committees, state highway officials were almost unanimous in their hostility to proposals to use even a small portion of the vast funds at their disposal to improve landscaping and to build scenic roads.

What it came to eliminating billboards screening junk yards these same officials—more reflexive of private interests than of public sensibilities — recommended billboards, narrow-minded preoccupat i on with the single problem of movement of traffic. Naturally, the gasoline- and cement-makers, the truckers, the junkyard owners and many in the billboard industry were happy to ride along with these highwaymen who rob the public of its scenic birthright.

Low Sodium Diet Means Give Up Consuming Salt

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been told to give up ham, bacon, a certain soft drink and a number of other foods because of swelling in my ankles as a result of too much sodium.

What does a low sodium diet consist of? — Mrs. N. G.

* * *

A low-sodium diet isn't a matter of "What it consists of," but of what you leave out. And what you leave out is sodium.

For the most part, this means ordinary salt. Bacon, ham and other preserved meats all have a lot of salt, so avoid them — sausage, corned beef and such. Stick to fresh meats.

Don't put salt in food when you cook it. (This may mean that the rest of the family will have to do a little more salting when you sit at the table, but after all, that's a mild inconvenience. It is important for you to avoid salt, which is sodium chloride.)

Don't use salt on your food.

Pickles, relish and such items contain salt, of course, then. Don't eat anything that you know is salty — nuts, potato chips, food cooked with salt.

In some cases, salt-free bread and butter are necessary.

* * *

The soft drink you mentioned says on the label that it contains sodium citrate, so that's why it's prohibited. Reading labels will be a help to you. Avoid things with sodium.

This is true of some medicines too. Your doctor will watch out for the ones he gives you, and for the ones he gives you, about any others. Some of the fizzy ones, as well as powders and tablets taken for headaches contain sodium.

It is true, of course, that the body needs salt, but ordinary meats, as well as some other foods, contain small traces of it. Therefore, you still get a little even though you use no table salt at all.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Can a person have mumps twice on both sides? My son has it again, but everybody tells me a person can have it only once. — W. M. M.

In general, we have mumps only once, and it doesn't matter whether the disease is apparent on one side or both. We still have the disease! However, there are occasional instances with this and other diseases, in which a second attack may occur. And there's also the chance that one attack or the other was really mumps, but some other thing could have caused the swelling and soreness.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 47 and have been bothered with pimworms all my life. I have been to endocrinologists, consult a doctor. I have gone to drug stores and bought pills, and I must have taken barrels of them, but the condition has never been cured. Chocolate of any kind seems to irritate me a lot more than any food. Is there a cure for pinworms? — Mrs. M. B.

* * *

There are excellent treatments for pinworms, but they aren't worth zero for treating troubles that aren't pinworms.

Where does it come and go depending on what you eat — else.

My suspicion is that your trouble isn't pinworms, but more likely is sensitivity to certain foods — including chocolate of any kind.

Stop being embarrassed. Go to your doctor and let him find out, yes or no, whether you have pinworms.

If you don't, then start letting him help you find out what foods bother you, so you can avoid them.

Of course, you might have pinworms plus food sensitivities but in that case you'd better learn to combat them both.

* * *

Of all the problems that pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest method of treatment for this pest, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Pest, Pinworm," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover the cost of printing and handling. Address your request to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill. Dost.

Foster Homes

Regina Leader-Post

Good foster homes are hard to find. Probably one of the most understandable reasons lies in the fact that foster parentage demands much more from a foster mother than the responsibility than in legal adoption processes. Very often the children placed in foster homes have physical or emotional disabilities, requiring the greatest amount of tactful and understanding care. Furthermore, there is always the knowledge that no matter how strong a bond of affection is wrought between the foster parents and the child involved, the relationship at best can only be temporary and the child eventually may be returned to his natural parents. It is certainly these factors that govern the scarcity of available foster homes rather than monetary considerations.

Officials and members of the Shannonville Agricultural Society paid tangible tribute to years of faithful efficient service when they presented ex-presidents Thomas Vivian and John A. Barlow with life membership in the Association and Agricultural Service diplomas.

It was a gala evening held at the home of Mr. Vivian in honor of the men who have seen the Shannonville Fair grow from a tiny exhibition to a field to one of the finest of its class in Ontario.

Mr. Barlow was born in Thurlow Township in 1868. He was president of the well - known "Work's Fair" at Stirlingville in 1907 and during his long life has always taken a keen interest in the fair movement.

Mr. Vivian was born on the old Vivian farm homestead. He has a remarkably retentive memory and recalls clearly the construction of the first railway through these parts. He states that the name of the first locomotive engineer to pilot a train here was Donaldson.

Crime Curbed

Vancouver Sun

A frightening story was told Vancouver Rotarians by Mrs. Claude Wagner to the International Criminological Congress in Montreal.

While Canada's population increased by 2.9 per cent between 1961 and 1963, she stated, our crime increased by 32.3 per cent.

This is an even worse progression than in the United States, where the rate increase 27 per cent between 1958 and 1962 while the population was increasing seven per cent.

Ask To Use Tear Gas In Viet Nam

By WILLIAM GASSON

SAIGON (Reuters) — U.S. military authorities here have asked Washington to authorize the use of tear gas by American commanders in military operations in South Viet Nam, informed sources said today.

Use of tear gas, which would be at the discretion of commanders, was requested for humanitarian reasons and because it was particularly suited to clearing underground defence installations in Viet Cong guerrillas.

The military's decision was thought to have been influenced by a field incident three weeks ago when a marine colonel used tear gas—contrary to standing orders—to drive more than 400 women and children as well as some guerrillas from caves and tunnels near Qui Nhon, 275 miles northeast of here.

Had the marine officer, Lt.-Col. L. N. Utter, not employed tear gas, he would have had to use flame throwers, fragmentation grenades and automatic weapons fire to clear the underground defence system.

The incident was the first apparent standing prohibition on the use of any sort of gas was the worldwide storm of protest that erupted last March when it was disclosed that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces had used tear gas and a nausea-provoking gas against the Viet Cong.

NEW REQUEST

The new request to Washington concerns only simple tear gas and not the nausea-provoking type, the sources said.

Mother Tries To Rescue Son From Police

BRANTFORD (CP)—It cost two members of the Jewitt family of nearby Paris a total of $150 plus costs for their vain attempt to snatch a third member from town police July 23.

Helena Jewitt and her son Ernest, 18, were fined $100 and $50 respectively Tuesday on a charge of obstructing police after a scuffle broke out in a police station and spread into the street.

The object of the melee was John Jewitt, 17, who had been charged with drinking while under age. He was fined $25 Tuesday. His mother came into the station after his arrest and told police she was taking him home, because he was ill.

As the mother and son started to leave, the scuffle broke out. John was hit in the face by Const. Allan Cox, brough. Mrs. Hewitt took off her spike - heeled shoe and struck Const. Larry Fitzpatrick several times on the head. He required two stitches to close a gash.

The row ended 10 minutes later, police said, with John still in police custody.

Northern Electric Swings Behind United Appeal

The Northern Electric Company swung completely behind the United Appeal campaign yesterday.

In a meeting at the plant, 48 Northern employees, all volunteer canvassers and team captains, mapped final plans for the company's United Appeal drive.

John O'Flynn, General Chairman of the United Appeal, and Les Gnaedinger, Executive Director, attended the meeting.

"Thank you very much for offering to help in this drive," Mr. O'Flynn told the Northern employees. "This is our eighth annual drive and we are seeking $127,902, roughly 20 per cent more than last year.

"In the previous seven drives we have attained an average of 81.3 per cent of our goals. The average gift has been good, but we need more people participating.

"Last year, only 45 per cent of the employees of our large industries participated. We are after 60 per cent this year. If that many people gave 25 cents each week we'd reach our objectives.

"The higher goal this year is a result of the addition of two new agencies, March of Dimes and Family Counselling, and an increase in the budget of some of the existing ones.

CAREFULLY SERVICED

"The budget allocated to each agency is very carefully reviewed by the Appeal's budget committee. Their books are checked and operation reviewed, to make sure the funds will all be put to the best possible use."

Mr. Gnaedinger reiterated what Mr. O'Flynn said. "We are one of 124 United Funds in Canada," he said, "collecting $43,700,000 for over 2,000 community organizations to assist 12.2 million persons.

"We've been an 80 per cent fund because of lack of subscribers. A successful drive must have at least 95 per cent of the people contributing. We've only had 13 per cent participation."

Mr. O'Flynn then answered questions from the floor.

"Can a person allocate his contribution to any particular agency?"

"Yes. We started this last year, and 20 per cent of the contributors allocated, which amounted to 13 per cent of the dollar value. It does not amount to too much, but it does give the person a chance to allocate if he feels strongly about a certain agency."

"Is there anything being done about the numerous tag days in the city by agencies outside the United Appeal? Those tag days are a hazard to the United Appeal, because people say they have already given money to such and such, and do not want to contribute to the United Appeal?"

WELFARE COUNCIL TO DECIDE

"Except for the Boy Scout Apple Day, there will be no tag days from participating agencies. The newly-formed Welfare Council of Belleville will try to eliminate all these other tag days by organizing the other agencies into groups whereby other means will be found for them to raise money so they will not jeopardize the United Appeal collection. Some of these agencies may come into the Appeal in the future. I think you will find this will be a big step in cutting down on tag days."

"Who decides whether an agency's plight is worthwhile?"

"This will be one of the problems faced by the Welfare Council. If the Council does not feel it is worthwhile, it will not give it official sanction, and we hope this will stop any agency from raising funds for a cause that is not worthwhile.

"The Welfare Council is also working to stop overlapping of services, so people will not be expected to support two or three agencies who are performing one and the same service."

F. B. H. Sheffield, Materials Control Superintendent, attended the meeting on behalf of management.

"I would like to thank you for accepting the important duties as canvassers," Mr. Sheffield said. "I am sold on the fact that the United Appeal is necessary in the community, and I know Northern Electric can reach its objectives."

Bye Bye Bobby Party For Going-away Pal

DEAR DORIS: The boy next door is going away and I would like to have a going-away party for him. I was wondering if you could tell me how this our gang could play on him? Or something to say on the going-away cake?

Could you also tell me, should we bring a gift or collect money for him, or should we give him anything? — CLASSMATE.

DEAR CLASSMATE: Get him a gift — ball-point pen, or wallet, or funny book. Or something you know he wants. Wrap it up fancy. Make a speech, then tell him he has to work for his present.

Make him perch on a milk bottle on the floor and write his new address down; or with lights out draw a man sitting on a donkey; or make up a jingle about where he's going.

A certain Bermuda party was called a "Ta Ta Tonsil" party — because the guest of honor was about to enter hospital for a tonsilectomy. How about taking a leaf out of that imaginative book and inscribing your cake "Ta Ta Tommy" — or "Bye Bye Bob"? Or whatever his name is?

DORIS CLARE

DEAR DORIS: I'm 17 and in Grade XI, living in a very small community and the chances for boys to take girls out are very few and far between.

Whenever I do get asked for a date for a dance or a show, my mother has to know everything about the boy and his family before she will let me go out. I am a mature, Christian girl and I have very high moral standards. I do not smoke nor drink nor do I plan to ever, for they are both very detrimental to my health.

Please try to offer your advice. — ABLE TO JUDGE.

* * *

DEAR ABLE: My advice? Hang onto that mother of yours! Who do you suppose helped you to get those high standards? And that Christian training!

When she O.K.'s a date, and he picks you up, introduce him. Then you show your pride in both of them. And he gets the message that he is expected to take good care of you, which he is.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: We live on a farm. Our relatives all live in the city. And they all pile in on us during the summer. I am worn ragged.

I think relatives are important, but I would sure love to take them up on their lukewarm suggestion that they don't want to "put us out, too." — ?

* * *

DEAR SOUP'S: There's a limit. Farm homes don't have large stay-at-home families to share the work, like they used to.

So your welcoming letter might well mention your limitations of space and help. And energy. When folks arrive and want to be helpful give them specific jobs.

You are growing older. There's no intention to crowd you into an early grave. Your healthy hospitable husband must be taken into your conspiracy to stay alive and in your right mind.

The Experts Say

Wine Firm's Vice-President Tells How to Care for Wine

BY JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — If your champagne cork breaks, don't try to pry it out with an ice pick. The extra pressure just might crack the bottle. Instead, hold the half inch or so of the bottle neck under warm water.

There is a band of wax put on a champagne cork to make it easier to insert in the bottle. If you warm the wax in a chilled bottle it should help the cork slip out easily.

G. H. Stevens, a vice-president of Chateau Gai Wines Ltd., says when you use the warm water method, try not to warm the champagne. Run the warm water at the top of the neck where the stuck cork is. You have chilled the wine for several good reasons.

Mr. Stevens says you can enjoy wine whether you know and follow the rules for caring for it or not, but there are reasons for most of the rules which may help you enjoy it more.

That stuck cork is made difficult to get out because it is restraining a bubbling pressure of about 60 pounds per square inch. That's why bottles for sparkling wines are made the way they are. The extra thick glass and indented bottom help make a bottle strong.

KEEP THE BUBBLES

Mr. Stevens says he does not want anyone to imagine he is dealing with a bomb when he is opening a bottle of champagne, but one of the reasons you chill it is to control the pressure. If you open it warm you will lose a good deal of it in fizz.

There are two reasons for chilling champagne and white table wines generally. One is that it brings out their flavor.

"In the champagnes it also causes the gases to contract so when you pop the cork your wine doesn't try to all over the lot. A lot of bubbles is a sign of good champagne, but that's an expensive way to find out if you have a good champagne."

Cool enough for champagne is about 60 degrees, and it takes about four or five hours in the refrigerator to make a room temperature bottle that cool. The refrigerator can lengthen the life of an open bottle of wine.

"Wine is delicate. Leave a low alcohol table wine open and it will start to ferment again. You may get wine vinegar. If you don't finish a bottle at one sitting, cap it and put it in the refrigerator to slow possible fermentation. You should drink a low alcohol wine within seven days to ten days.

"Something like sherry which has a higher alcohol content you can keep almost indefinitely. The higher the alcohol percentage, the less the fermentation."

KEEP WINE COOL

If you want to decant a sherry or any other wine, you can do it in two ways. Use a serving basket which tilts the bottle in its side and allows sediment to collect in the angle at the bottom. Then pour it carefully.

If you want to use a decanter, just pour wine into it carefully to leave any sediment in the bottle.

Mr. Stevens says Canadian wines are filtered to remove almost all sediment.

You should store wines in a cool, dry, dark place. Your basement may be best in a house. In an apartment, any cabinet will do if it is away from a stove or refrigerator and not subject to marked changes of heat.

"Your storage place should be cool so the wine remains stable and does not begin to ferment. It should be dry so there will be no mildew around the bottle enclosures.

"It should be dark because light oxidizes wine in some bottles. When it is oxidized it will start to darken. If it is kept in a dark place it will remain the color it was when it was bottled."

CARS Purchases Two Walkers

The Belleville Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society held their first fall meeting at the home of Mrs. A. A. Bennett.

Miss Edna Collins, president, welcomed the members back after the summer recess. During the summer, no regular meetings were held, but the members have carried on their untiring help at the arthritic treatment centre at Belleville General Hospital, operated by the local branch of the Society.

The highlight of the summer program was a scenic drive for arthritic patients through Prince Edward County. Society members acted as drivers. Afterwards the group was entertained at lunch by Mrs. Lawson Mackie at Lake Shore Hotel at the Sandbanks. Miss Collier moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Mackie for her hospitality. The auxiliary was pleased with the enthusiasm and enjoyment of the patients and is considering making this type of outing an annual summer event.

Mrs. E. David, convener of public relations, reported that two walkers are needed for the Lion cupboard. She had been in contact with Mrs. K. J. Brown, staff physiotherapist with the local branch of the Society, who said there was a patient who could make immediate use of one. ## Bringing Up Baby

WRITE COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GLEBER, MOTHER OF 5

Now why are babies born years more often and more adorably than anybody? It's Mother Nature's way of providing the extra oxygen new lungs need in the early weeks. (It takes a short time before a beginner's lungs work at top efficiency.) So when your cherub looks just about his very cutest, remember that you're seeing he's getting the benefits of a deep and satisfying breath of air.

Solid facts with nutritional overtones. Specially prepared cereals play an important role in your baby's diet because they supply important nutrients baby needs. Gerber Baby Cereals, for instance, contain added iron and these important vitamins: thiamine (B1), riboflavin (B2) and niacin.

Gerber Cereals are famous for their mild, pleasant flavours and smooth, nice-to-the-tongue texture. Five varieties ... including wonderful Oatmeal. They stir to smooth perfection in a matter of seconds; stay creamy-smooth throughout the meal.

Feeding footnote. It's easy enough to fall into the belief that the more food you urge on your baby the better off he'll be. It's not so. As an old friend once put it: "Forcing never made a baby a bigger or better eater . . . it just takes the enjoyment out of eating. Little ones are instinctive about when it comes to knowing their food needs and they get enough of left alone to satisfy their hunger needs."

Eating enjoyment comes naturally with Gerber Strained Foods. Because they have naturally good flavours, come-hither colours. Once on a full food schedule, your baby can enjoy over 60 wholesome, toothsome varieties. Two delectables: Strained Carrots and Strained Sweet Potatoes ... sunny tempters "custom-cooked" to help preserve the nutritive values for your baby. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

CHARCOAL CUTS MUST

Dear Susanna: A friend passed this idea along to me, and it has been so successful that I am more than pleased, Susanna, to have you recommend it in your column.

Charcoal really is excellent for removing all traces of musty odors from the inside of drawers, cupboards, trunks, closets, or even whole rooms. I bought an ordinary bag of charcoal (the kind used for barbecues) and placed some in open boxes out of sight in every room in the basement. It's been there three or four months now, and no musty odor — ours is an old house, too.

Then, if necessary, scuff out the last remaining traces of dampness in a closet by hanging a little low light bulb burning. — Margaret McDougall.

Since chickens are often offered as a "loss-leader" during the weekend shopping period, astute shoppers should take advantage of the bargain. If you want cut-up chicken you can whittle down the cost a little more by buying whole broilers and cutting them up yourself. If it is quarters you want hand your husband a good strong knife and ask him to be the part-time butcher. However it is easy—even I can quarter a chicken with 2 fell swoops—and did when I made

FRIED CHICKEN with Tarragon Cream Gravy (serves 4.)

3-lb. broiler-fryer chicken (quartered or cut smaller), 1 cup undiluted evaporated milk, ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup shortening (or butter or margarine.)

Gravy:

¼ cup flour, 2 chicken bouillon cubes, 1 cup boiling water, ½ teaspoon crumbled tarragon (optional—or rosemary), 1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley.

Place dried chicken pieces in shallow bowl or dish. Pour evaporated milk over them, turning them over to make sure they are coated with milk. Allow to stand 1 hour, turning them over again at halftime. Transfer to colander or large sieve to drain thoroughly, but save all evaporated milk for making gravy later. In a long paper bag mix together the ½ cup flour, salt and pepper. Shake the drained chicken pieces in them to coat all over. Heat shortening or butter or margarine in large frying-pan and brown chicken pieces on all sides in it. Add 2 tablespoons boiling water, cover, reduce heat to "low" and cook 30 to 35 minutes longer or until tender. Transfer to hot platter and keep warm. Leave ¼ cup drippings and sediment in frying-pan and stir in the ¼ cup flour and bouillon cubes until blended. Stir in boiling water and remaining evaporated milk until thick. Add tarragon and parsley (if used or rosemary—and I recommend them.) Taste to see if you want a little more salt—remembering that bouillon cubes contain some. Serve over chicken pieces on hot platter or separately in pre-heated gravy boat. We served quartered potatoes and sliced zucchini with this delicious countrified chicken dish.

Learned How To Make Nets From Father

IRON SPRINGS, Alta. (CP) Elsie McGrath is a southern Alberta housewife and mother of two with an unusual occupation, especially for someone living so far from the sea.

She hangs or seams nets used by fishermen in the Northwest Territories to catch trout and whitefish. This year she has completed work on about 400 nets.

Mrs. McGrath uses nylon needles and thread to secure nylon mesh net manufactured in Eastern Canada to two nylon ropes. The ropes are stretched taut across her basement and she walks back and forth until the 100-yard nets are fastened to it.

She began hanging nets at the age of 12 in Beaconia, Man., where she learned the skill from her father, a commercial fisherman.

It takes 1¼ hours to do one net. The completed product is sent to an Edmonton firm for shipment to the Northwest Territories.

Dr. A. N. Rota Addresses Women's Hospital Aux.

The organization and function of the Department of Pathology at the Belleville General Hospital was the subject of an address given to the Women's Hospital Auxiliary by Dr. Alexander A. Rota at the September meeting held Tuesday, in Education Hall.

A native of, Toronto and a graduate of the University of Toronto, Dr. Rota is Director of the Department of Pathology at the Belleville General Hospital and is an Instructor in Pathology at Queen's University. He is the author of numerous scientific papers, including "Bullet Embolism - Report of a Case", published in the Journal of the Canadian Society of Forensic Science.

MEANING OF PATHOLOGY

Dr. Rota explained that pathology is the study of disease in all its aspects. The pathologist, a practising physician, performs laboratory tests whilch provide information so aid the patient's doctor in arriving at a correct diagnosis. The clinical laboratory is comprised of various divisions including a blood bank in which human blood is prepared and stored for life-saving transfusions. The biochemistry division uses chemical means to analyze body fluids.

Another important division of the pathology laboratory is concerned with microbiology, in which micro-organisms of disease are isolated. All divisions are subject to quality control which ensures that false results are not passed on to the patient's physician.

An additional part of the laboratory work concerns the autopsy service. This consists of formal dissection of a dead body to establish cause of death, to collect data in regard to diseased states, and to ascertain if the doctor was correct in his diagnosis and treatment. The speaker used life-like slides of diseased human organs to illustrate his talk.

DESCRIBES SCHOOL

Dr. Rota described the School of Medical Laboratory Technology at the Belleville General Hospital, of which he is principal. The course, open to graduates of grade 13, consists of an 18 months' program leading to a Registered Technician certificate. Since the number of students admitted to the school is limited, application should be made to the secretary not later than June 30th. The 1965 class is completely filled.

Mrs. J. H. Forrester introduced Dr. Rota and the thanks of the Auxiliary were expressed by Mrs. E. H. Hall.

Mrs. W. G. Harvey, 1st vice-president, presided at the business part of the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. William Dallas. Plans for the annual fashion show to be held in October in the Collegiate auditorium were discussed by the convener, Mrs. T. N. Davidson. Tickets have been distributed and a sell-out is anticipated.

TO OPEN SOON

The convener of the Opportunity Shop, Mrs. W. J. Musgrove, announced that the new shop on Market Square, provided through the generosity of city council, will open within the next few weeks upon completion of renovation.

The Shop, which is the Auxiliary's chief money-raising project, offers clothing and household articles at bargain prices to thrifty Belleville shoppers. Mrs. Musgrove asked the members for donations to ensure a full stock for opening day, to be announced soon in the press.

Mrs. J. B. Casey, convener, informed the meeting that six layettes have been placed in the Samaritan Cupboard in the hospital during the last two months, the handiwork of members and friends of the Auxiliary.

Eight new members were introduced at the meeting. All women from Belleville and the surrounding district are extended a warm welcome to join the Auxiliary and take part in its many projects to further the interests of the hospital.

RING GOES ROUNDABOUT

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—A wedding ring recently found at Greenwater provincial park, 30 miles north of here, found its way home thanks to the memory of the junior forest ranger forgetful. He recalls that a ring had been lost in 1958 by an official of the Toronto YMCA on a visit to the park. "It's still hard to believe," said the grateful owner.

Women's Political Societies Ready For Election

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Never underestimate the power of the women.

That is what leaders of women's political organizations are saying as they get ready to play an active part in the federal election campaign.

Mrs. J. O. Asselin of Montreal, national president of the women's Liberal Federation of Canada said here Tuesday:

"The Liberal women of Canada are going to give Prime Minister Pearson the majority government he wants. We hold the balance of power."

Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Smith of Kelowna, B.C., national president of the Progressive Conservative Women's Association, said during a visit to Ottawa just after the election was called:

"Our women are well organized, and have been since the last election. They're ready to go out there and win."

PLANS CAMPAIGN

In Calgary, the national president of the Social Credit Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. I. F. Smith, is planning to campaign in the Western provinces, a party spokesman said.

Mrs. Asselin, whose two sons Edmund and Patrick were members of the last Parliament, says her Liberal women's organization is the largest of all the women's political groups with about 75,000 members. But the Progressive Conservatives also estimate their "woman-power" at 75,000 members.

The Socreds, who organized women's auxiliaries in 1961, had about 187 local groups and 3,800 members at that time. They say the number has probably risen slightly since then.

The NDP women's section, which probably operates more closely within the main party framework than the others, is organized in local committees rather than in clubs. Miss Latham says there are about 165 committees, organized in every province.

SEEK WIDER ROLE

Mrs. Asselin told an interview during a break in committee meetings here Tuesday she thinks women are not yet given the opportunity to participate in the policy-making discussions of the Liberal party.

But the Liberal women are all united behind their national leader, she said. "That is more than you can say for the women of one other Canadian political party," she added in a dig at the Conservatives.

Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Smith, who was elected head of the Conservative women in 1963, says they have full and equal rights in the policy discussions of the party.

Miss Latham, who started getting NDP women members years ago for the election in July by issuing a five-page bulletin, says women are among the most vocal members at policy discussions.

Although their political viewpoints may be different, the leaders of Canada's major women's political organizations are united in at least one respect.

They all say they don't want women to be thought of as just handy for serving tea and coffee and manning the polls on election night.

same with other countries—a concession designed to ward off any claims that the U.S. was offending the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade by making special concessions to Canada.

It was considered a safe concession because few if any other countries except Canada could afford to get into such a plan.

IN SENATE FRIDAY?

It is understood the committee may get through all the proposed changes today and that the hope of the government for Senate action by Friday will be realized.

The House of Representatives approved the bill three weeks ago.

Final public testimony came from the U.S. tariff commission which takes a different view than government witnesses have done on the impact and benefits of the agreement.

The tariff commission is not nearly so enthusiastic.

Bulk of its testimony came last April at another hearing.

One point, raised as Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore considered to flip the whole agreement as an "ultralight cartel" benefitting only General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors, concerns commission allegations of secret deals between the Canadian government and Canadian companies.

HAS ASSURANCES

The Canadian government in publicly-revealed letters of undertaking, made with the big four, has assured the Canadian production on the auto plan will go up by $200,000,000 by 1968.

The U.S. tariff commission said the four undertakings accounted for only $240,000,000 and that there was $20,000,000 missing in "secret" undertakings somewhere.

It is understood in fact that there are Canadian government undertakings with another dozen or so smaller - volume firms which make up the difference.

These range from trucks to "off - highway" specialty vehicles such as construction cranes and the like.

UNEMPLOYMENT DOWN—The number of unemployed in Canada at mid-August was estimated at 211,000, a decrease of 33,000 from July and 25,000 below August of last year according to a report issued by the federal labor department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The graph shows monthly totals including people without jobs and seeking work and those on temporary layoff. (CP Newsmap)

George Hees

"return honesty to government in Ottawa."

SAYS KIDS WONDER

"Our children are wondering what in the world a politician is," he said. "They have nothing but shameful thoughts about Ottawa."

Mr. Hees, who quit as trade minister in the Diefenbaker government in February, 1963, will be doing battle in Northumberland against Pauline Jewett, who held the seat for the Liberals in the last Parliament.

Conservative riding officials invited him to let his name stand after hearing indirectly that he might be available. Mr. Hees did not even know most of the local Tory executive, including Bill Swayze, president of the Cobourg Conservative Association, now one of his campaign chiefs.

And after agreeing to run he found that campaigns are not run in rural Ontario as they are in Toronto. The local association set a budget of less than $15,000 for the campaign —not even half of what he was used to spending in Broadview.

Mr. Hees decided to wage a personal, door-knocking, handshaking campaign with as few trips outside of the riding as possible. He approved a crowded itinerary of local appearances to forestall invitations to participate in the national campaign.

A 65-acre farm outside of Cobourg is called home by Mr. Hees, although it has served mainly in his weekend retreat from business and politics in Toronto, Ottawa and, latterly, Montreal, where he was president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges until he resigned last week to re-enter politics.

The farm has its advantages—a swimming pool, tennis courts, and proximity to the local golf club — but it has not made George Hees well - known in Northumberland.

The county has a population of about 42,000, most of whom depend on agriculture for a living. Cobourg, with 11,000, is the seat of industry—and of a solid Liberal vote which offsets the hardcore Conservative vote in the farm areas.

Local politicians say the vote in Northumberland more often than not has served as an indicator of how the country as a whole is going. The Conservatives captured Northumberland in 1957, increased their majority in 1958, barely held it in 1962, and finally gave it up again to the Liberals in 1963.

Miss Jewett won then with a plurality of about 500 over Garnet Bradley, a high school teacher who would have been the Conservative choice to run in 1963 had not Mr. Hees stepped into the picture.

Mr. Bradley was nominated Tuesday night, along with Doug McMaster, president of the Northumberland Conservative Association, but both declined to let their names stand, giving Mr. Hees the nomination tion, India Tuesday night handed over a strong protest note to the Chinese embassy alleging that even while China had extended what was virtually an ultimatum, "Chinese forces had moved up all along India's northern border and started firing at India border posts in Sikkim and Ladakh."

CLAIMS AGGRESSION

The note said the unprovoked and aggressive activities of Chinese troops, coming after threats and an ultimatum by China, could not be considered "anything other than premeditated acts of provocation and aggression."

The Peking report, meanwhile, said the Indian withdrawal had been made since last Thursday when China issued its first three-day ultimatum, warning India to dismantle installations in the area or face serious consequences.

China then extended the deadline from Sunday night until today.

The New China news agency report said: "Faced with the concrete facts presented in the Chinese note India has resorted in the last few days to various methods to destroy the evidence of its crimes."

The agency said careful checks disclosed there had been 50 large and small military works either on the Chinese (Tibet) side of the border or on the boundary itself.

Wife's Feed-basket Tortures Man on Diet

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a man who is about 40 pounds overweight and trying hard to reduce. (Doctor's orders.) My wife is a scrawny little thing who hasn't gained an ounce in 20 years. If Clara ever met up with a mountain lion I'd put my money on her.

Clara fixes me a half a grapefruit in the morning, a poached egg and a cup of coffee She eats bacon and eggs and buckwheat cakes. The smell of that bacon frying drives me nuts.

At night I get two ounces of meat and half a cup of spinach. Clara has fried chicken, corn fritters, and mashed potatoes with gravy.

ANN LANDERS

When we watch TV together after supper she shovels in the popcorn like crazy. I go out of my mind from the crunching sound. Sometimes she fixes herself a malted. When she stoops that last drop through a straw I'd like to hit her.

I have never told Clara how annoyed I am because I don't want to give her the satisfaction. What do you suggest? — WALLY.

* * *

DEAR WALLY: Let's face it — a man who loves food and is on a diet is going to suffer. But Clara shouldn't compound the suffering by crunching popcorn in your ear and you ought to tell her so.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am presently employed in a large eastern city where people think they are awfully sophisticated. Several times in the past few weeks I've heard the expression, "It might be O.K. in Iowa."

It so happens that I'm from Dubuque. I resent the implication that Iowans are hayseeds. I concede that Iowa has its share of boobs and frumps but after traveling around the country I've concluded that there are fewer alibs in Marshalltown and Davenport than in most other cities — i.e. Boston, which considers itself a cultural centre.

So please, Ann Landers, do us Iowans a favor and set the record straight. This letter may sound chauvinistic but if the people from your state were constantly being run down you'd be resentful, too. — SELF-APPOINTED SPOKESMAN.

* * *

DEAR SPOKESMAN: What do you mean if the people from my state were being run down. I'm from Iowa, too. Sioux City to be exact, and I don't appreciate the insults any more than you do — especially when people make cracks about the cows.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a high school senior, almost 17 years old, and my grades are betterjthan average. I sent for your booklet, "Dating Do's and Dent's" and you say high school kids should not be allowed to date during the week. You seem to be on the side of the oldsters in everything but this. Why are you against mid-week dating if we promise to be in by midnight? I'll lose him if we don't get to see each other at least every other night.

I do my share of housework and I'm on good terms with my parents. They are going to see this letter before I mail it and we will all await your reply. Thanks. — NATALIE.

* * *

DEAR NATALIE: A Friday and Saturday night date and a Sunday afternoon date is enough social life for any high school girl.

High school students who date during the week look dead tired and so do their grades. A teen-ager can't do justice to a staggering load of homework if mid-week dating is allowed.

No girl ever lost a first-rate boy friend because she gave him too little time. It's really the other way around. Buttercup.

* * *

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits — the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex — Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

the world," he said. "The council has addressed itself to perhaps the gravest problem in UN history."

EXPRESSES SATISFACTION

Speaking for the entire membership, he said:

"The council expresses its satisfaction that the ceasefire has been accepted by the two parties and calls upon the governments concerned to implement the ceasefire as rapidly as possible, and in any case not later than 2200 (10 p.m.) GMT Sept. 22."

The break came after Bhutto received last - minute instructions from President Mohammad Ayub Khan.

The meeting of the council was delayed until the early morning hours, first while awaiting Bhutto's arrival from Pakistan—his London flight was delayed—and then while an unscheduled stop in Montreal—and then while private talks finally produced the agreement.

In a personal message, read by Bhutto, Ayub told the council its ceasefire resolution was unsatisfactory to Pakistan but that he was accepting it in the interest of international peace.

". . . we will soon be having discussions and negotiations with the provinces of vital importance to the future of our country.

"To uphold the Canadian position as a whole in these negotiations, there must be a strong federal government, with strong support in Parliament."

Mr. Pearson made only a fleeting reference to aid to education. He said:

"We will also be putting forward proposals—to be worked out with the universities and the provinces—for further federal assistance to education."

Although education was a provincial responsibility, it was becoming essential for the federal government to play a role to ensure better education for every boy and girl in the country.

Finance Minister Gordon told reporters afterwards that details of the education proposals will be unveiled later in the campaign.

Mr. Pearson spoke for 30 minutes at a luncheon in the Chateau Laurier Hotel. A huge maple leaf flag painted on a billboard towered above and behind the head table guests, while souvenir miniature flags dotted all the other tables.

"That took leadership, decision and courage," he said.

After more speeches by Mr. Gordon, Quebec Leader Guy Favreau, incumbent MP Pauline Jewett and Industry Minister David Stewart of Saskatchewan, gifts passed the hat and collected just over $1,000, including an undisclosed amount from Mr. Pearson.

GIVE ADVICE

At closed sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening, leading party figures gave advice to new candidates about the mechanics of campaign organization and publicity.

Mr. Gordon told a press conference that everyone at the meeting agreed it was a good idea for Mr. Pearson to limit his political appearances in the early stages of the campaign for the Nov. 8 election.

The prime minister's next campaign engagement will be in St. John's, Nfld., late this month, but no date has been set.

Both Mr. Gordon and Mr. Favreau said at the press conference that their campaign in the West will be helped by the current speaking tour of Quebec Premier Jean Lesage.

Mr. Lesage has insisted that he is neutral in the federal contest and that his western tour is non-political.

PRINCESS IN TOKYO

TOKYO (AP) — Princess Alexandra and her husband, businessman Angus Ogilvy, are in Japan, visiting the British exhibition at Tokyo's Harumi fair grounds. They were besieged Wednesday by a crowd of admirers and were escorted by sailors from the British guided missile destroyer Devonshire.

Short Retirement Rubs Sheen From West End Show Business

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP)—Some of the sheen has come off show business for Sylvia Tysick since the Canadian singer - dancer-actress returned to the West End stage after a short-lived retirement.

Playing the lead female dancer in a sprightly new musical called Passion Flower Hotel has provoked a succession of headaches for the elfin redhead who learned to dance in her native Ottawa and began her theatrical career in Montreal a decade ago.

That her return to the stage has produced problems is ironic because, as she says, "I don't really need the work now that I'm married."

Before her marriage here two years ago—to Count Peter van der Stegen de Schorieck, a Belgian architect working in London—Sylvia needed the work and got it without much trouble.

"Friends used to tell me I had it easy, working for efficient, mainly American, management," she says. "Since joining Passion Flower I know what they mean. It's been one crisis after another and I've had to struggle for everything."

For a start, the music for the second act of Passion Flower was being written by composer John Barry the week before the show opened a pre-London run in Manchester.

PLAYS SCHOOLGIRL

As a result, Sylvia, choreographer Peter Gardeno and Barry were working out the musical's two big dance numbers on the eve of opening and they had to rehearse up to curtain time.

The show is an adaptation by writer Wolf Mankowitz of a Rossalind Erskine novel about a comically inept attempt by English private-school girls to set up a brothel under the gym for a neighboring boys' school. With that subject, the show was a sellout in Manchester and did well at the box office after opening in London's Prince of Wales Theatre Aug. 24.

Sylvia, a compact 28-year-old just a whisper under five feet tall, plays a pigtailed, bespectacled field-hockey girl of 14 who looks as if she has stepped out of a Ronald Searle St. Trinian's cartoon.

Her partner in one dance number is half her age and is another it's Gordeco, Burmese-born dancer of 22 having his first film choreography. Most of the rest of the cast are teen-agers who have enthusiasm but little experience.

The result is that much of the responsibility for knocking off rough edges in choreography has fallen on the petite Canadian.

"I've never had to work so hard after a show has opened," Sylvia said after rehearsing one of the dances all afternoon three days after opening. "I was exhausted in the opening because we rehearsed all that day."

GOT JOB BY PHONE

The fatigue didn't show, however. She led the company through a boisterous fieldhockey dance, stole the scene with a song-and-dance number called Beastly and won critical praise in next morning's newspapers.

Sylvia, who was raised in Ottawa by her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Sullivan, and studied ballet there under Nesta Toumine, landed her first professional job by telephone at 18.

"Brian Macdonald, who's now choreographer for the Stockholm ballet, phoned me from Montreal and asked me if I would dance on a television show.

"I asked him if he knew how tall I was and what I looked like. I was the ugliest childterrible bucked teeth, orange hair and freckles all over my face. He said he didn't know but it didn't matter.

"As it turned out, it didn't. We all wore masks in that show."

A year later, Sylvia quit her job as an Ottawa secretary, went to Montreal and talked Macdonald into signing her up for his Montreal Theatre Ballet. She won critical acclaim and after two years received a Quebec government grant to study drama in New York under Uta Hagen at the Herbert Bergoff Studio.

She studied four days a week in 1958, commuting to Montreal for a weekly television show called Porte Ouverte on the CBC French network.

That summer she tried to audition for West Side Story but was turned away as "the wrong type." But when she later auditioned for Jerome Robbins's Ballets U.S.A. the choreographer decided that she was exactly the right type for the role of Anybody's in West Side, which Robbins choreographed.

In the fall, she moved with the show to London and stayed with it here for almost two years. It was then that she met her future husband.

She left to make a half-hour dance film called Ill, Sylvie with actor Stephen Boyd and "some small puppets," returned to Montreal briefly in 1960, then came back to London to win rave notices as Kim By Bye Birdie.

Then her Belgian count persuaded her to return to London and marry him.

"I tried to retire, but not very successfully," she says. She did some television work and played opposite Eli Wallach in Arthur Schisgal's two-character plays, The Tiger and The Typists, when Wallach's wife Anne Jackson, whom Sylvia resembles, had to leave the stage for several weeks because of illness.

Now back in a fulltime role, Sylvia is disappointed that Passion Flower failed to bloom as it might have. The critics were lukewarm, but most predicted the show would do well at the box office.

Tentative plans have already been made to take the show to New York.

WORKING THE ROUGH SPOTS OFF NEW MUSICAL — Sylvia Tysick works on a dance routine for a new London musical, Passion Flower Hotel, in which she is the lead female dancer. The elfin, 28-year-old Canadian left a short retirement to join the show and found she was the only trained professional. The musical, about a comically inept attempt by English school girls to set up a brothel for a neighboring boys' school, was a sellout at its Manchester opening and is doing well in London. # Tax-Paid Scientists Test Products But Consumers Never Learn Results

TEST LAB SAVES DOLLARS — Ball point pens write for miles on a moving roll of paper in the department of public works testing laboratory in Ottawa. Pencils, jet fuels, light bulbs, seat belts, floor wax, house paint and dozens of other products are tested before the government buys. The results of the tests are not made public but the department says the public saves not only in tax dollars but also in improvements manufacturers make in order to sell to the government. (CP Photo)

OTTAWA (CP) — They can tell you which ballpoint pen skips, which toilet tissue tears tidily or which floor tile is most likely to trip you.

But they won't.

The scientists and technicians of the federal works department's testing laboratories labor mightily on behalf of the taxpayers but their findings are not divulged to the public.

A weird assortment of devices enables the testers to crush, rip, stretch and strain a wide variety of products to ensure the federal government gets the best value in quality, tests would be of value to every quantity and performance.

Although the results of their consumer, any publication would be a federal recommendation for certain products and contrary to free enterprise.

Norman Laycroft, laboratories director, said in an interview the work benefits the public in several ways.

He said industry must continually improve its products to meet government specifications, and in the long term the public eventually enjoys the benefits of the improved products.

Another, more direct, benefit to the public comes from the laboratories' research and development of new testing equipment.

ADOPTED IN U.S.

In the last year one section became concerned with the safety of car seat belts. From research, a new test was devised to check the reliability of belts seeking the stamp of approval from the Canadian Standards Association.

This new device, which simulates more exactly the stresses on seat belts, caught the eye of American auto engineers who subsequently adopted the equipment. The U.S. government, which has since ordered seat belts in all new cars, also accepted the works department test device.

It was 70 years ago that the department recognized the need for an agency to assess and control the quality of concrete used in federal government projects.

But it was the Second World War that started the labs into diversified testing. The testers finally moved from cramped quarters in the basement of the West Block on Parliament Hill to modern offices at Confederation Heights, a new cluster of government buildings on Ottawa's southern outskirts.

New products brought a need for new equipment. Since almost every test is different, a distinct apparatus is needed.

One new device went to work this summer: It is driven by an electrical motor and turns and unlatches door knobs, then closes them, its rhythmic click is heard thousands of times a day.

With miles of corridors in government buildings a system has been devised to test the slip resistance of tiles.

A simulated shoe swings from a stick on a pendulum and strikes the tile sample. If the shoe jams on the sample the tile passes the test. If it slips across the tile it may indicate the sample could lead to tumbles by employees and too many claims to the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Other items running the test gamut include jet fuel filters, chair casters, detergents, shipping wharves, pencil sharpeners, fluorescent lights, floor waxes and paints. Concrete and ceramic products make up about 45 per cent of all materials tested.

Some 120 employees are engaged in the wear and tear operation. The accelerated abuse they apply to products is eventually going to assure that the ballpoint pen you buy doesn't skip or run dry for many a writing mile.

R. C. Larkin, the consulate spokesman, said also that a visa for Mrs. Keck's nine-year-old daughter, Eniko Elizabeth, will be approved in the next few days.

Mrs. Keck and her daughter have been living at Delhi, Ont., near Simcoe, and have been waiting for action on a U.S. visa application made last January.

The mother and daughter were ordered to leave Canada after a temporary sponsor withdrew. An immigration appeal board set Tuesday as the deadline and the Kecks had been listed as passengers on a liner leaving Montreal this morning for Bremerhaven, West Germany.

Mrs. Keck, a divorced immigrant from Hungary, met her husband five years ago while he was stationed in Germany. U.S. authorities refused permission to marry but they did at Delhi in December after Keck had returned from overseas duty.

SELF-INTEREST SPURS VOLUNTEERS — A desire for adventure and self-development, not missionary zeal motivates most young Canadians who volunteer for work in under-developed countries with the Canadian University Service Overseas program. French-speaking Canadians make up one-fifth of the volunteers. # Canadian Volunteer Workers Free From Missionary Zeal

By CARL DOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Young Canadian volunteers working in developing countries —318 now are on assignments on three continents—are a hard-headed lot without missionary zeal.

The young people, most of them recent university graduates with a salting of working professionals, are under the sponsorship of the Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) which receives financial support from the federal government and private sources. Provincial governments also make a small contribution.

CUSO went into operation during 1961 and by the summer of 1965 it had 150 Canadians working in developing countries on two-year assignments. Interest in the project increased so that by this September 168 more volunteers had gone abroad to Asia, Africa and South America.

The total would have been 200 but 40 others who were scheduled to go to India had to be left behind at the last minute due to the outbreak of fighting between India and Pakistan.

The most striking thing about the volunteers — one-fifth of whom are French-speaking Canadians — is the lack of the classical missionary enthusiasm usually associated with those who participate in such projects.

This attitude is encouraged by organizers of the project who are determined that the "preachy, condescending" approach must be avoided.

SEEKS ADVENTURE

And if comments from volunteers interviewed in Montreal mean anything, they have no delusions about "saving" anyone or anything.

Among the working professionals is Linda Kachmar, 20, of Montreal, who has worked as a secretary since graduating from high school and has taken courses related to her work at McGill and Sir George Williams universities in that city.

Miss Kachmar, who speaks English, French and now Fanti Twi—the dialect of the region to which she has been assigned —will work to establish a commerce department at Holy Names girls' secondary school in Cape Coast, Ghana, on the west coast of Africa.

"I'm not going because of a missionary state of mind," Miss Kachmar said. "It's more for adventure and a reaching for a sense of usefulness than anything else.

"I've always wanted to travel and so I applied as a volunteer when I learned that CUSO needed people with business experience. When I was asked if I would accept the business department assignment I saw it as an opportunity to prove my usefulness to myself and, of course, to others."

FORMS CHARACTER TEST

Self-interest, as distinct from selfishness, was also expressed by a young married couple from the University of Western Ontario, Dr. Ross Laing and his wife Pauline, who are 25 and 24 years old respectively.

Mrs. Laing, who has been teaching English at a secondary school in London, Ont., and expects to do the same with CUSO, said she considered her new undertaking "a valuable experience for us."

"Our generation has no real challenges compared to the generations that went through the depression and the Second World War—we need something to test our resources and adaptability and it is fortunate we can find this test in less dramatic and tragic circumstances than faced by those who came before us."

Dr. Laing, a psychiatrist who has been posted as a district medical officer in Tanzania, said he expects the experience should help him to obtain a better perspective of Canada's role in world affairs.

"In order to function well in any society we have to be able to take an objective look at it and living and working under conditions so remote from our own will, I'm sure, help us to understand better our own country, its role and our role in it."

James Geros, a science graduate of the University of British Columbia, and his wife Marion, a graduate of St. Boniface School of nursing, Winnipeg, will spend the next two years working in Uganda.

Mr. Geros, whose home is Vancouver, said the venture will provide him with an invaluable opportunity to continue his studies in bacteriology.

NEED MANY QUALITIES

The couple, both 23, also see the trip as a way to "find themselves" and as adventure. They have been asigned to work in a hospital in Morocco.

During the familiarization courses which CUSO volunteers take the lecturers, most of whom are university professors, emphasize that they are going to work at secondary positions under local conditions of employment.

To qualify, a volunteer must:
—Be adaptable and flexible.
—Be able to communicate accurately.
—Have the capacity to inspire confidence.
—Have patience and humility.
—Have kindness without sentimentality.
—Have sensitivity—"the ability to perceive subtle differences which warns him to stop what he is doing altogether or merely pursue another course."
—Have empathy — "which means the ability and willingness to see things from the other person's point of view. This involves a readiness to find out and understand features of the cultural, social and religious life of the colleagues among whom he works."
—Have the ability to respect that which the volunteer does not understand.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed for the working taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an income tax office.

By C. A. MILLER
Retired Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department

CONSTRUCTION WORKERS

There are certain rules and regulations for income tax purposes that apply to construction workers and no one else. These apply mainly to the key men of the contractor who move with him from contract to contract in different parts of the country.

When the construction worker is paid an allowance to cover his board and lodging while away from his ordinary place of residence for periods exceeding 36 hours such allowance is shown on the T4 slip as a "Taxable Allowance." This allowance need not be included in the taxpayers income if he was:

(a) A married man supporting a wife in a dwelling maintained by him.

(b) He was a single man supporting a relative in a dwelling and on whom he was entitled to claim the equivalent to married status.

The two main points to bear in mind are first, the omission of taxable allowances only apply when the taxpayer is away in excess of 36 hours and the taxpayer has a married or equivalent exemption for income tax purposes.

A single person supporting only himself is not entitled to any claim. He must include any allowance received for board and lodging with his other income.

A construction worker living within driving distance of his home but whose work is of a technical nature and the employer requests he be on call at the construction site 24 hour per day would be considered as living away from home. This would apply to mechanics on heavy equipment, etc.

For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, five cent stamped envelope, plus 25 cents for each question.

Question 1: I am a construction laborer and go wherever my employer has a contract. I am married and maintain a home. I never receive any allowance for labor away. Have I any deduction for the board I pay away from home ?

Answer: No.

Question 2: I am single and make my home with my brother. We both work for the same construction firm. We both get an allowance for board while away from home. Why must I include this allowance and my brother does not have to ?

Answer: All single construction workers supporting no one but themselves must include these allowances in their income. See section 5 (2) (i) of the Income Tax Act.

PRINCE GEORGE HAS BOOM TOWN PROBLEMS — Busy traffic crowds the streets of downtown Prince George in northern British Columbia. In the background the forest that feeds Prince George's boom seems to close in on the city. In 15 years the population has jumped from 4,000 to 19,000 with another 15,000 in a satellite sprawl around the city. (CP Photo)

Prince George Harvests Benefits and Headaches Which Go With Boom

By DENIS ORCHARD

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—This is a city of young men, few women and rapid change.

It is good and bad, harvesting the benefits of runaway expansion in lumber, power and mining while struggling with a boom town's inevitable moral problems.

Unskilled and skilled, enterprenuer and professional, the men in its trading area outnumber the women more than 2 to 1.

Prince George's size, never more than 4,000 from incorporation in 1915 until 1950, has since shot to 19,000. Another 15,000 occupy a badly-planned satellite sprawl.

You go downwind a few miles to find the reasons. There, representing an investment of more than $200,000,000, two giant pulp mills are in the works and a third on the way.

An oil company has smelled a good thing and will move in with a $5,000,000 refinery.

Two companies are said to be sniffing the prospects for putting in a chemical plant.

It is predicted that the city will grow seven to 10 per cent a year for the next 15 years.

HEAVY DRINKING

Architect and planner Desmond Parker says the growth is guaranteed by the pulp mills, efficient lumber industry, mining, diversified service industries and the power, oil and gas of the Peace River country.

Any "big industrial shots"—more pulp mills or major industry—would put the growth estimates out of date.

The weekday hum rises to a roar on weekends on a grubby downtown corner where hundreds of lumbermen and construction workers bring business to the pubs and headaches to the RCMP.

This area accounts for almost all of the city's bad reputation—double the number of common assaults of other comparable British Columbia centres; six to 20 times the indecent assaults; the highest recorded venereal disease rate in Canada.

"Drinking has become the accepted way of life," says Rev. Ibis Avery of the United Church, who would have one-third of Prince George to preach to if everyone in town went to church. "You have it in the highest echelons of society. It has become the norm.

"Fewer than 10 per cent of people here have any church relationship whatsoever. Ninety-nine per cent of my work is with people outside my congregation, in counselling, illegitimacy, alcoholism, marital problems."

PLANNED GROWTH

Mayor Garvin Dezell, 56, acknowledges a "weekend distortion" but maintains that Prince George is "as well-controlled and habitable as any city in Western Canada."

Whatever the depth of its social problems, the city has the totals for broad and efficient control of growth. It is laying the groundwork for rearrangement into a 600-square-mile district municipality which would take in the pulp mills and a 3,600-acre industrial park.

This would vastly increase tax revenues, make living cheaper for almost all city residents, shape up the sprawl in the satellite communities and mean tight planning of water, sewer, road and other services to support five or six times the present population.

Within its existing boundaries, partly formed by the converging Fraser and Nechako Rivers 325 miles north of Vancouver, new residential areas are planned in detail but downtown blocks have been developed in helter-skelter fashion.

Mr. Parker, a crisp 35-year-old native of Australia, works seven days and five nights a week plotting in detail the structure of future subdivision. Undeveloped government land is bought by the city, fully serviced with roads, water, sewer and underground wiring; then made available at cost for house construction.

RICHLY BALANCED

"We are going to have ideal, self-contained residential neighborhoods. We have deliberately put senior citizens' homes in the subdivisions for contact between old and young. We have mixed good-quality homes with average and less-pretentious dwellings, duplexes, carden apartments and high-rise apartments.

"We will not have snob housing or dull housing. People will be aware of all levels. Children will know there are old people and people who haven't got children. We will have social cohesion that makes for a richly balanced community."

Supply hasn't caught up with demand, however, and an habitable accommodation, even a patched-up basement or garage, costs at least $60 a month while other rents are $20 to $50 richer than Vancouver.

Downtown commercial development has set modern buildings beside shacks, forcing authorities to close some streets for parking and driving some profitable lots beyond the buying power of desirable tenants.

Mr. Parker, commissioned for a study of this problem too, says the city is late off the mark and will have to work to save the downtown from premature decay.

City manager Arran Thomson says all anxieties will be allayed within 18 months by completion now "quietly assembling" downtown property for offices.

TEACHERS MOVE ON

The school system has strained to keep pace despite a 30-to-40-per cent teacher turnover, but Prince George will have the first high school implementing the province's full vocational and technical program.

Principal George Bevan concedes that Prince George students don't do as well in government examinations "because our teachers are not the hide-bound pass - masters you find in Vancouver." But he says "we're not afraid to try ideas" and as a bonus his students are free of the big-city "veneer of pseudo-sophistication."

That seems to go for most everyone. Prince George is a classless place where you can't reckon a man's income by the color of his shirt—some electricians earn $1,000 a month—and where mutual interest helps ensure labor peace because, as one employer put it, "no one can afford a strike."

Three Held After Bandit Robs Bank

HAMILTON (CP)—Two men and a woman were arrested Tuesday an hour and a half after a bandit held up a downtown bank and escaped with $22,000.

Police burst into a Main Street East boarding house within 20 minutes of the noontime robbery and found three persons counting money at a table. About $1,000, believed part of the loot, was recovered.

Charged with robbery are Elton J. Boudreau, 37, of the Toronto suburb of Downsview; William Donovan, 37, and Mrs. Jean Elizabeth Plevin, 43, both of Hamilton. Donovan and Mrs. Plevin also are charged with possession of stolen money.

The bank was robbed by a man who walked up to the teller's cage of Elaine Eade, 19, and thrust a crudely scrawled note at her. The note said he had a gun and wanted all the money. He had his hand in his coat pocket.

Former Editor Gives Opinion On Unity

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada as a whole needs a quiet revolution, Gerard Pelletier, former editor of Montreal La Presse, said Tuesday night.

Mr. Pelletier, who announced recently he plans to stand for election Nov. 8 as a Liberal candidate, said there are moments in any federation which may seem difficult than others. Canada is in one of those difficult moments right now."

If the Canadian experiment is going to be a success, English Canada needs to go through a period of self-examination, he said. "My basic suggestion is that the problem of unity or cultural identity in English Canada is as dangerous to Canada as the awakening of Quebec."

Mr. Pelletier, addressing members of the Canadian Association of Purchasing Agents, said he wants to contribute to the solution of the problem of Confederation.

Canadians on both sides of the cultural barrier hold illusions about themselves and each other, he said. One of these, held by some young Quebecers, is that the country would be one big family, that English - speaking Canadians would care for French-speaking Canadians.

"Another illusion, which came to be strongest in Western Canada, is that we should strive for unbypheaned Canadianism."

Certain things had to change, the country was to survive. I don't think we can have real political unity as long as there is unequal opportunity between French- and English-Canadians."

NEW BOILER HOUSE at Belleville General Hospital is scheduled to go into operation this week following final tests. The new $363,000 boiler house with its oil-fired boilers is west of the present hospital and will replace present facilities which have to be razed to make way for the new hospital addition. Chimney is 100 feet high ranging from 10 feet in diameter at base to six feet at the top.

Crown Requests Venue Change In Dupuis Trial

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP)—Jean Bienvenue, special Crown prosecutor, asked Judge Philipe Lamarre Tuesday to transfer to another district the trial of Yvon Dupuis, former federal cabinet minister who faces influence-peddling charges.

Judge Lamarre said he hopes to announce within a few days his decision on the request, which was opposed by defence counsel.

Mr. Bienvenue said Mr. Dupuis's preliminary hearing here was the source of widespread publicity and local discussion. If the trial were held here, it would be during a federal election campaign in which Mr. Dupuis would figure prominently.

He asked whether it is fair to ask local jurors to pass judgment on a man for whom they will be asked to vote in the Nov. 8 elections. Justice would be endangered in such circumstances, he said.

Mr. Dupuis, Liberal member in the last Parliament for St. Jean-Iberville - Napierville riding who was fired from the cabinet last January, has said he will run again. However, spokesmen have said he will not be the official Liberal candidate.

Prescott, Renfrew, Russell County Farmers Eligible For Full Govt. Assistance

TORONTO (CP)—Farmers in Prescott, Russell and Renfrew counties are eligible for full assistance in livestock feed purchases under the federal-provincial drought relief program.

Under an Ontario order-in-council posted Tuesday at Queen's Park, farmers in the three counties may apply for $20 for each ton of balanced feed rations or for each ton of oats, barley or shelled corn; $24 for each ton of ear corn and $15 for each ton of hay up to a limit based on the number and type of their livestock.

Applications for assistance must be filed by Oct. 15.

The payments will be made under a formula which will count one unit for each milk cow, .8 unit for each bull, beef cow or heifer, .6 for yearling heifers for milk or beef, .33 for calves, .15 for sheep and .8 for horses.

Assistance will be given according to the number of animal units each farmer has, but the amount of assistance can be reduced if, in the opinion of the Ontario agriculture department, the number of animal units exceeds what the farm-er's land could normally support.

Farmers in Glengarry, Lanark and Stormont counties will be eligible for three-quarters the amount of assistance available to farmers in Prescott, Russell and Renfrew.

Half the top assistance will be available to farmers in Carleton, Dundas and Grenville counties and the districts of Muskoka, Parry Sound, Nipissing and Sudbury.

In Frontenac, Hastings, Leeds, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward counties farmers will be eligible for one-quarter of top assistance.

The assistance program has a ceiling set at $12,000,000. Assistance is being made available for hay purchased between May 16, 1965, and May 15, 1966, and for balanced rations between July 15, 1965, and May 15, 1966.

The province and the federal government each pay half the assistance. The formula was drawn up by a three-man committee with one representative from each of the Canadian Quebec and Ontario agriculture departments.

Lesage Says Audiences Fail To Grasp Point

CALGARY (CP) — Quebec Premier Lesage said Tuesday there have been times on his Western Canada tour when some persons in his audiences haven't grasped his points on biculturalism.

There also were some who objected to his arguments, although "I don't believe this was the major group," the premier said at a press conference after arriving from Saskatoon.

He added: "Then there is a group of which I cannot evaluate the importance, which seemed indifferent."

The premier, who has emphasized his tour is non-political, carried the message that there is "a lack of understanding" and knowledge between Canada's French and English cultures which must be ended.

Later, he had "no comments" on a statement by Guy Favreau, Quebec federal Liberal leader that his tour will help the Pearson government campaign for re-election Nov. 8.

Mr. Lesage has said the provincial Liberal party plans to stay out of the federal election. His tour was to "stir up interest" in biculturalism.

REFERS TO SASKATOON ...

The premier's remarks about the failure of some to grasp his views on Quebec's rights in Confederation and other bicultural matters referred to two speeches in Saskatoon.

"Certainly in Saskatoon I met with personal sympathy," he said. And "as for the message I'm trying to put through . . . I'd say I had a certain success with part of my audiences."

He left Saskatoon with "imperishable" memories of Saskatchewan and several gifts symbolic of the province's diamond jubilee before travelling by plane to Calgary.

Mr. Lesage was to address the Canadian Club here today and then go on to Edmonton. Other points on his tour include Vancouver and Edmonton.

In Saskatoon he toured the University of Saskatchewan's main campus and chatted with university officials on university financing and medicare.

At one point he quipped: "Your premier Ross Thatcher won't like me for saying this but I think the Saskatchewan government does not give enough grants to its university."

Discussing medical care insurance with university officials after visiting a pioneer museum, he said medicare "is coming to the whole country as you have had since 1961."

Pauline Jewett Objects to Riding Split

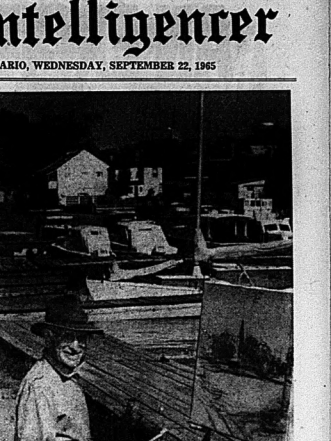
KINGSTON (CP)—Only two briefs were presented in objection to proposed federal electoral boundary changes during a boundaries commission hearing here Tuesday.



Liberal member of Parliament Pauline Jewett made a brief plea for the preservation of her Northumberland riding and Jack Casey of the Prince Edward-Hastings Progressive Conservative association objected to the inclusion of Kingston Township in the new Kingston seat.

The hearing took about an hour but the chairman, Mr. Justice Edward J. Richardson, said public interest had fallen off since the calling of the federal election for Nov. 8.

Miss Jewett said she preferred to see Northumberland riding retained intact as described by the two new ridings of Northumberland - Durham and Prince Edward-Hastings, two lake-front areas from Oshawa to Belleville. She said the splitting of the riding had taken place "against the history and interests" of the county.

Mr. Casey had the commission juggle with several names for the new Frontenac-Addington riding that encloses Kingston on three sides and runs north almost to Pembroke.

The commission agreed to recommend a change to Frontenac - Lennox and Addington after Mr. Casey pleaded: "If the commission can do nothing else it can give us back our old name."

PAINTS CITY AGAIN — Belleville's colorful waterfront with clock tower landmark is the subject of a new landscape scene by noted Canadian painter Manly Macdonald (with brush in hand) shown at work in Victoria Park yesterday.

Martin Goes To Opening Of UN Assembly

By BORIS MISKEW

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The United Nations General Assembly bites into a record agenda of 106 items today—buoyed by the accomplishment of the Security Council in obtaining a ceasefire between India and Pakistan.

The 20th session of the assembly opened Tuesday with the election of Foreign Minister Amintore Fanfani of Italy as assembly president and the installation of three states—Gambia, the Maldive Islands and Singapore—as members of the world organization. Total membership now stands at 117.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, who arrived by special plane from Ottawa shortly before the opening of the new assembly, said "the election of Fanfani is a very happy choice."

The Italian foreign minister, who will present Pope Paul to the assembly Oct. 4, told delegates that the pontiff will regard them of the need to re-dedicate themselves to the goal of world peace set forth by the founders of the United Nations.

WILL HOLD TALKS

Martin will hold talks with Paul Tremblay, Canada's permanent representative to the UN, as well as with other officials. He will outline Canada's UN policy in an address to the assembly Friday.

The external affairs minister told a press conference that he will return to the UN to welcome Pope Paul on behalf of the people of Canada during his forthcoming visit.

Today, the assembly's seven main committees elect their chairmen and then the assembly names 17 vice-presidents who, with the assembly's president and committee chairmen, make up the assembly's steering committee.

Secretary - General U Thant released a report shortly before the opening of the assembly, indirectly backing the seating of Communist China for the UN.

Thant said that military conflicts in Asia and the deadlock on disarmament have "reinforced his view that all countries should be represented at the world organization.

Martin, when asked whether Canada might change her policy of opposing the seating of the Peking government, replied:

"I'd prefer to deal with that question when it comes up."

Manly Macdonald Paints Harbor for Second Time

A foremost Canadian painter is making a permanent record in oils of the Belleville harbor with the city hall tower in the background for the second time.

Manly M. Macdonald caught the beauty of the colorful local scene first during the winter months. His graphic impression appeared on this year's Bank of Commerce calendar distributed widely in this hemisphere and abroad.

Mr. Macdonald - makes his home at nearby Point Anne. Earlier he lived in Amelias-burg township in Prince Edward County on the Redeemerville road. He is related to the Weese family, one of the original settlers in the Albury area.

Artist Macdonald started painting as a young man, studied to improve his technique and searches continually for perfection. Hard work is his recipe for success. His normal work day begins when the sun rises and ends when it sets in order for him to utilize natural lighting to the best advantage.

Canadian settings by Macdonald are acquired by people who derive pleasure from realism. Industrialist E. P. Taylor is among those who admire the style and possess at least one of his originals. Mr. Macdonald is also an accomplished portrait and architectural artist.

United Buffadison Mines Taken Off TSE Suspended List and Trading Resumed

TORONTO (CP) — United Buffadison Mines Ltd. has been taken off the Toronto Stock Exchange suspended list after confirmation Tuesday that all publication restrictions on the first drill hole in a molybdenum prospect were wrong.

W. L. Sommerville, executive vice-president of the TSE, said trading was being resumed in the stock because the public had been informed of the true value of the assays from the first hole.

"The idea of the suspension was to clear up all the difficulties," he said. "The important thing was that the correct assays be published."

Louis Lashman, a United Buffadison vice - president, said Tuesday that complete check assays in Vancouver by Dr. J. R. Williams and Sons and in Toronto by the Ontario provincial assay office both showed much less molybdenum than at first shown in assays made by Atlas Testing Laboratories Ltd. of Edmonton.

A spokesman for the Ontario Securities Commission said Tuesday his agency has asked the Alberta and British Columbia securities commissions to investigate reasons for the assay discrepancies.

Mr. Lashman said his firm has also asked the OSC to "ascertain the reasons for the wide variance between the original assays and the check assays."

Trading in United Buffadison was suspended Sept. 7 after the company told the exchange that spot checks on some of the material in the original assays from the property in northern British Columbia produced considerably poorer results.

Last week, the OSC said it would investigate heavy short selling in the stock during the latter part of August before the company announcement.

The price of shares rose from 90 cents a share Aug. 9 to a high of $2.25 Aug. 13. Over-the-counter price of shares Tuesday was about 75 cents.

United Buffadison has blamed the controversy on the assay cores on the TSE, which it said, forced the premature publication of the assays Aug. 11.

At a special shareholders meeting Sept. 15, I. C. Christopher, United Buffadison president, said the company had wanted to defer publication of the assays because they represented only part of the first hole.

The company was forced to work with a small drill, an instrument frequently unable to produce accurate samples of molybdenum-bearing earth, he said.

SPORT SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

One of the chief reasons why the Central Professional Hockey League won a gold medal in its inugural year dropped in to see me the other day.

Jack Adams, the robust ebullient "boss" of the young circuit, who is "rooster-tailing" a brilliant National Hockey League career, with his work in the junior loop, predicts another successful season for the fledglings of the "big time."

"Jolly Jawn" at he was tabbed when he was one of the leading figures in Clarence Campbell's NHL "Greatest Show on Earth" has used his tremendous wealth of experience to bring to a point of near-excellence the main feed-box of the parent body.

Adams has used the broad sphere of his hockey know-how to produce something the ill-fated Eastern Professional Hockey League (Canada) failed to do.

The Eastern Professional Hockey League was an ill-spawned effort, an obituary-formed outfit, so to speak, on the demise of the ill-fated Eastern Ontario Senior Hockey League.

Pollock, Blair, Jackson, Miron, Denyes, et al, can bear witness to that statement.

Another ebullient friend of mine, the curly-cued Wren Blair, in a dying effort to save the Eastern Pro League from its casket alongside of the Eastern amateur buddy, came up with the idea of restricted age players. To wit: 23 and under. It flopped.

Eastern Ontario TV broadcasters and writers moaned and groaned. They blamed the lackadaisical attitude of the public.

The public, Joe Fan, who after all pays the shot in any league, including the Vietnam squabble, wasn't buying it.

JOHN ADAMS

What they saw was a more-or-less pasture field for aging hockey horses, sprinkled with colts kicking up their heels and hoping their "watch me" eyes would be heard by the ubiquitous NHL scouts.

The Eastern Ontario moguls blamed it on the apathy of the hockey-going public. What did they expect from the fans? The Eastern League folded in what amounted "A" hockey officials in this neck of the woods called "pestle jostle". We concur.

Adams took over the new professional "colts" die-hards. "Why," screamed the Eastern Ontario League

Adams took over the new professional "colts" die-hards. "What the hell can he do. The American centres, under the plan of the new league won't support this kind of hockey."

Max Jackson, a Kingston TV broadcaster, took the NHL to severe task. With Wren Blair, now with the Boston Bruins, they had teamed to bring this kind of hockey to Kingston. The $120,000 break-even point was not even approached.

Hockey-wise Jack Adams had a different idea. "Restrict my clubs to players, ten under 23 years of age and I'll get the hockey players. Not all of them NHL but enough to fill your needs," he said.

Jack Adams in his first year as boss of the Central Professional League was as good as his word.

In his first year of operation he sent a good quota of players to the NHL.

"The Central Professional League," Jack told me, "is doing just what it is supposed to be. The teams in the southern United States are drawing exceptionally well. In other words hockey is 'in' there. I look for an exceptional season. Our first year was a tremendous success. I'm looking for a better one this season."

I asked Jack about the proposed NHL expansion. "There will be no lowering of player calibre with the additional clubs," he said.

"After all," he added, "in the NHL some five or six top players carried the load. Look at the Montreal Canadiens. Their top notch crew won it for them. Toronto's big five let them down."

"There are five or six top players on each club who carry the brunt. The rest are fringe players. Expansion will give more younger players to chance to get in there. It is a good thing for hockey and for the youth of the game. There will be more opportunities, and after all, that is what is needed."

Leafs Sign Kurtenbach

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League Tuesday signed Orland Kurtenbach, a centre acquired during the off-season from Boston Bruins. Terms were not disclosed.

FLEMING OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coach Dave Skrien Tuesday confirmed that Willie Fleming will not be able to play for British Columbia Lions in Calgary Saturday. Fleming, the Lions' leading rusher this year, suffered a bruised back in last Saturday's Canadian Football League game with Montreal Alouettes.

Hotelmen Win Opener

City Hotel's Dave Feeney bested Point Anne"s Ron Marcele in a tight hurling duel last night to give his team a 3-0 victory in the opener of the Commercial Softball League finals.

The second game of the four-of-seven series is slated for Point Anne tomorrow night, starting six o'clock.

It was a mound thriller all the way down. Both hurlers allowed but three hits with Feeney walking two and whiffing a pair. Marcele walked three and struck out four.

Errors did not help the young Point Anne hurler, his mates bobbling four times. The Hotelmen goofed but once.

The winners counted single runs in the second and third innings. It was shutout ball on both sides from there in.

Two Point Anne errors in the second accounted for the first run.

Ethier reached second on the bobble and reached third on a putout. The second Pt. Anne error of the inning enabled him to score.

In the third inning with one out Doug Hull lashed out a double and went to third on an overthrow. He scored the final run of the game on an infield putout.

It was typical playoff softball. The game lasted but 45 minutes.

Despite the crucial errors, both clubs came up with fine fielding efforts.

The pitching was exceptional. Only 25 batters faced the Hotelmen's Feeney. No runner reached third, three got to second.

The teams:

Point Anne—Whalen, Horwood, Ellis, R. Maracle, Cook, Maher, Rosebush, E. Maracle, MacDonald.

City Hotel—Hawkins, Martin, Hull, Brooks, Morgan, Coolen, Ethier, Murray, Feeney.

The score:

City Hotel 011 000 x—2 3 1

Umpires — Ethier (p), Bawden.

Minnesota Twins have shot down their sick bay for lack of patients, but a few of their convalescents seem to need occupational therapy.

Harmon Killebrew, Tony Oliva and Camilo Pascual, expected to be the Twins' big guns, hitting and pitching leaders this season, played together Tuesday for the first time since July 23.

Their combined efforts fell short, however, as Baltimore Orioles trimmed the Twins 6-4 in 10 innings and postponed Minnesota's American League pennant - clinching celebration until at least Friday night.

Of the three, only Oliva appeared ready to take on the National League winners in the World Series without the aid of vitamin pills.

DIDN'T GET A HIT

The team leader in homers and runs batted in when he was injured, Killebrew drew a walk, a hit, twice leaving runners stranded at second.

Pascual started for the fourth time since he recovered from arm surgery but lasted only four innings, allowing three runs and four hits.

In 22 innings of work following his absence of nearly six weeks, the veteran right-hander who won his first eight decisions this season, has been battered for 11 earned runs for an earned-run average of 4.50.

Killebrew was scheduled to continue his on-the-field therapy today as the Twins tried to cut their magic number from three to one by belting the second-place Orioles.

A victory would assure Minnesota of a tie for the pennant and would leave the clinching for this weekend in Washington.

In other AL games Tuesday, Detroit Tigers defeated Chicago White Sox 6-2, New York Yankees whipped Cleveland Indians 9-4, California Angeles defeated Boston Red Sox 4-0 and Washington Senators edged Kansas City Athletics 4-3.

Minnesota scored two runs in the eighth for a 3-2 tie, but Baltimore pulled it out with two runs in the 10th on Luis Aparicio's two-out single and a bases-loaded walk.

Detroit reduced Chicago's pennant chances to only a 1½ erupting for five unearned runs in the third inning after pitcher Tom Sturdivant gave Dyke's sacrifice bunt. Gates Brown climaxed the outburst with his first major league grand slam homer.

The Yankees' Horace Clarke recorded his first grand slam—it also was his first homer in the big leagues—and belted Stottlemyre a ain his 19th victory against eight defeats.

Fred Newman tossed a five-hitter at Boston, evening his record at 14-14. Dick Simpson highlighted California's three-run first inning with a two-run single.

Jim King and Jim French each hit a homer and drove in two runs for Washington against Kansas City.

Do-or-Die For West

OSHAWA (CP)—Coach Keith Jackson and his New Westminster Salmonbellies are finding the current hot spell almost as tough to beat as the speedy Oshawa Green Gaels.

The Salmonbellies face elimination tonight in the sixth game of the best - of - seven Canadian junior lacrosse final and have scheduled an afternoon workout.

"But we'll call it off if this hot weather continues and try to find some place where the boys can relax and stay cool, said Jackson.

Temperatures near 80 were forecast for today.

"This heat is different from what we experience on the coast. It's humid and saps the strength right out of you."

Gaels have worked the club Tuesday night, concentrating on drills aimed at keeping his lanky Western club in contention.

"Our big scorers, Ian Bunn and Jim Henry, haven't broken loose and I don't know why. Part of the cause might be that Ken Carey, who played on their line until he broke his arm, is out of the series."

No Reason To Quit Says Spahn

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Warren Spahn, who will be 45 next April, has no idea what's in store for him next season but he's sure of one thing — he wants to continue to pitch in the major leagues.

"I know Bob Feller and others have advised me to quit," the great left-hander said Tuesday. "But I see no reason why I should."

This has not been one of Spahn's best years. His won-and-lost record is 7-18 but since joining San Francisco Giants after his release by New York Mets last July he has pitched well.

His 3-4 record with the league-leaders is misleading. He has lost several tough games. At other times, he left with a lead which his reliever failed to protect.

Spahn has won 363 games during his illustrious career. His ambition is to win at least 11 more. That would give him a lifetime total of 374 National League victories, or one more than the record shared by Christy Mathewson and Grover Cleveland Alexander.

Brother Against Brother

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Perry is itching for San Francisco Giants to make it into the World Series, and it isn't because he thinks it would be easy pitching to Willie Mays and Co.

If the Twins and Giants meet in the series, nothing would please Jim Perry more than to get a starting assignment against Gaylord.

While that prospect appears dim because perhaps neither Jim nor Gaylord may get a starting assignment, the brothers easily could oppose each other as relievers.

Bomber Castoff

Argos Grab Simpson

TORONTO (CP)—Coach Bob Shaw has decided Toronto Argonauts will finish the season with 13 imports, one less than the maximum allowed by the Eastern Football Conference.

With the Argos' chances of catching the third-place Montreal Alouettes and making a playoff spot all but dead, Shaw's decision could be interpreted as an admission that his club isn't going anywhere this year.

The Argos, winless in eight games, now are six points behind the Als and play Montreal eight two more times this season.

Shaw said Tuesday he plans to use 12 imports and 10 Canadians for the balance of the season. One of the imports will be Eddie Rogers, a 26-year-old guard and linebacker Toronto claimed Tuesday after Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference placed him on waivers.

Rogers is actually Toronto's 14th import, but American Starr Luster, out with torn knee ligaments, isn't counted back in the rest of this season.

TO FORMER AL

Simpson, a former Alouette who also played for Oakland Raiders of the American Football League, is due to show up at the Argos' practice tonight.

To make room for him, Shaw can send Jim Griffin and defensive tackle Bob Brown. Griffin played three games for the Argos this season. Brown passes in their 33-0 loss to Hamilton Tiger-Cats last Sunday, Brown, 20 pounds heavier, played five games with the club.

Backfield star Dick Shatto, from Evansville, admitted Tuesday he has been taking tablets for the last two years to relieve the pain from a spinal ailment.

It was the first time Argonaut coaches had heard of the pain. Shaw, with whom Shatto is reported to be at odds, excused Shatto early from drills Tuesday night.

But he also excused veterans Billy Shaw, Norm Stoneburgh and Danny Nykoluk, all of whom are healthy. The coach gave no reason for his leniency.

He also ordered the return of fines levied against several players following Toronto's 29-0 loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders Sept. 10 for "fundamental mistakes." Although it was not disclosed which players were fined, Shatto admitted he was one. He did not give the amount, but reports placed his fine as high as $500.

Drysdale Big Gun In Dodger Drive

Hittin' Pitcher

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Walter Alston may put his arm down in surrey as the manager who put his leading thumb at the mound ace Sandy Koufax played two every fourth day and still won the National League pennant.

Even if Los Angeles Dodgers don't seal out San Francisco Giants in the final week of the big battle Alston for unorthodox tactics. He top man at the plate knowing that Koufax, up to date, who is listed on the roster as a pitcher.

Those using what they are on Alston's ball club, Drysdale's #1 victories on the mound loom larger in the Dodgers' pennant drive than his .308 batting average, although the two are closely linked.

On Tuesday night, for example, the tall right-hander raised his pitching record to 21-12 by defeating Milwaukee Braves 3-1. Besides pitching a six - hitter, Drysdale singled home the winning run, then helped score an insurance tally with another single.

The win boosted Los Angeles within three games of the flag, who blew a 7-4 decision to Cincinnati Reds when Willie McCovey fumbled a ground ball to let in four unearned runs. The third-place Redlegs picked in the bust, 4½ games off the pace.

PIRATES EDGE METS

In the other NL games Tuesday, Jim Pagliaroni's two-run homer with two out in the ninth gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-5 victory over New York Mets, Ron Santo drove in six runs as Chicago Cubs subdued Philadelphia Phillies 7-6 and St. Louis Cardinals blasted Houston Astros 9-0.

Since the consistency of the Dodgers' failure at the plate is blamed entirely by the inconsistency of their success in the field, Alston has to pamper his pitching staff with the complete protection from beating his brains out. That rules out any temptation to get Drysdale's bat into action every day.

The Dodger moundsmen have helped Drysdale by permitting only one earned run in their last 31 innings—the only run off Drysdale Tuesday resulted from an error by Maury Wills—and are mainly responsible for a current five - game winning streak.

The Giants, who have won 17 of their last 18 starts, suddenly found the pack at their heels Tuesday night as they lost a 4-1 lead in the sixth inning at Cincinnati.

The Reds had scored twice and loaded the bases with two out when Tommy Harper's grounder got past McCovey allowing another run to score. Singles by Pete Rose and Vada Pinson drove in three more before the side was retired.

FILLIES BEAT LEO'S

Pagliaroni tagged relievers Dave Eilers with his game-winning homer with Bill Mazeroski on base to sink the Mets.

Santo hammered two homers and a single in his three appearances the Phillies, breaking a 5-5 tie with his two-run blast in the eighth, to bring his homerun total to 31 for the year.

Ray Sadecki and Hal Woodeshick got together a five-hitter to subdue the Astros with Sadecki doubling home a run for the Cardinals.

Don Getty Leaves Mothballs

EDMONTON (CP)—Veteran Don Getty came out of retirement Tuesday to become backup quarterback for the luckyriddled Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference.

Getty, 31-year-old Edmonton oil engineer, retired last year after nine years with the Eskimos, mostly as quarterback. He joined Edmonton from University of Western Ontario.

Club president Hugh McColl said the Eskimos asked Getty to re-join as backup quarterback on a temporary basis.

He was to start working out with the club Tuesday night.

The quarterback situation became grim Monday night when first - string quarterback Bill Redeli suffered a partial dislocation of his left elbow in an inter locking game with Montreal Alouettes. Montreal won 26-13.

Redeli was released from hospital Tuesday but club officials said it would be from 10 days to three weeks before he returned to action.

Kerbow will quarterback the club against the Rough Riders in Ottawa Saturday.

McColl said the club did not want to cut an import to join an import quarterback for temporary duty.

Hawks Like Holmes

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks' amateur hockey camp was trimmed to 29 players here Tuesday.

Stop Brenchley, coach of St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Junior A Ontario Hockey Association, a farm club of the Chicago Hockey League, made the cut from 75 players who first turned out.

SIGN COACH

OSHAWA (CP)—Ted O'Connor, a former professional player with Tacoma of the Western Hockey League and Hershey of the American Hockey League, signed Tuesday to coach Oshawa Bees of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B eastern group.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—The coach of the Brooklin, Ont., Merchants says he expects his club to wrap up the Mann Cup in tonight's game with New Westminster.

The Merchants lead three games to one in the best-of-seven series for Canada's senior lacrosse championship.

Brooklin coach Bod Christie said Tuesday night he is confident the team will score its fourth straight win of the series after losing the opening game.

New Westminster officials said one reason for their poor showing is the number of injuries to high-scoring forward Paul Parnell.

PULLED A TENDON

In the British Columbia final series with Coquitlam he pulled a tendon in his hip, then was re-injured when he strained a muscle in the second game of the Mann Cup series.

He suffered similar injuries in the third and fourth games.

In Monday's contest, the chunky forward was kicked in the thigh during a scramble at the end of the first quarter. He was slowed comicersnly for the remainder of the game, won by Brooklin 14-6.

Parnell had scored twice before the Monday injury.

Meanwhile, a veteran observer called the western club's performance the "poorest in recent lacrosse history."

He said the reason for the weakness of this year's western representative in the Mann Cup is the addition of a new team to the league which necessitated stripping players from all the other clubs.

"They just have not been able to build to the former calibre of play," he said.

Oshawa In Soccer Final

OSHAWA (CP) — When Oshawa-Halia takes to the field here Saturday night to contest the Canadian soccer championship soldiers-death final against Vancouver Firefighters, the team will be making soccer history for this sports-minded city.

While the sport has been well established in this area for many years, this marks the first time Oshawa has appeared in a Canadian soccer final.

In the early 1900s one of the city's greatest soccer teams, Oshawa Nationals, lost a heartbreaking two - game Eastern Canada championship final to the powerful Canada Car team of Montreal, which went on to win the national title.

COMMON'S CAMELOT GETS RAPPED — Toronto singer - actor Tommy Common studies the score of Camelot with 18-year-old Chris Zorro of Arvida, Que., during rehearsals for the production at the Acadia Summer Playhouse at Wolfville, N.S. The summer playhouse, produced almost entirely by amateurs at Acadia University, has been called a disgrace by the university. Its producers say it will be back next year for its sixth season, providing the only live theatre in the Annapolis Valley. (CP Photo)

Acadia Summer Playhouse Ends Controversial Season

By NICK FILL MORE

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—The controversial Acadia Summer Playhouse ended its fifth annual summer season amid criticism from the university to staid Acadia University, but the man in charge says it will be back next year.

Jack Sheriff, youthful, bearded professor of English, says this summer's eight productions were of high amateur quality. What's more, they provided the only live theatre for tourists and residents in the Annapolis Valley.

"We're here to provide entertainment," says Sheriff. "You have to expect criticism. Many of the persons in the show are teen-agers just learning theatre. We're not professionals.

"Five seasons isn't very long to try to build a good summer theatre. We like what we're doing and we'll be back in '66."

But critics, some of them connected with the university, say the productions should be much better.

CRITIC JEERS

"It's nothing but unrehearsed garbage," said Duncan Fraser, professor of political science. "A bunch of school kids could do a better job. The whole thing is a disgrace to the university. Imagine short little Tommy Common playing Lancelot!"

Common, who appeared in the musical Camelot, was one of two professionals at the Wolfville house. Pam Hyatt of Toronto, one-time Spring Thaw regular, had the lead in Sound of Music.

The Playhouse, which performs at the white-domed University Hall, runs a new show each week. This summer, along with Camelot and Sound of Music, it put on Guys and Dolls, Five Finger Exercise, Critic's Choice, Dark of the Moon, Death Takes a Holiday and Blithe Spirit.

"We like to have a new show each week because we're operating in an area that hasn't the vast population of Toronto, Montreal or even Halifax," Sheriff says. "The kids usually have three or four months to prepare for their parts and we don't use professionals unless there is a definite need—as in the case of Tommy Common playing Lancelot."

The university sponsors the Playhouse and "we don't usually go very deep in debt," he adds. The hall seats 1,200 but only 800 tickets are offered for sale and the rest are sold with "get the best response," usually play before a house of 400.

Members of the cast of 30 came from various parts of Canada and the Eastern United States, and some have gone on to professional theatre.

The senior member of this summer's company is Conrad Wright, a retired university professor from Ottawa, said Camelot hadn't been properly prepared for production.

"Jack didn't study Camelot in detail before we started rehearsals. The music and choreography weren't up to par in this one."

But Wright, who appeared as King Pellinore, added that four other shows in which he had roles in the last three years were good amateur standards.

While the argument goes on, Sheriff is preparing for next season. He has scheduled The Fantasticks, South Pacific, Ten Little Indians, Girl Crazy, Enter Laughing, 110 in the Shade, Barefoot in the Park and The King and I.

'Something Cooking in Cuba' Is Word Going Among Exiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many Cuban exiles who once dreamed of toppling Fidel Castro by invading their homeland now say it is Castro's own military that will turn on and destroy him.

There seems to be a new feeling of hope among Cuban exiles in Washington, Miami, New York and elsewhere.

Castro was hailed as a conquering hero when his revolution swept him into power in January, 1959, but now grumbling is audible at times when he makes his three - hour speeches.

The boarded Communist mansions with increasing frequency and bitterness the problem of guerrillas inside Cuba. And he insists they have been stamped out.

Another problem to which he refers obliquely at times is that of the loyalty of his army and militia forces. Experts here say disaffection has increased enormously within these forces in recent months with the spread of discontent among Cubans at their plight under Communist masters.

Castro still controls Cuba. His military forces and sophisticated weapons are the most powerful in all Latin America. But the flight of his exiles is a sign that this power will be turned on the Castro government.

Some exiles said there have been at least three attempts in recent months to assassinate the Cuban premier. U.S. officials say they have nothing to confirm such reports.

Exiles and U.S. officials often have disagreed about some aspects of the situation inside Cuba. Cuban refugees concede they may be influenced at times by wishful thinking, but say U.S. intelligence in Cuba has been deficient at times—as in the missile crisis of 1962.

But there are a number of things on which U.S. experts and the Cuban exiles agree:

—Cuba's economy and international finance is in chaos.

—Castro's theory that below-cost prices for Cuba's bumper sugar crop will be offset by profits in other production is nonsense.

—The Cuban army and people's militia is heavily infiltrated by anti-Castro forces. There has been numerous purges and arrests of military men and weapons have been taken away from reluctant militia.

—Imprisonment, firing squad executions and other measures, "plus"

Ku Klux Klan Receiving Special TV Attention

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Ku Klux Klan is receiving special attention from television now, probably because of a pending congressional investigation of the secret organization.

NBC's Huntley-Brinkley news program Tuesday night wound up a three - part, once - over lightly look at the present-day operations of the hooded, cross-burning society.

A few hours later CBS Reports devoted an hour to an illustrated lecture on the 100-year - old organization that started as a six-member social club and was so strong in the 1920s that it has been credited with a part in the defeat of Democratic presidential nominee Alfred E. Smith.

WIDESPREAD INFLUENCE

Although narrator Charles Kuralt said "it is believed" that there are no more than 30,000 to 50,000 active Klansmen today, the general tone of the program suggested that its influence—asserted by terror, harassment and assault—is widespread, particularly in smaller southern communities.

Highlight of the hour were films of a Klan gathering. The costumes, masks and childish-sounding titles—klavern, klud, kragle, imperial wizard, grand dragon—made the whole thing seem like a silly game being played by grown men—except that there were rabble-rousing speakers exhorting their audiences to fight for white, gentile, Protestant supremacy.

Later, a Negro told how he had been tortured by a group he described as Klan members.

But even with the films, the hour crept along at snail's pace

Danny Kaye Working Hard Trying to Be Good Pilot

At the Park

Opens Thursday
Primitive World Clashes With Modern In 'Dingaka'

"Dingaka," Joseph E. Levine's exciting adventure-drama of modern day Africa, starring Stanley Baker and Juliet Prowse, arrives Thursday at the Park Theatre through Embassy Pictures release.

Filmed in wide-screen and color, "Dingaka" was written, produced and directed by South Africa's leading filmmaker, Jamie Uys, and tells a timely and compelling story, dealing with the dramatic results of the meeting of two vastly different ways of life; the contemporary and the primitive. Shot entirely on location in South Africa, it is undoubtedly the most authentic film to come out of the Dark Continent.

The music featured in "Dingaka" is still the original product of Africa itself, but blended into an original score by composers Bertha Baxter and Eddie Domingo, no modern instruments were used, and even the choral arrangements are true to the African flavor in as much as they are performed by singers who were found among the various native tribes depicted in the film.

Also featured in "Dingaka" is Ken Gampu.

Second Feature

Powerful is the word for Dana Andrews starring with Terry Moore and Pat O'Brien in A. C. Lyles "Town Tamer," second feature at the Park Theatre. This robust western, combining suspense, action and drama of the old west, came from the very professional and prolific pen of Frank Gruber. It was directed by Leslie Selander.

Complete shows are at 7.00 and 8.50 p.m.

NAMED EDITOR

MOSCOW (AP)—Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail V. Zimyanin has been named chief editor of Pravda, the official organ of the Soviet Communist party and the most important newspaper in the Soviet Union. The report from informed sources was confirmed by an officer at the newspaper's inquiry desk. He said only that Zimyanin now is chief editor.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Danny Kaye was glowering in his penthouse apartment at CBS' Television City.

In his lap was a portable radio pouring forth news of necessary disaster Kaye's beloved Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Well, see you later," I said.

"Don't go," he said, shutting off the radio. Chicago Cubs were whipping the Dodgers 7-3.

Kaye has been under major interests: Flying and television. While his fellow TV stars were out making stills at state fairs and in summer theatres and night clubs, Kaye said he never worked harder in his life.

At what? Taking examinations for three advanced pilot ratings. He spoke glowingly of piloting a private jet to Portland, Ore., for a one-hour commute, "the same time it takes me to fly to San Francisco in my own plane."

REJECTS CLAIMS

"People said I was a cut, a perfectionist who would last six weeks in television and then go quietly mad because of the way you have to work in TV. But I'm not a perfectionist. I never have been. Anyone who says that he is a perfectionist is claiming that what he tries to do is perfect work. Perfect in whose eyes? His own? The public's?

"All I try to do is the best I can. When you put together a complete show in five days—the equivalent of two-thirds of a movie—you don't expect everything to be polished. I know that when I went into 'Hy.

"Things go wrong, but you can capitalize on them in a way that gives an added quality. Like last week when Harry Belafonte had a punch line that he couldn't get out. His difficulty was much funnier than the line would have been.

"We've had some . . . poor shows, too.

"That was my biggest adjustment: How to accept the poor shows. How did I do it? Merely by moving on to the next show and trying to profit by the bad one."

Vacant Powerhouse Made Into Theatre

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — The machinery at the old powerhouse exploded one day, for some reason, and for some other reason nobody got around to fixing it.

The place sat to gather dust, more or less, for almost 40 years until Doug Huggins broke a window and crawled in.

Dispatched to see whether it would make a good fire hall, architect Huggins quickly decided it would not.

What he did say to himself, he recalls, was:

"My God. This would make a wonderful theatre."

It has. And down at the Powerhouse Theatre, you'll find the very model of a modern little theatre group.

Mr. Huggins crawled back out that window in the fall of 1962, saved the place from demolition, and in the name of culture the-Vernon Little Theatre was handed the whole cobwebbed shambles for $1 a year.

Within 12 months, marked by 2,000-odd hours of begging materials, 2,000-odd hours of begging money, and 2,700-odd hours of carpentry and design, a paint-wet playhouse entertained its first first-night audience.

With such simple materials as potato sacking and rough cedar and plywood, there was an arresting decor to the entrance and to a theatre area in which 150 seats occupy only half the space, leaving the rest for a deep, flexible stage.

SETS SIGHTS HIGH

Mr. Huggins, an architect who came to Canada 13 years ago, has tucked away a workshop, makeup gallery, green room and lounge in other recesses of the building.

It's a smashing job. These people believe non-professional theatre must do smashing things or invite trouble.

"No non-professional theatre can expect support until it has proved its integrity and competency of work," says Mr. Huggins.

"You must never say when you come to a problem: 'Oh well, that will do; Oh well, that's good enough.'"

It's the kind of high road that has led to glorious failure, to the twice-stung theatre group can testify.

One of its many fund-raising schemes was a giant raffle of 15 tickets on a $16,000 home. In British Columbia, only an agriculture society can stage a raffle. So the group solemnly re-formed the defunct Vernon Agricultural Society and made plans to stage a horse show with house raffle attached.

"We didn't know anything about horses, but this was something," says Mrs. Paddy Malcolm, English - born director.

"But the show was very successful. The agricultural society has had a great revival. It's now stage another horse show on its own this year.

"The raffle was disastrous. We over-reached ourselves completely. In the end we had to make a money prize of $7,700.

After this, we shall concentrate on theatre."

The other misfortune was more recent, and not as funny. The VLT's production of The Firebugs, a kind of modern morality play by Max Frisch, went to the Dominion Drama Festival in May representing the Alberta - B.C. zone. The group had made a bold gamble with the casting, substituting a career woman and her mother for a husband and his wife in the lead roles.

At the final in Brockville, Ont., adjudicator Guy Beaudet did not accept the interpretation. The group received neither praise nor criticism for Mr. Huggins' set, Mrs. Malcolm's direction, the supporting roles or the lead performance by Mr. Huggins' wife Macy. The play was not even declared in the running for the major awards.

Mrs. Malcolm, a veteran of English repertory theatre, said the group returned home with the feeling it had wasted $6,000 making the trip.

That risk went awry, but the group will take more. In the new theatre it already has a dozen productions under its belt, including children's plays, a bill o e-m-y and sex comedy, melodrama, Shakespearean drama and Greek tragedy.

"It's go hell-fire or burst," says Doug Huggins. "If you choose the middle course, the theatre will founder."

Every Second Male In Chile Alcoholic

SANTIAGO (AP)—Chile is officially concerned about the number of citizens whose fondness for the grape has them in trouble.

The government newspaper La Nacion says every other adult male is an alcoholic or is on the way to becoming one.

The National Health Service is more conservative, but even so it says 250,000 people in this nation of 8,000,000 have serious drinking problems and 750,000 others drink excessively.

"Excessively" is defined as getting drunk more than once a month. The service says 45 per cent of its hospital beds are occupied by persons suffering the effects of alcohol.

The government also has promised a massive social improvement program. Controlling alcoholism among the laboring class is regarded as an important step in this direction.

The government like the private groups interested in the problem, does not believe that the situation will change rapidly. Red and white wines are served with both lunch and dinner in every class of restaurant. The national drink is a clear grape brandy called pisco.

Advertisements often show teen - agers drinking beer or wine. A common sight is a Chilean restaurant as a parent pouring wine for his children. For the younger children, wine usually is mixed with mineral water or occasionally with a soft drink.

Merchants Oppose Rezoning Of Property to Be Commercial

PICTON (Staff) — At a special meeting of Picton Retail Merchants' Association, Thursday night, the vote was 10-6 in favor of a motion to request town council to oppose rezoning of a Lake Street property from industrial to commercial.

The area is that formerly occupied by the Canadian Canners plant next to the railroad crossing. At town council a Kingston developer requested such rezoning in order to permit erection of a grocery store and coin-wash at an estimated cost of $150,000.

Those opposed to the rezoning and development there, felt the commercial area should be confined to downtown and those already designated as such by the Planning Board.

Loris Minaker (Stafford's Grocery), strongly opposed rezoning. "I feel we do not need such another retail outlet area. It would be detrimental to the present area. It would offer no new jobs or no new money. It would be duplicating what we have already. I think we should block it if we can." He also emphasized the need for more parking area in the business district.

Department store proprietor Jesse Mason said the merchants have got very little response from council on parking in the past ten years. "We should make a strong representation to council. Parking is a prime need."

Councillor Donald King, chairman of Parking and Traffic Committee, said he doesn't think there is a lack of parking. He noted metre heads have again been removed from the market square for free parking there and a new lot has been opened behind the library with steps up to the main street. Very few cars were using those lots Thursday, he said. The problem is lack of use of present parking space, he felt.

If the merchants keep saying there's no parking they will eventually have people convinced and start losing business to other centres, he added.

One merchant said Mr. Kind was using isolated days and circumstances.

COULD BUY ARMORY

Councillor Andrew Jarvis said a possibility for more parking in the Armory if council can make a decent arrangement to purchase it. He said there is about $12,000 in the parking revenue fund at the moment and this may be up to $15,000 by the end of the year.

Jack Colden expressed the belief that the new business development will eventually become a shopping centre.

H. J. Colliver, who owns considerable property in the downtown area, said he has a real interest in the business section but doesn't want to see the new development blocked in any way. It may just encourage them to build outside the town limits and then there would be trouble, he said. The new development could help draw people to Picton. As long as business is kept here and not going to other cities or towns then it is good. He also said present parking in "strecture" and council must be pushed to the extreme to take bigger steps.

Jay Hepburn, Chamber of Commerce president, thought the area in question could be zoned only as commercial. If we have to live with something like this, then let's keep it under as much control as possible. We must consider carefully before trying to block it. Also, it is progress and it might attract more new development.

When the vote split 10 to 6, Jack Colden said he would rather not forward the decision to council without more support.

The final decision was to forward the results anyhw.

The meeting also elected Loris Minaker as president of the Retail Merchants' Association.

A vacancy for president was created by the transfer of Eaton's manager, Reg Johnson, to Kitchener. Mr. Minaker was formerly a director of the association.

Conservation Authorities To Visit County

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County Council passed a bylaw appointing Fred Jennings as deputy assessment commissioner for the County Monday night.

Council also passed a bylaw to extend the time for the return of assessment rolls in the county for 60 days beyond September 30, 1965, from normal date.

Warden Bernard Hepburn informed council that the Ontario government's Select Committee on Conservation Authorities, of which the county MLA, Norris Whitney is a member, will visit Prince Edward County October 19.

Council passed a motion calling on the Ontario Department of Highways to rebuild the intersection of Highway 33 and County Road, otherwise known as Lake-on-the Mountain Road, after hearing from resort owner William Smith.

Mr. Smith, a member of the Quinte Regional Tourist Association and a director of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, complained that the entrance is often blocked off while traffic waits to cross on the Glenora Ferry. The result is that cars cannot travel up the mountain and there is danger to traffic passing by on the way to Picton.

Council agreed to grant the Prince Edward Centennial Committee $100 for administration expenses.

Clerk-treasurer Thomas Walker was reappointed as the county's representative on the Prince Edward Centre Commission.

And council observed a minute's silence in memory of James Barber, a former Breve of Ameliasburg Township, who was Warden of Prince Edward in 1937.

Liberal Assoc. Objects to New Riding

NAPANEE—Mr. Ken Casey, secretary of the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association, appeared befor the Electoral Boundaries Commission to present a brief on the establishment of a proposed new riding to be known as Frontenac-Addington.

The brief stated ,that in a riding so large, it would be difficult for any member, regardless of party, to represent the people. Since the proposed riding consists of parts of four counties and 47 different municipalities, there would be no common community interest within the boundaries.

Those who prepared the brief feel that because of the growth of the Kingston riding, redistribution would soon follow the 1971 census. They proposed that Kingston township be included in the new riding. This would eliminate any change in Kingston riding or in the proposed new Frontenac-Addington riding within the next 15 to 25 years.

Also in the brief was an objection to the name of the new riding. Lennox, the oldest settled area, with the largest number of people of all areas in the proposed new riding, is ignored. The Liberal Association strongly recommends that the name Lennox be included in the name of the proposed riding. The suggested name is Frontenac - Lennox - Addington.

Jaycees Plan Motor Scooter Road-e-o

NAPANEE — The Napanee Jaycees are coming up with a new campaign, a "Safe Driving Motor Scooter Road-e-o," to be held in Napanee on October 9.

With the recent fad for motor scooters the Jaycees took matters in their hands to put on a safety campaign for all drivers of these vehicles. They are welcoming competitors from the Belleville, Kingston and Picton areas.

The road-eo will have three classes of events. It starts with a written examination with 50 questions, and continues with a skill driving test around and through special standards. The persons ending up with an 80 per cent average in the first two tests will be eligible to place in the third and final test, a road rally through the streets of Napanee. In the road rally, all the contestants' driving habits will be observed and scored to place them in line for the many prizes and trophies to be offered by the Jaycees and merchants of the surrounding district.

A letter received from Doug. Goshee, vice-president of the Ontario Jaycees, spurred the local club to furious action to make the road-eo a complete success. The letter said, "I must congratulate you and your unit for coming up with a program which is new and original. We are always saying that we want fresh ideas coming up from the unit level, but we seem to get them seldom. This idea does appear to be new, and it certainly fills a need, with the great increase in scooters on our highways and the consequent increase in injuries to their drivers. Keep up the good work."

The Jaycees' motto, "Growing With Canada," seems to have its place here. They hope their motor scooter safety campaign will grow to be a national safety campaign.

Marmora

MARMORA COUNCIL - C.W.L.

MARMORA — The September meeting of Marmora Council, C.W.L. was opened with prayer by the president, Mrs. Breen O'Connor.

Membership convener, Mrs. Hugh Brady, read letter from Diocesan director of organization and development, Mrs. Herbert Brown, urging councils to increase memberships. It was decided to hold a two-week membership drive in this Council.

Sewing convener, Mrs John Clairmont, displayed an attractive quilt top made and donated by Mrs. John Labossiere, and plans were made to hold a quilting bee in the near future.

Education report disclosed that Alex Tokarwicz had been the winner of the $100 scholarship provided by the C.W.L. to the top grade 13 student from Sacred Heart Parish.

Commitee for social action sent three cards and one gift during the summer months.

The president asked members to attend the regional meeting to be held at St. Joseph's Parish, Belleville, on September 28th. Miss Mary Warren was congratulated on being chosen as spiritual convener on the Diocesan Council.

Plans were made for provision of gifts for shut-ins and needy at Christmas and contributions will be received at each meeting for this project.

The president thanked members for their efforts during the summer months for the three bake sales and fair booth, all of which had been successful. Mrs. Charles O'Connor and Mrs. Ted Bedore extended their appreciation to the League for the well served dinner and reception at the recent O'Connor —Bedore wedding.

Annual banner will be held in October and final plans will be made at the October meeting. Tea and sandwiches were served by group 4.

Merchants Oppose Rezoning Of Property to Be Commercial

PICTON (Staff) — At a special meeting of Picton Retail Merchants' Association, Thursday night, the vote was 10-6 in favor of a motion to request town council to oppose rezoning of a Lake Street property from industrial to commercial.

The area is that formerly occupied by the Canadian Canners plant next to the railroad crossing. At town council a Kingston developer requested such rezoning in order to permit erection of a grocery store and coin-wash at an estimated cost of $150,000.

Those opposed to the rezoning and development there felt the commercial area should be confined to downtown and those already designated as such by the Planning Board.

Loris Minaker (Stafford's Grocery), strongly opposed rezoning, "I feel we do not need such another retail store here. It would be detrimental to the present area. It would offer no new jobs or no new money. It would be duplicating what we have already. I think we should block it if we can." He also emphasized the need for more parking area in the business district.

Department store proprietor Jesse Mason said the merchants have got very little response from council on parking in the past ten years. "We should make a strong representation to council. Parking is a prime need."

Councillor Donald King, chairman of Parking and Traffic Committee, said he doesn't think there is a lack of parking. He noted metre heads have again been removed from the market square for free parking there and a new lot has been opened on the library ary with steps up to the main street. Very few cars were using those lots Thursday, he said. The problem is lack of use of present parking space, he felt.

If the merchants keep saying there's no parking they will eventually have people convinced and start losing business to other centres, he added.

One merchant said Mr. King was using isolated days and circumstances.

COULD BUY ARMORY

Councillor Andrew Jarvis said a possibility is more parking in the Armory if council can make a decent arrangement to purchase it. He said there is about $12,000 in the parking revenue fund at the moment and this may be up to $15,000 by the end of the year.

Jack Colden expressed the belief that the new business development will eventully become a shopping centre.

H. J. Colliver, who has considerable property in the downtown area, said he has a real interest in the business section but doesn't want to see the new development blocked in any way. It may just encourage them to build outside the town limits and then there would be trouble, he said. The new development could help draw people to Picton. As long as business is kept here and not going to other cities or towns then it is good. He also said present parking is "atrocious" and council must be pushed to the extreme to take bigger steps.

Jay Hepburn, Chamber of Commerce president, thought the area in question could be zoned only as commercial. If we have to live with something like this, then let's keep it under as much control as possible. We must consider carefully before trying to block it. Also, it is progress and it might attract more new development.

When the vote split 10 to 6, Jack Colden said he would rather not forward the decision to council without more support.

The final decision was to forward the results anyhow.

The meeting also elected Loris Minaker as president of the Retail Merchants' Association.

A vacancy for president was created by the transfer of Eaton's manager, Reg Johnson, to Kitchener. Mr. Minaker was formerly a director of the association.

Conservation Authorities To Visit County

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County Council passed a bylaw appointing Fred Jennings as deputy assessment commissioner for the County Monday night.

Council also passed a bylaw to extend the time for the return of assessment rolls in the county for 60 days beyond September 30, 1965, the normal date.

Warden Bernard Hepburn informed council that the Ontario government's Select Committee on Conservation Authorities, of which the county MLA, Norris Whitney is a member, will visit Prince Edward County October 19.

Council passed a motion calling on the Ontario Department of Highways to rebuild the intersection of Highway 33 and County Road, otherwise known as Lake-on-the Mountain Road, after hearing from resort owner William Smith.

Mr Smith, a member of the Quinte Regional Tourist Association and a director of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, complained that the entrance is often blocked off while traffic waits to cross on the Glenora Ferry. The result is that cars cannot travel up the mountain and there is danger to traffic passing by on the way to Picton.

Council agreed to grant the Prince Edward Centennial Committee $100 for administration expenses.

Clerk-treasurer Thomas Walker was reappointed as the county's representative on the Prince Edward Centre Commission.

And council observed a minute's silence in memory of James Barber, a former Reeve of Ameliasburg Township, who was Warden of Prince Edward in 1937.

Waterfront Lot An Issue at Council Meet

DESERONTO — Town council got off to a bad start when the minutes of a meeting of September 7th was not adopted. After much discussion on a point of order the minutes were adopted and the meeting carried on, to make a motion under new business that a water front lot that was to be sold to Mrs. F. Walker was rescinded. This motion was turned down by an amendment to the motion, that the matter be held in abeyance until the surveyor rectified the survey and description.

The problem arises over one lot and two people that want to buy it. Mrs. F. Walker asked to buy the lot, which leads from her present lot to a waterfront lot. Mr. Marck says he needs half the lot to get to his boat house and water property which he has spent a considerable amount on. He owns two other adjoining lots on which he says he is planning to build a $20,000 home Mr. Marck stated "I now have my building lot for the house, but without the half lot I won't continue. "Do you want a trailer or cottage on the property or the $20,000 house that will pay some taxes to the town?"

The council will come to some agreement after members get further advice.

SUPPORT NAPANEE HOSPITAL

Councillor Dr. D. C. McVicker took the floor to state that as the town is still in the County of Hastings they are morally obligated to help support the Belleville hospital but that in the future there will be many people going to the new hospital in Napanee and that in view of this we should help support it also. Councillor McVicker made a motion to grant $1,000 to the Lennox and Addington County Hospital and this passed unanimously.

The reeve, Clayton Brooks, spoke of the new $8,000,000 addition to Belleville hospital which will be paid for without any raise in the mill rate due to the County Building being paid off this year and the rate aided for the purpose will carry the hospital addition.

A letter was received from the Victorian Order of Nurses asking permission to canvass the town on Thursday, Oct 7. Permission was granted, and they work in the town highly commended.

The Financial Bank of Commerce asked that a street light be erected by their newly erected house on north St. George St. This was turned over to the local Public Utilities for action.

The streets chairman, James Sharpe, stated work had started on a new drain for the north side of Thomas St., from First St. to Second St.

Napanee News

POST OFFICE FOR AMHERSTVIEW

NAPANEE — Mr. Lloyd Woolley, Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox, has announced the building of a post office at Amhertsview. The new post office will do away with the mail boxes the residents of Amherstview now use. This building is now being erected on a lease agreement with Riverwood Homes Ltd., who is also building a shopping plaza in this area and will provide a central point for shopping and postal services.

Mr. Woolsey said that work should soon begin on the Public Wharf at Napanee He confirmed that the money for this purpose has been allotted, and as soon as title to the property has been transferred the department of public works is ready to go ahead with no expected delays.

LIBERAL CONVENTION DATE

October 7 is the date set for the Liberal Convention in Napanee. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Napanee and District Secondary School. The guest speaker will be the Honorable Harry Hayes, Minister of Agriculture.

Liberal Assoc. Objects to New Riding

NAPANEE—Mr. Ken Casey, secretary of the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association appeared befor the Electoral Boundaries Commission to present a brief on the establishment of a proposed new riding to be known as Frontenac-Addington.

The brief stated that in a riding so large, it would be difficult for any member, regardless of party, to represent the people. Since the proposed riding consists of parts of four counties and 47 different municipalities, there would be no common community interest within the boundaries.

Those who prepared the brief feel that because of the growth of the Kingston riding, redistribution would soon follow the 1971 census. They proposed that Kingston township be included in the new riding. This would eliminate any change in Kingston riding or in the proposed new Frontenac-Addington riding within the next 15 to 25 years.

Also in the brief was an objection to the name of the new riding. Lennox, the oldest settled area, with the largest number of people of all areas in the proposed new riding, is ignored. The Liberal Association strongly recommends that the name Lennox be included in the name of the proposed riding. The suggested name is Frontenac - Lennox - Addington.

Colombia Bandoleros Said Tied in With Politicians

BOGOTA (CP)—Foreign correspondents putting out feelers for contacts with leading anti-slavs in Colombia are ruefully told by police their best hope is to try through a congressman.

The situation underlines what everyone in this South American republic well knows—there are close links between bandoleros and some politicians.

It's ironic because the two or three remaining big - name bandoleros call for a purge in congress and all its works and are opposed to democracy in any form.

They have established themselves in inaccessible mountain areas in what, with dreams of Fidelista glory, they style "independent republics."

During the political bloodbath that broke out in 1948 between Conservatives and Liberals and subsided to some degree a decade later, 60,000 to 135,000 persons were slain.

After La Violencia, as this era of cruelty is known, it takes a lot to astonish the Colombian public in any matter concerning politicians and bandoleros.

What adds to the air of unreality is that the same man may be called a bandoleros by one side and a respected politician by the other.

An example is the career of Adonias Arias Acevedo, a butcher by recent calling in Restrepo, a coffee and cattle township in the Andes mountains northwest of Cali.

He was shot to death a short time ago and, after his funeral in Bogota, became a public debate that painted him both as a "great Conservative leader" and a "killer of the worst kind."

In La Palma, near Restrepo, on Aug. 26, 1959, 15 Liberals were gunned down during a La Violencia episode. Arias Acevedo was among those accused of being responsible.

Cornelio Reyes, communications minister in the cabinet of Conservative President Guillermo Leon Valencia, acted as his lawyer and says:

"His unconditional freedom was ordered because it was established that he had no responsibility for the events."

Gustavo Salazar Garcia, a Conservative correspondent from the Cali area, told the Chamber of Deputies Arias Acevedo's death "is a political crime committed by F-2 (plainclothes police), for this man was a great Conservative leader in Restrepo where he worked peacefully until a turnover duty was send there to jail the Conservative judges of the municipality."

The "turnover duty" appears to have been Luis Eduardo Pineda Gil who says that when he was named police tax collector in Restrepo in 1959 Arias Acevedo gave him 24 hours to get out of town because they did not like Liberals there."

Pineda Gil says he ignored the ex-a ge and after 20 months Arias Acevedo sent two men to hunt him out and kill him. He adds that people who helped him and his family were slain before and during the massacre of La Palma.

The only point on which Pineda Gil seems to agree with the Conservative version of events is that Arias Acevedo was not known by the Colombian people de guerre Capitan Venceno (Captain Poison).

"As to this, those who so fiercely defend his name are fight," Pineda Gil says, "But he was a bloody, cruel, dangerous man and a killer of the worst kind, also known by Restrepo as 'The Condor of Restrepo'."

At Arias Acevedo's funeral there were 50-odd mourners and all but one were hauled directly from the cemetery to the calaboco on suspicion of associating with him.

The single exception was Reyes. President Valencia later offered the comment that since this country is a democracy, Reyes could go to any funeral he chose.

There were some, however, who took particular delight with Reyes when he subsequently "For 15 years I have known the Arias family of Restrepo, people of honest, hard-working campesino stock."

Tens of thousands of Colombians have not begn able to bring themselves to return to the home where they lived while they fled in terror during La Violencia.

Restrepo has a "committee of exiles" in Bogota and they were heard from on the Aug. 26 anniversary of the La Palma slaughter.

"I saw Adonias Arias Acevedo in uniform, directing and joining in this genocide," said the secretary of the committee.

Something else she saw on that occasion: Her husband, father-in-law and brother-in-law slain.

As for the "honest, hard-working" Arias family so well-spoken of by Reyes, her declaration had this to say:

"We people of Restrepo know that the Arias family has produced the greatest quantity and the highest quality of killers in this town."

Reyes mocked charges that Arias Acevedo was a murderous bandolero. He recalled that authorities had issued him a passport to travel to Mexico, also a permit to carry a gun—documents that would hardly be awarded to a wanted man.

The Restrepo exiles responded that "we presume such documents would be issued if they were sponsored by a minister."

Singapore Becoming Anti-U.S.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Newly independent Singapore—the geographic and economic hub of Southeast Asia—seems likely to take a stronger anti-American stand in the coming months.

U.S. officials here believe Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew's broadside at the United States over a spy incident was just the first of a salvo that may last until the Afro-Asian conference in November.

"We can expect stormy days ahead," one official said. "If you are a newly independent nation these days you have to make your ceremonial attack on the big, bad United States."

Many non-American political observers believe Lee will be satisfied with what he has achieved in embarrassing the U.S. role.

Lee said after the state department admitted U.S. involvement in his bribery - spy charges: "I have made my point. So we ought to leave the position as it stands."

U.S. officials contend there have been other signs of an anti - U.S. propaganda campaign.

One official said he had been at what was supposed to be a roundtable discussion on the U.S. role in Viet Nam.

"It turned out to be something of a programmed anti-U.S. hate show," he said. "When the transcript of the conversation was taking part in the so-called discussion made some crack at the United States this survey, the signal for cheers and stamping."

He is sending his two chief aides—Deputy Prime Minister Dr. Toh Chin Chye and Foreign Minister Sirmathamby Rajaratnam—on a mission to the United Nations and Afro-Asian countries.

Lee has told the British that he could give them 24 hours notice to quit the giant bases here. This could be a part of a plan to impress the Afro-Asian countries that he is not "a neocolonialist stooge," as he expresses it.

British and Commonwealth observers here say Lee is anti-Communist and that his anti-American sentiments are vague hangovers from his days as a socialist undergraduate at Cambridge University.

"He realizes that U.S. presence is necessary in Southeast Asia for his own survival," a British military official said.

"It is just that the U.S. seems to have had a run of bad luck with him and they made the fatal mistake of tying him in with the majority of Asian politicians."

Portuguese Firefighters Are Jacks of Every Trade

LISBON (AP)—A fireman in Portugal is a jack of all trades. He must not only know how to put out a fire, but be prepared to rescue cats from high trees, old ladies from locked houses, deliver babies in ambulances, rescue wrecked women, fish swimming pools, play a trumpet or a bassoon, snap into a fireman's rubber suit, and march up and down village streets in frequent parades.

This goes for both of the two fire-fighting bodies in the land. One is the 1,500-man city professional corps of Sapadores Bombeiros, the other the country-wide Bombeiros Voluntarios, which number 14,000. They are among the most highly trained and versatile organizations in Portugal.

In the villages, the voluntary fire corps is the very heart of social, economic and cultural life. It provides its own funds by house - to - house collections, public festivals, concerts, and renting its premises for village gatherings. It is a sort of club, to which most of the young men of the village belong.

The official city fire-fighters, divided into 21 companies, have world-wide repute, and have won many international prizes. They exist in Lisbon, the capital, Oporto, the second city, and Coimbra, of university fame.

Before the Second World War, there were no proper firemen in Portugal. Public-spirited neighbors hoofed round, buckets in hand, to help put out each other's fires. This wasn't very effective, since slow communications and muddled methods meant the loss of property and sometimes life.

What to do? Early this century there were many Gallegos living in Lisbon. These Spaniards from the province of Galicia, which borders on north Portugal, formed an important part of the hard-working city community as waiters, messengers, furniture removers, dockers and other modest wage-earners. They were the first regular fire-fighters.

The next thing was to create an efficient alarm system, for there were no telephones, no taxicabs, no quick means of communication.

Somebody decided that church bells might also play their part as fire alarms.

In addition, prizes were offered to the group arriving first at a fire. This speeded up proceedings a little.

All the time, the Gallegos didn't take to their humanitarian task with much fervor, and it was still the neighbors who did most of the work. Little by little the neighbors themselves began to form semi-professional and more efficient fire-fighting bodies.

Horses and mules brought the water casts more quickly. Better equipment evolved until now both professional and voluntary firemen in Portugal have motorized equipment equal to that of any country in the world.

Along the coast the voluntary firemen are also the sea rescue squad. At the first signal of a sea disaster (four wails of a loud siren) they roar along the coast with every known device to help the lifeboats from the shore.

There are few people in Portugal today who do not put their hands in their pockets when the annual fire brigade procession marches down the street.

Big Crop of Quebec Strikes Attributed to Varying Causes

MONTREAL (CP) — Barely has Quebec had such a bumper year for labor strife especially strikes that have hit the province square in its public-service sector pieces.

Some describe the strikes as by-products of the "quiet revolution" and increasing affluence; others cite new labor militancy and the right to strike recently granted many public employees; still others point to intense inter-union rivalry.

Whatever the reasons, the list of major work stoppages is enough to shake Quebecers, especially in Montreal. They include:

—An 11-week walkout by 3,200 employees of the Quebec Liquor Board which ended Feb. 18 after making Christmas and New Year's uncomfortably dry. The strikers, affiliated with the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions, won wage boosts, job security and other benefits. They are among public-service employees given the right to strike in a provincial labor code passed last year.

—A double - barrelled bus strike in June which saw 3,900 employees in Montreal and Transport Co., which provides inter-city services in much of Quebec, on the picket lines for 17 days. In both cases the workers, new affiliated with the CNTU, won wage increases. Their right to strike also dates from 1964.

—A strike of 1,000 port of Montreal grain-handlers, also fresh recruits to the confederation, who won higher wages after eight weeks of bargaining breakdown, an illegal marches and some violence.

—A three-day strike by 1,500 gasoline r e fi n e r y workers spread from Montreal to points across the province before fizzling out. Only retailers sounh a bigger profit margin and better leaing arrangements from oil companies.

—A work stoppage by 4,100 postal employees which lasted 17 days in July and August. At one time it involved other Canadian centres but ultimately became a Montreal-area walkout though retaining national significance. Its 4 men, many affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress, resumed work after promising a system for granting all a $500-a-year wages increase.

TRUCKERS GO OUT

In May and June there was a five-week walkout of engineers at Hydro-Quebec where recognition of an engineer's union was the issue. Independent truck drivers, in May in Montreal, walked out in mid-summer demanding higher rates for use of their trucks. The Canadair Ltd. plant near Montreal was hit by a three-week strike by 2,100 CLC-affiliated workers. And at Baie Comeau, 1,000 other CLC-affiliated workers struck for increases from the Quebec North Shore Paper Co. in a 24-day walkout.

Wage demands were also the issue as 530 employees went on strike at the Chateau Laurier, largest hotel in Quebec City. And 500 teachers in Roman Catholic secondary schools in the St. Maurice district northeast of Montreal refused to report for opening classes, demanding a collective working contract.

In Quebec City a summertime strike of 1,200 plumbers and electricians was marked by physical clashes and vehement verbal duels between the leaders of the CNTU and of the CLC's provincial partner, the Quebec Federation of Labor. Each accused the other of trying to take over the electricians and plumbers and their dispute served as a focus for inter-union rivalry of increasing bitterness.

There are 1,300,000 so-union tired workers in Quebec, Union officials say that with stepped-up education, a sense of collective rights is bound to spread among many of these, giving QFL and CNTU organizers wide scope for their activities.

The CNTU, while active in pressing wage demands, says it has made a specialty of demanding improvements in other directions—in "human" areas such as seniority rights which it says have been neglected by the international unions in their preoccupation with purely economic factors.

ATTACK POVERTY

The 40-year-old Mr. Pepin has been even less effusive afield, declaring in his first speech as leader in June that the CNTU will attack on two new fields, declaring in his first speech as leader in June that the CNTU will attack on two new fields, as poverty and unemployment and seek by "popular pressure by many contributing" to hasten their solution.

The Mr. Pepin and other confederation leaders take their ideological cue from some of the social teaching of the Roman Catholic Church although the organization no longer carries the confessional label.

The CNTU is largely French-speaking and maintains that unions tied to U.S. headquarters can't really grasp the problems of Quebec members. It used arguments such as this in weaning Montreal and Provincial bus employees away from QFL control last year and is winning over the port workers.

But the confederation's claims of achievements are hotly disputed by French-speaking Louis Laberge, 46-year-old QFL president, who says that in recent months his organization has been winning over more groups of workers from the CNTU, and he adds that Quebec workers tire of the internal bickering that only affiliation with the big U.S.-based unions can provide.

A question of aircraft worker and top official of the International Association of Machinists (IAM) in Montreal, Mr. Laberge took over his present post last fall after the death of Roger Provost. He is the latest in an organizational spark plug in Quebec for the United Auto Workers.

BACKED STRIKERS

But the high point of his presidential career to date involved stage-centre role he played in the postal strike, promising full support for the Montreal postal workers after postal workers elsewhere had returned to their jobs.

A supporter of the New Democratic Party, Mr. Laberge got in some swipes at the Pearson government during speeches he made to strike meetings in Montreal, and he campaigned for show-stealing honors only by William Houle, flamboyant president of the mail-sorters.

The administration may feel they have a good chance now to show who's boss in Quebec.

The CNTU stands a successor to the old Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor. It claims 167,168 members and to boasts a 24-per-cent increase in membership between 1962 and 1964.

The QFL says it has about 250,000 members. It was established in 1956 by the provincial locals of CLC-affiliated international unions.

If the QFL has been wooing federal civil servants in the province, the CNTU has been successful among provincial employees, 26,000 of whom voted last fall to be represented by a union closely associated with the confederation.

The provincial civil servants are permitted to affiliate with a union provided they do not engage in politics or the financing of a political party.

But Mr. Pepin and other CNTU leaders say they are not content with the labor law for civil servants. They say it's unfair that grievance procedings, dismissals and allied matters should be left in the hands of the Civil Service Commission.

This, they say, is the same as giving the power of settlement to one of the parties to a labor dispute. They have vowed to carry on the fight for a change, mandating improvements in other directions—in "human" areas such as seniority rights which it says have been neglected by the international unions in their preoccupation with purely economic factors.

Students Will Test Legal Opinion Given

OTTAWA (CP) — University students over 21 whose names do not appear on voting lists on election day are advised to appeal to the person during revision of urban lists one month from now.

The Canadian Union of Students sent to its members at universities and university by Sept. 8, when the election writs were issued, cannot vote near the campus but only in their home constituencies.

The legal opinion says students over the age of 21 who are no longer live with their parents can argue that the city rents the campus land only for university purposes and not for ordinary place of residence.

Students who meet these tests were advised that they likely will be listed on the preliminary voting lists being compiled this week by door-to-door enumerators, who are following Mr. Castonguay's ruling.

But the students are advised to appeal the enumerators' decisions to the revising officers, who will hold hearings Oct. 12 to 20 complaints from anyone who feels his name should be added to the voters list.

Douglas, Fulton Both Criticize Election Call

By DENNIS ORCHARD

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — T. C. Douglas and Davie Fulton laced Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday night for "trying to kid the people" and giving "flim-flam reasons" for calling the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, said the prime minister "departed from statesmanship and descended to opportunism" by going to the people.

It was sheer "flim-flam" to suggest the Liberals want the election in order to obtain a Commons majority, he said.

Mr. Douglas, touring interior British Columbia on his election campaign, spoke to a crowd of about 400 persons in a high school auditorium.

About the same time, at a downtown hotel, Mr. Fulton made official his return to federal politics with his nomination as Progressive Conservative candidate in Kamloops riding.

ACCUSES PEARSON

The former justice and works minister under John Diefenbaker, who recently resigned as B.C. party leader, said Mr. Pearson was trying to cloud the real campaign issues and raise false ones.

The prime minister must "tell us what he intends to do to deal effectively with the problems of corruption and of administrative inefficiency allowing corruption, scandal and immorality to creep across the very threshold of government itself."

Mr. Douglas again attacked the Canada-United States auto pact, which he described as a $50,000,000 giveaway to the U.S., the greatest steal since Jesse James lost his horse."

A vote for the Liberal government would endorse this agreement, telling the prime minister "you gave us an awful kick, we're bending over so you can kick us again."

SURVIVOR REMEMBERS

FRENCHMAN BUTTE, Sask. (CP)—Solomon Pritchard, 103-year-old survivor of an Indian raid during the 1885 Riel Rebellion, unveiled a plaque here where the Crees fought their last skirmish with 200 troops and police, 155 miles northwest of Saskatoon. About 18 acres of land, still showing Indian rifle-pits on the crest of a low hill, has been acquired as a national historic site.

Lesage Will Help Liberals Says Favreau

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Guy Favreau, Quebec leader of the federal Liberals, said Tuesday Premier Jean Lesage's current speaking tour in the West will help the Pearson government's campaign for re-election.

Premier Lesage has said repeatedly his western tour is non-political and that the Quebec provincial Liberal party intends to stay out of the Nov. 8 federal election.

At a press conference closing a Liberal strategy meeting here, Mr. Favreau was asked whether Mr. Lesage's tour will help or hinder federal Liberal candidates in the west.

"No," the privy council president replied gravely.

"No what?" a reporter asked.

When the original question was repeated Mr. Favreau said: "Oh yes, I think it will help our campaign."

Finance Minister Gordon, who also attended the press conference as Liberal campaign chairman, agreed.

In Calgary, Mr. Lesage said: "I have no comments, and if anybody else said that my trip out west will hamper the federal Liberal party in the campaign, I would not make any comments there either."

DON'T KNOW COST

Asked how much the election campaign would cost, Mr. Gordon said nobody knows the exact amount.

"We don't think money wins elections," the finance minister said.

Mr. Favreau said an official Liberal candidate will be named by Mr. Pearson to run in St. Jean - Iberville - Napierville against Yvon Dupuis, dismissed from the cabinet last January and scheduled to stand trial next month on charges connected with an alleged payoff for a racetrack franchise.

There would be no nominating convention because there was no federal organization as yet in Mr. Dupuis' riding. He said provincial party associations have been set up in the 74 other Quebec constituencies.

Mr. Favreau denied claims by a dissident Liberal that the Montreal Dollard association still is controlled by Guy Rouleau, who resigned his Commons seat in July after being criticized in the Dorion judicial inquiry report. Mr. Rouleau announced he would not seek re-election.

Mr. Gordon was asked if such chemicks as the Truth Squad, coloring books and homing pigeons used by LIberals in the 1963 campaign had been discussed.

"I don't think these things are necessary now," he said.

Completely restyled for 1966, the Comet features a larger body, a host of luxury appointments and a wider choice of engines. Wheelbase is increased two inches to 116 inches and interior roominess is greatly enhanced. Two Mercury 390-cubic-inch engines are added to the power offerings. Sporties of the new Comets is the Cyclone GT model shown above which offers a high performance 335-horsepower V-8 engine, a unique fibreglass hood with simulated air scoops, optional handling package and a new sport-shift automatic transmission on which gears also can be changed manually. The 1966 Comet goes on sale October 1.

Special Grant Authorized For Minister

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. Russell Horsburgh, Chatham United Church minister sentenced to one year in prison after being convicted of contributing to juvenile delinquency, Tuesday was given a $5,000 grant.

The "special compassionate grant" was authorized by the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church at a meeting here.

Mr. Horsburgh was convicted Nov. 10, 1964, on five charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency. He was sentenced to a year on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

He is appealing the conviction in the Ontario Supreme Court. His first appeal last June was rejected.

The grant is to be applied toward Mr. Horsburgh's living expenses while awaiting the hearing of his appeal.

Mr. Horsburgh pleaded not guilty to eight charges which related to 24 occasions in which juveniles were alleged to have had sexual intercourse or were encouraged to have it at Chatham between July, 1963, and June, 1964.

VANIERS TO VISIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Vanier and his wife will visit Oshawa Friday. During the one-day visit, they will attend a civic reception and luncheon in honor of Col. R. S. McLaughlin, chairman of the board of directors of General Motors of Canada Ltd.

Little in Home to Indicate Mrs. Tippit Wealthy Woman

Marie Tippit, widow of the Dallas policeman who died at the hands of President John F. Kennedy's assassin, now is a wealthy woman. But she continues to live with her three children in a modest home, doing the housework herself and watching pennies at the supermarket. In a rare interview she tells why.

By JOE BALL

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—There's little in her home to indicate Marie Tippit is a wealthy woman.

A new car stands in the driveway and a color television is in the living room. But the furniture shows the wear of three active children. The house, like the neighborhood, is modest.

And Mrs. Tippit does the housework herself.

The attractive brunette is the widow of J. D. Tippit, the Dallas police officer killed by President John F. Kennedy's assassin, the day Kennedy died —Nov. 22, 1963.

Tippit had stopped the assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, for questioning on a street shortly after Kennedy was shot. As Tippit walked toward Oswald, the assassin fired. Oswald fled to a nearby theatre where officers arrested him.

The total: $647,579. Half of it went into a trust fund for the Tippit children. The widow received most of the rest.

But she didn't go on a spending spree.

"I want the children to grow up just like they would have if J. D. were still with us," she said. "I want them to learn to earn their way in the world just the way their father had to. If you make it easy for them, they won't know how when they grow up."

The children, Curtis, 6; Brenda, 9; and Allen, 15, receive the same allowance they had before their father was killed.

Mrs. Tippit lives on a strict budget. She watches her pennies at the supermarket.

The policeman's widow, however, shys from publicity.

"People don't realize that we are grateful for their help, but want to go on living our same life," she said.

LEE GRILLS receives congratulations of South Hastings Conservatives last night in Belleville Collegiate, after they nominated him party candidate in the riding for November 8 general election.

Lee Grills, Former Member For S. Hastings, Unopposed As PC Candidate for Riding

By HARRY MULHALL

Lee Grills, Progressive Conservative MP for South Hastings in 1957-63, is back in the running as a federal candidate for the riding.

The Belleville dairyman was acclaimed at a party convention in Belleville Collegiate last night after three other nominees withdrew in his favor — and seized the platform opportunity to denounce representation given the riding by Liberal MP, Robert Temple.

All three called for unequivocal support of Mr. Grills in his return bid for office. Their broadsides against Mr. Temple were echoed by Mr. Grills' nominators — Douglas Whitley and Paul Tripp, of Trenton.

And one point Mr. Whitely in obvious reference to Mr. Temple's membership on the Commons defence committee — referred to the MP as "Mr. Hither Junior."

It was a warm start — literally and figuratively to the 1962 election in the riding.

HALL FILLED

An estimated 850 members of party and public overflowed in the collegiate's auditorium, which had been baked all day in sub-tropical temperatures prior to the two-hour convention."

In short order the men discarded jackets and loosened ties after taking their seats. Onstage, platform guests simmered impassively in temperatures compounded by spotlamps.

However, it did not prevent an enthusiastic, standing ovation.

Federal Aid For Health Services

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson announced today that the federal government will provide a $500,000,000 health resources fund to be spent over the next 15 years on helping the provinces provide better medical health services.

Mr. Pearson made the announcement as federal and provincial health ministers opened a conference here to discuss federal government proposals for medicare programs.

He said in a statement the planned "health resources fund" would take effect next Jan. 1 and "by this means, the federal government would help the provinces to improve the quality of medical care available to Canadians."

The $500,000,000 allotment over the next 15 years would mean an annual outlay of about $33,000,000.

"The basic purpose of the fund is to help meet the greatest need for trained people to provide medicare services," the statement said.

"Through the fund, federal capital grants will be available for the construction, renovation and basic equipment of research establishments, teaching hospitals, medical schools and training facilities for other health personnel."

The prime minister said grants from the fund would not be available to meet the operating costs of such establishments.

Turks Order Expulsion of Some Nationals

ISTANBUL (AP)—The Turkish government has ordered the expulsion of 36 Jewish and Roman Catholic Greek nationals for what has been described as "activities detrimental to the nation and Turkish economy," Turkish newspapers report.

The Greek consulate said Wednesday that some of the 34 listed in newspapers have been ordered out of the country by the end of the week.

Up to now the Turks had mainly deported Greek nationals of the Orthodox faith since the Cyprus crisis placed Greeks and Turks on opposite sides erupted two years ago.

Greek officials here estimated about 6,000 persons holding Greek passports have been deported from Istanbul. These include the families of wage earners ordered to leave. An other 2,000 Greek nationals have left voluntarily.

4,500 GREEKS REMAIN

Officials estimated there remain about 4,500 residents holding Greek passports comprising 1,500 Moslems, 1,000 non-Orthodox and 2,000 Orthodox.

The newspaper reports say most of the deportees are merchants, manufacturers and commission agents.

The reports say some Greeks are being deported for contributing to the Hellenic Union—a banned Greek club. The others are accused of smuggling foreign currency and sending money out of the country for deposit in foreign banks, the newspapers say.

The Greek consulate said, however, no reason was given for the expulsions.

The most prominent deportee is Edouard Adler whose jewelry shop in the Istanbul Hilton Hotel is known to tourists.

Bladdermouth Says Image Besmirked

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—"Where there's a wars, there's a means," schoolgirl Tessa Tracy once philosophized.

At other times she has observed:

"She's a bladder-mouth."

"The heartburn of it, doesn't know I exist."

"He's nothing but a liar and a prefabricator."

"The president is elected by the electrical college."

"It's so rheumatic to eat by candlelight."

Tessa, now 17, has been saying things in her own highly original way since she was three, to the delight of family and friends.

She's a slender, attractive blonde with enthusiasm for surfing, tennis, ballet dancing, painting and drama. A student at Marymount Girls' School, she is, her mother says, "a girl of profound contrasts—shy, giddy and witty, yet so philosophical she makes her elders wonder."

Mrs. Elena Tracy has long been collecting her daughter's brighter sayings. Tessa's father, Arthur Park Tracy, is head of the broadcasting department at the Santa Barbara News-Press. Recently he brought the paper a selection.

The News-Press presented, "in their first publication anywhere, the collected sayings of Miss Tessa Tracy . . . a born malapropist. . . . We agree with Our parents' decision that It just isn't right not to share them with the world":

"The place sounded like an unsane assell 'em."

"She's just a rubble-raiser."

"I always get the brunt end of the stick."

"She's a needlenose—always prying."

"I like those Spanish Flamingo dancers."

"He came in with a grudge on his shoulder."

"That man is just a war mongrel."

"I'm sending it by partial post."

"He was going like a hurricane on fire."

"I just couldn't mustard the energy."

"She's a pestimist."

"I felt an inaquedict."

"Polyunsaturated means parrot that isn't wet."

Mrs. Tracy says her daughter is used to being kidded about her phrase-mangling. Yet after the paper published the list she relayed outrage to her parents:

"You have besmirched my image. Now everyone will look upon me with condensation."

Pending Death Sentences Facing Cabinet's Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—Among the toughest decisions facing the cabinet during the election campaign will be whether to commute any of the death sentences to life imprisonment.

At present, 13 men and youths are waiting in jail "death row" after being convicted of capital murder. Ten of them have execution dates falling during the campaign, starting next Wednesday and ending two days before the Nov. 8 vote.

The government had promised to bring the whole issue of capital punishment to a "free vote" in the Commons this year but no action had been taken when Parliament rose dissolved Sept. 8.

A free vote cutting across party lines had been expected on a private member's bill by Robert Temple, Toronto Liberal MP for Hastings South, to abolish hanging.

WANTS ABOLITION

Solicitor-General Larry Pennell, who reviews every capital murder case in detail and recommends action to the cabinet, has repeatedly expressed his support for outright abolition.

The convicted killers now awaiting execution include a sex maniac, two separatist terrorists, underworld executionists, a bigamist, a jealous husband and youths of 18 and 19.

The reports say some Greeks are being deported for contributing to the Hellenic Union—a banned Greek club. The others are accused of smuggling foreign currency and sending money out of the country for deposit in foreign banks, the newspapers say.

The Greek consulate said, however, no reason was given for the expulsions.

The most prominent deportee is Edouard Adler whose jewelry shop in the Istanbul Hilton Hotel is known to tourists.

sentenced May 19 in Toronto for the shooting of Jack Blanc in a bank holdup in July, 1964. Executed for the murder of a Toronto Court, granted indefinite stay of execution.

Robert Michael Black, 18, and William Alexander Mackie, 19, sentenced in Toronto June 4 for allowing insurance on Mary Aiden MacDonald, 35, to drown in Black Creek in suburban Scarborough, Ont., last year. Aug. 6. Crown said the two youths wanted to rob MacDonald and contributed to his drowning, but the youths denied this. They last their appeal to the Ontario Appeal Court, execution set for Sept. 29.

Shastri Is Asked To Order Making Of Atomic Bombs

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Eighty-six parliamentarians of all parties have asked Prime Minister Shastri to order the manufacture of atomic bombs because of alleged collusion between China and Pakistan.

In a letter to the prime minister they said the manufacture of atomic bombs is necessary for India's survival as a nation and a democracy in the face of collusion between Pakistan and China.

"The bitter experience of denial of aid when India is fighting not only to repel aggression but also to make the country safe for democracy makes it abundantly clear that the security of the country can no longer be left to the mercy or whim of so-called friendly countries," the letter said.

Among the main signatories to the letter are both general secretaries of Shastri's own ruling Congress party.

DECISION NOT BINDING

Shastri and the late prime minister Nehru both rejected earlier demands that India make an atomic bomb and pledged India to the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. But Shastri has said no decision is binding for all time.

Competent authorities have agreed India is capable of developing nuclear weapons. It has been estimated that the country could produce an atomic bomb in 18 months.

Reports that secret development of a nuclear weapon already has started have been denied.

India made an unconditional agreement with Canada in 1956 that a nuclear reactor built with Canadian technical aid would be used for peaceful purposes only.

The same agreement has applied to later nuclear power stations supplied to both India and Pakistan.

While the natural uranium used in the heavy water-type reactors built in India cannot be used for atomic bombs, plutonium—a basic ingredient in the bomb — can be extracted from the used uranium fuel.

While this is an expensive process, it does provide a source for the plutonium that is not otherwise available.

Ten Injured In Bomb Blasts

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Two bombs exploded one after another in Brazil's stock exchange here Wednesday. Officials reported 10 persons were injured by fragments, none seriously.

About 500 traders were in the oval-shaped trading room when the bombs went off shortly after noon. Many dived for cover while others rushed for the doors.

Miami Police Charge Two Men Paid $35,000 To Free Lemay

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A lead to elusive George Lemay of Montreal, whose jail break here Tuesday night allegedly was engineered with a $35,000 promise, evaporated today in Nassau, Bahamas.

Bahamas Police Commissioner Lloyd Hamilton said men thoroughly searched all hotels and late Wednesday concluded Lemay was not resemble the bank burglary suspect.

"The man we found was not the subject," Morris said. "It was a case of mistaken identity."

The Nassau hunt for Lemay began after a report that a couple resembling him and his wife, Lise, travelled by airliner from Miami to the Bahamas island resort city.

Two airline stewardesses said a couple that travelled on Mackey Airlines' flight from Nassau Wednesday morning looked like Lemay and his wife. U.S. immigration officials interviewed the stewardesses.

Sources in The Bahamas said two U.S. officials—one of them with the immigration department — arrived in Nassau to help in the search.

"We think that Lemay is out of the country and that his wife is with him," said Dade County Sheriff T. A. Buchanan in Miami.

Buchanan claimed that Mixon and Lemay's attractive wife Lise, 29, planned the escape "from the outside." The sheriff accused Algar, a security officer at the Dade County jail, of being "the inside man."

Buchanan said $35,000 was offered as the price for liberating Lemay, who scrambled 50 feet down a cable Tuesday night from the seventh floor of the 16-storey jail.

The sheriff said Algar took Lemay from his fifth-floor cell to a "hold cell" the ground floor about 11 a.m. Tuesday and left the door unlocked. Lemay then went to the 10th floor, picked up the 1½-inch cable, went down to the seventh floor, lashed the cable to a plumbing fixture and lowered himself out the window, said the sheriff.

Officials would say nothing about the two Americans who flew to Nassau to aid Bahamian police in their search for Lemay.

A warrant has been issued for Lemay on charges of breaking and entering and theft of $500,000 in connection with the robbery of a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in 1961.

A total of 377 safety deposit boxes at the branch were broken into, but the exact amount never was established because of reluctance of the box owners to talk. A ring apparently gained entry to the bank by tunnelling under the building. There have been estimates that between $500,000 and $4,000,000 was stolen.

The stocky, five-foot-eight Lemay was arrested last May aboard a fancy yacht he kept at Fort Lauderdale. He was identified from a wanted poster seen on the Early Bird satellite television program.

ARRESTED IN ESCAPE PLOT — Earl Mixon, 31, left, a former county policeman and now a bail bondsman, and Harold Algar, right, were arrested in Miami and charged with taking part in a $35,000 plot last freed accused Canadian bank robber Georges Lemay from Dade county jail Tuesday night. Sheriff T. A. Buchanan said the money was offered for liberating Lemay. (AP Wirephoto)

Hillcrest Parents Unhappy Over Distance Children Have to Travel to School

Parents in the Hillcrest area whose children attend senior classes at the Prince of Wales and King George public schools both west of the Moira River are unhappy over the distance to be travelled and the unusual traffic and other hazards to be encountered.

This week at the monthly meeting of the Belleville Public School Board, Mr. and Mrs. Grant McCoy of Pearl Street, presented a petition signed by about 50 persons residing in the Hillcrest district asking that some consideration be given to the matter.

Unusual hazards of road conditions and water run-off in the area were cited in the presentation.

School board chairman Dr. J. Russell Scott named a committee of J. N. McKibbon, Gerald Joyce and E. Bruce Bishop to investigate the matter and report to the board.

The report of schools superintendent L. F. Wright showed school enrolment up from 4,997 in June to 5,134 in September and that the teaching staff had been increased from 162 to 169.

Approval was given to the request of Principal R. D. Horwood for release from his duties for a two-week period in the new year to take advantage of training for work as a school inspector. Mr. Horwood has otherwise completed the requirements for qualification, and the internship is a voluntary provision by the Ontario Department of Education.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Trustees W. A. VanTassel, James Ritchie and George Rutledge were elected members of a special committee to report on usage of school facilities by the YMCA, more particularly the Sir Mackenzie Bowell School.

The schedule of members of the Ministerial Association offering non-denominational religious exercises in Grade VII classes was received from Rev. J. A. Dunlop, and instruction was given that the Association be assured of the Board's gratitude for such contribution.

Authorization was given for the provision of serum for influenza to all employees on a volunteer basis, cost to amount to about $100.00.

The resignation of custodian John Dafoe was accepted, and approval was given to the probationary employment of Gerald Rogers and Robert Wright at beginning rates of $250 per month.

A request from A. Tobe to purchase property brought direction that Mr. Tobe be advised to make his submission to the Board regarding a section of the southern area of the Queen Elizabeth School site and consideration will be given.

United Appeal Starts With Feather Parade Friday

A jazz band, girls, convertibles and a skyful of flares will herald the start of this year's Belleville United Appeal campaign. Campaign officials are pulling out all the stops to sell Belleville residents on the United Way of giving, and before the week's end they expect that anyone will not know that the annual fund-raising drive is underway.

Prelude to opening day comes this Friday evening when a score of teen-age cheerleaders from Belleville secondary schools will greet Friday night shoppers with a real red feather and a reminder that the United Appeal campaign starts Monday. A cavalcade of red convertibles will head the line on the east-end shopping plaza. While a seven-piece jazz band provides music with a beat, the cheer-leaders will remind everyone to pledge their United Way gift. The performance will be repeated 30 minutes later at the Bulway Store at the city's western limits.

Downtown shoppers are to be greeted with a similar show Saturday morning as the cavalcade moves along Front Street to the Market Square.

Symbol of the United Appeal drive is the red feather and the red color scheme will be carried throughout with red convertibles, supplied by the city's automobile dealers, and a red truck carrying the music-makers. Doug Asselstine heads the musical group, whose members are being provided through the co-operation of the Belleville Local of the American Federation of Musicians.

WILL LIGHT SKIES

In case some Belleville residents are missed Friday and Saturday, they're due for a colorful reminder in the early evening Monday night. Weather permitting, an RCAF Caribou aircraft will circle the city lighting the skies with flares. On the ground, the United Appeal officials will talk to the aircraft and receive a description of the flare pattern as the aircraft makes its run over the city. Belleville residents will also hear the drive progress live on CJBQ beginning at 7.30.

Red Feather control will be located at the CNR station and will be situated in two railway cars provided by Canadian National Railways. Just prior to the countdown and the aircraft run, telephone will be paid to the excellent record set last year by Canadian National employees in Belleville and their pledges to the United Appeal drive. H. J. Fast, CN's division district superintendent will accept a Red Feather flag which will be flown at the CN station throughout the campaign.

While Monday signals the start of the campaign, the fund-raising drive got underway in some of Belleville's trading industries earlier this week. Inplant canvasses have already begun and early returns are anticipated.

Belleville's United Appeal is heading for its highest objective this year. With a $21,000 increase over last year, the Appeal this year seeks $127,000 for 14 community agencies.

Hasty-Pees Will Take Part In Leadership Competition

Eight Canadian Army militia units from seven Eastern Ontario communities are to compete at Camp Petawawa for the Eastern Ontario Area Institutive and leadership championship. The competition will be held this weekend, September 23-26, and the following week-end, October 2-3.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from Belleville will take part in the competition on Sunday morning, Oct. 2rd, and will return home late that evening.

The unit, an "Exercise Highland Laddie", the competition is in the form of a daylight patrol of six hours' duration and will test the unit teams in their ability to undertake a limited range patrol, establish a clandestine-type base behind the mythical enemy lines, and carry out objective reconnaissance tasks.

Competing militia unit patrol teams are composed of one officer and twenty-one other ranks, of which twelve men must be privates.

On completion of the competition the militia and leadership trophy for Easter Ontario Area will be presented to the winning team which will then take part in the Central Command competition. g The Richard Trophy, which is presented in a stone taken from Toronto's University Avenue armories, will be presented to the winners of the Central Command competition to be held at Camp Petawawa on October 16-17.

He made the announcement at a meeting of the Lanark County Progressive Conservative Association in this town 25 miles southwest of Ottawa, but would not say his reasons.

Mr. Doucett, a bachelor, held the public works, highways and agriculture portfolios at various times in the Ontario government until his resignation to enter federal politics in 1957. He was elected to the Commons by acclamation in an Aug. 27 by-election.

Canadian Public 'Bamboozled' By Car Deal

- - Douglas

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP)—The Canadian public has been "bamboozled" about the United States-Canada auto agreement, a pact that may involve "serious" benefits, Douglas Fisher, a member of the New Democratic Party said Wednesday night.

T. C. Douglas charged that the agreement, purporting to be a free trade arrangement between the two countries, in fact a $50,000,000-a-year handout to manufacturers.

He told an election rally crowd of 800 the bamboozler is Jack Davis, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Davis has predicted that the price of cars will go down $500 although Industry Minister Drury has told Parliament Canadians will realize no price rut at all, Mr. Douglas said.

He called for a full-scale investigation into "what is the harm arrangements" between the federal government and auto manufacturers, deals intimated by a report of the U.S. Tariff Commission.

DEALS 'SECRET'

"Mr. Pearson has a public duty to reveal the nature of these secret deals and to release all the letters and documents which have been kept from the Canadian people and the members of the House of Commons."

Mr. Douglas said Canada is a society half slave and half free, forced by 1,000 specially-privileged individuals, decides how much Canadians will pay for their products and get for their products, and whether industry will expand or stagnate.

He said this elite controls the most important newspapers, television and radio stations, and shapes public opinion. It didn't matter whether Liberals or Conservatives were in power, because the corporate elite was always in power.

Bishop Will Dedicate New Carillon

On Sunday morning, September 25, at Right Rev. R. C. Evans, M.A., D.D., D.C.L., Bishop of Ontario, will dedicate the carillon placed in the tower of St. Thomas' Church as a lasting memorial to the late Robert A. Pringle, Q.C., one time city solicitor and at the time of his death, Chancellor of the Diocese of Ontario.

The carillon, a product of Schulmerich Carillons, Inc., is an instrument of-receive engineering which provides for the ringing of the bells. If necessary, an interval of only fifteen minutes during the day. The installation consists of six old English bells of the finest structural tone, together with the Bourdon bells that provide the sub-octave hum tone, adding a prime tone to the structure of the English type bells. These bells have the tonal equivalent of 25,965 pounds of cast bronze bells.

Already these bells, which have been in operation for some months, have had a deep spiritual impact upon this community. Many comments have made, in the installation, for the playing of hymn tunes on the bells but this will not take place until the Christmas season.

Schulmerich Carillons are now installed in over 6,000 churches throughout the world and with their fine tonal perfection and proven quality, have received overwhelming acceptance from people in every community and in every walk of life.

It is expected that many friends and business acquaintances will be at the service for the dedication of this memorial to Mr. Pringle, placed in the church by his wife and family.

McCutcheon Attacks Plea Of Pearson

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—A majority Liberal government would give Finance Minister Gordon a free hand to continue his "anti-American" policies and Prime Minister Pearson a mandate to ignore last year's scandal allegations, Conservative Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon said Wednesday in Parry Sound.

In a strongly-worded attack on the prime minister's plea for a majority government, Senator McCutcheon said the Liberals were bad enough in their minority position but would have been intolerable as a majority.

Speaking to a nomination meeting in the riding of Parry Sound-Muskoka, he said:

"I am in deadly earnest when I say that Canadian business, Canadian labor, Canadian consumers, would live to rue the day that the Pearson government was given a majority to run this country."

There would be nothing to stop Mr. Gordon from including "to the full his appetite for chauvinistic, narrow policies designed to discriminate against foreign capital."

The prime minister, he said, would interpret a majority as approval of the way he has handled the moral and ethical crises in his government. And he could continue under-the-table deals resulting in a further deterioration in federal-provincial relations.

'Rockhounds' Form New Club in City

Interest in the rocks and minerals in the vicinity of the Quinte District has led to the formation of a new Club with headquarters in Belleville. The new organization was founded on Tuesday evening during an informal get-together of some 20 interested "rockhounds" at Wilson Concrete Co. The group was chaired by Dr. A. P. Arthur, and Murray Maw acted as secretary.

A quick round of unanimous discussion prompted the group to name the new Club "The Quinte Lapidary Mineral Club". An impromptu nominating committee soon had a slate of officers elected to take up duties immediately. Those elected were: President, Percy Pickering, 1st Vice President, Gordon Alyea, 2nd Vice President, Richard Browne, Secretary, Ian Jones, Publicity, Hans Rudolf and Irwin Knight.

To get the new Club off to a good start, the executive has entertained relative to date and place of meetings, constitution, and membership fees. It was decided that the Club should meet on the first Tuesday of each month at 8 p.m. and the meeting place would have to be arranged until organization is established.

Oct. 5 at 7.30 p.m. is the date and time of the first regular meeting of the Club. This meeting will be held in the Library of the Vocational School on the Catarqui School for the Deaf in Belleville. A field trip is tentatively planned for the afternoon of the 5th, with the details to be advertised later. The new members were unanimously elected and all interested and prospective "rockhounds" should plan on the first field trip and attend the first regular meeting if they desire.

Those present at the inaugural meeting expressed the hope that the Club would be instrumental in banding together all of the rock and mineral collectors, those interested in the field of lapidary work, and any others who may have been isolated "rockhounding" in one of the fastest growing hobbies in the whole of North America, and residents of the Quinte District will now have the opportunity to widen their knowledge and appreciation of district rocks and minerals. Professional advice and instruction is expected to be made available to all members as soon as organization of the Club is complete.

Films on Africa Will Be Shown

PHILIP E. ALLAN

Few Canadians have travelled more widely than Philip E. Allan. He is showing films taken on his latest tour — of Africa from Capetown to the Congo. Entitled "Light on Darkest Africa," the travelogue will be presented at the BCIVS Auditorium twice on Saturday, in the afternoon and again in the evening. The Belleville Kinsmen Club is sponsoring Mr. Allen's visit here and proceeds will go to the Kinsmen Welfare Fund. Kinsmen are selling tickets.

Born in North Battleford, Sask., Mr. Allen's first travels were with the RCAF — for seven years overseas. In 1947 he "went into business for himself", so to speak, by joining the gold trails of '98, from Edmonton to the Yukon, and thence over the Chilkoot Pass to the Pacific Coast. The 6,000-mile trip was made the hard way, alone, and took six months. In 1949 he crossed Canada, lecturing on his journey. This set the pattern for future trips. In 1951 he sailed for the Arctic, emerging a year and a half later after traversing northern wastes from East to west. In 1954 he travelled to Africa, and then headed for Australia. In 1958 he left Australia for Africa, spending the next four years showing his earlier travel films — and making the movies of Africa which he will now show here.

Lee Grills Nominated

tion for Mr. Grills as he strode the aisles after his acclamation, flanked by two supporters from the Young Progressive-Conservatives.

The warmth of the delegates' greeting for Mr. Grills came after political temperatures had also been increased by the platform salvos against his Liberal opponent.

The start of the barrage was signalled by Mr. Hyde — city public works chairman — who said South Hastings, from 1867 to 1963, had in Mr. Grills an MP devoted "not to his own interests but to the general interested of the people of his riding."

Referring to Mr. Temple as "the interim member" he added it was a "gross misfortune that we still don't enjoy that (Mr. Grill's) type of responsible representation."

Mr. Hyde mentioned a pamphlet sent constituents by Mr. Temple bearing a photograph of the MP outside the House of Commons, then queried the number of times Mr. Temple had been inside the House.

The former mayor said he recalled serving on city council with Mr. Grills, "long before when the present MP had attended only six of 36 committee meetings set up to consider..."

POOR REPRESENTATION CLAIM

"I strongly suspect that with his record we have been stuck with the same kind of representation in Ottawa for the past four years," he added.

He said there was no doubt "the interim member" had gleaned maximum publicity and therefore gave the impression his constituents had the ear he has been actually doing his job."

Gene Mr. Temple replaced Mr. Grills at Ottawa in 1963, "I doubt if we've received the same kind of trustworthy representation," added Mr. Hyde.

Dr. Potter said that Hastings South had become a "safe seat" with the poorest quality of representation that we've ever had since the present first started."

"For this reason it is most important that we put forward a winning select a candidate with the ability, integrity and experience to give this riding the type of representation which we deserve."

Mr. Grills, he said, would have been re-elected in 1963 "if it had not been for the sabotage of the last effort."

Mr. Cass called for a return to power of good government in Canada which has been so sadly lacking there for the past four years.

"Hastings South," he said, "must elect a representative who will represent the riding as it has not been represented for the past two years."

The constituency must return a member who would serve the best interests of the riding and its people "not one who is interested in personal aggrandizement."

DELEGATES SUPPORT

The riding did not need a representative who would rush to Ottawa, vote himself a large raise (a reference to the $18,000 salary voted for MPs after the 1963 election) and then "put in his time as a part-time...job."

"Nor," added Mr. Cass, "do we want a man who has no concern with the problems of yourself and myself . . . but is too busy with his own personal interests."

He called for the party to stand squarely behind Mr. Grills "in his effort to this riding and to Canada good, honest government."

Formally nominating Mr. Grills, Mr. Whitley said Hastings South had received "something less than good representation" from "Mr. Hellyer junior."

"He's ridden all over this continent," he added.

"He's been a joy to himself I think . . . I'm sure by times both the Trenton paper and the Belleville paper have been very short of copy."

He noted the advent of a government-sponsored water weed cutter in both communities recently and added: "We don't need it in September when the boating season is over."

Mr. Tripp said by returning Mr. Grills as MP "we can show somebody we can talk to. Our present member has been shuttling all over the North American continent."

He said problems had arisen over construction of a new Trent River bridge and an "empty" federal building in Trenton.

Mr. Grills himself did not personally level any accusations at Mr. Temple, save in one reference when he mentioned publicly the incumbent MP had received during his term of office.

NOT HEADLINE HUNTER

"I've never tried to be a headline hunter in the past — nor do I plan to look for them in the future," he told the convention. "That wasn't my ambition. I just want to help the people of South Hastings to the best of my ability."

He said he was not stating his platform at present but added it would be based "on honest, faithful, diligent service for South Hastings and all Canada."

He recalled he was a member of a committee which laid the original plans for a new Trent River bridge at Trenton — "and it's quite possible we would have had that bridge well on the way if our government was still in power."

He added it was "due to my constant agitation" that the weeds in the Trenton harbor and a weedcutter was built in Prescott.

Plans for the new Trenton federal building, a larger town cold storage plant, amalgamation of constituency cheese factories and vegetable school additions were laid during his term, he said.

He was a member of the Railway Committee he also had a part in location of the CNR Richmond district office in Belleville, Mr. Grills added.

"I never felt more confident of the candidate than this assembly. However, he reminded party workers: "There is no second place or no second prizes on election day. Your campaign starts as we leave here tonight folks."

He said he intended covering "every road and every corner" of the constituency before the election ended.

Then it going until November 8 and we'll give Lester Pearson our answer to this unnecessary election," he said.

Mr. Grills was introduced to the convention by Clark Rollins, MLA Hastings East.

DELEGATES WELCOMED

Belleville Mayor Jack Ellis and Hastings County Warden Fred Beckett formally welcomed the delegates to their municipalities.

Mayor Ellis said the church of which he was a member was celebrating its centennial with a motto that might be adopted by the convention's motto that "Hats off to the past — coats off to the future."

Warden Beckett, who hails from Rawdon in the riding of Hastings - Frontenac said although he was not in the convention's constituency, he took issue with federal milk and fruit-growing policies.

The convention also brought to the public platform one of the most prominent and veteran of all district Conservatives — Senator George White of Madoc, former Speaker of the Senate.

PRAISES FORMER MEMBER

Mr. White made national political history in 1957 when he stepped down after lengthy service as MP for Hastings-

Canadian Girl Back in Jail In Arkansas

COOKSVILLE, Ont. (CP)— Patricia Gladman, 22, told her mother in a telephone call Wednesday to this community near Toronto that she was back in jail in Forrest City, Ark.

Her mother, Mrs. Joseph Gladman, said Patricia told her in a conversation from the jail that she had been jailed earlier in the day with about 100 others connected with the Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee.

The group had staged march to the Forrest City courthouse to protest an injunction forbidding demonstrations within two blocks of the all-Negro Lincoln High School.

Patricia, a senior psychology student at the University of Western Ontario, London, has been out on bail awaiting trial on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Charges were lodged against her and 10 others after the demonstration similar to Wednesday's.

Mrs. Gladman said her daughter told her Wednesday night "there now are four charges against her. The others include inciting a riot, disturbing the peace and parading or marching without a permit.

Her trial on the original charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency is scheduled for 2 p.m. today.

John Dauphinee Now Assistant To CP Manager

VICTORIA (CP) — John Dauphinee, 52, general superintendent of the Pacific region, has been appointed assistant general manager of the national news-gathering co-operative.

The appointment was made at the fall board meeting here this week and announced today by Stuart Keate, CP president and publisher of the Vancouver Sun.

Mr. Dauphinee born in Vancouver, joined CP from the Sun in 1936.

He was news editor in Ottawa bureau, general night editor in Toronto, news editor and bureau chief in London, England, bureau chief in New York Winnipeg and Edmonton and then general news editor at Toronto from 1952 until he became general superintendent three years ago.

CP's general manager is Gilles Purcell.

Prontenac, to open a seat for Sidney Smith, the Toronto University president elected as Ex-Tory MP in a by-election in the first Diefenbaker cabinet.

"No riding ever had a more conscientious or hard-working member than you had in Lee Grills," he told the delegates.

"You belong to a great party — and in our present leader John Diefenbaker — a great Canadian who have a very fine and distinguished gentleman."

He called for party unity behind the leader. "If we can do that we have nothing to fear," he concluded.

The assembly was convened by association president Jack Ireland.

stani Army have been knocked out."

(An official Pakistani communique issued about five hours before the ceasefire took effect said Pakistani forces had "pushed back" India from its advance positions in the Wagha Dadh-Attari sector, 15 miles east of Lahore.

"The communique said heavy casualties were inflicted on Indian forces. This is the sector where Indian troops launched a massive attack in the first day of their offensive in Kashmir in an attempt to capture Pakistan's second largest city.

(The clandestine Voice of Kashmir radio said Kashmiri "freedom fighters" also in. flicted heavy casualties on the Indians in two raids of military convoys near the Kashmiri capital city of Srinagar in the 24 hours preceding Wednesday night.)

Though the Kashmir frontier was quiet today, India could yet face trouble on the Sikkim frontier with Chinese-controlled Tibet.

The Peking People's Daily Observer today called for India to cease its "provocations" and "intrusions" into Chinese territory in the eastern, middle and western sectors of the Sino-Indian border. This is a question still to be solved. All these accounts must be settled."

Nudists Enjoy Nature on Tiny Isle du Levant

PARIS (Reuters)—A craggy island off the southern coast of France has been welcoming crowds of French and foreign nudists this summer.

Most of the small French islands in the Mediterranean have a history. But the tiny Ile du Levant, shared between a nudist colony and a French naval station, offers perhaps the strangest spectacle of all.

Unlike Corsica, where people have to present naturist club cards to gain admission to a nudist colony, the island offers its hospitality to all comers—provided they undress.

Even sailors, shot off from the colony by a high fence, sometimes shed their uniforms and mingle with nudists visiting the island's hotels or private houses.

Villagers make up the third element of the island's population. They run the few facilities — two night clubs, a grocery store and a hairdresser's.

Nudists going into the village also have to wear a bare minimum of clothing, something not received from bits of cloth and string.

Life on the island is expensive. Hotels rent about $9 a day. Both food and water are scarce. There are no butchers and meat has to be delivered from the grocer on the previous day. There is no electricity.

Starter notices between the visitor landing after the hour's trip from the mainland that topography is forbidden. Gendarmes and nudist "commandos" see that the ban is

Hogan Accepts Nomination In York West

TORONTO (CP)—George Hogan accepted the Progressive Conservative nomination for York West Wednesday night by calling on Robert Winters, certain to be his opponent in the riding for the Nov. 8 federal election, to divest himself of all business connections.

Mr. Hogan, 37, an automobile dealer, told 300 persons at a noisy nominating convention that Mr. Winters must make up his mind about whether he wants to be a business tycoon or a member of Parliament.

Mr. Winters is chairman and president of Rio Algom Mines Ltd., chairman of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd., president of Rio Tinto Dow Ltd. and president of Preston Mines Ltd.

He said earlier this week he is under no obligation to sever his connections with these firms unless he becomes a cabinet minister if the Liberals are returned to power. He is a former Liberal works minister.

Labor Minister Claims Charges Are Unfounded

KIMBERLEY, B.C. (CP)— Labor Minister MacEachen said Wednesday night the Liberals have "no reason at all" to regret the Canada-United States automobile agreement.

He told a Liberal meeting here the agreement would be beneficial to both car buyers and persons employed in making the cars.

The minister described as "absolutely false and without foundation" charges by NDP Leader T. C. Douglas that the agreement is a $50,000,000 giveaway and "the greatest steal since Jesse James lost his gun."

The agreement will "in the not too distant future" provide more jobs for Canadians and result in price reductions for car buyers, said Mr. MacEachen.

2 City Cafes Marked Down For Warnings

TORONTO (CP) — Two city restaurants were marked down for warnings Wednesday after city officials and board of health inspectors made a three-hour surprise tour of nine downtown restaurants.

Alderman Horace Brown, health board chairman, led the inspection which included city politicians, health board inspectors and Dr. J. M. Gleroy, medical health officer in charge of sanitary inspections.

U.S. Senate for Ceiling On Canadian Immigrants

WASHINGTON (CP) — Congress has voted to discard the national origins quota system of immigration and to substitute a policy of accepting immigrants regardless of their place of birth.

The Senate in passing the immigration bill by a vote of 76 to 18 Wednesday placed a ceiling for the first time on immigration from the western hemisphere. The House of Representatives previously rejected the western hemisphere limitation.

It now will be up to a Senate-House conference committee to work out this key difference in the bills.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat who is floor manager of the measure in the Senate, told reporters it might be possible to reach a compromise that would permit the president to raise the western hemisphere ceiling if he found this vital to the national interest.

In place of the quota system the bill provides for accepting immigrants on first-come, first-served basis regardless of place of birth except that preference would be given to those with close family ties to U.S. citizens or with special skills.

An annual quota of 170,000 is set for immigrants from nations outside the western hemisphere, with a limit of 20,000 from any single country.

The ceiling for Canada, Mexico and other nations in this hemisphere would be 120,000 without any country-by-country limitation.

Spouses, minor children and parents of U.S. citizens would be eligible for admission without regard to the numerical ceilings.

Canada has formally expressed concern to the state department about the hemisphere restrictions.

The ceiling would go into effect by July 1, 1968, after a study of western - hemisphere immigration by a special commission. One hope is that this study will lead to changes or even abolition of the limit of 120,000.

The ceiling would have no immediate impact on Canada. Canadian immigration to the U.S., from all countries in the world in the hemisphere, totalled 38,000 men, women and children last year. Canada was the only other major source of immigrants. Mexico and Jamaica could expand a lot without touching the ceiling.

GM Says Car Prices Cut But Safety Items Up Ante

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. set its prices Wednesday on its new 1966 model automobiles and said they are "lower than those of similarly - equipped 1965 models."

GM, largest of the American automobile manufacturers, said it reduced its prices in a range of from $52 to $136 as compared with 1965 models with like equipment.

The company said this was in the eighth consecutive car model year that its prices have remained "substantially constant or have been reduced."

All the 1966 General Motors models include as standard equipment six safety items which previously came as extra - additional items on most of its cars.

GM said the major part of what it called its "over-all reduction" reflects the three-percent cut in the new car excise tax. It said the reminder includes decreases in the cost of the safety items.

General Motors' price announcement followed by 48 hours rival Chrysler Corp.'s announcement of generally higher prices for its 1966 cars.

However, it was not clear to what extent the Chrysler increases represented the costs of additional safety items.

Pollution Problem

Pollution of the air we breathe and the water we drink is one of the major health problems of our time. Much has been done to control and even eliminate pollution, but to maintain this level of purity requires constant vigilance on the part of health authorities and the public at large.

Consider the extent of the problem in British Columbia, which serves as a good example of neglect in the sphere of pollution control. Vancouver Sun medical writer Arnie Myers says the commonest water-pollution problem in the west coast province cannot be blamed on the pulp mills, mines, smeltery and the like. Rather, the villain . . . "is the apathetic taxpayer who cannot see the necessity of adding to his tax bill in order to buy adequate treatment facilities for his domestic sewage."

Myers says only about half of British Columbia's 1.8 million people live in the 57 municipalities which have sewage facilities. Only 22 of these 57 plants are rated as adequate by the provincial health branch, and many of them do not even treat all the sewage their communities produce.

Another 400,000 British Columbians live in communities which have sewer systems but no treatment plants. The other 500,000 make do with individual septic tanks or even more primitive methods.

Yet modern techniques in the sewage treatment field could be used to correct this situation at a cost to citizens of only about $20 a head.

Back in 1958 contamination of English Bay and other beaches in the Vancouver area was so bad that they had to be closed to the public, and despite counter measures in the intervening period the bacteria count is said to have remained static, although below the safety standard set by medical authorities.

Following the 1958 closing of the beaches, Vancouver and Burnaby constructed a sewage treatment plant, and subsequently West Vancouver, Port Moody and Coquitlam joined with these two in establishing the Greater Vancouver Sewerage and Drainage District. But Myers says New Westminster, Port Moody and Richmond thus far have not joined in this scheme.

It is an interesting commentary on our modern civilization, with all its emphasis on progress and the use of modern methods, that appeals for implementation of sewage plans in British Columbia have fallen largely on deaf ears. Even more ironic when considering there was a time in the province, among the Haidas (Indian tribe), that the pollution of a stream was an offence punishable with death.

Says Myers: "Then came civilization, and water pollution became socially acceptable."

But the truth is, it is no more acceptable today, in British Columbia or anywhere else, than it was when the Indians held sway. Those municipalities that are lax in this matter bear a heavy responsibility, even though they do not run the risk of being burned at the stake.

India Relents

Last Friday, Peking gave India three days to dismantle 56 border posts on Chinese-claimed territory on the frontier. On Sunday the deadline was extended three days.

Meanwhile India protested that there had been no intrusions into Chinese territory and that there were no installations to dismantle. The latest information however, if we are to believe Peking Radio, is that Indian troops crossed into Chinese-held territory and hauled down the posts in question. As a result, the threat of war between India and China is said to have receded.

If this is true, peace has been bought once again at the price of Indian humiliation. New Delhi had protested earlier it would resist any Chinese attack, but Peking comes up with this report that the border posts have been withdrawn.

Even if these posts had remained, it is questionable what value they would have had in any conflict. As the war in Vietnam has proved, outposts are usually over-run swiftly. Indian prestige has also suffered as the result of troop withdrawals in the face of a Chinese incursion in the Donghui pass on Monday, resulting in Chinese occupation of a small tract of the Indian protectorate of Sikkim.

My efforts are always constructive. My principle is that the Indian must recognize the facts of his own life and start the long climb upwards to being self-supporting, that equal rights—government, non-Indian or even of Indian ancestry—seeking to give Indians a program of fun and games instead of welfare, seeking to take away self-control and initiative from Indians, must be faced with all of the resolute power that a 22-year-old, 115-pound girl who earns $60 a week can provide.—Kahn-Tineta Horn, Mohawk Indian and Montreal fashion model, in a letter to The Ottawa Journal.

Campaign Trail Is Hard On the Main Contestants

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — So how do you think they're looking these campaign days — Old Age Pensioner John Diefenbaker, just turned 70, and Grandfather Lester Pearson, so soon 68?

Both men are extremely sensitive to questions about their health.

The Conservative Leader — very probably because in recent years he has been the victim of a particularly vicious whispering campaign about his physical well-being — stiffens with suspicion, almost hostility, at the mere mention of it.

Perhaps both men are this touchy because, to be honest about it, they're tired, and know from the hard experience of their leadership years that campaigning is an endurance contest which, if their medical advisers had their way, would be confined to young athletes.

As Prime Minister, each has only to flip back the pages of their thick scrap-books of clips of newspictures from other campaigns to see what the years and the age-accelerating grind of high responsibility have done to them.

CHANGE OF FACE:

Those large-than-life 1963 campaign posters show that brinkly Diefenbaker top-knot of hair in darkish tones-grey, and in the posters of the '57 and '58 campaigns — only eight years ago at most — the hair is black, the face lean and unlined.

Just look at him now.

The Pearson hair, now wispy and the prime ministerial trademark of the newspaper cartoonists, comes up black and almost bushy in the "Vote Liberal" posters of the 1965 campaign. The face is wrinkle-free and firm.

The erosion of physical and perhaps emotional resources by unrelenting strain of leadership, both in Parliament and also in the Capital, and out on the campaign trail four times in seven years, has done this to these men.

A leader in a national campaign flies from town to town, man. He comes and goes, with as many as a dozen stops a day, at the direction of others.

He sometimes doesn't even get time to attend to the most sonal necessities properly. As in the '57 campaign when they were driving the westbound 70 and bone-weary "Uncle Louie" St. Laurent to what turned out to be the point of no return

It had been an exhausting day as he swept by motorcade through Western Ontario. And on towards evening, far behind schedule, they were taking him from Stratford for the big speech of the day at Woodstock. There had been no time for dinner — or other things. Suddenly, on a signal the lead car knew, and in, momentum geared down from 70 mph to a roadside stop. Out climbed "Uncle Louie," across the shoulder, through the ditch, over the fence and into a clump of trees. Then they gave him a hand up from the ditch, popped him in the car again, and raced on.

TURNING POINT:

He was gentle, courteous and extremely civilized about it and this could have been one of the incidents which persuaded him he had had enough. The campaign was close, and he could have hung on precariously, as a minister-less minister of Mr. Jack Pickersgill and some other Cabinet Members urged — but instead, fatigued beyond endurance, he made way for John Diefenbaker Conservatives.

"How do I look?" asked Prime Minister Pearson echoing a reporter's question at a press conference. "How do I look?"

He was tanned, rested, smiling, but answering the question, inferred by was fibbed. He hoped for "a surcease," as he called it, and a return 'to the ivory tower in the academic halls of learning." Then wistfully, the university professor - turned - politician - and - Prime - Minister followed that the longed - for surcease was probably "a long way-off."

"Bill of health," asked John Diefenbaker at his press conference, "I don't need a bill of bill."

Then for the first time, and blaming Quebec Premier Lesage for it as a Liberal "gossip," Prief mentioned the rumour of his affiliction of Parkinson's Disease. Of all possible topics, this always has been the most verboten.

The story, he stormed, was "a falsehood in every letter of the word." His doctor confirms him, unhesitatingly.

He was fine and fit, and pounded his chest like an aging Tarzan to prove it. He does shake a bit, and the shake don't the first to admit it. But it isn't as the gossips had it, an "incurable disease," nor is it Parkinson's. It's more likely nervous tension, and what's so peculiar or surprising about that?

But at 70 and near 69, health "at the top," where live and work the national leaders, is of legitimate public concern, and certainly a key campaign factor.

The Passing Of an Era

Stafford Johnston in The Stratford Beacon-Herald

One kind of news which has been creeping up in the newspapers frequently since the beginning of the year 1960, deals with the disposal of one-room rural school buildings, their furnishings, and sometimes the property on which they stand. It always seems a little sad, and to the people who received their education in a one-roomed rural school, there must be some overreaching of the emotions when the little schoolhouse is abandoned, torn down, or moved to become a chickenhouse or implement shed.

There is no doubt that something of value is being lost as the little, rural schools pass out of the picture. The one-room school, with a good teacher, gave children education of a quality that can not be matched by large central schools. The very fact that children of all ages from six to 16 were together in one classroom had its advantages, as well as its faults. When all the children of a neighborhood, from Grade 1 to Grade 8, spent their school hours in the same room, there was, or could be, a natural family atmosphere about the school. The normal human family does not consist of 30 children all the same age; triplets are rare enough to be remarkable, quadruplets are rarer still, and batches of 30 just don't happen at all. The one-room rural school provided a setting which was much closer to being natural. There were big children and little children; there were stages of development apparent to everyone. The big ones bullied the little ones sometimes, as happens in any home, but they also helped the little ones sometimes, and learned useful lessons by so doing.

Dog Sniffs Ore Deposit

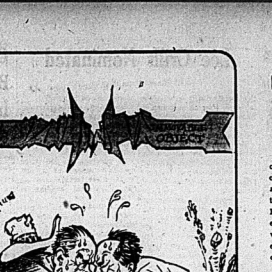
Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

—A German Shepherd dog with a demonstrated ability to sniff out ore deposits has now been rewarded for its efforts by the Finnish government with a $330 piece of land in Lapland.

The dog, known as Lari, was paid off in about $2,400 worth of sausages while the person who brought up the idea of training the animal received approximately $550—in cash.



In a competition between Lari and an ore prospector, the dog found the ore deposit in a rock of geological interest while the prospector found only 270 tons in the same area. The Finns are said to be impressed with Lari's nose for iron ore and are now in the process of training a second sniffing-ore dog.

This will no doubt please the dog-lovers, who have been hailing the beasts as many kind of unsung heroes. It first became evident that man has few friends of the four-legged variety.

Liquid Gold

It may come as a surprise to many people that, rather than oil or natural gas or asbestos or wheat or raw timber, plain water may turn out to be Canada's most sought-after and valuable resource. But there seems little doubt that, failing some other scientific breakthrough water may be liquid gold.

Neighbor's Tape Test Could Prove Big Favor

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Yesterday year. a neighbor gave me a certain type of tape to test my urine. It showed 1-10th per cent. Does this mean I have diabetes? I do not have the thirst and other symptoms of diabetes.

Is this the same urine test that doctors give patients, or is the tape just for patients who already have had blood tests for diabetes? — Mrs. L. S.

• • •

Your neighbor may have done you a favor.

While I'm certainly opposed to swapping medicine "over the back fence," and not always content when neighbors try to diagnose illnesses on the basis of an isolated symptom or two, such conversations can do some good when they transmit sound information.

Your tape reading, Mrs. L.S., is such that you should have some more testing. Maybe you do have and maybe you don't have diabetes. Symptoms of early diabetes don't have to be classic (thirst, frequent urination, weight loss, itching).

However, the test you took is quite accurate for sugar, and it could be significant. It is the same test as that used in many doctors' offices.

Anyway, this original test gives you a strong hint. Next, have your doctor do a blood sugar test, or (even more accurate) a sugar tolerance test.

This is more urgent if you are overweight, or have any family history of diabetes, or have had babies that were large at birth such as eight pounds or more, or have had miscarriages, stillborns or toxemia.

• • •

Naturally I hope you don't have diabetes. But an immense number of people have diabetes without knowing it.

The current thinking, based on recent statistics, is that there are more than the estimated million or so "undiscovered diabetics" in the U.S.

To have the least trouble with diabetes, find it early, because it almost always starts developing before you can notice any of the classic symptoms.

If your neighbor helped you catch your case early, give her your thanks.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why do my eyes water most of the time? The tear drop seem to be sugary. Could it be sinus? — Mrs. C. L.

Tears are supposed to be salty.

Your problem doesn't sound like sinus; it could easily be an allergy. It also could be a plugged tear duct, which is not too unusual, and is a condition that can readily be corrected. Consult an eye specialist.

Dear Dr. Molner: Our 16-year-old son is 6 feet, 1½ inches tall, and weighs 153 pounds. He has had a circulatory problem in his hands for more than a

Pray Tell Just What Is a Tuffet?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"What's a tuffet?" asked the little girl to whom I was reciting Mother Goose rhymes.

"Why, it's a kind of seat or stool," I answered — and then realized that I hadn't the vaguest idea of what a tuffet really is. Nor could the giant-sized dictionary help me; Little Miss Muffet has never managed to crash it.

Reflecting on the hundreds of times each of us has chanted the verse to children, I immediately thought of the many more words we all use regularly, without the faintest knowledge of their origin or meaning.

Why do we call a certain kind of doctor a "quack"? What does it mean when we're in fine "fettle"? What is the "cockle" of the heart that gets warmed so readily?

Why do we give the enemy no "quarter" Why is a "fogey" always old and never young? Likewise, a "codger"? I am ashamed to admit that even a professional writer like myself has the deplorable habit of using words that are merely accepted in general usage and have no real meaning for most of us.

This is the way Humpty Dumpty talked — which is why he had such a great fall. He tried to make himself the master of words, and "impenetrability" meant what he wanted it to, no matter how much difficulty he had that it really meant something else.

Take a much more important word than any of the ones I have cited. Take "peace," which everybody thinks he understands, and which everybody devoutly prays for.

Mr Great Books class recently spent two hours in trying to come to an agreement on what "peace" actually is. At the beginning of the class, all 15 members were confident that they knew what the word meant — at the end, nobody was quite sure.

Is peace merely the absence of armed conflict? If so, slavery would be peace. Is it the absence of "physical" conflict? Then what about psychological warfare, which subjugates a people without firing a shot?

Is it possible to have peace without justice? Without freedom? Without love? Without religion? Can nations which respect no common authority really have peace between them, or simply an uneasy truce? Is the jungle in a state of peace when animals are not fighting, or is it always in a state of potential warfare?

Sit on your tuffet and think about it for a while.

Fair Question

St. Catharines Standard

While welfare in today's complex society needs a powerful engine, it also needs a good deal of brakes. The fact is brought to mind by a Morgan Guaranty Survey report which shows the U.S. government is already spending over $47.1 billion a year on welfare. Says one of Canada's leading banks, now visible, that figure is only a way station on a continuing upward trend.

"It is fair to ask," the article states, "indeed, eventually it will be necessary to ask — whether there are limits beyond which the expansion can proceed only at the risk of seriously disrupting society's structure of incentives." The same question will be asked in Canada relative to pending welfare measures.

Says Ducks More Valuable Than Hay

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba is considering exempting farmers' marsh land from taxation as an incentive to maintain breeding grounds for ducks and geese, Resources Minister Sterling Lyon said Wednesday.

"We just can't buy all the wetlands in Manitoba (but) we have to make farmers realize that ducks are often more valuable than hay," he said in an address to the Manitoba Urban Association convention.

He warned that immediate steps were needed or the waterfowl population would drop sharply.

Leggie, Roblin Under Scrutiny In Campaign

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — While Liberal and Conservative leaders woo the Canadian voter, the federal election campaign provides a chance for the voter to measure two potential successors in unfamiliar roles.

Premier Lesage's 16 - day western tour is giving the Conservative Prairies an opportunity to see at close hand the man who might succeed Prime Minister Pearson as Liberal leader.

On the Conservative side, more national attention has been focused on Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba than at any time in the past. He too may go on tour in parts of the country where he is not well known than in the West.

Mr. Lesage's tour is billed as non-political and he apparently has carefully avoided commenting on political issues. But the fact remains the relations between Canada's two founding races — which is what Quebec has been a continuing and vital part of the political scene.

WAGE LAST FIGHT

At 69, Prime Minister Pearson is generally considered to be fighting his last election campaign. Mr. Lesage, 53, is just as widely considered a possible successor as Liberal leader.

If he successfully sells himself and his view of French Canada's place in the national mosaic to the westerners, some observers here figure he will be hard to beat in a national leadership fight.

The Liberals have maintained a tradition since Laurier of alternating between English- and French-speaking leaders.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, have never had a French - speaking national leader, although some have had some knowledge of the French language.

But probably no Conservative national leader can match Duff Roblin's bilingualism. He is said to be as much at home in French as English.

Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker, now 70, says he thinks Mr. Roblin with two languages at his command will campaign for the federal party in Quebec.

This is the area where the Conservatives would most like to renew the kind of political partnership that existed between Macdonald and Cartier.

Any response to the Roblin charms also might help him at the leadership convention to pick a successor to Mr. Diefenbaker, whose selection as party leader in 1956 was not widely backed by Quebec Conservatives.

Waitress Says She Never Saw Mrs. E. Bradt

TORONTO (CP)—Ellen Robertson, a waitress at the Club Harmonie in downtown Toronto, testified at a judicial inquiry into city slum conditions Wednesday that she had never seen Elizabeth Bradt.

Mrs. Bradt told the inquiry earlier that a red-haired waitress at the club earlier this year had identified Alexander Solie, emergency housing officer for the welfare department, as the man sitting with her landlord at a nearby table.

Mrs. Robertson said she was the only red-headed waitress working for the club at the time of the alleged incident and that she was not in the club at the time it was supposed to have occurred.

Mrs. Bradt, after being recalled to the stand, said Mrs. Robertson was not the waitress she meant and that the one she meant is no longer working at the club. She said she does not know where the waitress is.

David Alexander, judicial estate commissioner, told the inquiry he would rather not say whether he feels Harold Bushby, one of his employees, had a conflict of interest when he worked for a real estate company in his off-hours.

TOLD TO RESIGN

Mr. Bushby told the inquiry that Alex Cowley, a real estate company owner, told him that when his duties conflicted with his duties with the city, he expected him to resign.

He left the company last spring when he felt such a conflict was in the offing, Mr. Bushby testified.

He said his job with the real estate department had been as an evaluator and negotiator, but that he had never inspected any of Mr. Cowley's property after going to work for the company.

His duties with the Cowley company included checking on tenants whose rents were in arrears and handling emergencies such as broken water pipes.

The inquiry is continuing.

Canada Must Win War On Poverty

- - Sharp

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Mitchell Sharp, trade and commerce minister, said Wednesday night Canada must win the war on poverty because the consequences of failure, in human terms, would be too grave to the nation.

He said in an address to the annual meeting of the St. Catharines Canadian Club that the fight may take a long time but a start must be made.

The resources are there and they must be mobilized, he said.

"Though some people may be inclined to scoff at the slogan 'war on poverty,' it is more than an attractive phrase invented by politicians," Mr. Sharp said. "If suggested quickly, that poverty is not going to be eliminated simply by producing more.

"There must be an organized attack on the basic causes of poverty in our society."

He said if the seven-year expansion program of the Economic Council of Canada can be attained and maintained beyond 1971 "we can look forward to the removal of poverty in our land and to the time when there is, in fact, equal opportunity for our young people."

Four Children Drown in Lake Near Gogama

GOGAMA, Ont. (CP) — Four children drowned Tuesday when a canoe in which they were riding upset on Grassy Lake, 30 miles northeast of here, provincial police reported today.

The children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Beaulme of Gogama, 100 miles northeast of Sudbury, and a sister, Linda, eight months, survived the accident.

Drowned were Dennis, 7, Dianne, 6, Lowy, 3, and Loretta, 2.

Police said the Beaulme family had been in a 14-foot canoe accident occurred.

The parents were able to save only Linda before the other four disappeared. Their bodies were recovered by police four hours later.

Mr. Beaulme, who mans a department of lands and forests fire tower at Gogama, returned to the tower and called police.

RED CROSS HOMEMAKER SERVICE

MRS. J. BUCHANAN, Supervisor — MRS. A. H. KETCHESON, Chairman

What Women Are Doing

The Red Cross Homemaker Service is one of the larger departments in the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

Since its inception in 1948 with only two homemakers until the present time with 18 homemakers, Mrs. J. Buchanan has been supervisor with Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson as chairman of the service. Mrs. Ketcheson is also Ontario representative of the Belleville Branch which works with all other health and welfare agencies and the Provincial Government.

During 1964 the Homemakers worked 2484½ days, visited 273 homes during which time they cared for 580 children and 117 senior citizens.

This particular phase of Red Cross work is well and favorably known to many families in this area and has meant a great deal to them when such services are required.

The homemaker takes the mother's place when the mother is ill or for any other reason that prevents her for caring for her family. This service is rendered to all in need regardless of race, creed, color or income. According to the Nursing Service Act 148 sponsored by the Ontario Government, homes on welfare get help from the government in payment of service.

The Homemaker Service is a short term service and the general policy limits the time spent to two weeks unless there are unusual circumstances. This is a daytime service since the Homemaker takes over while the father is at work. The homemaker is not a practical nurse but does give simple bedside care under the direction of a doctor or nurse. She cares for the children, plans and prepares meals, does some light laundry and keeps the home in order.

The supervisor makes home contacts before sending a homemaker. She explains the nature of the service and the duties that will be performed, as well as discussing the arrangements for payment of fees.

Each homemaker is a mature woman selected for personality, dependability and their ability to accept duties under various conditions. They also must have a healthy outlook on life and have good judgment.

This service fills an important need in the community. It enables people who are ill to receive care at home and relieves their anxieties about the care of the household while they are ill.

The Homemaker Service is not a profit-making venture but rather a vital needed service in any community.

PERFECT TOPPING FOR ICE CREAM

Last month a reader, Doris R., sent to me a recipe for a purple plum sauce to be used over ice cream. It was so intrigued with it that I bought purple plums, made them up into the sauce and served it over lovely vanilla ice cream to our crowd and it was a hit. Even the reducers had "seconds."

When syrup has reached 240 deg. Fahr. remove from heat and stir soaked gelatine in until dissolved. Stir in food coloring (and fruit and nuts if used.) Oil a 9 x 5" pan (standard loaf pan) and pour in the syrup. Let cool and set at room temperature—not in refrigerator—12 to 24 hours, but when it cools but is not yet set, if fruits and nuts are added, stir in to prevent floating nuts. Loosen sides and bottom with spatula and pull jelly out of pan and transfer to sugar-sprinkled board. Cut into 1" squares and roll each in sugar, repeating sugar-rolling after 1 hour.

While purple plums are still available I want you girls to try it—a perfect topping for ice cream or for layering between scoops of ice cream for parfaits—an easy, highly professional guest dessert.

Staying with the fruit idea I have made a confection coyly called Fruitless Delight, because it is quite like Turkish Delight.

PURPLE PLUM SAUCE
(Courtesy Doris R.)

One pound purple plums (3 cups when prepared), 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ cup granulated sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Wash plums. Quarter them, removing pits—do not peel. Measure 3 cups. In a medium saucepan combine cornstarch, sugar, salt and spices. Then add plums and lemon juice. Cook stirring until plenty of syrup forms, then cover and simmer until tender and soft, stirring frequently. My sauce required 40 minutes. Cool. Store in refrigerator in covered jar. Serve cold over ice cream.

FRUITFISH DELIGHT

1 ¼ cups sugar, 1 ¼ cups pineapple-grapefruit drink (two 20-oz. cans), 3 envelopes (3 tablespoons) plain gelatin, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon red food coloring (no more), ½ cup finely sliced almonds or Brazils (optional), ½ cup light Sultana raisins (optional).

Measure sugar into medium saucepan. Stir in 1 cup of the fruit juice, the salt and lemon juice. Boil steadily at 240 deg. Fahr.—about 20 minutes. Soak the gelatine in the remaining ¾ cup fruit juice.

Tyendinaga Couple Wed 50 Years

Marriage vows exchanged half a century ago were recalled yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Dorland Ross of R.R. 1 Corbyville as they quietly celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

A family dinner was held Sunday at the couple's farm home on the 4th concession of Tyendinaga while yesterday, on the actual date of the anniversary, the couple had "dinner out" with friends in the city.

Mr. Ross is a native of the Corbyville district, having been born on the family homestead deeded by the Crown to his great grandfather, Marvel Ross, back in the 1750's. Mrs. Ross is the former Blanche Conley, who was born at Downey's Rapids near Madoc, but has lived in the Corbyville area since she was a young girl.

The couple live alone in their 12-roomed frame farm house which has been remodelled since it was built by Mr. Ross' grandfather.

Most of the rooms are used only occasionally, when their daughter and grandchildren visit, but that doesn't keep down the housekeeping chores. "When it needs cleaning, it gets cleaned," Mrs. Ross says.

As for Mr. Ross he has eased up a bit in recent years on farm activities but still keeps cattle, while Mrs. Ross also keeps a few hens.

"They say there isn't any money in hens any more, but we keep them anyway," Mrs. Ross says.

They have one daughter, Mrs. Herbert (Hilda) Patterson of Binbrook, near Hamilton. Their only son died 22 years ago.

Successful Living

Believes Faith Comes Little Bits at a Time

DEAR DORIS: The letter in your column signed "Badly Mixed Up" prompted me to write. I think I understand how this young person feels. I am a Christian and believe life to be a wonderful experience, although I have doubts at times. Sometimes in despair I too wonder whether I'm normal, but on good days I just don't worry about it and enjoy life anyway!

I liked your advice to him. No one can make him believe in God, not even ourselves. Awareness of God, I believe, is a daily growing experience, nurtured by our contacts with other people, reading the Bible, learning of Jesus and just living.

DORIS CLARK

As a teen, I, too, often feel misunderstood by my parents. However, I can see that parents want to guide and protect us and will feel hurt if we don't live up to their expectations. I hope this person won't try to rush anything. He won't find faith right away; it will come in little bits at a time.

I admire his honesty; it would be wrong to go through the forms of worship if he didn't believe. When he does find God, as I'm sure he will, his religion will have real meaning for him. — STRAIGHTENED OUT.

* * *

DEAR STRAIGHTENED OUT: Good for you! I've passed on your letter to B.M.U. (who, by the way, is a girl), and want to say thanks right now to all those who went to the trouble of writing in to me.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have been married 15 years and wouldn't have any suspicions about my husband or his motives, but now I know he is having an affair with someone. I cannot take this type of life and have tried to talk things out, but I just don't get to him.

I don't want our marriage to end, but I feel I've tried in every way to help our marriage, only to find he is still carrying on. Should I tell him what I know? — P.Z.

* * *

DEAR P.Z.: So much depends on the why of it all that I can scarcely suggest your next move.

This may be a flirtation — something started on the spur of the moment, because of excitement, or loneliness, or one drink too many. Or it may be something more serious.

Since the affair has lasted a while, your man may be seeking something he has found lacking in his marriage. Not that infidelity is to be condoned — on the contrary! But perhaps it is time to ask yourself some searching questions before you reveal your knowledge and call the whole thing off.

Marriages are being saved every day through skilled counselling. In Belleville the place to go is the Children's Aid Society, 63 Moira Street, which counsels on marital problems as well as when children are involved.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Could you possibly tell me how to get a letter to appear in a local paper in an advice column (not yours)? I've tried and tried but have had no luck. — NOT LUCKY.

DEAR NOT LUCKY: Considering the fact that the work of a columnist may be appearing in a great many papers beside your local one, it just isn't easy to include everything.

I'd suggest that you give up the idea of using such a column to get a message across to your friends. Try the direct approach.

(Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.)

Earth-bound Wives Of 17 Astronauts Enjoy 'Out-of-world' Fashions

CHICAGO (AP)—The earth-bound wives of 17 astronauts teamed up for a feminine-type blast of their own—an "out of this world" fashion show.

The women came from Houston Wednesday to attend the Presbyterian-St. Luke's fashion show—Chicago's most glamorous—and it left them as much in the clouds as their husbands ever were.

The group, which included Mrs. John W. Yodfig, Mrs. James A. McDivitt, Mrs. Walter M. Schirra, Mrs. Alan B. Shepard and Mrs. Virgil I. Grissom, stole the show from such competition as a bandpainted snakeskin-trimmed blue fox fur.

"The clothes were out of this world," said Mrs. Young. "Then perhaps, overlooking the snake, fox creation, she added, "but too too far out."

JOIN 4,000 WOMEN

A doorman in a space suit greeted the group and led them down an astral blue carpet into the squink-ceilinged Medinah Temple where they joined 4,000 other women to watch 115 models parade a collection of clothes, furs and jewels.

The models glided through such settings as the Planet Ultima, a space - age city suspended in a midnight-blue cosmos; Lunar Bay, a glittering sandy beach shop in the heavens; and the Meridian Ballroom overhung with nine silvery moons.

Fashions ranged from a gold lame gown and jacket embroidered in crystal pendants to a $30 slacks-and-blouse outfit.

Introduced to the audience, the astronauts' wives drew a bigger hand from the crowd than any of the latest clothes.

Susanna's Family Fare

Dear Susanna: Cake sticking to the pan when you want to turn it out all in one lovely smooth piece? Do what I do. Place the hot tin on a damp tea towel and loosen the edges of the cake with a knife. Allow it to cool and then when you are ready to remove it from the pan it will slip right out, fast, all in one.

Over the years I have given this little hint to many brides. — Mrs. C. M. Taylor

DE-VINE IS FINE

Dear Susanna: May I suggest that people who grow sweet potatoe plants bury them half way in dirt? After the leaves gs mine kept falling off while it was growing in water, I got this idea. It made all the difference. I also understand Irish potatoes make a lovely plant — anyone know about them?

While vacationing at the coast I picked up some odd pieces of driftwood, I brushed and disinfected one of them and drilled enough holes in it so that I could insert a few artificial drug store flowers and leaves. It will certainly brighten the house during the coming winter months and nearly everyone who thinks I spent a very pretty penny for this lovely ornament. — Mrs. E. King.

Sculpture Exhibit Organized

OTTAWA (CP)—A committee of Ottawa women has organized the first showing of privately-owned sculpture to be held at the National Gallery of Canada.

The show, entitled Ottawa Collects Sculpture, opens today and continues until Oct. 10.

Under the direction of convener Mrs. Jules Loeb, the women have gathered together 47 pieces of sculpture from private collectors in Ottawa.

Many of the pieces are highly valuable, although the gallery traditionally keeps silent about the value of its exhibits. In one glass case are bronze pieces by Aristide Maillol, Ernst Barlach, Rodin, and Gauguin.

Enjoy, enjoy. Then look at the label

Wine snobs have woven a mystique about wine. It's a credo of generalities—most of them misleading. Among them is the "good" a wine must be imported.

It's deliciously simple to shake these people to the bottom of their preconceived notions. Let them taste any one of these fine Canadian wines, before you let them see the label. If somehow they happen to believe it's an "imported" wine, all to the good. Let them enjoy it first. Then show them the label. The stuttering and muttering will be something to hear.

President Champagne Canada's prize champagne. For any dinner, all gala occasions, especially weddings and anniversaries.
President Sauterne A light white wine for the table. With fish, fowl, white meats, salads.
President Sherry Ideal before dinner, with hors d'oeuvres, soup course.
President Extra Dry A dry delicate wine that inspires encomiums from all who try it. With fish, white meat, salads.

'How's Your Wife?' 'Better Than Nothing'

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to thank "Od Timer" for one of the best laughs I've had in weeks. Anyone who would fill out a form for a driver's license and write beside the word "sex" — "occasionally" must have a terrific sense of humor.

When I was in the hospital having my last baby I had to fill out an insurance form. There was a question something like this: "Is this confinement the result of an accident?" I answered "Yes." This reply provided many people in the office with the best laugh of the day.

I come from a family of kidders and I realize how fortunate I was to grow up in a climate of good humor. Life can be pretty grim and a laugh can be a wonderful release for tension.

I've tried to raise my children to appreciate the value of humor. It hasn't been difficult because my husband is a very funny guy. If you ever run into him ask "How's your wife?" He'll reply "Well, she's better than nothing."

Although your column is filled with good advice I feel that the humor in it is as important as the guidance you give. Keep it up, Ann. — SMILE AWHILE.

DEAR SMILE: Thanks for your letter. Now shall we bow our heads in commemoration of all those dear dead jokes that killed vaudeville?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How much do parents owe their married children? We raised three girls and two boys. It wasn't easy. My husband always made a modest salary and I worked part time in a canning factory.

Our oldest daughter lost her husband in a mining accident two years ago and came home with her two babies. I take care of her children. Lord knows the poor girl didn't bring this tragedy on herself, but I'm not as young as I used to be and it's hard on me.

Now the real problem: Our younger daughter caught her husband running around and she wants to divorce him and come home with her three children. We were shocked because our son-in-law is such a fine person. After talking with him we learned our daughter has been running around, too.

What should we do? — WORN OUT MOM AND DAD.

DEAR MOM AND DAD: Parents don't owe children room and board and maid service when their marriages go sour.

Too often parents inadvertently help break up marriages by letting children know they can always come home if there is trouble. Tell your daughter to get the counsel of a clergyman and straighten her life out.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a girl, 17, who babysits because it is the only way I can go to school and earn extra money.

It is now 1:30 a.m. and I have been baby sitting for 15 hours.

The woman who hired me called and pleaded with me to come right over. (This was yesterday morning at 10:30 a.m.) She said her regular sitter couldn't come at the last minute and she would be very grateful if I would sit with her four children for a few hours."

My mother is hurted up and I don't blame her. I keep telephoning her every few hours so she won't worry.

When the woman left she didn't say anything about fixing supper for the children so I went ahead on my own. I wouldn't be surprised if I had to fix breakfast tomorrow morning, too.

What kind of a mother leaves her children for 15 hours and doesn't even let the sitter know she can be reached in case of an emergency? Any advice? — B.B.

DEAR B.B.: A sitter who has this sort of experience twice with the same woman deserves it. You should refuse to work for a mother who is so irresponsible. What would you do if she went away for a week?

A large number of friends, relatives and neighbors was welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watson on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary held at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. Couture, Lingham St.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with many colorful floral arrangements with the tea table centred with an appropriately decorated anniversary cake. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. Hinzel and Mrs. R. Berube of Capreol, both nieces of the couple, assisted by a granddaughter, Miss M. Couture.

Guests present at the event which was held a week earlier than the actual date due to a daughter's return to her home in Jersey, Channel Islands, were from Niagara Falls, New York, Capreol, Kingston, Nepanee, Whitby, Peterborough, Trenton and Carrying Place.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson were married by Canon Armstrong of St. George's Church in Trenton after later moved to Toronto.

Mr. Watson was an employee of the Grid for 41 years and retired in 1959. They have resided in Belleville since 1931. Both are members of College Hill United Church.

There are four daughters, Mrs. G. (Isabelle) Couture, of Belleville; Mrs. N. (Evelyn) Bayne of Jersey, Channel Islands; Mrs. D. (Ida) Fox of Hamilton and Mrs. A. (Jeanne) Carlson of Capreol who presented their parents with a purse of money to mark the happy occasion.

Teacher's Social Life Has Direct Influence On Pupil Says Expert

EDMONTON (CP)—A teacher's social life may have a direct influence on how well Johnny does at school, says a University of Alberta researcher, who suggests that better schools result when teachers have fun together socially.

"Schools that produce high examination results tend to be characterized by strong social relationships among the teachers," said Dr. J. H. M. Andrews, in the Alberta Teachers' Association's Council of School Administration Bulletin.

"If this is the case it becomes important for principals to encourage strong friendships among staff members."

His finding, based on a study of 165 Alberta schools, is that the relationship of teachers to each other has about the strongest influence on pupil achievement of all the factors that affect a teacher's performance.

Principals who try to push their teachers, either by industrious example or "straw boss ing," are not effective in increasing pupil learning, Dr. Andrews said.

"While further research is necessary, the indication may be that teachers are motivated more through direct intimate association with their colleagues than through direct interaction with the principal."

Dr. Andrews found teachers in elementary schools have the least to do with each other socially.

He says they are typically women who centre their social lives outside the school rather than with their fellow teachers.

White Persons Don't Mingle Says Doctor

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Elizabeth Cass lamented Wednesday that white persons moving to northern Canada to live or work don't mingle with the Indians and Eskimos as was the situation 10 years ago.

Dr. Cass, a major in the British Army during the Second World War, is the only eye doctor for the Mackenzie River District of the Northwest Territories. She has served the area since 1958.

Interviewed on a visit here, she said white persons going to the North are sent there by construction companies or the army.

She said the fact that Indians or Eskimos are in the territories has no bearing on their jobs. They have nothing to do with them, and few ever invite an Indian or Eskimo to their homes, she said.

Ten years ago, the only white persons who went north were game wardens, clergymen, doctors and traders.

"They were there because the Indians were there and they became involved with them," she said.

Today, she said, the whites build houses in an area away from the native population. She said the new town of Inuvik has government buildings, and a hospital. But the Indians stay in Aklavik, the town Inuvik was supposed to replace.

Talk on India and Pakistan Given by Bishop of Calcutta At Anglican Diocese Dinner

By RETA LAWRENCE

The Anglican Diocese of Ontario is host this week to a very distinguished guest, The Bishop of Calcutta and Metropolitan of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon, Reverend Hirabindu Lakdas Jacob de Mel, of Calcutta, India.

On Wednesday evening, in St. Thomas' Parish Hall, Mr. McKenna and the ladies of St. Paul's Guild catered to almost 200 members of the clergy, their wives, and officials and laymen of the western part of the Diocese.

The Venerable A. S. McConnell, Rector of St. Thomas acted as master of ceremonies for the evening. Rural Dean Canon Wright asked the blessing. Pianist for the evening was Reverend M. P. Walsh, assistant curate of St. Thomas' Church.

Bishop K. C. Evans D. D. thanked the Archdeacon and wardens of St. Thomas for making arrangements for the dinner, and noted that several of the clergy could not attend because of their commitments in Montreal. He expressed, however, great reassurance in the loyalty and interest of the Diocese. Bishop Evans introduced the guest speaker,

GRADUATE OF OXFORD

Archbishop de Mel, a graduate of Oxford University, is a charmingly fluent speaker with a world travelled and loved and honored in the entire Anglican Communion. "He," said Bishop Evans, "is a shining Anglican light throughout the world. He is a prime leader in great movements for closer attachments in church work." After his tour of Ontario he is expected to return on for a holiday in Washington and thence home to Calcutta. This is his third visit to Canada.

Archbishop de Mel, quite naturally, spoke of India and Pakistan and of their past and present difficulties.

"India," he said, "is only 20 per cent literate and the population increases at the rate of nine million each year. The Christian population comprises only two per cent, including all denominations. Fifty per cent of the people do not have enough to eat and there are many infirmities such as blindness caused by lack of proper food and vitamins.

The generosity of Canada in material things is of great benefit in alleviating the suffering but also, and even more important, our prayers, not for the safety of the people but for their continued faith, is the greatest help. Also, the offering of life in the persons of teachers, nurses and priests is the most important contribution Canada can make.

TALK ON INDIA

The war over Kashmir, which was divided between India and Moslems, was likened by the Archbishop to Ontario and Quebec fighting over the ownership of Newfoundland.

DESCRIBES KASHMIR

Kashmir is a country bearing the gift of great beauty. The Kashmiris are lovely, handsome, delightful and artistic people. The third of the state country was given to Pakistan and the remaining two-thirds to India. The separation has divided families, languages and religions. War was practically inevitable, but since there are few materials with which to fight, it would seem that the struggle would be short-lived. Since this has not been the case, due to Red China's efforts, people must be deeply concerned about the efforts of the United Nations. Having brought the matter to the conference table, the result is that the people are more steady.

"Generosity pays higher than hate. Agree with thine adversary quickly. When challenge comes you are shown to be what you are."

China does not want India to succeed in the Herculean effort to feed her people and take her place in politics as a democracy.

BRITAIN'S REQUEATH

The best thing that Britain bequeathed to India is the democratic way of life, and, despite lack of literacy, the people do have a political sagacity. At the last general election 156 million people voted, out of the 200 million eligible to vote. This is a bloodless way to change governments, and it is the true mark of a civilized nation.

There are 15 major languages in India, as well as eight hundred and forty-three other languages and dialects. Most people speak three to eight of these. The Bible Society reprints and adds at least one language a year, so that now the Bible is printed in some thirteen hundred languages.

In spite of all the difficulties, India still keeps trying to industrialize and catch up with the race of life.

MUST RAISE STANDARDS

Through control of the population growth, step-up in manufacture and foreign exchange, improved methods of agriculture, the living standards of the people must be raised. For these reasons and others the parochial system of the church has become outmoded. The gospel must be taken into industry and all other facets of everyday life.

CHURCH UNITY

"This is a task which no one church can accomplish alone, so joint action is the only solution. Church unity must come, even though it be bound to raise the blood pressure of many people who vow to live and to die in their own particular religion." Even before unity we must behave as unitedly as we can in everything except the intimacy of Communion. Team ministry is necessary. In this manner we become more mutual, responsible and interdependent. All God's work is one, and no one can do without the other. We are all members of the same firm, doing the same job. Christians must lend a touch of splendor to the communities.

Archdeacon McConnell remarked, at the conclusion of Archbishop de Mel's remarks, he felt that everyone must be impressed with the faith, inspiration and wonder of their illustrious guest.

The speaker was thanked by Mr. A. J. C. Ward of St. George's Parish, Trenton.

DEALERS PUSH NEW MODE

Harper, principal of Tiffin School, one of England's top grammar schools. Like most schoolboy, Brig. Harper's pet gripes wear blue blazers and gray flannel trousers.

Peace Reigned in Kashmir During Recent Visit by Party Of Ornithologists From Canada

This is the second of two articles on Kashmir by Lavonia Stockelbach. A frequent visitor to Belleville, Mrs. Stockelbach has travelled widely and contributed many articles to The Intelligencer on her visits overseas. Recently she made a world tour by plane, in the course of which she visited Kashmir with a party of Canadian ornithologists.

By LAVONIA STOCKELBACH

On a Sunday morning in July our Canadian bird-watching cavalcade set out comfortably from the capital Srinagar to drive about seventy miles through the famous Lidder River Pass. Some name is a vexation. Some maps say Lidar and that it flows into the Vetasta so I was never sure exactly where I was though always the snowy Himalayas reassured me.

Here in Srinagar it is said there are no two houses the same. I believe it after having climbed a few high - stepped stairs of the most amazing helterskelter construction, requiring two pairs of helping hands to assist around the dark corners. You are bewildered and dizzy before you have looked over the wonderful wares for sale, but you soon recover and spend your money happily and quickly, though in these pagan lands it does not seem to matter if your parcels and letters pile up to the attic awaiting the convenience of postal employees. It is vexatious, but being of an optimistic nature one continues to expect those parcels.

RESIDENT'S DUTIES

Again we passed the former "Residency" and had time to ponder a little on the duties of the Residents, but certainly not in the distracting comfort where gorgeous tiling reached from floor to lofty ceiling. Whence had the art and skills descended? Shall we of the present era ever catch up with the work of 3,000 years ago? The workmanship may have earned five cents a day, though it is doubtful if they got that much. But one was glad so the pay-pleasure of the finished beauty.

Usually the Resident lived near the native court and watched every movement from his palatial home. His business was to observe and report to his government. He had the opportunity of giving needful advice tactfully, perhaps even to ease the hatreds amongst the many religions. I had just read in a newspapge of the Province the statement, "The secret of war, for a feminine and innocent beauty; no wonder it has become a sacred goddess." A man of another religion enjoys beefsteaks and looks at the scrawny "sacred goddess" with great distaste as he sees them meandering around the streets and often on the deathbed to starvation.

A Resident had to be diplomatic, he also had to be truthful and observant.

What have been the later historical stages in India? First there was the rule of the East India Co. for two and a half centuries, then that of Great Britain but most of the real work was done by the civil administration of the local governments in India itself. Then she declared for freedom; what that means is too complex for me to understand, though to be freed from British slavery sounds big. Our history master at school taught us something of Dufferin and Lansdowne's work in India, but they did not strike Canadian children as very bloodthirsty men.

The home government also made provision for the upkeep of the church, which seems a sheer in a country with its religious sects and as many dialects.

Some native states never did pass under British control. One hears sometimes of the bravery and loyalty of the soldiers of this Kashmir, helping to fight for the suppression of the mutiny for example.

Conquests of countries, if long enough ago, make interesting reading but not so much so if at the moment you are in the process of being acquired. The triangle of India is basgd on the North by the Himalayas, with its southern extremity almost 1,000 miles away.

BIRDS AND SCENERY

Today, we were to drive through the Lidder Pass with never a thought of conquerors and conquered, and blissfully content because we were ignorant of the battles and bombings that soon to disturb this part of the world. We were to see birds and scenery. To my shame it must be confessed that I brought back with me only two recollections, one of a species that you have often heard of and read about, the common sparrow. Never have I seen them so beautiful, as they were some five to seven thous a n d feet or more up in those Himalayas. It was startling. I could not believe my eyes and decided it must be some lovely finch posing as a sparrow. Presently, one settled on the verandah railing, I settled on a bench and we gazed at each other. It may be you have seen a sparrow but have you ever looked at one? The common house sparrow The India bird books tell you he is there called a gauriya and he is the size of a bulbul. It doesn't matter he is still a sparrow, loving humanity, but a love that is not always reciprocated.

The Kashmir bird is a bit larger than ours, the shades of brown on his back more lively, but it was chiefly the vivid white of his cheeks and lower parts that enchanted me. The whitest of Chinese white on your palette would seem dull. After quite a long stay, he got tired looking at me and flew away.

The other experience was that here in Asia I saw my first dipper or water ouzel. What an interesting Anglo-Saxon name "ouzel"! The more common name "dipper" is well chosen and there are thousands of them in Canada and in other parts of the world; I had never caught up with one but here at Pahalzam, the end of wheeled traffic, surrounded by magnificent scenery I first saw the ouzel. Somehow or other my faithful Abdul had found me, then he found the least uncomfortable boulder for me to sit on and watch the antics of the dipper family, in the terrifically busy little torrent of the stream a few yards away. Meanwhile a member of the group had set up his tripod to make movie pictures for his winter captive audiences but he could not photograph the fragrance of the air, nor take in all the bulbuls, jackdaws, wagtails, the jungle crows (our common crow), the finches, the kites, buntings, and a few mynas.

It is pleasant to spend your time loitering when you are a watch others working and how those dippers worked for their dinner, worked and sang those few notes of its repertory. It was almost as pleasant to feel that the hundreds of gods and goddesses that inhabit these parts — mostly to me a disagreeable lot — were out of my way having their siests.

The bird-watching group had, doubtless, a commendable number added to their list of birds but I had come from Canada to Kashmir and found the exciting ouzel.

On the way back our five did not talk much; we had run out of adjectives and epithets for none of us could reach up to those many miles of Himalayan peaks, where also rise the tiny rivulets that become mighty rivers to water so much of India. From hour to hour, the snow outlines seem to change, and the melting glaciers feed their waters to the thirsty India. Every once in a while the creek is so happy to be free from its frozen origin that it overflows and you get caught in its rush.

CAR BREAKS DOWN

The road boundaries were marked by concrete blocks about two feet high with a top measuring a square foot and placed about two yards apart. You never saw such gay, clear, happy water. About two-thirds of the way through we were stopped and not understanding anything about motor mechanics we could do nothing. Neither could our driver. The rushing water may have been happy, but we were not. What added to our anxiety was the wailing of a little girl (we were giving way to a number of people walking through the water all crowded as they had their belongings on their heads, or backs). The frightened child had tethered to her a still more frightened little dog. Each space between the concrete posts had to be navigated, each foot high post had to be climbed, but at such an expenditure of energy, there was none left for him to shake off the water, and there he waited with the cold water sluicing down his back and down his tail. A dog, even a little dog, must be in a horrible state of hopeless depression, utterly discouraged, when he couldn't even shake himself, and must listen to the increasing wailing of his frightened little mistress whom parents and friends tried hard to encourage.

They could, with much struggling, walk against the freshet, but we were stuck. We could not get out of the car for the water would take it as an invitation to enter, but by some motor magic that many men a master, our car was made to move, the driver poured out the water from his boots, and we were again on our way to Srinagar, to the boats that would paddle us to our housebouts.

'Refreshaire' supplements Studebaker's reliable Climatizer, thus providing the next best thing to air conditioning . . . and at no extra cost.

For a breath of fresh air up front, see Studebaker's functional new 5-piece grille, which permits a greater air flow for much improved engine cooling.

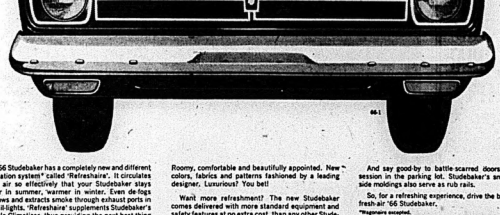
Want more refreshment? The new Studebaker comes delivered with more standard equipment and safety features at no extra cost, than any other Studebaker in its over 100 year history. Examples: rugged armor-guard trims, aluminized rustproofing, 19-gauge body steel, big 15-inch wheels, full-width padded dash, padded sun visors, dual system safety brakes, two-speed electric windshield wipers and windshield washers.



And say good-by to battle-scarred doors after a session in the parking lot. Studebaker's smart new side moldings also serve as rub rails.

Pope's Canadian Representative Now Msgr. Sergio Pignedoli

By BENOIT HOULE

OTTAWA (CP) — While Giovanni Cardinal Montini, now Pope Paul, was Roman Catholic archbishop of Milan, he included among his closest assistants Msgr. Sergio Pignedoli, now the apostolic delegate to Canada.

Msgr. Pignedoli, who has been the Pope's official representative among Canadian Catholics since July, 1964, was 13 years in the service of the former archbishop of Italy's chief northern city.

Like the Pope, he has a reputation for simplicity, cordiality and friendliness.

In the post here he succeeds Msgr. Sebastiano Baggio, who had been apostolic delegate to Canada for five years. Msgr. Baggio has since gone to Brazil, where he is the apostolic nuncio.

The new delegate to Canada lost little time in adjusting to the job, making a point of visiting dioceses from coast to coast.

He went to Rome for the Vatican Council, too, but back in Canada found the time and energy to visit such shrines as St. Joseph's in Montreal and such northern centres and regions as Prince Rupert, B.C., Hudson Bay, Keewatin, Ont., and Labrador.

SERVES AS LINK

Msgr. Pignedoli shares a view expressed by the late Pope Pius XI, that mission areas in Canada are extremely difficult because of their isolation.

SEES HOPE FOR RELIGIOUS UNITY — Msr. Sergio Pignedoli, the Apostolic Delegate to Canada, sees a hopeful atmosphere for religious unity in the free exchanges between religious groups in Canada. Msr. Pignedoli was a close assistant to Pope Paul when the Pope was Archbishop of Milan and like the Pope he has a reputation for simplicity, cordiality and friendliness. (CP Photo)

The delegate lacks the diplomatic status that would be enjoyed by a papal nuncio. Usually the Pope names nuncios only to those countries with ambassadors at the Vatican, which is a sovereign state.

"Our mission is to represent the Holy See among the bishops and Catholics as a whole," said Msgr. Pignedoli.

He said he must also "inform the Pope of the church's progress and act as a bond of unity between Catholics and the Pope."

"We make sure that the Pope's presence is felt everywhere. We are the bonds of charity, frindship and brotherhood."

Msgr. Pignedoli displays a keen interest in the idea of developing in the Manor Avenue building housing the apostolic delegation a collection of books and documents on the history of the church in Canada.

Besides the books, he would like to see collections of church laws, diocesan publications, letters from the various bishops of the past and other documents, all serving to recount the story of the church since it was founded in Canada with the early French settlers.

NEED NEW APPROACH

Msgr. Pignedoli also has been a delegate in Venezuela, Bolivia and several countries of west Africa.

He says he'd rather wait until the end of the current ecumenical council before expressing any views about church reform.

"We must change our methods but not our principles. The church must stay young, it must adjust the means of expressing the truth even if the message itself remains the same."

What did the apostolic delegate think about this country in which he arrived last year?

"Canada is very wide-open, very modern, really democratic, and exchanges run freely here among Catholics, Protestants and Anglicans.

"On this natural foundation, it will be easy to talk about ecumenicalism (religious unity) and to realize it."

The monsignor referred to the Company of Young Canadians, formed by the federal government to allow fuller participation by the country's young people in social and economic programs at home and abroad.

He expressed the hope that the company "will make Canadian youth more generous, still more moved by a desire togolaborate with others, more avid in their pursuit of the Christian ideal as well as the spirit of the pioneer, human service and the aversion from materialism."

"You know, if you ask something extraordinary from young people, you will get something extraordinary. If you ask mediocrity, that's exactly what you'll get."

Too often, Msgr. Pignedoli said, materialistic values are the only ones that play a role in human lives.

"We must see kthe spiritual and human values as well."

Canada Will Show Britain How to Get Better Housing By Building 176 Homes

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) —The Canadian government has decided to finance construction of some 176 Canadian - designed new homes in Britain to show Britons they can get better housing faster and at a reasonable price by using Canadian timber frames. The cost of this project may be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

If the project proves successful, it likely will open a vastly extended market for Canadian timber. Though Britain is short of homes, builders still favor masonry construction which takes about four times longer than framed dwellings to erect and which are more difficult than framed housing to heat.

The Canadian administration has already built six experimental houses in three different communities in Britain to show the advantages of timber frames. How the big construction project is to be undertaken to show large-scale comparative costs between timber and masonry and the differences in construction time.

The new homes, under the design supervision of the publicly owned Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. of Canada, are to be located on a 14-acre site at Harlow New Town in Essex County about 25 miles north of London, officials disclosed Tuesday. An official statement is to be made later.

With Canadian engineers and architects keeping a watchful eye, construction of the terraced, brick-faced, two-storey homes is to start next June and be completed possibly by early 1968. Average cost for each house, not including land, may be about $10,000.

The Canadian administration will put up the entire costs, hiring a British building firm to erect the homes under Canadian supervision. Eventually, the community council will buy the completed homes from Canada so that the only residue costs to Canada, if all goes well, would be architectural and engineering supervision.

The project is an outgrowth of the 1960 tour of Canada by the British government research team headed by Sir Donald Gibson, chief of the works department research division. He concluded that by using Canadian timber and Canadian designs, Britain could produce cheaper homes with greater winter warmth.

The six experimental Canadian homes were erected in Edinburgh; Wigan, near Manchester; and in Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire, just north of London.

Habit of Work Essential To Benefit From College

By JACK HUTTON

Say, I want you to meet a fellow who failed college.

Who? You're looking at him, dear reader — your faithful correspondent in this little corner.

Oh, I didn't fail to graduate if that's what you're thinking. And I passed every course they put in front of me with ease. Some were harder than others, but none impossible.

That, however, isn't the point of it all. When it came to grasping what it was all about at university I missed every loop on the merry-go-round — by at least a foot every time. It came to me later, too late.

And I only hope that by telling you what happened to me some of you may see the pitfalls ahead of you. They aren't easy to see until you're climbing out of them.

So here's a fellow who just made it into university, you're thinking? Quite the contrary. I could almost count hours of homework during high school on the fingers of my two hands. And in Grades 7 and 8 I was given a certificate as top student.

Those two certificates (I've still got them) did it, I'm sure. I had a sneaky suspicion a girl in the same class should have won, but looking at the awards convinced me that I didn't have to work.

LEARNED I.Q.

Then, just about the same time, someone played a dirty trick on me in the name of progressive education. They measured my I.Q. (whatever in the wide world that means) and told me what it was.

I saw the little chart with Average People in the middle; Below Average People down lower; and Above Average People on top of the heap.

Suddenly the world looked a lot easier.

Why sweat? Your I.Q. is higher than the fellow across the aisle. Maybe he'll get a higher mark on the next tests but you can easily catch up the next time. Hah!

The philosophy worked for me all through high school. When subjects or teachers interested me I did better, but it was easier to get average or a little better than average marks.

And it was the same story when university was one year away. You knew the minimum standards required, so you found it easy to get a comfortably higher average. Just in case they were being fussy that spring.

No one has ever looked forward to university-like I did. Once when sitting in a boat with a friend we both agreed that the sun's trail across the water was our pathway to university.

But what a shock to finally arrive. I'd never counted on the fact that not everyone had the same philosophy. Why, I reasoned that first fall, shouldn't the same amount of effort get me by? After all, it gave me time to enjoy other things than studies.

Maybe other fellows had to sit up until midnight reviewing their notes. Not me. I could always manage to emerge in the top third. For some reason I decided to concentrate on playing the piano instead of getting organized.

Those first exams at Christmas! I'll never forget them.

All around me I saw Average People or even Below Average People getting better marks. What was the difference? They had been working for years and it paid off.

DEMOTED

By the time I'd caught my breath I was in the same stream as the second-raters — the pass course which gives you a degree after three years but never the depth that you get in honors course. I kept on reading for years trying to catch up.

This couldn't happen to you!

Only one out of 20 Grade 9 students reading this column will graduate from high school. Two out of every 10 university students, if they're freshmen, will fail their exams next spring.

Those statistics look bad enough. But add to them a shadow percent — let's say 25 percent as a bottom figure — of students who remain physically present but aren't getting what they should out of the process.

Color me in this category. Are you?

Parley Shows Catholic Church Does Not Rule Latin America

CALI, Colombia (CP) — The Roman Catholic Church traditionally been looked upon as dominating the social conduct of Latin America as towering as the Andes dominate this continent's geography.

In this city, lying between two ranges of the mighty Andes, the tradition has recently been called into question.

The occasion was the first Pan - American Assembly on Population, whose sponsors included Cali's University of the Valley and the Colombian Association of Medical Faculties.

Among the first to question church dominance were Catholic priests among the more than 70 assembly delegates from 21 American countries.

Clinching evidence was a final recommendation of the four-day assembly in support of birth control. It read:

"In realization of the (family planning and sex) educational aims of the government, and in recognition of the high incidence of criminal abortion, and in recognition of the manifest desire of many couples to space their children's births properly, the governments, through their appropriate Ministries, should make family planning services accessible to the people who desire them, and educate the people to their availability.

"These services should provide a sufficient variety of medically approved methods so that they can be chosen in accordance with the dictates of the individual conscience."

CHURCH CHANGING

Such a public call for contraception would have been unthinkable here as recently as five years ago. Fear of the disapproval of Colombia's conservative church hierarchy would have headed off any idea of holding the assembly here in the first place.

But times are changing and Latin America's Roman Catholic church is changing with them.

Rev. Gustavo Perez Ramirez, a young Colombian priest, put before the assembly some statistical evidence of the extent to which church teachings are ignored.

—A social survey in Panama showed that 39.3 per cent of married women there who go to church, least once a week use contraceptives. In Rio de Janeiro the figure was 37.9 per cent and in San Jose, Costa Rica, 65.2 per cent.

—Of married women who receive holy communion at least once a month, 56.7 per cent in Caracas, Venezuela, use contraceptives, 39.9 per cent in Bogota, Colombia, and 34.8 per cent in Mexico City.

—A study in a working-class suburb of Santiago de Chile found that among Catholic women 23 of 100 pregnancies are terminated by abortion. Among Protestant women in the same suburb the figure was 13.8 per 100.

DEFY CHURCH

Assembly delegates from several Latin American countries suggested it would be unreal to imagine the Catholic Church could veto planning any aspects on the continent considering the extent to which the church's teachings are already ignored.

—The medieval serfdom to which many Latin American oligarchs still subject their peons is out of line with the church's teachings about the dignity of man.

—La Violencia, Colombia's decade of political savagery starting in 1948, diverged to the extent of 150,000 slayings from the precept "Love thy neighbor."

—For all the rigidity of its intractable ethics, the Catholic church has been unable to prevent millions of Latin Americans from living in irregular families unblessed by its sacraments, nor millions of children from being born in illegitimacy." — Alberto Lleras Camargo, former president of Colombia, in his keynote speech to the assembly.

A priest at the assembly ruefully reckoned that only one substantial group remains in Latin America which has not openly defied the church—the politicians. And their professed respect for the church stemmed not from spiritual illumination but from the political belief that priests influence a lot of votes.

NEED SCIENTISTS

The determination of younger elements within the Latin American priesthood that the church shall not lose its influence in the resistance to the modern stream was reflected in the final recommendation of the assembly:

"Religious leaders should be continually provided with the best available scientific information on biological social and economic aspects of population problems. This information should be made available to all levels of the church hierarchy.

"In turn, religious leaders of all faiths should intensify communication with scientists in order that the public may fully comprehend the continual development of church thought."

Perhaps the most striking single development at the conference was the speech of Alberto Lleras Carmago, one of Latin America's half-dozen most esteemed statesmen.

Of the population increase which is consuming the region's resources at a rate that leaves Latin America virtually without development capital, he said:

"The human solution, the Christian solution, the economic solution, the political solution is birth control. And the sooner the better."

BREAKS TRADITION

For a Colombian of Lleras' standing to take public a position contrary to that of the church on so sensitive an issue is a shattering departure from tradition.

He was the president who restored democracy to Colombia after the Rojas Pinilla dictatorship and brought comparative peace out of La Violencia.

Lleras spoke of the overpopulation and growing unemployment in rural areas and the mass migrations to shantytowns on the outskirts of cities in the vain search for jobs.

"Latin America's gravest risk lies in this eroded, hopeless fragment of society," he said, adding:

"Neither agrarian reform, nor taxes which raise the state's capacity to participate in investments which are the foundation of development, are substitute if waves and waves of human beings, illiterate and half savage, half sick, badly fed, badly clad, badly shod, roofless, continue contributing to the distribution of misery without participating in production and hardly taking part in consumption.

"Already their number is so great and their crowding so tight that they are becoming aware of their capacity for troublemaking.

"Because of this they are followed by international profes-

Whitehorse Region Opened to Hunters

GODLIN LAKES, N.W.T. (CP)—One of the most rugged wilderness areas in North America has been opened to hunters by the Canadian government.

This summer it is echoing to the reports of high - powered rifles as Stan Borrell of Sundre, Alta., and Werner Koser of Whitehorse, Yukon, guide Canadians and Americans hunting dall sheep, caribou, moose, grizzly and black bears, wolves and wolverines.

Borrell and Koser were granted the outfitters' franchise for the area — 20,000 square miles surrounding the Godlin Lakes in the Mackenzie Mountain range 200 miles northeast of Whitehorse.

The region is almost inaccessible except by aircraft or horseback and previously has been hunted only by Indians, who have treaty rights.

The hunting season is from Aug. 1 to Nov. 30 and, with the Arctic Circle only 250 miles to the north, there is almost 24 hours of sunlight during the early part of the season.

Burrell left Sundre in June to come here and supervise the establishment of a base camp, the blazing of trails and training of 15 local Indians as guides and packers.

The hunters, the first group of whom included a Nova Scotian and several Americans, are flown in and out by aircraft. Burrell is a pilot and has been flying the north country for years.

BROUGHT IN HORSES

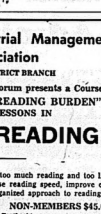
A guide and outfitter in the Sundre area 65 miles northwest of Calgary for 15 years, Burrell took part in a game survey in the Mackenzie Mountains in 1963.

The Mackenzies make up one of the most easterly ranges of the Rockies. Their valleys and foothills are heavily forested and Burrell quickly became aware during an exploratory hunt that this would be good hunting territory.



He arranged to bring in 30 packhorses by trucking them 1,500 miles from his Hungry Horse Ranch and swimming the remaining 500 miles by leading them on horseback. The same method was used to get other packhorses from Fort St. John, B.C.

Supplies, brought in from truck and packhorse from Sundre, include dozens of pack and stock saddles, tents, stoves, axes, and hundreds of pounds of food staples.

Marsh Hill

PINE GROVE W.I.

MARSH HILL — Nine members and one visitor of Pine Grove Women's Institute four. ed Ray Mallory's apiary on the Frankford Road on September 15th.

Here the group viewed hives of bees and the extracting and packaging operations. Mr. Mallory supplies honey to the local stores and also ships some to Toronto. He said that some flowers and weeds affect the flavor of the honey. He has bee yards in many districts and in some places the bears do a great deal of damage to the hives of bees.

Mr. Mallory was thanked on behalf of the members by Mrs. Don Irish, convener of Canadian industries, who had planned the tour.

THE INTELLIGENCER, Thursday, September 23, 1965 13

The group then journeyed on to Campbellford where they enjoyed a chicken dinner at George's Restaurant. At this time a short business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Farley Lindenfield.

Mrs. Don Irish and Mrs. Alex Tanner are to attend the leaders' training school, "Hats for Us."

Canvassers for the blind were appointed. They are Mrs. Garnet Searles, Mrs. Ivan Clare and Mrs. Alex Tanner.

Mrs. Tanner thanked the members for the gift sent to her while in hospital.

Increased Drinking Is Problem Among New Brunswick's Youth

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Officials in New Brunswick's three largest cities say they are concerned about an increase in drinking by teen-agers.

A YMCA report in the Saint John-Lancaster area, the province's most populous region, said the problem of youth drinking has become broad and deep rooted. The report said teen-age clubs have been organized for the sole purpose of holding regular drinking parties.

In Moncton, the Times and Transcript newspapers recently conducted a 26-question survey among 200 teen-agers in the 13-to-19-year-old group that indicated 50 per cent of them drank and 45 per cent of the ones who drank did it because they liked the effect of liquor.

Members of the city council and school board at Fredericton, the province's capital, have said they were shocked at an increase in drinking among the city's school students.

Few organizations in New Brunswick have attempted to battle the teen-age liquor problem, but Dr. J. E. Carter of Chatham, director of the alcohol education division of the department of education, says the government is willing to support or offer assistance to an Allied Youth program in the province.

PROGRAMS FAILED

Attempts in the past to begin Allied Youth programs—aimed at educating teen-agers in the proper use of alcohol—have failed in New Brunswick, he said.

In Nova Scotia, the alcohol education bureau says Allied Youth programs in 36 high schools have resulted in a decrease in the number of teen-agers drinking. Schools without the program had a more serious drinking problem.

Prince Edward Island has Allied Youth programs in 19 high schools and Newfoundland has programs in three.

The Times and Transcript survey—dealing with a cross-section of youths — indicated most drinking teen-agers got their first taste of alcohol at about 15 years of age. Half of them obtained their first drink from friends, 20 per cent from illegal outlets and most of the remainder from government stores.

Most of the youths said they drank on weekends, but six per cent said they drank on a daily basis. About 75 per cent said they had been intoxicated at least once. About 10 per cent said they frequented taverns and a like amount said they drank at home.

If there is an increase in drinking among teens, what are the reasons?

"I think most are curious to find out what effect liquor has on them," said a teen-ager questioned in the Times and Transcript survey. "Others are dared to drink. If they don't they're left out of the group."

"If I drink it's usually caused by trouble or moodiness," said another. "I do it to relieve the tiredness."

"There's an increase in drinking because there is too much advertising of liquor and because of a lack of education as to the effects of liquor and how to drink properly," one youth said.

Angus (Gus) MacFarlane, director of athletics and physical education at Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., said the time has gone when society can give sheets of factual information about the problems of alcohol to teen-agers and expect them not to drink.

"The bright, intelligent young people of our day have all the information that is necessary," Mr. MacFarlane said. "They need the sincere interest of older people. They need help from their teachers, parents and friends if they are going to learn how to handl liquor.

"The facts are available to all these kids. But facts don't mean much to most of them. They're influenced by people."

British Liberals Undergoing Agonies Deciding How They Should Use Power

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP)—The Liberal party, a small third force inflated by fate with new importance, is undergoing agonies of self-appraisal as it tries to decide how to use an unaccustomed political power.

Jo Grimond, the handsome Scottish party leader, opened the annual Liberal conference Wednesday with a speech that stirred his followers but put off a decision on whether or not to help keep the Labor government in office.

Exulting in a rare sensation of being watched with respect by the two big parties, Grimond told Liberals assembled in the Yorkshire resort of Scarborough:

"Our teeth are in the real meat and our muscles exerted in the real struggle for political power. We intend to exploit our position, to exploit it in the national interest."

He warned that the 10 Liberals in the 630-seat House of Commons would vote against government measures that conflicted with Liberal principles even if it meant forcing a general election. Death or defection could reduce Labor's present majority of two in a parliamentary minority by the time parliament reassembles in six weeks.

SOFTENS LINE

But Grimond softened his line by saying Liberals should wait and see the Labor legislative program for the coming session in the event that there may be "a close parallel between the policies of the two parties."

The Liberal party, which last had a parliamentary majority in 1910 and declined rapidly before the Second World War, is inspired by a new sense of survival. Support doubled in the 1964 election to more than 3,000,000 votes out of 27,000,000.

But while its share of the vote was more than 11 per cent, the Liberals' 10 seats represent only 1.6 per cent of Parliament.

Hence the party conference voted wholeheartedly for electoral reform, urging the government to institute proportional representation—a system that would have given the Liberals about 80 seats in the last election.

But while the Liberals feel cheated, their 10 seats are the most they have held in 30 years and they loom even larger in a House where government and opposition forces are almost evenly balanced.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's followers—some of them in a mutinous mood—hold 315 seats in the House of Commons against 253 for the combined Conservative - Liberal opposition. One vacancy is in a Conservative stronghold and the other in a traditionally Labor constituency.

The Liberals in Parliament either voted with the government or abstained on important divisions during the first 12 months of Labor government. Only in defence and foreign affairs have they been demanding more for their money and have even put out feelers for a formal Labor-Liberal alliance.

Canada Needs New Economic Policies Former Trade Minister Hees Tells PCs

By HARRY MULHALL

With a deft touch of show manship, George Hees smoothly placed himself in the political spotlight in Belleville last night.

But before his exit from Hastings South Conservative convention at Belleville Collegiate he had also drawn a standing ovation as he exhorted party workers to a national election victory November 8.

He told delegates who named Belleville dairyman Les Grills as their candidate, that they must replace the Liberal regime with "a positive-policy government led by John D. Diefenbaker."

"Get out and work—and work and work and on November 8, if you do that, you and the Conservative party are going to have a very great victory to celebrate."

The former trade minister in the Diefenbaker government, who turned rebel in 1963 and is now seeking a political comeback in neighboring Northumberland, was expected to be on hand before the convention started last night.

MADE QUIET ENTRY

Traditionally, the keynote speaker makes a grand entrance at such an event. The same was expected of Mr. Hees last night. News photographers, after consulting with convention organizers, spotted themselves in the best positions to record the triumphal entry down the aisles.

By 8.30 p.m. with the auditorium filled, the jaunty, handsome figure of the ex-Trade and Cabinet rebel had failed to appear. Convention officials decided to go ahead as scheduled.

For the speechmaking preliminaries there was a brief address from Belleville Mayor L. J. Wills. Then came Hastings County Warden Fred Beckett.

With still no sign of the grand entry, the warden approached the podium and told the convention:

"At this point Mr. Hees isn't here—but he's made every success in his campaign . . ."

He was interrupted by clicklicks, then hearty laughter from the auditorium.

For it was, behind Warden Beckett's back—at this point —that Mr. Hees appeared.

Mr. Hees' keynote address began in the same off-beat fashion.

After being introduced by former county warden Haviland Hamilton, he stepped to the speaker's stand — then paused to take a sip of water.

"That's great water, George," someone called from the auditorium — and the friendly raspberry at Belleville's illfamed municipal water system drew another round of laughter.

"What's all it is — honest," retorted Mr. Hees. ". . . This is just good Belleville water.— And you don't need anything more than that."

However, he immediately launched into serious business — reiterating a politicel theme which he has been stating since his decision at Cobourg last Friday to re-enter politics: The need for new economic policies for Canada.

There is need for a government with a sensible and practical outlook which will provide Canada with new, dynamic policies, geared to forwarding the economy and keeping it healthy, he said.

"That kind of government must be — and will be — elected on November 8, I'm absolutely sure," he added.

It would give Canada the "kind of government it needs at this critical time in its history."

INHERITED BOOM

The Liberal government in 1963 inherited an economy that had started to boom for two years previously, said Mr. Hees. Yet Finance Minister Gordon persists in introducing legislation which makes it impossible for foreign capital to invest in Canada.

Anyone who understands Canadian economy — "and it seems the Minister of Finance has never understood" — knows the need of foreign capital to promote economic progress here said the former trade minister.

He charged Mr. Gordon with telling foreign investors "in so many words" that their money is not welcome in Canada.

This has diverted to other countries investment capital that was needed for Canadian economic expansion.

If the "misguided, muddled-up" policies of the Liberal government are not opposed, we will "drive our economy right into the ground."

A trade crusade initiated by the Diefenbaker government had heralded an economic upswing in Canada which came over in 1963. Since then, government policy has been at a standstill paralyzing the growth of prosperity and jobs in the years ahead said Mr. Hees.

The recovery economist and every businessman in this country claims very proudly that the total devaluation of the dollar is the main reason why our economy is so healthy today . . "

Kashmir Action Effective Only If Issue Is Brought Out In Open and Resolved

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The weight of world opinion, backed by the direct influence of the Soviet Union, has forced India and Pakistan to declare a cease-fire that could be the beginning of a lasting peace only if the Kashmir issue is brought into the open and resolved.

India's Premier Lal Bahadur Shastri is well aware that Pakistani President Ayub Khan faces trouble at home. The civilian outbursts and the last-minute Pakistani aerial attacks against India are an indication that the relaxation and disappointment felt by the Moslems thruout into a United Nations ceasefire without a Kashmir settlement in sight.

Ayub Khan has warned that Pakistan would withdraw from the UN if the Kashmir dispute is brushed aside.

U Thant, UN Secretary-general, may in fact have suggested to Ayub Khan that he would use his good offices to get the Moslem plea that India has no right to Kashmir where the Moslems are in the majority. India maintains the Kashmir issue is a closed book; that it belongs to India and that it is not available for negotiation. But again the weight of world opinion may force a change of attitude.

COULD LOSE SUPPORT

There are also indications that Shastri and Ayub Khan will meet in the Soviet Union, under the auspices of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, to discuss their future relations and terms for a permanent peace. If Ayub Khan comes away empty-handed, his political supports at home, especially the military establishment, may suddenly wither.

Kosygin's own position in international affairs has been undergoing a rebirth between the Gatineau Riding Liberal Association and the Quebec Liberal Federation.

Quebec's Gatineau riding, which stretches from a point near Hull, some 100 miles south to Maniwaki, was represented by Dr. Rodolphe Lesbe, a Liberal in the last Parliament, who has announced he will not seek re-election.

Tuesday night the riding executive met and protested distribution of party membership cards to Gatineau voters by the Montreal-based federation.

Stestan Legault, a candidate for the Gatineau Liberal nomination, said the local executive "approved 327 membership cards but another 700 to 800 were issued from Montreal.

He said neither he nor the executive will attend the nomination meeting Sunday at Maniwaki unless the convention is changed from a "packed house" for his opponent, Dr. Gaston Isabelle.

Dr. Isabelle said in an interview the local executive favors Mr. Legault and is acting "illegally."

The riding executive has sent a telegram of protest to provincial organizer Guy Favreau, Privy Council president.

In Montreal, Paul Boudreau, official press liaison officer for the Quebec section of the National Liberal Federation, said: "The local Gatineau association is a provisional body and cannot issue membership cards itself. It must submit its list of those it wants cards sent to the federation.

"The local association sent in its request for membership cards and these were issued per the list supplied.

"It will be on the basis of these cards that the convention will be held on Sept. 26. No others will be recognized."

Two Killed In Car Crash Near Perth

PERTH, Ont. (CP)—Elwood Tysick, 60, of nearby Maberly, and Mrs. Ida Pearl Marvin of the 59-year-old son Marvin were killed Wednesday night in a two-car collision on Highway 7, 14 miles west of here.

Two Maberly youths in the second car, Stanley Ritchie, 17, and Ken Lennon, 18, were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

No Amount of Rain Can Restore Crops in Fields

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Signs of relief from the prolonged drought in many parts of Canada and the United States have come with the turning of the leaves.

But no amount of rain can restore crops withered in the fields.

In the eastern areas of Ontario a record drought May through August led to 17 disastrous qualifying for federal assistance. Elsewhere in the province there was normal rainfall.

Quebec suffered below-average rainfall in June and July, but in August the rainfall set a record.

The Atlantic provinces were hard hit by the drought. Rainfall was 50 per cent below normal from January through July but normal in August. However, crop damage already had been done by the searing dry weather and forest fires.

Nevertheless, the rains are too little, too late. A torrential downpour would be needed to fill reservoirs so near to running dry.

Water restrictions remain in force in many communities, particularly New York City. New Yorkers still can't wash their car, water their lawn or get a glass of water in a restaurant unless they ask for it. The city is in the midst of a house-to-house search for leaks that waste more water every day than some cities use.

Reservoirs supplying New York City are down almost to one-third of capacity, and in New Jersey the Wanaque Reservoir that serves the heavily populated northern section has only a 55-day supply of water. Elsewhere, areas reporting some relief from the dry spell are upper New York state, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Vatican Council Commits Itself To Decree About Secular Problems

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Bishops at the Vatican ecumenical council voted approval today of the general outlines of a decree on modern world problems, including birth control and nuclear warfare.

It was the first time in the 2,000-year history of the Roman Catholic church that a general council had officially agreed to go ahead with preparation of a formal declaration addressed to all mankind on non-religious contemporary matters.

The vote was only a preliminary one, and continuing debate indicated the document would be extensively rewritten.

Even as the vote was being taken, Bishop Guano warned that the document may more about Communist dangers, and an Indian prelate argued that it had too Western an outlook.

Until now the document had been before the council for general debate. With today's secret vote in St. Peter's Basilica, the council began considering it point by point as a basis of further discussion and moved on to chapter-by-chapter debate.

The council chairman disclosed the outcome of the vote, committing the council to the preparation of a formal decree on modern problems.

The vote count was not announced.

Major questions like birth control, nuclear warfare and world peace have gained all the attention since the document was first brought into St. Peter's Basilica last October.

But the document does not overlook minor actions that form a mosaic picture of modern life. It has something modest who jeopardizes the lives of others, the tax dodger who lets his fellow citizens carry an extra load, the violator of public hygiene laws who menaces a neighborhood's health.

Part one is entitled The Church and the Condition of the Interdependence Between the Individual and the Highly Organized Society of Today.

"It is necessary that every man, that every group, be no longer content with an individualistic ethic which, when the relationship between the person and society is at stake, assumes a varying and blameworthy attitude," says one paragraph.

"Thus, in some countries, many pay scant attention to social laws and obligations. Many are those who are not even afraid to get out of just taxes and social debts by various subterfuges and frauds. Others overlook public hygiene measures and highway traffic laws without even realizing that their carelessness puts the lives of others in danger."

The document calls for efforts to increase "a sense of responsibility and participation in the life of society" to overcome such attitudes.

As for the definition of who is one's neighbor, answered by Christ in the gospel account of the Samaritan, the council schema gives the idea modern dress in this way:

"Our neighbor is not man forgotten by everyone, the foreign worker who everyone looks down upon without reason, the illegitimate child who wrongly bears the weight of a misdeed that the child itself did not commit, the hungry man who cries expectedly on the television screen awakening our sleeping conscience. . . ."

WOULD LOWER SPEED

HAMILTON (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday, that the speed limit on the Burlington Skyway be reduced to 50 from 60 miles an hour. The jury was investigating the death of Stuart Allan Harrison, 30, of Hamilton who died after his car collided with a panel truck that jumped the median on the Skyway Aug. 31.

Expect U.S. Viet Nam Policy Statement

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The United Nations General Assembly's debate on world affairs opens today with what is expected to be a major policy statement on Viet Nam by the United States.

Arthur Goldberg, U.S. ambassador to the world organization, is scheduled to address members of the ceasefire between India and Pakistan and the need for achieving a peaceful settlement of the Vietnamese war.

The U.S. called on the Security Council last July to see what action could be taken to end the war in Viet Nam and Goldberg, who succeeded the late Adlai Stevenson as UN ambassador, is expected to reaffirm U.S. willingness to have the UN tackle this southeast Asian trouble spot.

The 20th session of the General Assembly opened Tuesday, Wednesday was taken up with the election of chairmen of the various committees as well as the setting up of the 25-member steering committee which decides what business will be discussed.

Without taking a formal vote, the steering committee Wednesday recommended that the assembly again take up the issue of seating Communist China in the United Nations.

Charles Yost of the U.S. delegation said he had no objections to full-scale assembly debate. But, he added, in the light of recent world events he believed the debate "would serve no useful purpose."

Alex Quaison-Sackey, foreign minister of Ghana and president of the 19th assembly, spoke on behalf of Ghana and nine other countries seeking debate on the issue of seating China. He was supported by the Soviet Union and France.

The first East-West clash of the session was touched off when the steering committee turned down Communist objections and recommended that the assembly take up the issue of Tibet.

The Soviet Union, Hungary and Poland charged that injection of the issue was an attempt to influence the question of Communist Chinese representations.

The Indian-Pakistani conflict over Kashmir faded partially into the background as both countries agreed to a Security Council demand which ordered the two Commonwealth nations to call a ceasefire and withdraw to positions held before the start of hostilities Aug. 5.

The ceasefire was called for 8 p.m. EDT Wednesday and U Thant, the UN secretary-general, immediately flashed the text of setting up a peacekeeping observation group in which Canada is playing an important role.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, who will address the assembly Friday, agreed to Thant's urgent call to supply 10 additional observers for the UN military observation group in Kashmir.

Canada has had nine military observers serving with the 40-man, 11-nation UN team in Kashmir since the ceasefire of 1958.

Denmark, acting on Thant's request, assigned 10 army officers to the ceasefire task, which eventually will consist of 100 military observers as well as 60 civilian personnel to supervise the 1,000-mile border between India and Pakistan.

"Boy, am I in luck! My wife has been trying for years to fill out her set of this Queen Anne pattern!"

Denies Govt. Knows What's Killing Gulls

OTTAWA (CP)—An official of the Canadian Wildlife Service denied Tuesday that the federal government knows what has been killing seagulls along the shore of Lake Ontario.

"As soon as we have anything better than a guess, we'll make the information public," said Dr. V. E. F. Solman.

Dr. Solman was commenting on a statement by Councillor F. M. Anderson of Oakville Monday that the government knew the cause of the deaths but had taken no action.

Dr. Solman said the wildlife service's chief pathologist, "who would normally handle this type of investigation," was on another job in the North. But the fish and wildlife division of the Ontario department of lands and forests had been asked to look into the matter.

Some dead gulls had been recovered for examination to see whether they had eaten any poisonous substance but laboratory reports had not yet been received.

"This is a rather complicated matter," he added. "There have been a number of cases in recent years where gulls have died in different parts of the Great Lakes, but it's not a simple matter to determine the cause of death.

"It could be something they eat, or it could be some type of disease, and we still don't know too much about diseases that affect birds."

OAKVILLE (CP) — Councillor F. M. Anderson said Tuesday that newspaper men took too much for granted from his remarks Monday night about the deaths of hundreds of gulls along Lake Ontario's shores from Port Credit to Hamilton.

Mr. Anderson was quoted as saying after a council meeting Monday that the federal government knows what is killing the gulls, but has taken no action. He denied the statement.

"Quite a bit was assumed by reporters after the council meeting," he said.

Mr. Anderson added, however, that he had been told what was killing the birds, but refused to divulge his source of information.

Jim Atkinson, assistant director of the Oakville Humane Society, said Monday that the disease was out of control and appeared to be spreading to other types of birds and fish.

Teen Weddings Suffer Heavy Divorce Toll

West German Election May Bring Great Changes

By PETER JOHNSON

BONN (Reuters)—West Germany votes Sept. 19 in a general election which may produce the greatest political changes since the feuceral republic was set up 16 years ago.

Pollsters' forecasts indicate that for the first time since 1949 the opposition Social Democratic party has a fighting chance of ousting the ruling Christian Democrats as the largest party in the Bundestag (lower house).

The Christian Democrats with 45 per cent of total votes at the last elections in 1961, would probably be able to continue in office with their coalition allies, the Free Democrats, who are expected to win several per cent less than their 13-per-cent poll in 1961.

Christian Democrats have 242 seats in the 499-seat Bundestag, the Social Democrats 190 and the Free Democrats 67.

But if his party beats the Christian Democrats, social Democrat leader Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin, will be in stronger position to ask for what he calls a "big coalition" of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats.

Chancellor Ludwig Erhard has already rejected the idea, declaring in a speech opening the election campaign Aug. 8 in Dortmund that he would not consider forming a government with a party politically and morally unfit to rule.

WANT COALITION

The Social Democrats, with 36 per cent of total votes at the 1961 election and with recent state elections and public opinion polls giving them several per cent more, have been persuading the Free Democrats to enter a coalition.

While the smallest party is the most strongly anti-socialist in internal affairs, its foreign policy experts and its liberal elements are often closer to the Social Democrats than, to the Christian Democrats, whose chairman is still the "hard line" 69-year-old former chancellor Konrad Adegauer.

Both the Social Democrats and the Free Democrats are strongly "pro - Atlantic" and often critical of French President Charles de Gaulle. Both also favor active and elastic policy aimed at increasing Bonn's influence among the Eastern European countries.

Brandt, who spent much of the Nazi period in Scandinavia as a political refugee, could offer Erich Mende, leader of the Free Democrats, a large number of ministerial posts for his party—and a promise that the present electoral system would not be changed.

Erhard, hailed for years while economics minister as the author of West Germany's "economic miracle," in September's election will be given the public's verdict on his handling of political affairs.

Although West Germany has continued to forge ahead economically under Erhard, the chancellor has repeatedly drawn severe criticism both inside and outside his party for indecision and lack of foresight in the political sphere. . . .

In recent months, however, Erhard's personal popularity with the electorate, which has always remained well ahead of that of Brandt, has moved upward again.

The Social Democrats, who threw overboard the remnants of their one-time Marxism at a party congress in 1959, have scored considerable success in elections in all the West German states since the 1961 federal election.

At this level, they topped the Christian Democratic vote. Sections of the electorate including many Roman Catholics who would ever have voted for the Social Democrats 10 years ago, have begun to do so.

Anti-German Sentiments Dominate Russian Films

MOSCOW (CP)—The Second World War ended 20 years ago but you'd never know it from watching Russian movies.

Soviet film studios still grind out features with the kind of anti - German sentiment that characterized Western films in wartime.

An example is Father of a Soldier, the most publicized of movies entered in the fourth Moscow film festival in July.

The buildup began weeks before the festival opened and it was obvious that the 90-minute production stood a good chance of taking a major award. It did. Sergo Zakariadze, who played the father, got the best-actor nomination.

Father of a Soldier is a story of a grizzled peasant who becomes lonesome for his son fighting at the front with the Red Army and sets out to find him.

He blusters his way into combat zones that are out of bounds to civilians, charms his way into the company of a regular army unit and heroically proves his fighting mettle.

When the old man finds his son the lad has just been fatally wounded in hand-to-hand fighting and dies in his father's arms in a poignant last scene.

SHOWS CRUELTY

Zakariadze, a middle-aged actor well known in the Soviet Union, dominates it at every stage. He's strictly a man of action though he possesses a notable comic talent.

The anti-German flavor shows up particularly in vividly portrayed battlefield scenes. In one a German soldier brutally shoots his death - wounded young Red Army soldier.

Zakariadze, who has been helping the lad, goes into a towering rage, takes the Nazi's gun away and kills him by bashing him on the head with it.

One moviegoer, asked why Soviet audiences are still exposed to such hate fare two decades after the war, said it is justified by the terrible intensity of feeling that persists toward the Germans.

This may be true, but the response of the audience that saw Father of a Soldier was apathetic by comparison with the involvement of those who saw Bridge on the River Kwai, the Alec Guinness war classic that was also on the festival program though not in the competition.

There was frequent applause during its showing and some viewers were almost breathless during the suspenseful final scenes of the film about Britain's war against the Japanese in Southeast Asia.

Four-year Parliament of Catholicism Still Facing Some Crucial Decisions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP RELIGION WRITER

That four-year parliament of Roman Catholicism, the second Vatican council, already has changed the course of Christian history, but it still faces some crucial and dramatic crossroads.

The steps to be taken, says Pope Paul, will determine the church's future "for a long time to come."

With the church's nearly 2,500 bishops from around the earth reassembled in Rome for their fourth session, the first order of business was a tension-charged document upholding religious liberty for all faiths.

It caused an upheaval in the closing hours of the previous session, when about 1,500 prelates signed appeals for immediate action on it but a ruling for delay by the council's presidium prevailed.

Thereafter, Pope Paul gave assurance that the matter would head the docket for this session.

Although supported by a strong council bloc, the declaration has encountered continuing opposition, some of it from members of the Curia, the Vatican's administrative cabinet.

The issue may be a weathervane of the council's concluding session.

Even at its outset, however, it received an initial stimulus from Pope Paul, when he announced the establishment of a regular synod, or representative senate of bishops, to aid in continuing government of the church.

This marked a further step toward broadening church rule, which had been tightly centralized for centuries.

In the three previous sessions, beginning in the fall of 1962, the council has decreed some momentous reforms, but several critical topics, in addition to religious liberty, still await final action.

INTER-FAITH RELATIONS

Among them is the proposed declaration condemning Christian links to Judaism and repudiating the charge that Jews bear special blame for Christ's crucifixion.

Another historic topic before the council—one touching on relationships of Roman Catholics and Protestants—is a proposed statement "on divine revelation."

It emphasizes the Bible as a basic channel of divine truth, saying that all preaching should draw sustenance from Holy Writ. While church tradition is seen as further illuminating truth, it is not divorced from Scripture.

The document is a revision of an earlier one, portraying Scripture and tradition as separate channels of revelation. The widely-hailed "two-source" theory was assailed strongly at the first session—one of the first displays of the reforming trend.

As a result, the revised document takes a neutral position on the old "double source" school, leaving room for the developing view that full Christian revelation resides in Scripture, either explicitly or implicitly.

This was a key maxim of the 16th Century Protestant Reformation—"sola Scriptura," "only the Bible." But Protestant thought also has widened to recognize the role of church tradition in conveying truth, including the church's compilation and preservation of Scriptures themselves.

John Cardinal Heenan of England says the friction is like the old "chicken or the egg" argument—which came first, the church or its Bible?

WORLD ISSUES

Another major document before the council, known as Schema 13, deals with the church and modern world issues —nuclear arms, the gap between rich and poor nations, economic and social life.

It pleads for solidarity among nations, equal rights of races and sexes and an end of the arms race. But controversy exists over whether the church should condemn nuclear warfare outright.

Two previous aspects of this document, dealing with birth regulation and marriages between Roman Catholics and others, were referred to papal commissions for study and eventual pronouncement of policy.

While these and other matters remain to be decided, the council already has launched a epochal transformation in the church.

At its last session, it completed a new constitution on the church affirming the principle of "collegiality," or shared rule of the church by all bishops, including the Pope, and not the Pope alone.

Pope Paul's announcement of a permanent senate implemented this new approach, which is closer to government systems of other churches. The constitution also stresses the responsibility of laymen in the church.

The council, at its last session, also issued its historic decree on ecumenism, recognizing ties with all baptized Christians, regretting historical faults in causing the divisions, and urging common prayer, dialogue and other efforts toward unity.

Earlier, at the second session, the council issued its far-reaching liturgical constitution, revamping worship practices in parishes around the world.

These changes allow use of modern languages in the mass, stress simplicity, hymn singing, greater use of the Bible and sermons and more active congregational participation. Roman Catholic churchmen still are adjusting to the changes.

All in all, says Lutheran theologian George Lindbeck, of Yale Divinity School, an observer at the council, God is accomplishing a "mighty work" in Roman Catholicism. A new tide is flowing.

If reverses occur at times, he said, "there is reason to believe they will be temporary."

At home, bishops may have worried go-slow warnings, but when they get together in council at St. Peter's, something mysterious happens to them, says Bishop G. Emmett Carter of London, Ont.

"The same cautionary bishops again surprise everyone, themselves included I imagine, by daring decisions," he says. "For three years this has been the pattern." And it once more is in prospect.

Cadieux of External Affairs
Undiplomatic Kind of Diplomat

By WILLIAM NEVILLE

OTTAWA (CP)—Marcel Cadieux, the No. 2 man in Canada's external affairs department, is in many ways a most undiplomatic kind of diplomat.

He's blunt-spoken, given to quick judgments and unabashed in his enthusiasm for his work and life in general.

He also is a quick-minded intellectual, an extremely efficient administrator and an outgoing personality.

The combination has made him undersecretary of state for external affairs, one of the top-ranking French-speaking Canadians in the federal service and a world authority on international law.

"For me there has never been any other vocation," he says. "I grade my work into three categories — interesting, more interesting and very interesting."

His present appointment which began May 7, 1964, definitely rates in the latter category.

He has been deputy to External Affairs Minister Martin at a time when the department has been undergoing a thorough administrative overhauling in line with the Glassco commission report. It has been a period of expanded activity abroad, particularly in Africa, and of a series of major international events in which Canada has played an important role.

SIZES UP ISSUES

In all these areas, say his closest colleagues, Mr. Cadieux has been in the forefront.

"In many ways, he's the ideal undersecretary," said one of his co-workers. "He's one of the best administrators the department has had and he's the type on policy matters who goes right to the heart of the issue and makes up his mind."

Mr. Cadieux himself says that on policy matters, he goes by one central standard: will it work?

"Our credit as a smaller country is not unlimited and we have to use it carefully and wisely," he said in an interview. "I have no time for those who would have us going in all directions at the same time."

That does not mean, however, that he is a reactionary in his views on Canada's role in world affairs.

"Far from it. There is more and more scope for our people and we are taking advantage of it. But our resources are modest and we have to use them in accord with carefully worked out priorities. It is a pragmatic approach."

It is also an authentic reflection of the grey - haired, delicately featured man born 50 years ago in the Montreal suburb of Ahuntsic into a typically close - knit French - Canadian environment.

"We were only four—I have a sister three years younger—but we had many relatives and, in that sense, we were a larger family. It was a real French-Canadian home."

MIND MADE UP

Through his academic career (College Grasset, University of Montreal and McGill University) and during a brief stint as a practising lawyer in Montreal, "there was never any doubt about my career; it was going to be in the foreign service." In 1941, he joined the then-fledgling external affairs department.

"The change when I came here from Montreal was quite a shock. I had no family here, no friends, and I was a French-Canadian. You could only accomplish as much as you could do in the English language and, for me, it was like having two left hands."

He quickly adjusted, however, to the new environment. Today he acts as father-counsellor for young Quebecers entering the diplomatic service and remains philosophically "dedicated to the proposition that the future of French-Canada lies as a part of Canada as a whole."

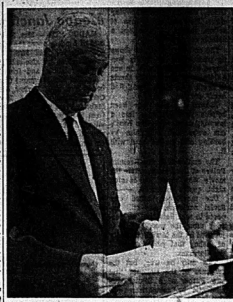
To a green rookie still in his 20s, the early 1940s with assignments in psychological warfare and hitterly in London as liaison with the Free French were an exhilarating experience.

ENJOYS MOVIES

"When I think back, I am still amazed that I was actually paid to do this work which, had I been wealthy, I myself would have paid to have done. It was like giving candy to a child."

In his 25 years with external affairs, Mr. Cadieux has had only four foreign postings—London, Brussels, Paris and Hanoi—with the remaining 19 years spent in Ottawa as a personnel officer and legal expert.

Outside the office, Mr. Cadieux likes to romp with his two children, aged four and eight. "I'm continually surprised how your kids give you back five times as much in enjoyment as you give them."



He also enjoys movies—he's on the board of directors of the National Film Board — and books, of which he's written four himself.

"Really I'm kind of a lowbrow. I like television, too, and I'm the kind of guy who bites his fingernails when the action gets heavy at the movies."

And, he might have added, the kind of guy who, when his fingernails get short, writes a paper of world stature for the International Law Commission.

Paving Firm Head Fined $3,500 or Term

TORONTO (CP) — Kingston John Beamish, 51, president of E. J. Beamish Construction Co., Tuesday was fined $3,500 or one year in jail for attempting to impede a Combines Investigation Act inquiry into the asphalt paving industry.

Michael Butler, a combines investigation officer said he and two RCMP officers visited the company's offices March 1 to obtain evidence for an inquiry on whether there was an arrangement in the industry to fix the price of asphalt paving.

While the investigating team was searching the company's basement for documents, Mr. Beamish took packages containing records to a country club and registered them under another name, he said.

NEW YORK (AP)—Two executives of two giant steel firms were fined $35,000 Tuesday for conspiring to rig the U.S. price of carbon sheet steel.

W. J. Stephens, president of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation but an executive of Bethlehem Steel Company at the time of the conspiracy, and James F. Barton, an executive of U.S. Steel Corp., had pleaded no contest.

CPR, CN Have Opposite Views On Future of Passenger Trains

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Pacific Railway has run into a roadblock in its bid to curtail its passenger train services.

It announced in August its intention to sidetrack its secondary transcontinental train, the Dominion, Sep. 7.

But in Ottawa, the Board of Transport Commissioners, the federal regulatory agency in railway matters, ordered the CPR to suspend the plan, pending a series of public hearings this fall.

The Dominion provides daily passenger service from Montreal and Toronto to Vancouver. Westbound, the train runs in separate sections to Sudbury, Ont., where it is consolidated. Eastbound, it is split into two sections at Sudbury.

The Canadian, the CPR's top passenger train, is operated in the same way to link the three cities.

The proposal to cease operating the Dominion reflects the growing disenchantment of the CPR with the future of railway passenger traffic. It also points up its differences of opinion with the Canadian National Railways over the outlook for passenger business.

The publicly - owned CNR maintains that cars and airplanes will prove inadequate in providing transportation, particularly for middle - distance travellers.

LOSING BATTLE

Both railways are losing money heavily on passenger services. The CPR thinks this will continue but the CNR hopes to break even as early as 1968.

Union spokesmen, worried about railway job losses, have called for a parliamentary committee to examine all aspects of train passenger services in Canada.

"In the long-haul field, the speed and convenience of modern jet aircraft, enhanced by attractive new terminals built across the country, are inducing an increasing number of people to adopt this mode of travel.

"In the short-haul field, the personal convenience of automobile travel, which is being made more comfortable and pleasant through the construction of better highways and improvements in vehicles themselves, is having a detrimental effect on rail passenger business."

In a statement to shareholders, the CPR said that "no prospect is envisaged by your company of attracting rail passengers in sufficient numbers, on many segments of our lines, at prices they are willing to pay, to offset the expenses of providing this service."

The CPR does not believe it has an obligation to operate passenger services at a loss, Mr. Emerson said.

While the company is not immediately planning to get out of all passenger train operations, it will discontinue those which are unprofitable as fast as possible and operate the services which are continued "to the highest standards compatible with service requirements."

PURSUING PASSENGERS

Pierre Delagrave, CNR vice-president of passenger sales and services, said in a recent speech that the railway is attempting to disprove the theory that the passenger business is retrogressive.

Motorists, he said, are showing increasing impatience with crowded and dangerous highways, and the trend to bigger jets, requiring large airports and big payloads, is making short and medium-distance air trips uneconomical for the airlines.

The CNR will have to increase its passenger business by 50 per cent to break even and will have to use flexible fare systems to reach this goal, said the CNR official, who introduced fares in non-peak travelling periods.

The CPR said it lost between $22,000,000 and $24,000,000 on passenger services in 1964 compared to a loss of $19,000,000 in 1963. Railway spokesmen attributed the deteriorating financial situation to fewer passengers, higher wages and fare reductions introduced following announcement of the CNR's country-wide passenger offensive in the fall of 1963.

At that time, the CNR introduced its "Red, White and Blue" plan, pioneered in the Maritimes, to the rest of Canada. It provides for three levels of fares—cheapest on days when travel is lightest, medium on busier days and highest during peak travel periods such as weekends and holidays.

INCOME BEGINS

The CNR reported passenger income of $51,800,000 in 1964, an increase of 16.7 per cent over the previous year. While cautious about making forecasts, CNR economists point out that a 20-year trend towards fewer passengers has been broken and that passenger services, if their 1964 rate of growth continues, could break even in 1968.

Mr. Delagrave admits the real enemy is the family car. Families are being induced to travel by train by free meals for passengers holding sleeping car space, games for children and adults on long trips and the opportunity to bring along the car on the same train or ship it to the destination by fast freight.

The CPR is convinced the car will be the victor and is concentrating its power in the freight field where it believes railways have the competitive advantage.

The CPR pointed out that planned elimination of its Dominion Sept. 7 would have released 25 diesel units capable of carrying 55,000,000 bushels from prairie to ocean ports during the next nine months an asset in view of the recent $540,000,000 wheat sale to Russia.

The CNR has no plans to retreat in its passenger battle and Mr. Delagrave gave some indication of plans for the future when he said the railway "must tap the market for fast, convenient, reliable and, as far as possible, non-stop services between fairly large cities that are approximately 125 and 500 miles apart."

Takes Aim At 8th Golf Title

TORONTO (CP)—Ada Mackenzie of Toronto took dead aim at a record eighth title in the Canadian women's senior golf championship Wednesday.

Miss Mackenzie fired an eight-over-par 85 in the opening round of the 36-hole tournament which ends today. It left her six strokes better than defending champion Mrs. A. B. Darling of Montreal, second with a 91.

Only one other golfer in the 42-year history of the tournament, Mrs. Sydney Jones of Toronto, has won it seven times. Miss Mackenzie won six titles in a row starting in 1955, had her string broken by Mrs. J. C. T. Sibler of Hamilton in 1961, but came back to win in 1962.

Mrs. Sibler was tied for third place with Mrs. W. D. Matthews of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club near Hull, Que., and Mrs. R. D. Storms of Hamilton, all with 92.

Leading in the 19-24 handicap division are Mrs. G. C. Desks and Mrs. D. E. S. Wishart, both of Toronto and both with 102. Mrs. E. F. Armstrong of Oshawa leads, the 24-36 handicap group with 101 while Mrs. H. R. Knowles of Fort Credit, Ont., is ahead in the nine-hole competition with 48.

Socred Leader Opens Drive On Friday

CALGARY (CP)—Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit party, says he will open his party's campaign for the Nov. 8 federal election in his home constituency of Red Deer Friday.

Mr. Thompson said the issues in the campaign are Canadian unity, Canada remaining Canadian in its development, the balancing of power ratio between strong provincial government and weak federal government and minority rights.

TELEVISE FIGHT

TORONTO (CP)—The World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight here Nov. 1 between Ernie Terrell and George Chuvalo will be carried on closed-circuit television, it was announced Wednesday.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

As Mushmouth would say, "the smaller fry have been illuminated and according to the statics, the City Softball Yankees should clobber the Point Anne Jyrds in the current Commercial League little world serious."

They should—on paper. But don't believe all you see in the paper. Mark Twain once read his own obituary in the local Daily Blatter and immediately telephoned the editor to state "The story that I am dead is herewith strongly denied."

The last thing I saw on paper that was supposed to be a clinch to win was a hangtail who came up with two sparkins, the heaves and a bruised fetlock. That was two years ago and the nag hasn't finished yet.

On the record the suds and pneauns crew from Hickson's Hideaway should take the gravy, gold and glory. One rabid Point Anne fan told me that Feeney's Innkeepers are running around wearing berets three sizes too large.

"We may drop the first one of two tilts," he said, twirling his mustachett in nervous hauds, "but when we're through with them they'll look like a banana bunch of pinheads."

"Oh yeah?" snorted the 290-pound mascot of the Hostelers, gobbles his pneauns without bothering to remove the shells... "Tell that Point Anne bono that when we're finished with them we'll wrap 'em in crates of fretz own cement and they 'em in the bay where I doubt the muskies will bother them."

Tut, tut men, this is no way to settle a nice friendly softball argument. You have outstanding teams, worthy representatives of the Working Men's League who have given the peasantry a fine brand of the sport all summer. There has been no discrimination, racial outbursts or other unsportsmanlike flare.

If you're going to battle, forget about these verbal explosions. Let's do it right, with switchknives, flamethrowers, battle-axes and old-fashioned muzzle-loaders.

"The Point Annens," he burped spitting out three teeth of an eel, "will take it all. I tolds Broonfield would win the E and D National League, and what happened?"

"Lookit what happened the first game. It was two-nothin with the pitchers stealing all the glory. Sure the score was zero but somebody kicked the hell out of the Duke of Wellington before he took the world series at Waterloo."

The boleimen disagree. One of them whistled through his teeth, "we'll eat dumplings made of cement if we don't take 'em in five games."

* * *

LOOKIT, SIX OF 'EM!

They'll need a six-eyed antenna'd specuman reference to handle the galaxy of arms and legs at the Memorial Arena wrestling show tomorrow night.

No less than a half-dozen muscle-benders could be in the ring at the same time. "There'll be two at least and half the time, four."

The rough-and-ready platinum blondes, Ron and Terry Garvin, have added "The Hangman" to their nominal role—and that spells rough treatment for somebody.

Facing this fearsome trio will be Cousin Bill Williams, Big Jack Clark and Vic Rosettanni. They tangle and entangle in the two-of-three falls, sixty minute limit main bout.

Three other fine bouts round out the first four, events program seen in the arena in some time.

Wills' Triple Theft Scalps Braves 7-6

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Maury Wills exploded out of a base-stealing slowdown Wednesday night and ran Lou Burdette gales Dodgers a step nearer the National League flag.

Wills, who had only two thefts in 19 previous games this month, stole three times and scored after each, dictating his efforts by carrying across the winning run on Lou Johnson's bases-loading single in the 10th. ers overcame Milwaukee Braves 7-6.

Wills' base-stealing streak is the Braves' farewell to Milwaukee helped the Dodgers extend their winning streak to six and climb within two games of San Francisco Giants, who were knocked by Cincinnati 7-1. The third - place Reds' second straight decision over the fourth runners left them 3½ games out.

Wills seemed certain to break his major league record of 104 steals as the season went into its final two months, with 72 thefts in July going into August. But he added only 11 in August, then two this month before the three key ones against the Braves pushed his total to 88.

The whipper-like shortstop led off the game with a steal of second, went to third on Jim Gilliam's hit and scored on Willie Davis' infield out.

With 23-game winner Sandy Koufax pitching for the Dodgers, a 1-0 lookout looked likely. Frank Bolling tagged him for a grand-slam homer in the second, Mack Jones made it 5-1 with a homer in the third, and Gene Oliver followed with a home run off reliever Howie Reed.

Glen Ledsbove rapped a two-run Dodger homer in the fourth, and they battled back to a tie with three in the fifth. Wills hit into a force play, stole second and scored on Davis' single. An infield out brought in another run and a single by Ledsbove evened the score.

It stayed that way until the 11th, when Wills beat out a bunt with one out, stole second, and brought in the base-stealer on Johnson's two-out single.

Giant ace Juan Marichal also got rocked. The high-kicking right-hander was touched for an unearned run in the fourth but held the Reds hitless until the fifth.

Then Deron Johnson singled, John Edwards homered, and Leo Cardenas homered. Frank Robinson put in out of reach, and chased Marichal, with a three-run homer in the sixth—his 31st of the year.

Sammy Ellis shut out the Giants until the ninth, scattering four hits over that stretch. ord to 21-9. Marichal now is 22-12.

In other NL games Pittsburgh Pirates were tied for 13th straight, scoring four unearned runs for a 6-2 victory over New York Mets, as Al Larry Jaster pitched a four-hitter in his first big league start and Don Cardwell hit two homers as St. Louis trimmed Houston Astros 4-1 and Philadelphia at Chicago was rained out.

Asks Reinstatement

Clay Seeks W.B.A. Title

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Heavyweight boxer Cassius Clay asked the World Boxing Association Wednesday to reinstate him "to facilitate the clearing up of the dispute in the heavyweight division."

Clay was stripped of his heavyweight title 10 days ago for signing a return bout contract with Sonny Liston before their second fight, on he's generally recognized as heavyweight champion.

Clay, who prefers the name of Muhammad Ali, made his request through his Louisville, Ky., lawyer in a telegram to World Boxing Association president James Deskin of Las Vegas, Nev.

"As far as the WBA is concerned, Ernie Terrell is the heavyweight champion," Deskin said. "Clay is merely asking for reinstatement which would make it possible for him to meet Champion Terrell for title."

Deskin said the matter would be discussed by the WBA executive. The WBA had adopted a resolution at its annual meeting last month stripping Clay to make such an application.

The resolution calls for Clay to meet former champion Floyd Patterson, while Terrell engages Georgia Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight champion. The winners are to meet for the WBA championship.

Green Gaels Capture Minto Cup

OSHAWA (CP) — Oshawa Green Gaels won their third consecutive Canadian junior lacrosse title Wednesday night, beat coach Jim Bishop warned that any move to break up the Oshawa team would be made at growing popularity of the game.

The Green Gaels whipped New Westminster Salmonbellies 9-5 in the sixth game of the best - of - seven series for the Minto Cup before a record home crowd of 3,750.

Bishop said the big thrill of the victory was "the way we won it with our own kids in the last two games. Sure they can say we used Billy Armour (of Hastings Legionnaires) for—a couple of games, but fastically it was our own club that won the title. It's the first time a league club has been able to win the title on its own without help.

"Now other junior clubs should try to duplicate what we have done. We're no super team; we just worked harder than anybody else for the victory."

"Lacrosse is ready to move into our big cities. . . . No one should try to win future crowns through legislation that might whittle away at our strength."

Bishop, 36, a lacrosse coach for 20 years, long has argued against playoff recruits. "Clubs should play for the title with the teams they use to get to the final."

Soaking after his happy players tossed him into the showers, he said the Green gaels still have two years from their peak.

"We'll only lose two players next season. The three players who have been named the most valuable in the Minto Cup series in each of our championship years will be with us."

He referred to netminder Merv Marshall, tne inaugural winner of the award in 1961, centre Gaylord Powelese, the 1964 winner, and defenceman Jim Higgs, awarded the medal in an unanimous selection by sports writers in the series just concluded.

Higgs, 17 today, finished the series with 23 points, tying Powless for the series leading. Ranjit Dillon was the top New Westminster scorer with a series total of 15.

Powless provided the offensive punch in the seris final with three goals. Phil Clayton add two and Ross Jones, Neil Armstrong, Higgs, and Fred Greenwood got the others. Paul Shymr scored three goals for New Westminster and Wayne Bellwood added three others.

In the tight contest, which threatened to erupt into a donnybrook in the closing 20 minutes, Oshawa's superior speed and ball control spelled the difference.

In the last minute of the first period and the score tied 3-3, Oshawa twice caught the Salmonbelli' defence napping to move ahead 5-3.

After New Westminster tied the score early in the second and gained a manpower advantage, Ken Thompson stickhandled in and out of his own end for almost the full two minutes before he passed to Clayton for what proved to be the winning goal.

Says Argonauts 'All-Canadian Misfits'

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Bob Shaw celebrated Christmas two weeks early last year. He signed a three-year contract at a reported $20,000 a year plus a $5,000 annual bonus to lead Toronto Argonauts out of the professional football wilderness.

The date was Dec. 11. Shaw had won the best coaching job over 20 or so applicants and the Argonaut office was bustling with enthusiasm. Argos had won only eight of 28 games in 1963 and 1964 and now they had a guy who had led Saskatchewan Roughriders into the Western Conference playoffs in three two years.

No, said Managing Director Lew Hayman, Argos probably won't make the Grey Cup final in 1965. Maybe in 1966 and they might hit the Eastern Conference playoffs this year. Yes, he added, Argos should be a real contender in a couple of years.

Then, on Dec. 16, Shaw returned to Toronto and started peppered questions from reporters for more them an hour. There was no nonsense with him. At times he was careful, other times blunt and grim, and many questioners left away with the feeling that Argos might not be world beaters in 1965 but they'd certainly be a well-drilled, hard-hitting, well-coached club.

BLAME THE COACH!

"I'm not in a position to say what is wrong with the Argos," Shaw said. He'd have to look over game films.

"Except that they can't win," someone suggested.

"They will," was the fast retort.

Let's see now. Argonauts finished with about 118 players since training camp started in July, they've played eight Eastern Conference and East-West interlocking games and have lost them all. They're the laughing stock of Canadian pro football and it wouldn't surprise anyone if they went through the season's schedule without a victory.

Who is to blame?

According to tradition, the coaches.

They are the guys who get the axe when the club doesn't produce on the field. And Argos have been getting progressively worse—if that has been possible.

There's no doubt that the football nation has been pushed in the Argo office. You can't experiment halfway through the season with a team of new players and expect to win football games.

And it is fact that other Canadian clubs are well stocked with Argo discards. That has been going on for years and it applies to Shaw discarded.

TICATS GET THREE

Hamilton Tiger - Cats have three 1965 All-Stars on their roster—halfback Gerry McDougall and linemen Marty Martinuzzi and Walt Radzick. And Ticats happen to be on top of the Eastern standings. Montreal Alouettes grabbed defensive back Don Fuel.

Then, George Hughley, a big star with Ottawa Rough Riders last year, was cut by Shaw. Other Canadian teams passed him up and he landed with Washington Redskins of the National League.

Last Sunday, Ticats defeated Argos 33-0 and in the process Argonauts conceded two safety touches when they were behind 17-0. After the game, Sports Editor Bill Dunnell of the Toronto Star, said members of Tiger - Cats anonymously voiced their wonderment that any pro club could pull such a bush-league trick on their own fans.

The professional football club, needless to say, Argonauts are the joke of the nation," Dunnell wrote. "If just humanly possible to take them seriously. They're the only all-left-footed, all-left-handed group of alleged athletes in existence.

"You have to accept them for what they are—a bunch of All-Canadian misfits. . . ."

Mitt could be right and Argo Fans" can wonder if it is the coaching.

Aces Win Bantam Title

Aces won the bantam softball championship defeating the Jets 13-7 in the final game of the series.

Jets were behind 13-0 at one stage of the game but staged their comeback too little and too late.

The losers led the loop all season losing only one game in the schedule.

Orioles Stalemate Twins' Bid

Third Win In Row

By-MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Do Baltimore Orioles have any chance of overtaking Minnesota Twins in the American League pennant race?

"It's not too late until you're out of it," said manager Hank Bauer, "and my players certainly don't feel they're out of it."

The Orioles remained in it Wednesday by beating Minnesota 5-2, handing the Twins their third straight defeat and keeping them from reducing their magic pennant-clinching number below three.

Ever since Sunday, the Twins have only needed any combination of their own victories or losses by the Orioles totalling three to clinch their first AL pennant.

They have eight games remaining and now head for a three-game series at Washington starting Friday night while the Orioles, with 12 games left, head home for a four-game set with California Angels, also starting Friday night.

Then the Orioles and Twins meet in a three-game set at Baltimore beginning Tuesday night.

Is it possible?

While the Twins and Orioles were wondering, Chicago White Sox edged Detroit Tigers 3-1, downed Cleveland Indians nipped New York Yankees 4-3, Washington Senators belted Kansas City Athletics 8-2 and California swept a doubleheader from Boston Red Sox, 10-1 and 7-6.

Jerry Adair supplied the big bat for the Orioles driving in four runs with a homer and double.

TWINS TIED IT

Adair hit his homer in the second inning, following a double by Curt Blefary. But the Twins tied it with single runs in the second and third innings, so the Orioles went back to work again in the fifth inning.

Paul Blair doubled and scored on Brooks Robinson's single. With two out, reliever Jim Perry issued an intentional walk to Blefary and Adair then ruined the strategy by stroking a two-run double.

Harmon Killebrew doubled in the second inning for the Twins—his first hit since July 31—and scored on Bob Allison's single. Tony Oliva singled in the other Minnesota run, and wound up the day lifting his league-leading average to .321.

The White Sox scored the winning run in the eighth inning after Dick Kenworthy was hit by a pitch by Lolich pitch. Pinch-runner Al Weis moved up on a passed ball and a wild pickoff attempt and scored on Gene Freese's sacrifice fly.

The Indians, held to one hit by Whitey Ford for six innings, put together four hits for four runs in the seventh inning. Fred Whitfield's three-run homer was the big blow.

Jim King hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs while Ed Brinkman also connected in the Senators' victory.

Dave Morehead, who pitched a no-hitter in his last start, blanked one inning for Boston as the Angels put together a 19-hit attack that brought Dean Chance the victory in the opener.

GONZALEZ FINED, SUSPENDED FOR SEASON — Pedro Gonzalez, 27, Cleveland Indians' infielder, reads telegram from American League President Joe Cronin fining him $500 and suspending him for the rest of the season. He was punished for swinging a bat twice at Detroit pitcher Larry Sherry in the fifth inning of a game at Cleveland. With Gonzalez as he reads the sentence in New York is Cleveland club president Gabe Paul, left. (AP Wirephoto)

Country Club Men's Closing Field Day

There'll be dancing and dinner and "sounds of revelry by night" at the Bay of Quinte Country Club Saturday evening.

An all-time record entry list for the Men's Closing Field Day Tournament is expected to ring down the official curtain on the club's seasonal course activities.

Club champions and winners of other special tournament events, will be given their seasonal awards at the presentations dinner following the field day event.

The success of the Second Annual Civic Holiday Festival; the "Forty-Niners Masquerade" inaugural and number listed as taken in other special club events, marks 1965 as one of the best seasons in the history of the club.

No small measure of credit goes to club president Everett S. Fairman, vice president Don Stanton, secretary - treasurer Les Lennox directors, Bill Thrill, George O'Brien, Don Lamb, Bob Michaud and Art Bridge, the club pro George Baines and the games captains of both divisions.

The excellence of the course drew favorable comment from members, visiting golfers and particularly officials of the Ontario Golf Association after the first Best-Ball Tournament held here.

Leafs In 'Red' $50-60,000

TORONTO (CP) — R. L. Hunter, president of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, told Toronto board of control Wednesday that he expects the baseball club to lose between $50,000 and $60,000 this year.

The Leafs won the Governor's Cup playoffs this season, but had an average attendance of about 2,000.

Hunter is seeking financial relief in the form of a tax cut or reduction in rent for the use of Maple Leaf Stadium, which the team rents from the Toronto Harbor Commission.

Hunter said the club will have to consider selling out if the losses continue. He said this would likely mean the team will leave Toronto. The board is studying the request.

Cuts Margin to 3-2

New Westminster Stops Brooklin 8-7

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—The haunting thought of a repeat of the 1964 Mann Cup lacrosse final crept into the minds of Brooklin Merchants following an 8-7 defeat by New Westminster here Wednesday night.

The loss in this year's national senior lacrosse final cut the Ontario team's lead in the best-of-seven series to 3-2.

The Merchants, who had won three straight games, had been strongly favored to wrap up the series Wednesday night. Sixth game will be played here Friday.

In the 1964 final, the Merchants led another British Columbia team three games to one—the same margin Brooklin had going into Wednesday night's game in this year's series.

Last year's western representative later defeated the easterners in three straight clashes to wrap up the Mann Cup.

The game Wednesday New Westminster was ahead at the quarters 3-2, 5-3 and 7-6.

Brooklin opened scoring with a goal from Don Riding in the second minute of play, but New Westminster's Wayne Shuttleworth answered 13 seconds later. Bobby Allan added another for the Ontarians before Ron Flaten and Mag Tyler hit for the home team's second and third goals.

INCREASED THEIR LEAD

New Westminster opened up their lead in the second frame as Flaten got his second goal of the evening and Paul Parnell got his first.

Brooklin outscored New Westminster 3-2 in the third stanza on goals by Ken Lotton, Glen Lotton and Grant Heffernan.

Flaten completed his hat-trick early in the third quarter and New Westminster got another goal from Parnell—his second.

Midway in the third period, Merchant forward Don Craggs disputed a penalty call by pounding on referee Whitey Xyverson. Craggs was awarded a match misconduct and banished from the floor.

Shuttleworth's second goal of the night, early in the fourth period, appeared to put the game on ice for New Westminster but after Brooklin's Ken Crawford tallied midway through the period, B.C. coach Doug McRory sent in the stallers.

Speedsters Don Boyd and Rudy Reisinger took turns slowing the action and held on to the ball for the win.

Habs Open Camp At Forum, Fri.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadins of the National Hockey League open their pre-season training camp at the Montreal Forum Friday, but if coach Toe Blake has his way, none of the 26 players scheduled to report will touch a puck for the first two days.

Blake, starting his 11th season as coach of the defending Stanley Cup champions, said he plans to put the nine goaltenders, 25 defencemen and 52 forwards through two days of skating drills before he drops a puck.

The coach said defenceman Jacques Laperriere has recovered from an ankle injury which knocked him out during the semi-finals against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Braves, Angels Farewell

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Braves said goodbye to Milwaukee and California Angels said farewell to Los Angeles Wednesday night.

Milwaukee's franchise will operate in Atlanta next season unless court action forces another delay. Attendance hit a low of 812 Monday against Philadelphia and less than 550,000 have turned out for the lame-duck year at County Stadium.

The Angels, who move down the road a few miles to Anaheim, Calif., in 1966, will shed no tears about leaving Dodger Stadium. "Next year the fans will be here," said shortstop Jim Fregosi, "not 10,000 people in the stands listening to the Dodgers on their radios."

Seek TV Rights In U.S.A.

HAMILTON (CP) — Jake Gaddacer, general manager of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, and Lew Hayman, managing director of Toronto Argonauts, both Eastern Football Conference clubs, returned Wednesday from a trip to the United States to sell television rights to Canadian Football League games.

They announced they had completed no deals, but were pleased with the reception Canadian football has received on the Fourth Network, a U.S. television network.

CFL games are beamed on a delayed basis on the network to several cities including New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, and Los Angeles.

Negotiations are continuing for the sale of the Grey Cup game rights to a U.S. television network. For the last three years the American Broadcasting Company showed the Grey Cup game on delayed telecasts.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Homestead Dan ran his career earnings to $48,689 Wednesday night at Garden City Raceway by winning the featured sixth race.

Bucky Song, second in the first race, was declared the winner after Spud Rico broke stride and was placed second. Silver Laird won the second race for a $108.30 daily double.

There will be no racing at Garden City tonight.

MONTREAL (CP) — Jerry Hal, owned by Langford Farms of Chatham, reached the wire in 2:01 2-5 Wednesday night to win the $6,475 feature pace at Richelieu Racetrack.

Jerry Hal, paying $3.50, $3.20 and $2.10, was followed by Woodlawn Dermond, paying $2.40 and $2.10, and Adios Watts, paying $2.10.

The nine-year-old chestnut gelding won the one-mile pace by five lengths in 2:07; paying $3.80, $2.80 and $2.50.

Gilbert Sent To Hospital

KINGSTON (CP)—Rod Gilbert, leading scorer for New York Rangers of the National Hockey Lague last sason, was sent to a New York hospital Wednesday for observation of a back injury suffered in Monday's workout.

"We don't think it's anything serious," said Emile Francis, Ranger general manager. "This is more a precautionary check-up."

Gilbert sufferd a serious back injury during his Junior A hockey career at Guelph.

GETS TRYOUT

TORONTO (CP) — Linebacker Jim Reynolds, formerly with Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Alouettes, is expected to begin a five-day trial with Hamilton Tiger-Cats tonight. Reynolds, who has spent his career in the Eastern Football Conference, missed most of last season with torn knee ligaments.

How They're Biting!

TORONTO (CP) — Anglers had a rough time last week in Ontario as most regions reported poor fishing conditions.

Trout fishing was especially slow. Pike and pickerel provided the best catches, but results were often poor. The northern regions showed a fair bass catch.

A weekly report issued by the Ontario department of lands and forests showed some fish catches in the western areas.

Reports from 12 of the department's 22 districts as of Wednesday:

NORTH

Chapleau—All species fair.

Cochrane—All species fair.

Fort Frances — All species poor to fair.

North Bay—All species poor to fair.

Kapuskasing—Pike and pickerel fishing good.

Sudbury—Pickerel and pike good. Trout poor.

EAST

Pembroke—All species poor to fair.

Kemptville—All species fair to poor.

Tweed—Trout fair. Pickerel good, pike fair.

WEST

Series Tickets Gimmicks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A South Dakota schoolteacher said she refused to return to teaching this fall on the chance that she and her elderly mother could see Minnesota Twins play in the World Series.

A man said he would buy series tickets with winnings from betting a dollar on each Twins game this season. The club is 96-58.

That's how some of the applicants hoped to receive a share of the 29,000 World Series tickets being distributed this week for games at Metropolitan Stadium.

Tickets official Charley Lavender said thousands of the letter-writers used gimmicks to get tickets, the first of which were mailed Wednesday.

The man who drew pretty girls on the envelope probably would be surprised to learn that most of the 30 assistants to Lavender open and answer the mail are women.

Another envelope was made from a large file folder and was gaily decorated with baseballs and pictures of Twins stars—and of Lavender and his two chief assistants.

"This guy got tickets," Lavender said. "But it wasn't because of the picture of me. The envelope was so big that the women wanted to get it out of the way. So they selected it."

Lavender said tickets went to the first applicants picked out of the mail sacks.

PARKER HURT

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie Parker, defensive safety for Toronto Argonauts, suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his left leg when he stepped into a hole during a practice. He is expected to be ready Sunday when the Argos meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers here in a Canadian Football League interlocking game.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Speedy Lament, with Hugo Dittfach up, held off a determined stretch drive by two challengers to win the $11,700 Belle Mahone Stakes Handicap at Woodbine Race Track Wednesday.

It was the first stakes triumph for the three-year-old filly owned by the Armstrong brothers of Brampton, and gave her a $6,700 pay day.

Sue Carol Ladd Is Given Director's Post at Studio

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There is a new producer at Paramount Studios, and her name is Sue Carol Ladd.

The selection of a woman as a movie producer is newsworthy. But the story also has a sentimental twist, since Sue is returning to the studio where she once starred as an actress and where her husband Alan Ladd was a top boxoffice draw for 11 years until his death Jan. 29, 1964.

The sorrow of his sudden passing remains, and she gets misty-eyed as she talks of him. "I still haven't been able to see his last picture, The Carpetbaggers," she admitted. "I have a copy of it, and I'll run it some day. But not yet."

She spoke more happily of the future and her hopes for making movies.

Sue brings more experience to her job than most new producers. She was a popular leading lady in the 1930s, then her career ended abruptly.

"I was doing tests for a picture at Warners," she recalled, "and the director kept telling me, 'Faster, faster, faster!' — Tempo, tempo, tempo!' I became so upset that I just ran off the set in tears. I never went back."

She remained in Hollywood and moved into the agency business, another field in which women are a rarity. "I was getting so many of my friends jobs that people told me I should become an agent," she explained.

Sue knew most of the stars in films but was shy about asking them to sign on as clients. Instead, she developed her own list. She found Julie London and Bobby Troup, Jack Jones and Gordon Haskin riding a horse in Griffith Park. Peter Lawford was another discovery.

So was Alan Ladd. She landed him a contract with Paramount, where he became a star with This Gun for Hire. They married in 1942, and she continued as an agent.

Amos Burke, Secret Agent, Gets in Lots of Trouble

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Remember Amos Burke, the highly-honorable police captain with a taste for expensive cars, blondes and dry martinis?

You just can't believe what has happened to Amos this fall. Last year he was never caught doing anything more active than tossing a beauteous babe or pouring a brandy. But they have transformed him into a semi-secret agent. Wednesday night he was slugged, drugged, stuffed in a wine cask, thrown into a dungeon and shot at repeatedly, among other things.

At one point, he took on five nasty fellows in hand-to-hand combat, and would have won, too, if somebody else hadn't rapped him on the head with an iron pipe. But at the end of the program, he emerged fresh and unruffled, having single-handedly smashed a plot to assassinate Gen. de Gaulle.

Amos Burke, Secret Agent—he new title of Gene Barry's old ABC series — is obviously designed to out-Bond and out-U.N.C.L.E. other contenders in the decring-do sweepstakes, and pretty well succeeds in becoming amusing silly.

In the course of outrageous events, Amos acquired an electronic wrist watch that sounded an alarm every time his big boss wanted him, encountered evil plotters who eavesdropped on a bedroom conversation and narrowly escaped being shot by a do-it-yourself lady villain who quickly assembled a workable revolver from a ball-point pen, a pair of ear-rings and a compact.

The most extraordinary feat of the hour, however, was the way Amos kept himself alive when he was locked in a gas-filled freight car with his automobile. He merely sniffed air from the auto tires while forcing the train door with his car jack.

Egan Chambers Will Try Again To Enter House

MONTREAL (CP) — Egan Chambers, former national president of the Progressive Conservative Association, says he will seek the Conservative nomination in the Montreal constituency of Notre Dame de Grace.

Mr. Chambers, 54, announced his plans Wednesday for the federal election Nov. 8.

The NDG seat was held in the last Parliament by Liberal Edmund Asselin who polled 20,320 votes against 8,724 for a runner-up Tory in a four-way 1963 contest. Mr. Asselin is not running this time.

From 1958 to 1962, Mr. Chambers represented another Montreal constituency, St. Lawrence-St. George, as a Tory MP. He was Liberal Leon Balcer's John Turner in the 1962 general election and was beaten again by Mr. Turner in 1963.

Mr. Chambers was parliamentary secretary to the defence minister.

Lesage Urges French-English Equality

CALGARY (CP) — Quebec Premier Lesage has appealed for equality of English- and French - speaking peoples of Canada — "the two ethnic groups which founded this country."

Quebec, mainstay of Canada's French-speaking people, wishes to assert itself "in the manner which best suits our personality," Lesage added," he told some 600 men and women at the Women's Canada Club here Wednesday night.

While he spoke, two pickets appeared at the back of the hotel where the club met, carrying signs with slogans: End Quebec Treason, and Canada for Canadians—Lesage Go Home.

The premier did not see the pickets as he arrived at the hotel or later when he left to go to a press conference.

Asked later to comment on the incident, he said: "I wouldn't call them extremists. Perhaps he Quebec they would be extremists. I'm used to pickets in my province. They picket the wrong people."

The pickets, school teachers Ed Schorr, 24, and Gordon Ford, 26, said they opposed "Quebec's concept of itself as a nation within a nation" and criticized the premier's tour was political.

NO NARROW GAP

Mr. Lesage has said his tour of Western Canada is non-political and is aimed at narrowing the gap between the two cultures, a gap arising from "a lack of understanding and knowledge."

He left Calgary by air for Victoria Wednesday night. Other points on his tour included Vancouver and Edmonton.

"In the Canada of the future," he told the Canadian Club, "we (Quebec) want a status which respects our particular personality."

"To do this it is not necessary to destroy Canada, but it would be necessary to give it another meaning and even new institutions.

"Quebec — excepting a small minority—have no intention of leaving Confederation." He said he thought of a future Canada "where all the provinces—10 or less according to the future growth of population — of our country—would have more autonomy than at present, each discharging fully its constitutional responsibilities."

Explorer Heads Expedition To Plain of the Spirits

LIMA, Peru (AP)—A search for a lost Inca city. . . . Riches of gold hidden deep in the Andes from the marauding Spanish conquerors. . . . Fame to the first explorer.

That's the alluring side. The other is stark.

Back-breaking days backing tangled jungle foot by foot with machete. . . . Scorching sun and chilling rain. . . . Poisonous snakes and man-killing Indians. . . . Frustration and disappointment.

Explorer Gene Savoy says it's worth the trouble. The 36-year-old American is organizing his third expedition to the remote Plain of the Spirits in northeast Peru, once the heart of the great Inca empire.

Savoy came to Peru six years ago to hunt for ruins of lost civilizations after exploring in Canada, the United States, Alaska and Mexico. His home is in Portland, Ore.

He is credited with discovering three unknown cities and a centuries-old 100-foot-wide stone highway in northern Peru.

Now he hopes to establish beyond doubt that extensive ruins he came across at the foot of the Maracochs and Pilcacocha Mountains in southeast Peru are those of Vilcabamba, the last refuge of the Incas.

If the ruins are those of the legendary city of Vilcabamba they will provide a missing link in the history of the mysterious Inca civilization, Savoy says, "filled with riddles."

Thousands of Inca warriors led by Emperor Manco II escaped from Cuzco, the capital of the Incas, after the Spaniards conquered their empire in the 16th century. It is believed the fleeing Incas carried great treasures of gold with them. Any treasure found legally belongs to Peru.

From Vilcabamba, the Incas made sporadic war on the Spaniards, and the city was well hidden if the reports filtered through the centuries.

U.S. explorer Hiram Bing-ham at first thought he had found Vilcabamba when he discovered the spectacular ruins of Machu Picchu in 1911. But Machu Picchu, high in the Andes, did not fit the description of Vilcabamba, described in chronicles of the period, records as a jungle capital much farther from Cuzco. Now Savoy says Picchu is one of South America's biggest tourist attractions.

Savoy, who came back with Gordo of vicious Portuguese and sketches, says he is almost certain he has found the lost city, but acknowledges:

"I sometimes have my doubts, although I have seen the ruins with my own eyes. I find it hard to believe myself."

He reported finding granite temples, palatial residences, gardens and fountains on three adjoining plateaus covering a wide area.

Nuns Hesitate To Write Devout Verse

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — When people meet the woman who wrote the poems in From the Darkroom, they usually assume all of the poetry is going to be religious.

The assumption may seem reasonable on the surface. But it's a mistake, says Sister Mary Gilbert, poet, teacher and member of the Congregation of Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

"I think nuns might be more reluctant than laymen to write religious poetry," she says, "I find, for instance, that many of the symbols that are meaningful to me don't communicate to other people. Also, if you are using this material you have to be very good'or you will really fall flat."

Sister Gilbert, an associate professor of English at Our Wright College of the Holy Names in Spokane, is one of a growing number of men and women in religious orders who are making their mark in literature.

Interviewed at Seattle University, a Jesuit institution where she is teaching this year on a leave from the Spokane school, she said:

"Some people seem to think that being a member of a religious order would be restrictive as to writing. But I don't feel this at all as far as I'm concerned. I feel more free than I would be otherwise."

"When it comes to writing, I finds the situation a little different.

"I don't think in general we are very habituated to the idea of fiction written by nuns."

Citing a six-line example as unpublished story, Sister Gilbert added:

"But if I thought I was doing was making a kind of study of religious fanaticism, which many people, it seems to me that fanaticism is present in a context in the same way it is in the outside. But if I put the story in a convent setting, besides being unacceptable to my superiors, it would help perpetuate a stereotype of nuns."

Despite these problems, one of Sister Gilbert's short stories, The Model Chapel, was included in an anthology of The Best Short Stories of 1962.

Maritime Transportation Trustees Restoring Order Among Unions

MONTREAL (CP) — Two years ago the federal government gave a three-man board the job of restoring order among maritime unions on the Great Lakes and Pacific Coast.

The Maritime Transportation Unfon Trustees were to halt violent inter - union jurisdictional disputes and introduce democratic methods to the 8,-000-member Seafarers International Union of Canada (Ind.) and four other unions.

How are they doing?

Judge Rene Lippe, the chairman, says the trustees are quickly exposing what they set out to do, criticism notwithstanding.

"We've had no major problems since we took over supervision of the unions in October 1963, and the trusteeship is moving along a steady path to its own dissolution," the judge said in an interview in his Montreal office.

"Our program to start with was ambitious and our progress has exceeded expectations."

Will the trusteeship be dissolved before its term expires Dec. 31, 1965?

"It might end before or after," he replied.

The term can be extended by order-in-council.

Judge Lippe's view is partially shared by Leonard (Red) McLaughlin, president of the SIU of Canada, the union most affected and most bitterly opposed to the imposition of the trusteeship.

BLACKBOARD BANKS

"They have achieved their task quietly and insidiously," said the scarp - red - dressed successor to Hal Banks.

Banks, whose head-knocking methods of union organization and blacklisting of dissidents have been blamed for much of the violence that has shocked the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River ports beginning in 1961, was removed from office by the trustees last year.

Later he fled to the United States to escape a five - year sentence for conspiracy to assault a rival union officer, a non - extraditable offence. He also forfeit'ed $25,000 bail.

"The unions under trusteeship are co-operating more and taking a joint approach to mutual problems," said Mr. McLaughlin.

When the bill was introduced, Red McLaughlin and other union leaders had a steamer's march on Ottawa to protest. He was charged with leading an illegal walkout, a charge still before the courts.

SEES DANGERS

"At this time the darkest cloud on the horizon continues to be the ominous growth of the old Hal Banks machine, in spite of the existence of the maritime trustees," Mr. Leitch said in a recent speech in St. Catharines, Ont.

"A great Canadian, Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, after an extensive study of almost a year . . . produced a report which, followed by the trustees, would have opened a new era for Canadian seamen and the Canadian shipping industry.

"It now is possible to see a situation developing which is potentially as dangerous as that which produced the unprecedented violence on the Great Lakes in 1961 and 1962."

The 1963 Norris report decport described the labor strife as "part of an irresponsible campaign to maintain one rapacious and violent man, Banks, in power as a dictator."

It called for establishment of a trusteeship and recommended changes in the laws to protect seamen from intimidation by union bosses.

The resulting legislation placed under trusteeship the SIU, CMU, National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada, Canadian Merchant Service Guild and 13 marine locals of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

The unions have a total membership of about 14,000. All but the SIU are Canadian Labor Congress affiliates.

The union and CLC complained at the time that the legislation was a step toward government domination and control of trade unions. This complaint is still heard but the majority of union leaders venture their cautious approval of trusteeship operations.

The original board of trustees consisted of Mr. Justice Victor Dryer of Vancouver, who resigned in December; Judge Rene Lippe of Montreal, a veteran labor mediator who succeeded him as chairman, and Charles Millard, retired national director of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The vacancy was filled early this year by Joseph MacKenzie, director of organization for the CLC.

First task of the trustees was to end inter-union raiding, the main factor in clashes between the SIU and smaller CMU.

The trustees thought they had a raiding incident several weeks ago but after an investigation they said they were satisfied it wasn't.

Rene Turcotte, a former director of organization for the SIU, showed the trustees a letter dated Aug. 3 from Jack Staples, president of the CMU, authorizing Mr. Turcotte to work for the CMU as an agent.

Mr. Staples later said Mr. Turcotte had claimed he could sign up many new members for the CMU, "so I gave him two weeks in which to try."

"He wasn't able to sign many, so I told him he was no longer an agent."

NONE SIGNED

The trustees say no SIU members were signed by the CMU. And Judge Lippe said he is sure nothing similar will occur in future.

The trustees' No. 2 problem—democratizing the SIU—posed several difficulties. Without the presence of Banks and a warning from international SIU president Paul Hall that Canadian shipping in U.S. ports would be boycotted if the SIU of Canada was dismembered.

Exercising their right to dismiss union officials without saying why, the trustees summarily ousted Banks. Mr. McLaughlin took over while constitutional elections were being prepared.

He was elected president late last year in an election that Rene Turcotte, an unsuccessful candidate, and Eddie Jalbert, former ship's cook, are trying to have voided in court on the grounds of voting irregularities.

Alan Hope, a Prince George, B.C., lawyer who is executive-director of the trusteeship, said "the last SIU elections were the fairest conducted in Canada in years."

"There were only two irregularities in the voting—cases of two seamen casting ballots in two different ports—but our machinery soon weeded them out."

Mr. Leitch, whose Upper Lakes Shipping Co. was praised in the Norris report for its courage in standing up to Banks, insists that the deposed SIU leader is still the man in control.

"It is a sad fact that the future of the Canadian lake shipping industry is decided aboard a yacht in Brooklyn," he said, referring in a newspaper man's discovery of Banks there last fall.

Judge Lippe adds that negotiations with Paul Hall have remained good and that the SIU of North America (which includes the loosely affiliated SIU of Canada and the Canadian Seafarers Union) has applied for CLC membership.

Raiding is prohibited by the CLC constitution and the trustees are cautiously hopeful that CLC membership for all maritime unions would mean a permanent end to raiding.

Their hopes were buoyed by a treaty signed by the unions themselves appear fairly content. They can see an end to the trusteeship in sight, and despite its existence they have been permitted to retain their jurisdiction and influence.

The unions at present negotiate independently with some 50 shipping companies on the lakes and several on the West Coast. The trustees would like to see the companies negotiate together.

They would also like to see one union for licensed personnel, such as ships' officers, and another for unlicensed personnel, as a step toward improved collective bargaining procedures.

The SIU and merchant service guild are the largest unions in the field and would logically be the surviving unions if this were carried through. However, a spokesman said this would probably have to await dissolution of the trusteeship and settled by the CLC.

Initial steps have been taken toward amalgamation, and on the West Coast a licensed rail brotherhood local has merged with the merchant service guild.

As for making the SIU more democratic, Mr. Hope says "plans are being made for a new constitution and we hope to see it presented to the SIU membership for ratification before the end of the Great Lakes shipping season in December."

The constitution is being written by Prof. W. W. Carrothers of the University of Western Ontario, an expert on union constitutions, and by the SIU executive board and the trustees.

It's not known how it will differ from the existing constitution but Mr. McLaughlin says it will be designed to give members a bigger voice in running their union.

W. J. Smith, president of the rail brotherhood, has accused the trustees of slanted union executives under Banks, including Mr. McLaughlin, to retain control of the SIU.

The trustees respond by saying it is up to union members to pick their executives in a fair election. They also dismiss reports that all SIU executives have criminal records, saying only one has a court record and that goes back a number of years.

The trusteeship itself has not been free of internal dissension. Mr. Millard said late last year the trusteeship was in danger of becoming "a kind of perpetuating bureaucracy" and ask for a CLC or union trusteeship to replace the governmental-appointed body. This was rejected by Ottawa in standing up to Banks, insists that the deposed SIU leader is still the man in control.

"It is a sad fact that the future of the Canadian lake shipping industry is decided aboard a yacht in Brooklyn," he said, referring in a newspaper man's discovery of Banks there last fall.

Judge Lippe adds that negotiations with Paul Hall have remained good and that the SIU of North America (which includes the loosely affiliated SIU of Canada and the Canadian Seafarers Union) has applied for CLC membership.

Raiding is prohibited by the CLC constitution and the trustees are cautiously hopeful that CLC membership for all maritime unions would mean a permanent end to raiding.

Their hopes were buoyed by a treaty signed by the unions themselves appear fairly content. They can see an end to the trusteeship in sight, and despite its existence they have been permitted to retain their jurisdiction and influence.

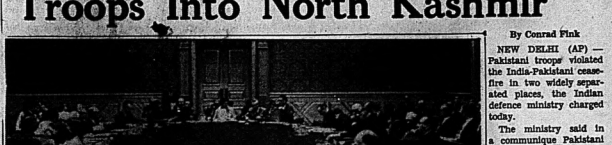
India Will Speak in Language Dragons and Tigers Understand



NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian government is "under very great pressure" from all sections in Parliament and in the nation to "sharpen its defence potential, including the production of nuclear weapons," a cabinet minister said today.

But the minister added: "We stand committed to our often-declared policy not to join the nuclear club."

He shrugged his shoulders when he said: "If wearing saffron robes (of holy men) is to be mistaken for weakness and timidity, then we will have to change our clothes."

He would not expand on this, except to say that "India is caught between the Chinese dragon and the Pakistani tiger and none can blame us if we will have to speak in a language and act in a manner which dragons and tigers understand."

The Indian government is making a reappraisal of its entire domestic and foreign policies, and spokesmen have told this reporter in conversation recently: "Don't be surprised if we have to dabble with nuclear toys—if it comes to nation survival."

India Says Pakistan Sends Troops Into North Kashmir

By Conrad Fink

NEW DELHI (AP) — Pakistani troops violated the India-Pakistani ceasefire in two widely separated places, the Indian defence ministry charged today.

The ministry said in a communique Pakistani troops crossed into the Indian-controlled part of Kashmir in the north sector Thursday, a few hours after the ceasefire went into effect and that in the southern sector, Pakistani rangers attacked an Indian police post.

The attack was repulsed by members of India's armed constabulary at Asutar, about 35 miles northwest of Jaisalmer in the desert-like state, the communique said.

"Pakistani rangers have still not withdrawn from a few other places where they made intrusions into our territory," it added. "Necessary steps are being taken."

The communique did not elaborate on what the steps were and there was no mention of any regular army units being involved.

However, both nations have police units whose arms include machine guns and which are practically indistinguishable from army units.

CLAIMS DIG TRENCHES

The defence ministry said uniformed Pakistanis also crossed near Khangar, about 90 miles north of Jammu, Kashmir's winter capital, and began digging trenches.

Defence Minister Yashwantrao B. Chavan told Parliament: "We will not sit quietly" if Pakistan tries to infiltrate Indian territory.

Action will be taken if necessary, he said, but India's first action will be to lodge ceasefire violation complaints with the United Nations.

Prime Minister Shastri said in a nationwide radio speech earlier the blackout has been lifted but let us not mistake it for the dawn of peace."

He said Pakistani leaders had talked of a possible "wider conflagration" and he added, "we cannot close our eyes to reality."

President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan warned Thursday that if the Kashmir problem is not solved "this continent will again be engulfed in a much wider conflict."

A further shadow over the ceasefire was cast by the threat of sustained guerrilla operations in India-ruled Kashmir.

The Voice of Kashmir radio, claiming to speak for a revolutionary council that presented a series of ditacks against Indian authorities in that state last week, said Thursday:

"It is for us to make the de-

Indian House Applauds Demand Country Sever Its Commonwealth Ties

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—An Indian member of Parliament today put forward a motion that India should quit the Commonwealth and members cheered loudly when he advocated nationalization of all British assets.

The member, Ghagwat Jha Azad, said in the House of the People (lower house):

"This artificial link must go. Circumstances have proved beyond doubt that they (the British) are hostile to us."

Azad, a member of the ruling Congress party, said it is time for India to nationalize all British assets in the country, including tea, jute and oil.

He said Wilson had remained silent when Pakistan invaded British in southwest Kashmir Sept. 1.

"But Wilson denounced India when its aggressor when India troops crossed the West Pakistan border in self-defence on Sept. 6," he said.

Viet Cong Attack Costs It 600 Dead

By EDWIN Q. WHITE

A U.S. spokesman said the blasts and artillery drove back the Communists with heavy losses.

South Vietnamese army sources said 600 guerrillas were killed but government losses were "considerable." The action began Thursday in the jungle hills north of Qui Nhon.

Only South Vietnamese forces were engaged in the fighting which raged around the district town of Bong Son, just east of the U.S. Army's 1st Cavalry Division's positions at the An Khe valley.

The Bong Son area was the scene of heavy fighting last February when Viet Cong units raided to the central east and cut off several district towns in Binh Dinh province.

In general, operations in the province has been fairly quiet.

The regimental - sized action that ranged along a 20-mile-front came as a surprise to U.S. advisers in Qui Nhon. A Viet Cong regiment numbers roughly 1,000 to 1,500 men.

The Viet Cong first hit the outpost before dark, and then overran it in the first light of morning.

Late Thursday, regular South Vietnamese army units and rangers headed south to the smashed post. These units were ambushed early today.

Combined U.S. and South Vietnamese air sorties during the action numbered 58, a U.S. spokesman said. A Vietnamese Force F-100 was shot down north of Bong Son but the pilot landed and was picked up by helicopter.

Another furious and bloody battle with well-entrenched Viet Cong forces was taking place about 30 miles northwest of Saigon.

Several companies of the American 1st Infantry Division have run up against a honeycomb of bunkers and tunnels laced with land mines and defended stubbornly by guerrilla forces.

16 Former Members Retired

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—The list of MPs who have decided not to seek re-election Nov. 8 is beginning to read like a "who's who" of party prominents.

At least 16 have already announced their voluntary departure from federal politics and there may be more before the final deadline for nominations arrives Oct. 25.

Latest to join the list was George Doucett, 68, who told his Conservative supporters in Yukon Wednesday night that he would not seek another nomination. He had held a seat, until last June, west of Ottawa, since 1957.

Mr. Doucett spent 20 years in the Ontario legislature, 12 of them as a cabinet minister, before entering the federal field.

Alan Macnaughton, 62, Speaker of the Commons in the last Parliament, has called it quits after 16 years as Liberal MP for Montreal Mount Royal.

Rod Kelly, 56, who won Toronto's York West riding handily in 1962 and 1963 for the Liberals, is going to become a full-time hockey player again.

Douglas Fisher, 46, one of the more personable Tory's brightest performers, has bowed out in the Port Arthur riding where he blazed to national prominence in 1957 by defeating the late C. D. Howe.

Mr. Macnaughton, Mr. Kelly

Masked Gang of Dozen Men Battles London Bobbies, Gets $96,000 Payroll

LONDON (Reuters) —A masked gang of about 12 men staged a daring daylight payroll robbery Thursday, making off with £32,000 ($96,000) after fighting a street battle with the police.

Nine persons—including three policemen—were left injured at the scene of the crime in a quiet London back street.

The gang, all wearing nylon stocking masks and wielding iron bars, rammed a payroll car and a following police car with two cars of their own in a precision-executed manoeuvre.

As women passing by in the street screamed, the gang grabbed the payroll while beating four of five guards riding in the car carrying the money.

An eyewitness said the attackers acted "like madmen." They left three policemen, injured out of the following police car, bleeding in the street.

Mood Changes At Parley

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Health ministers of the provincial governments continue their meetings with federal minister Judy LaMarsh today, apparently in milder mood than at the outset of their two-day meeting on Thursday.

Expressions among them ranged from surprise to outright anger when they arrived for the meeting and found that the federal government had decided before the meeting began to embark on a $200,000,000 program over 15 years to develop and expand medical research and training facilities.

The conference, they said, had been called to discuss among other things the need for such a vast improvement program, consequent upon the introduction of national medical care insurance.

But the provincial ministers came here to tell Ottawa what they needed. In fact, they were told what they would get.

Miss LaMarsh said the federal government sent officials to the provincial capitals "inspiring to secure statistics or provincial government needs for more and better-equipped medical, dental, and nursing schools and research laboratories."

STUDIED REPORT

Then the federal government studied the report of the royal commission on health services, headed by Supreme Court Justice Emmett Hall. And it received proposals and recommendations from the professional medical groups and associations.

Altogether, the federal government decided the federal share should be about $30,000,000 a year for 15 years, an income round sum of half a billion dollars.

But the provinces' political chiefs in the health field had other ideas, which they expressed in corridor interviews

Lesage Says Federal Govt. Should Withdraw From Municipal Fields

VICTORIA (CP) — Removal of temptation for the federal government to dabble in municipal affairs is suggested by Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec.

He told the annual dinner of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities Thursday night the best way to remove such temptation" was for Ottawa to withdraw from municipal fields in which it is already involved. He said the federal government should turn over to the provinces funds it now uses for municipal purposes.

It was the third speech of the day for Mr. Lesage and one in which he partially departed from his theme of seeking understanding of Quebec by Westcan Canada.

He spoke in the morning to about 2,000 students at the University of Victoria and then at a luncheon meeting of the Victoria's Men's and Women's Canadian Clubs.

"It was said right here if I am not mistaken," Mr. Lesage told the UBCM, "that the federal government would be planning to create a department of municipal affairs.

"Ottawa immediately denied it, but I hope that it was not a trial balloon and a first, discreet declaration of interest.

Quebec, he said, has 1,669 separate municipal governments—the result of the province's early agricultural history "when people united around their steeple."

"We are thinking of establishing larger and stronger municipalities because we are aware that a weak municipality which cannot meet its current obligations much less carry out the tasks of the future, is a burden on the province."

Mr. Lesage said in a press conference earlier in the day he was here as part of a western tou rto impart the image of Quebec.

One feature of the tour which has impressed observers is the complete attention he receives from his audiences.

"One would have heard a fly buzzing in the room," Mr. Lesage himself told newspapermen Thursday following his speech to 1,000 students at the University of Victoria.

But, in Calgary, on Wednesday, there was a strong reaction against his speech, which was considered too abstract.

Gromyko Blames States

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Soviet Union today condemned the United States as an aggressor and demanded the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Viet Nam as a necessary step for peace.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told the United Nations General Assembly in a far - ranging policy statement that U.S. bids for negotiations "will mislead no one."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg listened intently as the veteran Soviet diplomat blasted U.S. Viet Nam policies.

"The Soviet Union vigourously condemns the aggression of the United States in Viet Nam," Gromyko said.

He declared that the Soviet people are solidly behind the Viet Cong guerilla and warned that continuation of the U.S. military intervention could have serious results.

ONE WAY OUT

Asking whether there is a way out of the Viet Nam conflict, he said: "There is."

He then went on to state that there would be no withdrawal of the ceasefire was cast by the threat of sustained guerrilla operations in India-ruled Kashmir.

The Voice of Kashmir radio, claiming to speak for a revolutionary council that presented a series of ditacks against Indian authorities in that state last week, said Thursday:

"It is for us to make the de-

Canada Will Provide Nucleus for New Force

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is providing a nucleus for a new United Nations police and ceasefire supervisory force which informants say may grow in size to thousands of men.

Prime Minister Pearson announced Thursday night that the government has agreed to a request from UN Secretary-General U Thant for a contribution to the force group, called the UN India-Pakistan observation mission.

A Canadian will head the mission. Thirteen other officers, plus eight aircraft and their crews are included in the Canadian contingent.

Canada has had nine men on the 40-man UN Kashmir commission since 1949. Only Wednesday, Canada agreed to send 50 more men as a reinforcement. They leave Ottawa tonight.

A spokesman for Mr. Pearson said a new mission is needed with some "teeth" to make the shaky ceasefire work, because existing friction between the two Commonwealth countries extended outside the Kashmir commission's geographical area.

Name of the Canadian commander was not announced but was the departure time of the other personnel. But the prime minister said they are ready to leave now.

Besides the commander, Canada will contribute 13 military observers, and eight more aircraft with a senior air force officer and air crew to serve both groups.

Mr. Pearson said the new mission is to "supervise the ceasefire and withdrawal of Indian and Pakistani forces" beside Kashmir in areas not covered by the present commission's terms of reference.

Honorable, Lasting Settlement On Kashmir Urged By Martin At UN Meet

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said today an "honorable and equitable and lasting settlement" must be reached on Kashmir following the ceasefire between India and Pakistan.

Addressing the United Nations General Assembly, Martin said the news that the ceasefire between India and Pakistan has come into effect "has been received with profound relief throughout the world, and nowhere more so than in Canada."

He described the disputes in Asia as dangerous to world peace and urged negotiations, under UN auspices, in Viet Nam, ruling out a military solution in that Southeast Asian country as not providing a basis for peace.

Martin said the most immediate challenge facing the UN is to restore the world organization to solvency. He said he was sure that in the course of the next few weeks the balance of the membership will respond to Secretary - General U Thant's appeal for funds.

Speaking on what practical steps can be taken to keep the peace, Martin said a small number of countries—including Canada—have earmarked military units for UN service. But without central planning and additional offers the effectiveness of such measures is necessarily limited.

Machinery for peaceful settlement will be of no use unless governments are determined to make use of it when disputes arise, he said.

Referring to the visit of Pope Paul to the UN Oct. 4, Martin said the pontiff will be welcomed not only as the leader of the Roman Catholic Church "but as a man whose breadth of sympathy for those of other religious persuasions has been welcomed and reciprocated."

On the Indian - Pakistani ceasefire, Martin said Canada has agreed to provide the commander of the new observer group in Kashmir as well as additional personnel and a number of aircraft.

Canada has already sent 10 observers as part of the new observer group called for in the Security Council resolution of Sept. 20. This demanded that India and Pakistan order a ceasefire and pull back all their personnel to positions held before hostilities began Aug. 5.

As soon as both India and Pakistan agreed to a ceasefire effective Sept. 22, U Thant made an urgent request for 100 military observers, plus 60 civilian personnel, to supervise the 1,000-mile border between the two countries.

Nine Canadian observers already are serving with the 40-man, 11-nation UN team set up in Kashmir in 1949.

Delivering a major policy statement to the 117-nation assembly, the external affairs minister said the dispute over Kashmir was only one of the major problems facing the world today. He named as others as:

—The war in Viet Nam.

—The maintenance and strengthening of the peace-keeping and peace-building capacity of the United Nations.

—Disarmament and the containment of the nuclear threat.

—The means of maintaining the momentum of the international assault on poverty, ignorance and disease.

In Canada's view the primary concern of the General Assembly must be with the disputes which at this moment are disturbing international relationships, with incalculable consequences for world peace.

Referring to the war in Viet Nam, he said one of the basic provisions of the Geneva agreement was non-interference and it has been progressively disregarded. The ensuing instability and measures introduced to correct it have not resulted in any new and more satisfactory balance. Instead the situation has spiralled upwards.

It now is the duty of the assembly to "express clearly and forcefully the collective conviction of the United Nations that the war in Viet Nam must be brought to a negotiated settlement," he stated.

Martin then referred to a res-

India Will Speak in Language Dragons and Tigers Understand

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian government is "under very great pressure" from all sections in Parliament and the nation to "sharpen its defence potential, including the production of nuclear weapons," a cabinet minister said today.

But the minister added: "We stand committed to our often-declared policy not to join the nuclear club."

He shrugged his shoulders when he said: "If wearing saffron robes (of holy men) is the mistaken for weakness and timidity, then we will have to change our clothes."

He would not expand on this, except to say that "India is caught between the Chinese dragon and the Pakistani tiger and once can blame us if we will have to speak in a language and act in a manner which dragons and tigers understand."

The Indian government is making a reappraisal of its entire domestic and foreign policies, and spokesmen have told this reporter in conversation recently: "Don't be surprised if we have to dabble with nuclear toys—if it comes to nation survival."

India Says Pakistan Sends Troops Into North Kashmir

NEW DELHI (AP) — Pakistani troops violated the India-Pakistani ceasefire in two widely separated places, the Indian defence ministry charged today.

The ministry said in a communique Pakistani troops crossed into the Indian-controlled part of Kashmir in the north sector Thursday, a few hours after the ceasefire went into effect and that in the southern sector, Pakistani rangers attacked an Indian police post.

The attack was repulsed by members of India's armed constabulary at Asutar, about 52 miles northwest of Jaisalmer in the desert-like state, the communique said.

"Pakistani rangers have still not withdrawn from a few other places where they made intrusions into our territory," it added. "Necessary steps are being taken."

The communique did not elaborate on what the steps were and there was no mention of any regular army units being involved.

However, both nations have police units whose arms include machine guns and who are practically indistinguishable from army units.

CLAIMS BIG TRENCHES

The defence ministry said uniformed Pakistanis also crossed near Khangar, about 90 miles south of Jammu, Kashmir's winter capital, and began digging trenches.

Indian Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan told Parliament: "We will not sit quietly" if Pakistan tries to infiltrate Indian territory.

Action will be taken if necessary, he said, but India's first action will be to lodge ceasefire violation complaints with the United Nations.

Prime Minister Shastri said in a nationwide radio speech earlier "the blackout has been lifted but let us not mistake it for the dawn of peace."

He said Pakistani leaders had talked of a possible "wider conflagration" and he added, "we cannot close our eyes to reality."

President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan warned Thursday that if the Kashmir problem is not solved, "this continent will again be engulfed in a much wider conflict."

The Voice of Kashmir radio, claiming to speak for a revolutionary council of the province, a series of attacks against Indian authorities in that state in recent weeks, said Thursday: "It is for us to make the de-

Indian House Applauds Demand Country Sever Its Commonwealth Ties

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—An Indian member of Parliament today put forward a motion that India should quit the Commonwealth and members cheered loudly when he advocated nationalization of all British assets.

The member, Ghagwat Jha Azad, said in the House of the People (lower house):

"This artificial link must go. Circumstances have proved beyond doubt that they (the British) are hostile to us."

Azad, a member of the ruling Congress party, said it is time for India to nationalize all British assets in the country, including tea, jute and oil.

He said Wilson had remained silent when Pakistan invaded Chumb in southwest Kashmir Sept. 1.

"But Wilson denounced India when its aggressor when India troops crossed the West Pakistan border in self-defence on Sept. 6," he said.

Masked Gang of Dozen Men Battles London Bobbies, Gets $96,000 Payroll

LONDON (Reuters) — A masked gang of about 12 men staged a daring daylight payroll robbery Thursday, making off with £52,000 ($96,000) after fighting a street battle with the police.

Nine persons—including three policemen—were left injured at the scene of the crime in a quiet London back street.

The gang, all wearing nylon stocking masks and wielding iron bars, rammed a payroll car and a following police car with two cars of their own in a precision-executed manoeuvre.

As women passing by in the street screamed, the gang grabbed the payroll while beating four of five guards riding in the car carrying the money.

An eyewitness said the attackers acted "like madmen." They left three policemen, bundled out of the following police car, bleeding in the street.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told the United Nations General Assembly in a far - ranging policy statement that U.S. bids for negotiations "will mislead no one."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg Retsed—intently as the veteran Soviet diplomat blasted U.S. Viet Nam policies.

"The Soviet Union vigorously condemns the aggression of the United States in Viet Nam," Gromyko said.

He declared that the Soviet people are solidly behind the Viet Cong guerrilla and warned that continuation of the U.S. military intervention could have serious results.

ONE WAY OUT

Asking whether there is a way out of the Viet Nam conflict, he said: "There is."

He then went on to state that the way out has already been outlined by the Viet Cong and North Viet Nam—an end to the U.S. bombings and return to the Geneva agreement of 1954.

"The war has been brought to Viet Nam from across the ocean," he said.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Soviet Union today condemned the United States as an aggressor and threatened the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Viet Nam as a necessary step for peace.

Viet Cong Attack Costs It 600 Dead

By EDWIN Q. WHITE

SAIGON (AP) — Viet Cong forces, attacking in regimental strength, hit government positions in South Viet Nam 300 miles northeast of Saigon today. A U.S. spokesman said planes and artillery drove back the Communists with heavy losses.

South Vietnamese army sources said 600 guerrillas were killed but government losses were "moderate." The action began Thursday in the jungle hills north of Qui Nhon.

Only South Vietnamese forces were engaged in the fighting which raged around the district town of Bong Son, just east of the U.S. Army's 1st Cavalry Division's positions at the An Khe valley.

The Bong Son area was the scene of heavy fighting last February when Viet Cong units closed in on the central coast and cut off several district towns in Binh Dinh province.

In recent months Binh Dinh province has been fairly quiet.

The regimental - sized action that ranged along a 20-mile-front came as a surprise to U.S. advisers in Qui Nhon. A Viet Cong regiment numbers roughly 1,000 to 1,500 men.

The Viet Cong first hit the outpost before dark, and then overran it in the first light of morning.

Late Thursday, regular South Vietnamese army units and rangers headed south to the smashed post. These units were ambushed early today.

Combined U.S. and South Vietnamese air sorties during the action numbered 58, a U.S. Air Force spokesman said. Air Force F-100 was shot down north of Bong Son but the pilot landed and was picked up by helicopter.

Another furious and bloody battle with well-entrenched Viet Cong forces was taking place about 30 miles northwest of Saigon.

Several companies of the American 1st Infantry Division have run up against a honeycomb of tunnels and bunkers laced with land mines and demonstrated stubbornly by guerrilla forces.

16 Former Members Retired

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—The list of MPs who have decided not to seek re-election Nov. 8 is beginning to read like a "who's who" of party prominents.

At least 16 have already announced their voluntary departure from federal politics and there may be more before the final deadline for nominations arrives Oct. 25.

Latest to join the list was George Doucett, 68, who told his Conservative supporters in Yukon Wednesday night that he would not seek another nomination. He had held Laurier, a rural seat just west of Ottawa, since 1957.

Mr. Doucett spent 20 years in the Ontario legislature, 12 of them as a cabinet minister, before entering the federal field.

Alan Macnaughton, 62, Speaker of the Commons in the last Parliament, has called it quits after 16 years as Liberal MP for Montreal Mount Royal.

Ted Kelly, 56, who won Toronto's York West riding handily in 1962 and 1963 for the Liberals, is going to become a full-time hockey player again.

Douglas Fisher, 46, one of the New Democratic Party's brightest performers, has bowed out in the Port Arthur riding where he blazed to national prominence in 1957 by defeating the late C. D. Howe.

Mood Changes At Parley

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Health ministers of the provincial governments continue their meetings with federal minister Judy LaMarsh today, apparently to wither most than six minutes of their two-day meeting on Thursday.

Impressions among them ranged from surprise to outright anger when they arrived for the meeting and found that the federal government had decided before the meeting began to embark on a $200,000,000 program over 15 years to develop and expand medical research and training facilities.

The conference, they said, had been called to discuss among other things the need for such a vast improvement program, consequent upon the introduction of national medical care insurance.

Only after the provincial ministers came here to tell Ottawa what they needed, in fact, they were told what they would get.

Miss LaMarsh said the federal government sent officials to provincial capitals this spring to secure statistics on provincial government needs for more and better-equipped medical, dental, and nursing schools and research laboratories.

STUDIED REPORT

Then the federal government studied the report of the royal commission on health services, headed by Supreme Court Justice Emmett Hall. And it received proposals and recommendations from the professional medical groups and associations.

Altogether, the federal government decided the federal share should be about $20,000,000 a year for 15 years, or the nice round sum of half a billion dollars.

But the provinces' political chiefs in the health field had other ideas, which they expressed in corridor interviews

Lesage Says Federal Govt. Should Withdraw From Municipal Fields

VICTORIA (CP) — Removal of temptation for the federal government to dabble in municipal affairs is suggested by premier Jean Lesage of Quebec.

He told the annual dinner of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities Thursday night the best way to remove such temptation" was for Ottawa to withdraw from municipal fields in which it is already involved, such as federal payments to government should turn over to the provinces funds it now uses for municipal purposes.

It was the third speech of the day for Mr. Lesage and one in which he partially departed from his theme of seeking understanding of Quebec by Western Canada.

He spoke in the morning to about 2,000 students at the University of Victoria and then at a luncheon meeting of the Victoria's Men's and Women's Canadian Clubs.

"It was said right here if I am not mistaken," Mr. Lesage told the UBCM, "that the federal government would be planning to create a department of municipal affairs.

"Ottawa immediately denied it, but I hope that it was not a trial balloon and a first, discreet declaration of interest.

Quebec, he said, has 1,660 separate municipal governments—the result of the province's early agricultural history "when people united around their steeple."

"We are thinking of establishing larger and stronger municipalities because we are aware that a weak municipality which cannot meet its current obligations much less carry out the tasks of the future, is a burden on the province."

Mr. Lesage said in a press conference earlier in the day he was here as part of a western tour to impart the image of Quebec.

One feature of the tour which has impressed observers is the complete attention he receives from his audiences.

"One would have heard a fly buzzing in the room," Mr. Lesage himself told newspapermen Thursday following his speech to 1,000 students at the University of Victoria.

But, in Calgary, on Wednesday, there was a strong reaction against his speech, which was considered too abstract.

Honorable, Lasting Settlement On Kashmir Urged By Martin At UN Meet

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said today an "honorable and equitable and lasting settlement" must be reached on Kashmir following the ceasefire between India and Pakistan.

Addressing the United Nations General Assembly, Martin said the news that the ceasefire between India and Pakistan has come into effect "has been received with profound relief throughout the world, and nowhere more so than in Canada."

He described the disputes in Asia as dangerous to world peace and urged negotiations, under UN auspices, in Viet Nam, ruling out a military solution in that Southeast Asian country as not participating.

Martin said the most immediate challenge facing the UN is to restore the world's confidence in its efficiency. He said he was sure that in the course of the next few weeks the balance of the membership will respond to Secretary - General U Thant's appeal for funds. .

Speaking on what practical steps can be taken to keep the peace, Martin said a small number of countries—including Canada—have earmarked military units for UN service. But without central planning and additional offers the effectiveness of such measures is necessarily limited.

On the Indian - Pakistan ceasefire, Martin said Canada has agreed to participate in the matter of the new observer group in Kashmir as well as additional personnel and a number of aircraft.

Canada has already sent 10 observers as part of the new observer group called for in the Security Council resolution of Sept. 20. This demanded that India and Pakistan order a ceasefire and pull back all their personnel to positions held before hostilities began Aug. 5.

—Disarmament and the containment of the nuclear threat.

In Canada's view the primary concern of the General Assembly must be with the disputes which at this moment are disturbing international relationships, with incalculable consequences for world peace.

It now is the duty of the assembly to "express clearly and forcefully the collective conviction of the United Nations that the war in Viet Nam must be brought to a negotiated settlement," he stated.

Martin then referred to a resolution adopted by the UN disarmament commission last June 15 which called for a special disarmament conference.

He said Canada accepts in principle the idea of a world disarmament conference and agreed with the secretary-general that Communist China should be invited. .

Canada Will Provide Nucleus for New Force

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is providing a nucleus for a new United Nations India-Pakistan ceasefire supervisory force which informed sources say may grow in size, to thousands of men.

Prime Minister Pearson announced Thursday night that the government has agreed to a request from UN Secretary-General U Thant for a contribution to the new group, called the UN India-Pakistan observation mission.

A Canadian will head the mission. Thirteen other officers, plus eight aircraft and their crews are included in the Canadian contingent.

Canada has had nine men on the 40-man UN Kashmir commission since 1948. Only Wednesday, Canada agreed to send 20 more men as a reinforcement. They leave Ottawa tonight.

A spokesman for Mr. Pearson said a new mission is needed with some "teeth" to make the shaky ceasefire work, and because fighting between the two Commonwealth countries extended outside the Kashmir commission's geographical area.

Name of the Canadian commander was not announced, but he was the departure time of the other personnel. But the prime minister said they are ready to leave now.

Besides the commander, Canada will contribute 13 military observers, and eight more aircraft with a senior air force officer and crew to serve both groups.

Mr. Pearson said the new mission is to "supervise the ceasefire and withdrawal of Indian and Pakistani forces" inside Kashmir in areas not covered by the present commission's terms of reference.

Council to Decide on Proposal For Dundas St. Bridge After Consultant Report Is Received

Belleville city council at its next regular meeting will decide whether it will proceed with the construction of a new Dundas Street Bridge over the Moira River, together with a re-location of the roadway leading across the bay to Prince Edward county.

Estimated cost of the complete project which would in all probability be done in three phases is $1,430,000 with the city's share estimated at $422,000.

In addition to the Dundas Street bridge over the Moira the proposed work would include reconstruction of Dundas street between the river in a point west at the Devil's Elbow west of the junction of Dundas and Highland Ave. and an overhead structure to pass traffic over the CPR tracks.

TOPIC FOR DECADES

Construction of a bridge over the Moira at Dundas Street has been a local topic for decades and city council in recent years has gotten closer to agreeing that such a bridge should be built.

The big question has been when the bridge will be built and whether it should be a concedence over the proposed new bridge at the north end of Church and Front Streets.

Yesterday council heard the report of a recent traffic analysis by Dana and Smith, consulting and professional engineers of Toronto who have recommended that a new Dundas street bridge be proceeded with.

Accordingly, after a discussion of more than two hours, a notice of motion was presented calling for construction of the Dundas Street bridge to be proceeded with and that Dana and Smith be retained to draw final plans for the project.

UP FOR DECISION

The notice of motion will be up for decision at the October 4th meeting of council.

Mr. N. E. Damas in his report said that current traffic volume in the Lower Bridge area exceeded capacity by 10 per cent during the 4 o'clock peak hour period, while at the Upper Bridge traffic exceeded capacity by 17 per cent—also during the peak hour period.

If population growth following 1960 estimates and traffic deficiencies of from 20 to 60 per cent would prevail by 1970 at the Front and Bridge Streets intersection and up to 40 per cent at the interection of the Upper Bridge and Front St.

Mr. Damas stated that relief is required at both the Upper and Lower bridges and that construction of both the Dundas Street bridge and the Church St. projects were currently warranted.

OWNERS OBJECT

However, with the capacity deficiency at the lower bridge being greater, it was suggested the city might consider construction of the Dundas Street bridge first.

Owners of businesses in the West Dundas Street area below the Devil's Elbow hill were present at council voicing objection to the Dundas Street project which they claimed would cut off easy access to their places of business.

Local solicitor Ben Hurley said that council as well as owner of a transport business in the Dundas Street area. Mr. Hurley stated that council's decision be delayed so that Mr. Black could submit an alternative proposal.

Rod Cameron appeared for Mrs. Freda Patterson, owner of the Bay Bridge service station, also asking that council consider other proposals.

WOULD BE CUT-OFF

Mayor Bishop of Finkle Machine Shop, said the proposed Dundas Street project, Church and Front Streets cut off place of business.

He realized, however, that a new thoroughfare was needed on Dundas St., but instead of the city's current proposal, also that consideration be given to moving the railway track to the north side and south thus allowing an easier grade up the Devil's Elbow hill. He said he was prepared to be agreeable to such a proposal.

Such a move, he said, would eliminate the necessity of fill and a retaining wall at the base of the hill and would allow continued access to his place of business. He said that the proposed rear access would be by way of Norfolk St. would not allow sufficient manoeuvrability to his large construction cranes.

SOME NOT SATISFIED

But despite the traffic analysis report which predicted by 1970 difficulties with more bridges across the river were constructed, some members of council were completely satisfied that the Dundas bridge was required now.

Ald. Don Whalen said the city was not expanding the way it should and suggested council was worrying about a problem which it failed to have. "Let us wait until we have a problem," he suggested.

And Alderman Jack Allin didn't agree that the degree of increased traffic congestion at the Upper Bridge was less than at Bridge Street. He said that traffic on North Front Street had increased 100 per cent since 401 highway was opened.

And Alderman Frank Murray wanted to know what would happen to the traffic pattern when the city's new industrial park in the north end of the city was filled.

"And it will be filled," he said.

Mr. Damas, however, said that his survey showed that there was actually less traffic at the Upper Bridge than there was in 1960.

COST ESTIMATES GIVEN

Both Ald. Allin and Ald. Thomas Gaby wondered when construction of the proposed new College Street bridge was posed.

A pre-engineering report has been ordered for the College Street bridge but Mayor Jack Ellis said there was now no money in the city's five-year capital works budget for construction of this project.

Alderman Jack Deacon said he was amazed that the cost of the lower bridge had increased by only 17 per cent since 1960.

Cost estimates for the proposed three phase, Dundas Street project showed that the bridge and its approaches was expected to cost $685,000; relocation of Bay Bridge Road and railway overpass $376,000, and rebuilding of Dundas Street west of the river to the top of the Devil's Elbow hill $436,000.

Rosh Hashanah Jewish New Year

The beginning of the Jewish New Year 5726 Sept. 27-28 marks the anniversary of the creation of the world, which occurred according to tradition around this season. Hence Jewish chronology begins the year with this day. In the Bible the day is mentioned and referred to as the Day of Blowing the Trumpet or the Day of Remembrance. It is also considered as the Day of Judgment when all mankind is judged by the Creator, and the fate of each individual is inscribed in the Book of Life.

This Festival inaugurates the Ten Days of Penitence, the most solemn season in the Jewish calendar, which has been set apart for retrospection and self-examination.

The High Holidays differ from the other Jewish festivals in that they are neither historical nor agricultural in origin. They commemorate the Jew primarily as an individual rather than the member of a group, and are predominantly of a religious character. The observance of the High Holidays is characterized by a solemn solemnity. All conscientious Jews abstain from their daily occupation and participate in community worship.

It is a custom to exchange good wishes personally by New Years cards with the words: L'SHANAH TOVAH TIKATEV - May you be inscribed for a good year. It is a custom at home at the beginning of the meal after saying the Kiddush ("Sanctification Prayer" to dip an apple in honey. In the morning the Shofar, the Ram's horn is blown to intensify the spirit of reverance to God.

Land Assembly 'Surprise' Annoys Utilities Members Who Put Blame on Council

TRENTON — Dealing with what was described by PUC chairman, Clifford A. Baker, as "the laughliest agenda on record," the members of the utilities commission spent a good three and a half hours yesterday afternoon, agreeing to disagree . . . and at times almost at each other's throats.

Mayor MacDonald and the members of his council, (who fortunately were not at the meeting) were berated by Mr. Baker and Mr. Hilton for not notifying the commission that a government land assembly housing project was being put up in the Reid (North Byron) Street area. The commissioners said they had not even been aware that the V. P. Carswell Elementary School was being built in this area until asked about a month ago. Plans and put water mains and auxiliary pipes to serve the school in time for the September 7th opening.

PUC engineers, having been told the main reason for the serve 300 homes and the school, decided a 12-inch main was indicated. But the word got to the provincial and federal government agencies is to only pay for a six-inch main. The township has to pay the difference in cost. This amounts to $2,920 and the PUC isn't getting to pay it.

"You sprung this thing on us," Mr. Hilton accused the mayor, in a tone of voice which made the rafters ring. "This was never discussed at a commission meeting."

"I heard there was a V. P. Carswell School, but I didn't have a clue as to where it was located," Chairman Baker said, in no softer tone.

"This thing has been five years in the making," defended the mayor, "It's been in the papers."

CALL IN COMPUTER

Mr. Page has come up with an idea, borrowed from the city of Kingston, where a similar situation existed. Data was fed into a computer and when the single age contrivance came back with an answer which vindicated the Kingston commission stand as to the size of the main needed. The land assembly authorities then agreed to pay the difference.

It was decided to call in the space-age monster and talk to about the Trenton problem, in hopes it would co-operate with the Trenton council.

"I hope it does a better job than it did on Grade 13 results in Quebec" commented Mr. Baker.

(There was even a suggestion the computer might be bribed.)

In any event, no matter what answer the computer makes, it's much late in the day, because the 12-inch main is already in . . . and buried.

The Carswell school is being served, after a fashion. A pipe has been laid overland to supply water, and sewage disposal works, and sometimes it doesn't.

After a great deal of searching, Mr. Page came up with a 1962 reference on the books to the land assembly deal, and Mr. Baker found a notation that the PUC would install whatever size main was indicated, with to the developer paying the cost.

Anyhow, whether or not the developer will be stuck with the cost of the 12-inch main now depends on the computer.

ANOTHER MAIN PROBLEM

Another bone of contention was whether the Westmount Park developer, Wasil Sidor, should pay the entire cost of an extension of an eight inch water main which will probably serve a developer adjoining his property.

Mr. Hilton doesn't think Mr. Sidor is being given a fair deal. However, the mayor said Mr. Sidor had failed to live up to his promises about services in his present subdivision. The matter was shelved for the time being.

The mayor came in for more criticism when the commission objected to the town paying the Rayner company the town's share of a hold-back on work done on Trenton streets last summer, before the PUC had been consulted. "Somebody" has to pay the contractors $396.83 on the deal. And the commission had asked the town to settle with Rayner before the consulting engineer Jack Tomlinson until all PUC accounts in connection with the deal had been satisfied.

The Canadian Copper and Brass Development Association had submitted a report on a proposed rate of 7cents per cubic foot per pipe, which might lay cedence in determining the pipe, which came from Murphy Street, was 20 years old, and was found to be thin, the pipe was corroded, through erosion, said the experts, and was too old for further service it was expected to supply.

"Seventy-five per cent of the town pays half that rate," quoth Mr. Baker, "per," said chairman Baker.

"There's a good million dollars left in the in town," agreed Mr. Hilton.

The subject was dropped.

The commission decided to take a "neutral" stand on a proposed sanitary sewer for McNichol Street. Some time ago, in response to a petition residents on this street, costs were gone into. These proved to be too high for the residents and the petition was withdrawn. Later, the costs were reduced. The residents were consulted, and as the PUC owns two lots, it was considered as "resident."

Yesterday, the commission decided to go along with whatever the majority of the other residents want.

REPORTS ON EMO

Mr. Page gave a brief report on the recent attendance at the regional emergency measures' conference. Subject of the meeting was measures which are taken should an atomic bomb fall close enough to Trenton (or other communities) to affect the water supply.

Mr. Page, as a "key" person, was asked to attend a meeting to make for the Belleville headquarters as soon as the alarm was sounded.

"Maybe I'd get there and maybe I wouldn't," he commented. "But with this street traffic on the Belleville road."

Trenton is one of the few communities in Ontario which has a plan for action should a bomb fall in other places as Toronto or Niagara.

"If a bomb falls on Trenton, we won't have to worry about the plan," he told the commission.

The consulting firm of Totten and Sims has been asked to go over estimates of the cost of building a water storage pond in Murray township. The engineers will report the projected cost of $500,000 at the present and a retaining dam against the new development road is excessive — to say the least. A revised report should be available within two weeks.

GET EYES TESTED

All commission employees are off to the optometrist today to have their eyes examined.

Meter foreman, John Ormsby will attend a meterman's workshop in Toronto in November, at a cost of less than $50 to the commission and Mr. Hilton and possibly Mr. Baker will attend the annual meeting of District No. 1, Eastern Ontario Municipal Electrical Association, in Picton, Oct. 7 and 8.

The commission has approved another safety award. This is on an accident-free year in 1964 in the waterworks' department and was in the form of a citation by the American Water Works Association. It will join its fellows on the commission board room wall.

The commission will join with Ontario Hydro in a campaign to get electric driers into Trenton homes and, incidentally, electric blankets, which will be given as a bonus.

The commission agreed to install connections to a six-inch main for the proposed new subdivision on land across from Coulter Crescent. The developer must pay for the six-inch main which will connect to the 16-inch main on Dufferin Ave.

The Moreau car which had gone out of control, struck the front window of the House and House hardware store.

This amounts to $49,000 and the PUC isn't getting to pay it.

"You sprung this thing on us," Mr. Hilton accused the mayor, in a tone of voice which made the rafters ring. "This was never discussed at a commission meeting."

Junior 'B' Hockey Club Loses Manager

TRENTON — Claiming that he was not being given the support he expected and offered to a manager of a hockey club, Jack Bonn, recently elected manager of Trenton's new Junior B hockey team, resigned Tuesday night. Howard Wesse of Maple Kings' fame is president of the club and treasurer is Gordon Webb.

In accepting the position at manager, Mr. Bonn said he would have to give up his interests in minor hockey to a great extent. Now that he has bowed out from the Junior B set - up, he may go back to his first love.

While no "concrete" reason was given for Mr. Bonn's sudden withdrawal from the Wesse team, it is understood that he had asked for a "carte blanche" for the expenses involved, and this the other members of the executive did not feel like conceding.

Soviet Union Avoided Taking Sides in Dispute Between India, Pakistan

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—The Indian-Pakistan conflict marks one of the few times that the Soviet government has avoided taking sides in an international dispute.

The effect of the Kremlin's policy of usually taking one side or the other was invariably been to aggravate tensions and make a settlement more difficult.

But in the Indo-Pakistan war, Moscow has been a paragon of impartiality and a foremost exponent of peaceful settlement.

It even went so far as to offer the city of Tashkent in Soviet central Asia, as any other city, as a site for a meeting between Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri and Pakistani President Ayub Khan.

AGREE TO MEETING

Shastri and Ayub Khan are to-day reported to have agreed in principle to such a meeting. If it comes off it will be an important accomplishment for Soviet diplomacy.

During the conflict a stream of messages and announcements poured from Moscow urging a cessation of hostilities. From a strictly neutral line beginning they grew more forceful in tone, reaching what was apparently the Soviet view of genuine concern over the conflict that was not far from its southern border.

Typical of the later variety was a statement by one of the Soviet news agency Tass saying Moscow was "seriously alarmed" by the fighting and again calling on the Indian and Pakistani governments to display reason and take measures to end the military actions immediately.

The Kremlin was obviously worried about the possibilities offered by the war for Chinese making by Peking directed forward furthering its own ambitions in Asia.

EXPRESSED CONCERN

This became clear Thursday when the Soviet Union for the first time openly expressed over Chinese troop concentrations on the Indian border. The Communist party newspaper Pravda said Peking's military movements "cannot but evoke the concern" of those interested in peace.

Until a year or so ago the Soviets refused to talk to or speak to side with India in a struggle with Pakistan. Recently, however, the Kremlin

Second Appeal By Minister Is Deferred

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart has deferred for second appeal by Russell Horsburgh, former Chatham United Church minister convicted of five charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Originally scheduled to be heard this week by the Ontario Court of Appeals, the appeal was deferred until further notice.

However, it was later learned the appeal may be heard early next month. Crown and defence representatives declined to comment.

William Bowman, director of public prosecutions, said: "We need more time to prepare for the appeal."

Mr. Horsburgh, who voluntarily resigned from the ministry after the fuss on $2,500 he pending his appeal. The United Church board of evangelism and social service this week gave him a $5,000 compassionate grant for living expenses while awaiting the outcome of his appeal.

Late last fall Mr. Horsburgh was sentenced to one year on conviction of the charges while pastor of Park Street United Church in Chatham. His first appeal was denied by Mr. Justice Eric Moorhouse in June.

BRANDT WON'T RUN

BONN (Reuters) — Willy Brandt, defeated opposition Socialist candidate for West German chancellor in last Sunday's West German election, said Wednesday he will not be a candidate in the next general election in 1969. He told a press conference he will return to his job as mayor of West Berlin and will also remain chairman of the Social Democratic party.

Path to Progress

While Belleville's population continues its upward spiral, growth in the economic and industrial spheres has not been proportionate.

This was the theme of observations made by a number of speakers of late pointing the way to swifter progress in this community.

Zdenik Kvarda of Belleville, who is Ontario president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, told the local Jaycees Tuesday night that Belleville has a poor image in the eyes of other centres. While most communities were expanding with new industries and go-ahead ideas the citizens of Belleville "just sit and wait."

Mr. Kvarda said most centres were getting new industries and business because the organizations in these communities were co-operating. As an example, he might have mentioned Kitchener which has been chosen as the site for a new $20,000,000 plant for the manufacture of car chassis frames.

This is the kind of spirit Belleville needs to get moving on the industrial plane, along with the co-operation of citizens and community organizations.

The outward appearance of any city and the state of its services are indications of the health of the community, and Alderman Donald Joss told Council this week that while this year's works program was possibly the biggest ever, the streets program was actually getting backwards.

Alderman Joss claimed the city was not getting its fair share of the provincial tax dollar for spending on local streets. "It is time we asserted ourselves to get our fair share of the department's" he said. "The people of this city are being treated like second-class citizens."

Certainly, Belleville needs to assert itself in various directions. We need better roads, beginning with the improvement of Pinnacle St., and we need new industries.

Another recent speaker was Carl A. Lawrence, assistant professor of marketing at Queen's University School of Business. He told the Belleville Sales and Ad Club that the downtown area will see a renaissance as the hub of community living in the city of the future.

He envisaged a future of "nucleated cities, with housing and industrial belts ringing a central core planned for shopping, recreation and cultural pursuits."

We must think of this and many other problems of community advancement. Mr. Lawrence's ideas belong to the future—but not to the immediate future. All growth is a gradual process and Belleville must concentrate on immediate needs, while at the same time not losing sight of industrial possibilities which often involve long-term planning and negotiations.

Filipino Nurses

There are not many hospitals that can boast they have all the nursing staff they need, and when one undergoes extension the problem of obtaining personnel can become acute.

For Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital in Picton the problem of securing staff for its new wing has been solved in part by the arrival of four young nurses from the Philippines.

Hospital administrator William Cook has been appealing for help and had been working for months to get additional nurses for the staff.

From all accounts Filipino nurses are well-trained and of excellent calibre. Canada is evidently becoming increasingly popular with these girls, for in response to inquiries about prospects here a nursing delegation from Toronto recently spent some time in Manila interviewing girls wanting to come to this country.

Where there is a shortage of nurses, other girls from the Philippines, as they become available, should be able to fill the gap.

Soviet Immigrants

One of the first Russians to emigrate to Canada through formal channels since the war has arrived in Oshawa with his wife and three-year-old daughter. He is Georgi Gerasin, a 35-year-old heavy equipment operator, and his story is an interesting one.

Mr. Gerisin was born in Pinsk, Poland, an area that subsequently became part of the Soviet Union. At the end of the war he went to Australia and after-seven years there returned to his birthplace. Shortly after his arrival in Russia he married and settled in his wife's hometown of Baku, on the Caspian Sea.

While on vacation in Moscow last year, Mr. Genich consulted the Canadian Embassy and managed, after persistent telephone calls, to get visas to enter Canada.

Mr. Genich's mother, three sisters, a brother and two aunts are already in Oshawa. The family was dispersed during the war and Mr Genich is seeing his mother for the first time in 19 years. His wife Valia, an attractive blonde, who speaks only Russian, leaves her mother, a sister and a brother in the Soviet Union.

One Way to True Ecumenism

Windsor Star

The ecumenical movement, despite the great progress it has made in the past decade, could become a theologian's plaything if the lay membership of the various Christian groups remains apathetic. One way to build enthusiasm is the application of ecumenical principles to religious retreats.

The retreat is an old-established custom, common in the Roman Catholic church and used to some extent by Anglican and United Church groups. It stresses a quiet examination of the individual conscience in surroundings removed as far as possible from the rush of everyday life. An experienced leader is generally present to give guidance and advice, but the main goal is for the individual to ponder the spiritual values whose importance tends too easily to be overlooked.

A great deal of the spirit of ecumenism pervades many retreats. At most places set aside for retreats, there are no bars against attendance by persons of other denominations, or indeed of no denomination. But Roman Catholics naturally tend to go to a Roman Catholic retreat, Anglicans to an Anglican retreat, and so on.

A great initiative for the ecumenical movement could come through some form of ecumenical retreat. Members of many denominations could attend, laying aside denominational differences and concentrating in a quiet and thought-provoking atmosphere on their common allegiance to the Christian ideal.

The quiet self-examination of a retreat brings truth close to the individual. It is a proper setting for examination of the truths of the ecumenical movement.

Warning Signals in B.C.

Vancouver Sun

It is good to hear such a forceful voice of sanity raised against the inflationary dangers facing this country as a whole and perhaps British Columbia in particular. Mr. Bennett's call for caution echoes and re-emphasizes Prime Minister Pearson's admonition when he recently sounded the signal for a temporary cut-back in federal construction orders.

Coming from Mr. Bennett, the warning carries extra weight. He has been—and still is—one of the liveliest and most buoyant prophets of B.C.'s expansionist pressures. But he wisely says, in his speech this week in Prince George, that:

"Business — private enterprise — must not look for a quick nickel of profit. Labor leaders, too. Unless a balance is kept, there could be a crash again."

B.C. has suffered through such cycles before. We want no more of them. In urging policies of moderation on both management and labor, Mr. Bennett can point if he wishes to instances during his own long tenure as premier when the philosophy of "grab all you can while the grabbing's good" has brought serious trouble in its wake.

Mr. Bennett must have this in mind in saying that high business profits and wages could lead to an unwinding of the economy. People would refuse to pay and projects would not be undertaken. "A recession would be as bad for some as prosperity," he cautioned.

The storm signals are flying now. The cost of living in our country is rising with no end in prospect and the cost of construction is going out of sight.

Leaders of business and labor know full well the practices which the premier is hitting at when he talks of "excesses" and pleads for "restraint." The public also has a healthy respect for what's going on. It will know where to place the blame unless the overheating process is cooled off by a little common sense.

Cheating Is Not Uncommon

From Macleans Magazine

Most people are honest most of the time. If they were not, the whole commercial system that supports our complex society would collapse.

Yet an uncomfortably large number of otherwise trustworthy persons will cheat a bit, if they can, on things like income taxes, customs duties, unemployment insurance and automobile insurance. Right now, as we work through the various stages of hospital insurance and medi-care, the temptation to cheat multiplies.

A humorous but rather sad little pamphlet circulated by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission warns of what will happen if these temptations are not made socially unacceptable and suggests that malingerers with hospital insurance are one reason for high hospital costs and the shortage of beds. It shows a picture of a woman obviously healthy enough to go home but lying up a bed and dreaming of new wallpaper as she waits for her living room to be redecorated. Another woman, because there is no argument, has to have an operation postponed.

Meanwhile a woman with a job, whose children are in hospital, leaves them there longer than necessary to avoid hiring somebody to care for them. The Ontario plan, too, that there may be patients who benefit if free from hospital has been delayed because doctors have been too busy to get their work done.

All these examples are a form of cheating and represent the sort of attitude to public institutions and government welfare that could eventually destroy welfare programs. Such dishonesty has to be purged or we won't be able to afford a welfare state.

Strictly Personal
Men Judge Others by Reputation

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The elder William Collier, after he had won a considerable reputation as a comedian, explained why he would never try tragedy: "If I were to walk out on a stage solemnly and announce, 'Father's dead,' everybody in the audience would roar with laughter."

A man's reputation creates a public superstition about him; and this superstition then becomes the man. Bernard Shaw said the most deadly serious things and everyone thought he was joking, because "Shaw is a great comic wit."

The reverse is also true. Alla Nazimova, the Russian actress once entertained at a tea with a recitation in her native tongue. The guests were thrilled they exclaimed, "Such intense feeling! What was the recitation?"

"Mary, Russian alpha b e t," shrugged Nazimova.

Mark Twain put this theory to test in a practical way one evening. He had the reputation for smoking the vilest cigars in his world, though he insisted this was not true.

One of the 12 guests he invited for dinner was a man famous for his costly, custom - made cigars. Just before the dinner, Twain strolled at his home and stole a double handful of this choice brand, removed the labels, and put the cigars in the box of his favorite brand at home.

"At the end of supper," Twain related, "when cigars were offered, they took them, lit them, and struggled with them in the greasy silence for a short time.

"Then they made excuses and fled coughing, each one another's heels with indecent eagerness. In the morning I found all the cigars between the door and the front gate, except one which lay in the plate of the man from whom I had cabbaged the lot. He told me afterward that some days I would get shot for giving people that kind of cigar to smoke."

We live by legends more than by realities: half our habits are based on delusive beliefs and imaginary fears. It is no wonder, then, that our social and political life is so easily manipulated by men who understand that public reputation goes further than private character?

Short-Lived

Kingston Whig-Standard

It will come as no surprise to discerning citizens of Canada's new flag, at least from a functional point of view, leaves a great deal to be desired. The white background quickly turns grey in dusty, modern communities and the red maple leaf fades to a washed-out pink almost as rapidly. But what is the country's chief national flag — no matter what its design — will probably be shocked to learn that the experts set the life of our present flag at only three weeks.

The unofficial event over Italy-seen a Red Ensign, after months and months of use, looking as anaemic as the new flag does after a few weeks of use? Has it occurred to anyone that perhaps the manufacturers in their haste to get the new flags on the market, simply pawned off an inferior product on a gullible Canada?

To Your Good Health
Operation on Hemorrhoids No Picnic, But Bearable

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am afflicted with what I call "the great American complaint," hemorrhoids.

Is the tendency hereditary? In the families of both my parents hemorrhoids and varicose veins have been common.

I don't want to have an operation and expose myself to the agony after surgery. However, I recently learned of a new (to me) technique from a friend who underwent the surgery 10 years ago. She said she had virtually no pain except tenderness for 36 hours.

She has had no recurrence and no adverse after effects.

If the operation is as easy as I have been led to believe, the great American complaint has met its Waterloo.

Any information on this new technique will be welcome to those of us who have delayed surgery from fear of pain for 30 years or more. — Mrs. H. A.

* * *

The technique is not new. It has been used for quite some time.

Having had this operation myself several years ago, I agree that it is no strawberry social, but the discomfort is only temporary and the relief afterward is lasting.

Your friend, I would say, probably understated the case somewhat. But she makes up for the thousands of people who have scared the daylights out of a bit of folks like you. I would not call the operation agony; rather, I'd say that for a few days you don't feel like being polite, but that's true of a lot of operations that we haven't been conditioned to fear.

Any anybody would put up with hemorrhoids for 30 months let alone 30 years, instead of having a day-and-a-half-to-five days, is beyond me.

* * *

Come to think of it, you had more to worry about 30 years ago. We have so much less a then about keeping the patient comfortable. But don't continue living 30 years ago. Things are different now.

As a matter of fact, and now I'm speaking as a doctor to a stead of somebody who has had the operation, it's my distinct impression that we rarely hear about the good operations, but we hear a distressful amount of things about the bad ones.

When results are poor, it is usually because someone didn't think the doctor knew what he was talking about when he gave instructions. The patient didn't go back for occasional dilations, and thus, allowed adhesions to form, and was worse off than with the hemorrhoids; and he didn't pay attention to diet and medication, and then he blamed it all on the operation.

Yes, hereditary has something to do with weakening of veins and hence contributes to hemorrhoids, but there are other factors that provoke the condition: Constipation, pregnancy, occupations requiring a person to stand in one place a good deal of the time.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Are spices drying to the blood or harmful if used excessively? Our family likes dishes which contain cinnamon, nutmeg, allspice and mace. — W. W. G.

Spices are neither an ulcer or similar condition, then avoid spices, including the ones you named. For myself, one, used amounts for flavoring are harmless.

* * *

Note to D. V. C.: Soreness of the breasts just before the menstrual period isn't too unusual. The condition isn't serious. Your doctor can give you medication to ease it.

* * *

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with flatures, flatulus, itching and other rectal problems, write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dunellen, Ill., requesting a copy of the booklet, "The Real Cure For Hemorrhoids," enclosing a long self - addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Sept. 24, 1965 . . .

Sir James Brooke, an English soldier and traveller, was officially made rajah of Sarawak 124 years ago today — in 1841 — as a reward for helping the sultan of Borneo put down a rebellion. He later was made British governor of Labuan, which post was taken from him after a financial inquiry. He lived chiefly partially in Sarawak and had to put down a local rebellion on almost every visit. However the title passed without dispute to his descendants to the day.

1929 — Lieut. James Doolittle demonstrated instrument flying over New York.

1915 — Britain and France agreed to Greece's demand for 150,000 soldiers as a condition of entering the war; French guns demolished a German munitions depot near Thebes.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940—Finland sanctioned the reinforcement of the German garrison in Norway over Finnish territory; the RCN took over six destroyers at Halifax; Australia decided to raise a fourth division; London underwent its mass air raids; Gibraltar was bombed by Vichy France in reprisal for General de Gaulle's attempt to take Dakar.

On Relief

London Free Press

Poverty and squalor amid wealth and plenty have given rise to genuine concern in Northern Ireland where a breed of "all-Canadian hillbillies" eke out an existence in the rich tobacco country.

According to Robert Perry, county warden, it has become tradition with a number of families to be put on relief and live on relief. The tradition has been passed along from generation to generation.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 24th, 1945

Possibility of lifting sometime this fall the federal order under which Canada observes Daylight Saving time across the Dominion as a wartime power-saving measure is under discussion by a special committee of the cabinet war council, it has been made, government spokesman said today.

Numerous inquiries for information on the order-in-council effecting daylight saving time throughout the year have been made through the secretary of state's department, however, and indications were that a decision would be forthcoming soon.

Some sources believed the order would be lifted, probably in October, but nothing official could be learned. Compulsory daylight saving was first introduced in the spring of 1940 when it was enforced as a power-conserving measure in Ontario and Quebec for those communities which had observed daylight saving time in the summer of 1940.

30 YEARS AGO

There are approximately 200 families on relief in the city at the present time according to His Worship Mayor Geo. O. Tice. Mr. Thomas Bowles of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin and Mr. F. M. Robb have arrived from California; they are the entire trip by motor car.

50 YEARS AGO

Lieut.-Col. Lorne W. Marsh, who has been in command of Kitchener Military Hospital, has been granted leave of absence for 12 months owing to the fact that he is largely engaged in the manufacture of munitions here at the plant of Marsh Bros. Manufacturing Co. David Barragar, second in command, has been given command of the 1 regiment and he has arrived home from Barriefield to take over the duties. Major Barragar enrolled in the 12th Regiment in 1890 and since then he has taken a keen interest in military matters. He has been engaged lately in lecturing at Barriefield.

From our file copy at this time in 1865: "The 15th Battalion will parade in the hospital lot at the north east corner of Victoria Avenue and Church Street this evening, and no doubt there will be the usual crowd present to listen to the band and watch the soldiers drill. Older citizens enjoy this and the young fry have a hilarious time."

What's a Million?

Vancouver Sun

We have finally come up with our answer to the nonsensible question attributed to the late great C. D. Howe when he was Canada's Minister of Munitions and Supply.

"What's a million dollars?" he was supposed to have asked in alighting tones.

There is no record that anyone answered him at the time. But recently President Johnson asked Congress for $1.7 billion to finance the deadly little war in Vietnam through next January.

At that rate, a million dollars is what one side will spend on a war it admits it can't win, every two hours and twenty-five minutes. Not much, is it?

A United Appeal

A family of four, out for an evening drive, cruise along the highway at an easy speed, enjoying the beautiful scenery around them.

Over the hill a speeding car is passing a truck. The family spies the lights. They turn to the right. Time was too short. Crash. The sickening thud of metal against metal. The cries of human agony.

Sirens are heard. Ambulances. Police. Off to the hospital. A 16-year-old girl is in critical condition. Her life, which is just getting underway, is on the verge of collapse.

Blood. Somebody give her some blood.

And the Red Cross is there.

It happens all the time. Human tragedy is a daily thing and somebody has to do something about it.

The United Appeal is trying to, but it needs help. YOUR Help.

It's not all accidents. There are boys with nothing to do but get into trouble who should be given something to do. The Belleville Minor Sports Associaties seek to that.

Leadership and citizenship training are needed for our youth. The Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Leage and Y.M.C.A. provide it, along with some good clean fun for the kids.

There are children from broken homes who need help and guidance. It's not their fault, but they need help, help they can not give themselves. They have to depend upon the Children's Aid Society or the Civic Action Committee. They have to depend upon YOU.

There are the handicapped, unable to make their own way in life. Are we going to ignore them? Are we to throw them on the scrap pile and forget they ever existed? The Canadian National Institute for the Blind says no. The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society says no. The Mental Health people say no. What do you say?

There are families in desperate trouble. Husbands and wives whose marital discord is disrupting family life. Are we to let them continue in their trouble until it grows so bad it is out of control? Do YOU not feel a family is worth keeping together? The Family Counselling Service of Belleville and Hastings County is working to keep families together. The United Appeal is helping them. Are YOU?

There are young boys injured at hockey games. Or spectators injured when stands cave in. The St. John Ambulance serves these people.

The Victorian Order of Nurses provides free nursing care to hundreds who cannot afford to pay. Are you involves some expense on their part, but who should pay? Should the lonely, helpless widow eking out a bare existence have to pay or go without nursing help? The United Appeal thinks not.

The United Appeal opens Monday. It needs YOUR support. The people it helps need YOUR support.

There are people working voluntarily night and day to organize the United Appeal drive. People who are not forced into giving up so much of their time and energy, but people who are interested in Belleville becoming a better place in which to live. People whose unselfish efforts look for no reward, except perhaps to know that poverty and pain have become easier to bear because of their efforts.

You can ignore the United Appeal if you wish. It is easy to do. But if you do you ignore a child who needs to eat or a girl who needs blood. The choice is YOURS.

The United Appeal is ready. Are YOU?

$200,000 Worth of Bourbon Is Riding on Every Taste

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Dan Knopf leaned over the sink, wiggled his mouth and let fly with about one ounce of bourbon and water.

Then he concentrated.

After all, Knopf is one of the best organoleptic analysts in the business. And he knows that $200,000 worth of bourbon is riding on that spit.

And after all the chemical and electronic tests are done, the tongue makes the final judgment on 300 barrels of his employer's whisky.

As fascinating and simple as tasting bourbon may sound, not everybody measures up.

"This is just a guess," he said, "but I would estimate that 60 per cent of the chemists I run across I could train to be tasters."

Knopf said the job requires a memory for taste, about two years' training and an analytical mind. He seldom tastes in the afternoon and never after coffee. Coffee makes the bourbon taste wonderful. Afternoon dulls the sense of taste.

Other than those restrictions, a chemist-taster can do almost anything. Chew gum, wear perfume or after - shave lotion, smoke (preferably only in the afternoon) or eat (but not highly seasoned foods).

The key to success is the taste memory. You've got it or you haven't got it.

Even when a man becomes a senior taster, he never goes it alone. That down-to-earth thumb means too much in dollars and cents for the company to trust one man's judgment.

But two thumbs down can mean the drain for a load of bourbon though the company likes to salvage as much as possible.

No matter how good the taste, the organoleptic analysts never (well, almost never) swallow. Knopf's opinion that a heavy drinker would not make a good taster.

Radiation Protection Unit Ready for Nuclear Power

OTTAWA (CP) — Nuclear power stations still are a couple of years away from general operation in Canada but the radiation protection division of the health department already is expanding its film-monitoring service to protect workers in the new industry.

The monitoring service, started in 1951, covers 17,000 Canadians working in places where possible hazards exist from radiation sources. Key to the program is a small, rectangular badge containing a piece of specially-sensitized film similar to that used for dental x-rays.

The badges are worn continuously at work, with the film changed every two weeks and sent to the division's Ottawa lab for processing. The developed film records total radiation dosage received by its wearer and also indicates the type of radiation.

Special computers and data-processing equipment take over to read the film, record the information and produce slips showing an individual's radiation dosage for the two-week period along with totals for the last three months, the year to date and from the time the program started.

Only 200 persons were covered when the program started in 1951, says Dr. P. M. Bird, chief of the division. But increased use of x-rays and radioactive isotopes in industry has changed that.

"Now we cover more than 17,000 persons, and this doesn't include Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. employees at Chalk River. They have their own program."

Two different badges now are in use and a third is scheduled for distribution this fall. The regular model detects gamma and x-radiation, and another, introduced Jan. 1 checks neutron radiation produced by neutron generators and particle accelerators now in use at universities.

But both take time to process, time that could be critical if immediate treatment was needed for high dosage.

With strictly-enforced safety precautions, the possibility of accidents involving harmful radiation is remote. But with growing industrial uses, including the nuclear power plants now under construction, the need for a sensing immediate indication is growing.

This is where the new badge comes in. Like the other models, it contains the sensitized film but will also have other indications that can be checked on the spot. These include a radiation detection pellet that will be processed along with the film and two tiny capsules containing a powder that will fluoresce after exposure to radiation.

One of these capsules can be checked on the site by the radiation protection officer. Then, if exposure is indicated, he can rush the remaining indicators to Ottawa for special processing.

While the film monitoring service is compulsory only for persons working with radioisotopes, it is available on a voluntary basis to anyone working with x-rays.

"Almost 80 per cent of our badges are for people using x-rays," Dr. Bird said. "The cost is 75 cents every two weeks for the film) is so low for the protection it offers."

The film service has one big advantage over similar programs in Britain and the U.S.—it is standard across the country.

Film monitoring in Britain and the U.S. is handled by different commercial firms in different regions and they use different methods which give varying degrees of accuracy. Also, in the case of staff transfers, background information on the individual is not always readily available.

Canada's service has one other role. It is providing valuable statistical data for the dilation-and-continuous studies on long-range effects of radiation and the maximum level man can safely endure.

Indian Affairs Officials Drop Paternalistic Stand

Two-company Merger Is Approved

TORONTO (CP)—An order-in-council has approved the merger of Victoria and Grey Trust Co. with financially troubled British Mortgage and Trust Co. The approval is effective Sept. 30.

Shareholders of both companies approved the merger Sept. 14.

It will set up a new company, with total assets of about $275,000,000. Victoria and Grey shareholders will get one share in the new company for each share now held, while British Mortgage shareholders will receive one share in the new company for every six now held.

British Mortgage, an 88-year-old firm with headquarters in Stratford, Ont., ran into money troubles because of Atlantic Acceptance Corp., in receivership since June 17.

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal Indian affairs department is giving up its paternalistic approach, says William Wacko of Edmonton, a community development specialist.

The new approach is evident in the community development program, designed to help Indians and Metis help themselves, he says.

Mr. Wacko recently completed a three-month course in Indian work. He says the government will spend $3,500,000 and hire 60 community development specialists in the next three years.

"The old theory was that Indians were like minors and had to be supervised by a more competent person. Now these community development officers work with these people, but only indirectly, to help themselves through a process of education.

Alberta now has four community development projects, one each at Hinton, west of Edmonton, Slave Lake, Fort Chipewyan and Fort McMurray.

Under the program the Indians and Metis are encouraged to further their education and training so that they will be able to earn a steady living.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

. . . two or three years ago you gave a recipe for Sticky Pecan Rolls that Margy made to take to friends in Timagami. They were really delicious. Would appreciate having it again . . . Lucy A. B.

ANSWER:

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Baked Halibut Steaks; Tomato Sauce; Baked Potatoes with Sour Cream; Vegetable Marrow; Tossed Greens; Vanilla Ice Cream topped with Purple Plum Sauce (see Thursday); Tea.

I'm delighted to repeat it for we have had dozens of requests for it.

STICKY PECAN ROLLS (repeated from July 30/62):

NOTE:

These quantities made 2 large pans of pecan rolls and one muffin pan full of clover leaf rolls. This is a large quantity but Margy figured that if she was going to do the work at all she might as well have enough of these popular rolls for two families for two meals.

2 cups milk, ¾ cup butter or margarine or shortening, 1 package granular yeast, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ cup lukewarm water, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 7 cups unsifted flour, 2½ teaspoons salt, cinnamon.

GLAZE:

1 cup light brown sugar, ¼ cup soft butter, 2½ tablespoons light corn syrup, 6 oz. whole pecans.

Heat the milk to scalding. In a very large mixing bowl measure the ¼ cup butter or margarine and the ½ cup sugar and the salt. Pour scalded milk over them and let cool to lukewarm. Add the 1 teaspoon sugar and ½ cup lukewarm water to the yeast in a measuring cup and give it one stir and let stand 10 minutes. When milk mixture is cool add yeast liquid. Beat the eggs a little and add them and the flour. Mix with wooden spoon, then turn out on floured board and knead 100 times, adding more flour to board as needed (kneaded!?). Shape into ball, return to greased bowl, turn dough over (to have a greased top), cover and let rise in warm place until doubled and light.

Punch down dough on floured board and knead 200 times. Cut off a piece of the dough that amounts to about one-fifth of it. Cut remaining dough in halves. With rolling pin roll out one of these large pieces into an oblong ¼" thick. Spread it with half of remaining ¼ cup of melted butter and sprinkle liberally with cinnamon. Roll up like jelly roll, starting at long side. Stretch this roll to lengthen it and slice it into 1¼" thick pinwheels. Place these close together in pans prepared with glaze: (for two 8 x 2" round pans): Mix together over low heat, barely enough to blend, 1 cup light brown sugar, ¼ cup soft butter and 2½ tablespoons corn syrup. As soon as blended remove from heat. Cover bottoms of 2 pans with whole pecans, each pan requires 3 oz. Drizzle glaze over nuts and make sure glaze and nuts are evenly distributed. Arrange cut-out pinwheels, cut side down, on top of glaze. Repeat with second large piece of dough, the rolling out, spreading etc. and place in second pan. Cover and let rise about 1½ hours in warm place. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. rather high in oven for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 375 deg. F. for another 15 minutes or until done.

NOTES:

The small piece of leftover cloverleaf rolls (using a 12-cup muffin pan) or into 12 Parker dough may be made up into house or Poppy Seed Rolls.

Help-wanted Ads to Be Made Clearer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. equal employment opportunity commission says newspaper help-wanted ads must make clear either a man or woman is acceptable, except . . .

And that's where the commission is, figuratively speaking, groping for words.

In guidelines issued Wednesday night, the commission said that classified help-wanted advertising "may not indicate a preference based on sex unless a bona fide occupational qualification makes it lawful to specify male or female."

The guidelines offered by the commission are an interpretation of the Civil Rights Act's section 704b which deals with advertising for employment on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Now it was traced with whether ads titled "help wanted-male" or "help wanted-female" are an illegal expression of a preference for one sex under the civil rights law. It expected to give the answer in a couple of weeks, a spokesman said.

Church Groups

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST W. A.

MADOC — The September meeting of the St. John the Baptist W. A. was held in the home of Mrs. Mary Barton. President Velma Carman welcomed everyone and conducted the business. Mrs. Kathleen L. Thompson took the opening prayers and read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Mickey Delange, education secretary, read a paper on "The Changing Article."

Plans were discussed for an anniversary luncheon for September 30th in the Parish Hall and a rummage sale in October. Information was given on the annual W. A. Deanery to be held in St. John's Church, Stirling on October 13th. As the choir is growing in number, the members decided to buy a supply of white cotton so that additional surplices can be made.

Prayers were offered on behalf of the Missionary work in the Arctic.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

Successful Living
Legal Separation Needs Mutual Consent

DEAR DORIS: I cannot get a divorce, but feel I must break away from my husband who has been unfaithful for a long time. Should I get a legal separation? We have a home paid for. Do we have to tell the home to settle things? What is a legal separation? There is no family. — FED UP.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR FED UP: A couple who cannot divorce sometimes agrees by mutual consent to separate. A lawyer draws up their agreement. Usually this involves provisions for the support of the wife, and for any children. Such questions as to who is to live on in the home and how certain things which are common property are to be disposed of, are included in this agreement. I must say it simplifies things if there is no family.

A legal separation is just as legal as any contract between two people. It is just as enforceable — but not any more so. It is nothing whatever like a divorce, and may be nullified by mutual agreement at any time.

It is useful in cases in which a husband who is living apart from his wife (or vice versa) insists on drifting back; provision being made that the parties will not molest or disturb each other.

Where two have legally agreed to disagree it means they know where they are at.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: While reading your column, I have often wondered why, when women write to you pleading timidity, shyness, and lack of friends, you never mention International Toastmistress as a possible solution, since this happens to be our particular field.

I am enclosing one of our pamphlets, in case you are not familiar with the organization. Actually, Toastmistress is fun, and I have made some of the best friends I shall ever have through it. — A COUNCIL CHAIRMAN.

DEAR CHAIRMAN: Good news! According to the folder, this international club provides training and practice in talking, discussing, debating, presiding. Attention is given to voice, speech organization and delivery. And many other techniques designed to develop personality and leadership qualities.

I'll pass on your address to anyone who writes in for more information about how to join a branch or start one. It appears there are about 50 branches in Canada, with nearly every province represented.

Can Labels Must Be Correct

TORONTO (CP) — The current issue of The Canadian Consumer says government and industry have agreed that beginning Jan. 1, 1966, canners of juices must label their products with the exact liquid contents of the can.

Some labels have not been giving the true liquid contents of cans, the article says.

Last year the Consumers Association of Canada measured juices in six standard sizes of can and found that three sizes did not contain the amount of juice stated on the label, the magazine reports.

The CAC drew this to the attention of the department of agriculture and asked that the labels be revised to state the contents correctly.

The home assignment, which was to begin record books, plan reference files and make a flower arrangement, was given and the meeting was closed.

A WAY WITH WAX

Hi There: I have just come from a little session on candle making. This is an intriguing festive art in which I know many of you are interested, so I took special care to discuss at length some of the common problems that keep cropping up in your testers.

A frustrating nuisance when pouring the wax for candles is the deep depression that frequently forms in the centre of the mold as it cools, what to do about it. Like everything else, it's so simple when you know how. Since this is an air pocket, poke the indentation with a nail to release the air and fill the space by pouring in more warm wax.

If there comes a time when those beautiful large, smooth candles have lost their shine, rub them briskly but gently with fine steel wool or a nylon stocking to restore the original lustre. This is the purpose of using steric acid in the making of candles. It will give a shine to the wax — but never use it when making candles in glass containers such as sherbet goblets.

Mostly, it was felt that lipstick is very poor substitute for color buds. Pieces of crayon are suitable, but lipstick is inclined to rub off, smear and become generally messy.

COMMON COMPLAINT

A common complaint about using waxed milk cartons as molds is that a cloudy film of wax is often left on the outside of the candle. This trouble is not encountered when juice cans or other tins are used.

As it is best, if possible, to pour all candles upside down, puncture a small hole in the bottom of the can and spread the wick up through leaving 1 inch end protruding. Seal this part with modeling clay before pouring in the warm wax.

To make wax leaves for decorating around the base of a candle spread a thin coat of wax to harden on a cookie sheet coated with vegetable oil. When it is time to cut them out, a clever way to warm the wax, ever so slightly, is to place the sheet on a heating pad or a couple of hot water bottles half filled with warm water.

If you are a bit of a beginner and would like our basic instructions for making decorator, iced and peak-a-boo candles called A Way With Wax, they are yours for the asking. That's because you've all been so good to us! — SUSANNA

Kidding Truck Driver Finds Joke Misfires

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I drive an ice cream truck and enjoy my work. I'm the kind who kids around a lot with my customers and I'm afraid it has created a misunderstanding. This is what happened:

One of my favorite customers is a little girl 11 years old. The other day when she came out to buy some ice cream I showed her a large wad of dollar bills which I happened to have in my pocket. I said, "This is enough for you and me to get married." She looked shocked and ran off.

The girl must have told her mother because now she is not allowed to come out and buy ice cream! Her mother comes over to the truck and she is very cold and unfriendly. Although not one word has been said I know she is mad, I need your advice about what to do. — ICE CREAM MAN.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MAN: If you enjoy your work and want to stay with it you'd better drop the bum jokes, Bub. Talking marriage to an 11-year-old — even as a gag — makes my skin crawl. You're lucky that mother didn't complain to your boss.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I add my 2¢ worth to the discussion about taking pictures at funerals?

I have done it (against my better judgment) at the insistence of a relative who was able to travel across the country to attend the funeral of a brother. The request was put this way: "It would make me feel so much better if I could see how dear Otis looked when death took him away. Also I would love to see the flowers. And if you can get some pictures of Selma and Zorine I would appreciate that, too. I want to see how they are taking it."

Who said we are living in a civilized world? We no longer bury food with the deceased, but we do take food to the home of the relatives and while eating it, tear the living apart with gossip.

Just between us, I hate funerals but I go because I'm afraid of what they might say about me if I didn't. — D.E.B.

* * *

DEAR D.E.B.: If you want to start a good fight this subject is guaranteed to get the fur flying. I tell into this meat grinder once and that should be enough. However, I repeat: I wish the living would treat one another better so that they wouldn't feel compelled by guilt to hock their eye teeth for a fancy funeral.

* * *

Do you lean on cigarettes as a social crutch? You may regret it later. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Smoking," enclosing with your request 10c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Many Fashion Changes Seen in Coat Silhouette

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — Nothing in fashion history changes more drastically than the coat silhouette.

During the last 40 years we've run the gamut from barrel to huge to skinny. Waistlines in dresses may stray from an empire high to a bloater - slung low. But few designers would place the bulk at the hips or top of a dress. No girl likes a ready hippy look. Shoulder width is not too popular even for suits or jackets.

Since the Second World War coats have captured the limelight in seemingly abrupt silhouette changes. Immediately after the war, interest centred in sleeves—dolman, raglan and bell styles. Collars were small and neat. Skirts were 14 inches from the floor.

They were to go all the way down to the ankles when Dior introduced his New Look in 1947. And last season they climbed four inches above. English Mary Quant even predicts a thigh of six inches for this winter.

In the late 1940s the cocoon or tubular coat emerged as the top silhouette. Paris called it the barrel. Pierre Balmain presented a long tubular coat in black velour, front-buttoned to the black for hemline. This year, Canadian coat manufacturers are again banding the hemlines in fur.

Later Cres introduced his reversible blanket coat in nut brown, faced with yellow, and the double-faced coats are again popular, especially with Original Haas. Harvey Berin likes checks on one side, the reverse plain to match a dress. Another is a two-faced coat in mocha and cream by Ben Reig wraps a cream wool dress.

TENT STYLE REVIVED

Gres' blanket coat was a circular flare that, by 1948, developed into the generous proportions of the pyramid silhouette. Cut in ample back fullness from a yoke, it hung full and free from small shoulders.

As one fashion writer described the coat: "It stands out like an upright triangle. One of its chief charms lies in the grace of action." But since it fell short of the ankles in the 1950s and completely enveloped the wearer, it became known as the tent coat.

At the present showings in Rome, the silhouette was revived by the popular young Roman designer, Federico Forquet. In New York it came near the same—but straight-hanging — proportions in a greatcoat in grey tweed by Monte-Sano and Prusan. However this was the extreme. The slim or semi-fitted prevails this fall.

There was only one way for the 1964-65 coat silhouette to go after this exaggerated coverage. It had to shrink. By the fall of 1952 Dior introduced the caftan. It was the hit of the Paris openings. This slim tunic coat was inspired by the costume worn by the late prime minister Nehru of India.

This fall, 10 years later, Ben Zuckerman introduces a rajah-inspired group in elegantly slim quilted silk poplin with jet buttons.

By 1956 the caftan expanded into a barrel look again. Typical was a red "purl" tweed by Monte-Sano and Prusan with a shaped pucker hemline Skirts were still long.

COLLARS CLIMB HIGH

Important by 1958 was the three-quarter-length coat. Actually it was some 20 years old but had been overlooked during the war years and the New Look period. A popular seven-eighth length also appeared in the New York collections Large draped collars stood away from the neckline.

That year was the Costume Look. To be fashionable your coat was designed to complement a dress. Matching fabrics in different weights—or planned collar and fabric contrasts—were highlighted. The next year collars hugged the chin or were completely absent.

This fall there's again the muffled look. High-rising collars or self scarves are the latest trend. Monte-Sano and Pruzan introduce exaggerated high-standing cuff - collars that button almost to the nose.

By 1900 the full coat was back again, with full-flaring sleeves set on a low shoulderline. Coats were collarless. Pleats were tops. The next fall capes included the market. They're still important. New was the double-breasted look that has continued its popularity right into this fall.

Two years ago coats started slimming down again. The word "skinny" became overworked last fall. Many designers tried out the narrow set-in sleeves that finally came into full acceptance. This fall the word "skinny" has been dropped. But most coats remain spare and clean-cut or slightly semi-fitted.

What's next for spring? Probably a return to a more emphasized waistline and a flaring skirt. Several guardsman's coats, included in the recent collections of the New York Couture Group, would seem to indicate this trend.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM DAVID MAXWELL

Maxwell – Batchelor

(Robert L. Studios, Belleville)

Canon R. B. DeBlois Wright, assisted by Rev. A. W. Lauder officiated at the wedding ceremony in Christ Church (Anglican), Belleville, when Linda Alice Batchelor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter John Batchelor, Belleville, was united in marriage to William David Maxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Maxwell, Belleville. Mr. David McLean was organist for the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white street length gown of satin brocade featuring long lilly-point sleeves and a matching cummerbund held with a large flat bow at the back with wide ties extending to the hemline. Her shoulder-length veil of white French silk illusion was caught by a crown studded with seed pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with pink Sweetheart roses.

Miss Marilyn Papke, sister of the bride as matron of honor, was gowned in a powder blue dress featuring an Empire waistline with a lace top and a chiffon over taffeta skirt with matching shoes and headdress. She carried a nosegay of pink and white 'mums.

Mrs. Stanley R. Grose was the groomsman, while Mr. Edward Batchelor, brother of the bride, and Mr. Stanley Papke, brother-in-law of the bride were the ushers.

For the reception in Carmel United Church hall the bride's mother received the guests wearing a delphinium blue suit with Guipure lace top over a crepe skirt, with metallic brocade hat, white accessories and a corsage of white 'mums tipped with matching delphinium blue. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother dressed in a teal blue silk suit with a matching feather hat, oyster colored accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums.

For the wedding trip to Washington, D.C., thence to Kentucky the bride chose a raw-silk suit with a beige blouse, brown accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums.

Upon return from the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell will reside in Belleville.

Dief Promises He Will Lower Auto Prices

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative leader Diefenbaker said today that if his party is elected he will see that automobile prices in Canada are lowered.

"If I were prime minister I would make it very clear and very definite that Canadians would receive the benefits of the automotive legislation," he said.

He told an airport press conference here there is "no justification whatever" for Canadian car prices not being lowered under the recently signed auto agreement with the United States.

He wouldn't be surprised if between now and the Nov. 8 election "some manufacturers might feel constrained to make substantial reductions."

QUEBEC PROMISES

Mr. Diefenbaker held a press conference between aircraft while on his way to Halifax to open his campaign officially. He said reaction he is receiving now indicates that Quebec is going to give us representation in a very considerable measure."

"I have always had the view that no political party can give the kind of government Canada needs without full representation from Quebec."

Asked to comment on the visit of Premier Lesage to Western Canada, Mr. Diefenbaker said: "I have no idea in what regard—things speak for themselves."

He also commented on the appointment of Leon Balcer, his former Quebec lieutenant, as director-general and co-ordinator of centennial celebrations for Quebec province. "It reveals the high regard the Liberal party has for Mr. Balcer."

Mr. Diefenbaker said as he opens his campaign:

"I never felt better and I never felt more enthusiastic with the unity that has been established which the Liberals are disunited about.

"I'm sure that if the prime minister, having issued the election writs, could only return a day or two thereto, he would gladly postpone the election."

Douglas Backs Civil Servants' Bargaining

VANCOUVER (CP) — Collective bargaining should be the right of every public employee in Canada, the New Democratic Party leader, T. C. Douglas, told an audience of public employees here Thursday.

Mr. Douglas made no mention of the Nov. 8 federal election in a speech to 600 delegates to the convention of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, but instead dealt with one plank of his party's election platform.

"No government has the right to turn its employees into second-class citizens . . . by denying them the advantages enjoyed by employees in industry," said Mr. Douglas.

The NDP leader said no man employed by a government should be denied the right to run for public office or express his opinion on political matters.

He also said that the right to strike should be part of any collective agreement with government.

Guilt Feeling Bothers Dief Over Banks?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hal Banks is a forgotten man except in the "guilty conscience" of Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker, Labor Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday night.

The discredited union leader should have been prosecuted in the years of the Diefenbaker government between 1957 and 1963, Mr. MacEachen said.

But it had been left to Liberals to take action and now that Banks had fled before this action Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Diefenbaker was calling for his capture and "return to face charges of conspiracy to assault union leaders.

"We would need a new extradition treaty to bring Banks back," Mr. MacEachen told Liberals remonstrating Immigration Minister Jack Richardson as candidate in Vancouver Centre.

"I wonder if Mr. Diefenbaker could do any better job with an extradition treaty than he did with the Columbia River treaty which we had to renegotiate after him."

Mr. Diefenbaker has said much of the responsibility for years of labor strife on the Great Lakes lies with the Liberals for bringing in Banks to head the Seafarers International Union (AFL-CIO). Liberal-appointed maritime trustees fired Banks as SIU head and he has skipped the country before he could be tried on the conspiracy charges.

The labor minister took another lick at T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, for a claim that the agreement lowering automobile tariff barriers between Canada and the U.S. is a grandstand giveaway to the big car manufacturers.

The agreement would in fact greatly expand total employment and production and "is good for Canada as the Columbia treaty is for British Columbia and Canada."

India Says

cision and that decision is to continue the fight."

India's frontier with China was reported quiet today although it was revealed that blood already has been shed in the confrontation with Peking high in the Himalayas.

The local Indian Army commander did not take action and asked the UN observers in Kashmir to investigate, the defence ministry said.

UN observers have been in Kashmir since the world body established a ceasefire in the disputed state in 1949. The 40 observers include nine Canadians.

Now they are being bolstered by a new group to supervise the truce reached Thursday that ended 22 days of conflict between India and Pakistan.

Canada is providing a nucleus for the new supervisory truce force which informants in New Delhi say may grow in size to thousands of men.

The Chinese said in a broadcast that the bodies of three Indian soldiers have been found in the Dumchele area following a fight last Sunday. India had reported three policemen were missing.

China earlier claimed Indian troops had violated its border in the area and fired on Chinese civilians stationed there. India said the incident had been distorted by Peking to cover up its intrusion.

Chinese troops were reported still a short distance inside Indian territory in one or two spots along the border of Sikkim, an Indian protectorate, and Chinese-ruled Tibet.

Socreds Will Have Fewer Candidates

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — Compared with the 1963 election, Social Credit will have more money and far fewer candidates for the Nov. 8 campaign.

Although the party had nominated only 17 up to Wednesday, officials hope to have 150 to 160 named by the end of nominations Oct. 25.

This compares with 224 in the April 8, 1963, vote in which the party returned 24 members to the 265-seat Commons. This was a drop of six from the 1962 election.

The post-election breakaway of the party's Quebec members finally left Social Credit with only nine members at the Sept. 8 dissolution of the last Parliament. Since then, the last five Quebec members have left, leaving only four western members of the last House still in the fold going into the current campaign.

Big reason for the sharp drop in candidates this time is the party's decision to run nobody in Quebec. They are leaving the field to the breakaway Creditistes of Real Caouette, former Social Credit members running as independents, and the other parties.

AND TO CONFUSION

"To start fresh now in Quebec would only add to the confused situation there," says Frank Jones, the Social Credit campaign director.

The party no longer has an organization in Quebec as in other provinces. The party contested all 75 seats last time and won 20.

Officials say the party is in a sounder financial position now than in 1963. All the bills from the rapid-fire elections of 1962 and 1963 are paid!

Officials indicate the West will be the point of main campaign effort with Ontario also getting fairly close attention.

Full states are expected in British Columbia and Alberta as in the 1963 vote. There is a possibility of full slates in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The four western provinces have 70 seats.

Officials are doubtful of a full slate in Ontario's 85 ridings. Fifty or more may be contested.

CHURCH HEAD ENTHRONED

NEW YORK (AP)—The Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, which speaks for 1,000,000 in the Americas and Canada, enthroned its new primate, the Metropolitan Ireney, at a solemn rite Friday in the Holy Virgin Protection Cathedral. The 73-year-old metropolitan, who succeeds the late Metropolitan Leonty, was elected to the high church post at a special session Monday of clergy and laity.

Liberals Will Stand on Record Says Minister

TORONTO (CP)—Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday night Progressive Conservative charges of corruption are irresponsible talk which he does not think serve "the cause of freedom and democracy."

The Liberal party will stand by its record, he said. He acknowledged that the record had some blemishes.

Mr. Sharp spoke at a nomination meeting in Trinity riding at which Defence Minister Paul Hellyer was chosen Liberal candidate for the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Sharp said Canada had just passed through a serious financial crisis when the Liberals took power in 1963. Unemployment was as high as in any industrial country in the world, defence spending was a mess and the Diefenbaker administration had alienated the Americans government.

"Today we are in the midst of an economic expansion never before equalled," he said. Exports for 1964 had increased by about 18 per cent from 1963 and estimates of manufactured goods had increased by almost twice that amount, surpassing $1,000,000,000 for the first time.

EXPECTS BALANCE

There had been a budgetary deficit of $750,000,000 when the Liberals took power, he said, but he expected a balanced budget this year.

A mandate was required to enable the government to mount effective attack on poverty, as well as to continue expansion, he said.

He said he thought there was a possibility in the next four or five years of creating a basic framework of social welfare programs that would strike at the roots of poverty.

Integration of the armed forces will be completed and the combined forces will be operational by the end of the year, Mr. Hellyer said.

Mood Changes

Thursday outside the closed conference room.

"We were not overly pleased by the 15-year time period or the amount of the fund. The fund is spread over too long a time and the amount doesn't seem to be large enough."

MINISTERS COOLED OFF

A conference source said that while the morning session had been heated, the afternoon meeting of the conference Thursday was then placid and it agreed to set up the special committee to advise a later meeting of the health ministers on the terms by which the $500,000,000 program will be allocated.

On the matter of the federal contribution to national medical care insurance, Richard Donahoe of Nova Scotia—who is also the province's attorney-general —was concerned about costs. He estimated that in his province, medical insurance will cost about $35 per capita. The original federal government proposal to pay $24 falls far short of half Nova Scotia's cost.

Mr. Donahoe said an important factor for Nova Scotia is whether the federal government will pay part of the provincial costs of maintaining tuberculosis sanatoria and mental hospitals. These now are exempt from the Hospital and Diagnostic Services Insurance Act, under which Ottawa picks up a good part of the tab of provincial hospital insurance plans.

The federal view is that long before hospital insurance became a federal - provincial shared-cost plan in 1956, the provinces bore the full cost of providing TB and mental case treatment as a public responsibility.

Now, in the federal view, investment in not of the federal government should share part of this cost in reality a financial question — not one of public health. But all the provinces are crying for federal sharing of these costs.

As Ontario's Dr. Dymond put it, not to share these costs is to maintain that there are two classes of hospital patients—those with tuberculosis or mental disorders, and all others.

Three Youths Are Remanded In Custody

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A 19-year-old girl testified Thursday she was seized on Woodstock's main street July 5, taken away by three youths in a car and forced to have intercourse with two of them.

The youths — Richard Atkinson, 20, Jack Bain, 18, and Russell Baxter, 17, all of Woodstock—were remanded in custody until next Tuesday for judgment by Magistrate R. G. Groom.

Atkinson and Bain have pleaded not guilty to charges of having carnal knowledge of the girl. Both also are charged with indecent assault, but the Crown has not proceeded with the latter charges.

Baxter has pleaded guilty to a charge of indecently assaulting the girl. A charge of carnal knowledge against him was withdrawn by the Crown.

and Mr. Fisher all cited family responsibilities among their reasons for stepping down.

Mrs. Elaine Jones, 45-year-old mother of four who won a byelection in Saskatoon last year to take over the seat of her late husband had held for five consecutive. She intends to resume her career as a psychiatrist.

Leon Balcer, 48, who bolted Conservative ranks this year over his policy differences with Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, will watch the performance of the next Parliament from his home in Trois-Rivieres, Que.

Mr. Balcer had been MP for Trois-Rivieres since 1949 and once was considered among the leading contenders for the Conservative leadership. Thursday he was named director-general of Quebec's centennial planning.

WAS DISENCHANTED

With him on the sidelines will be Remi Paul, 44, who also left the Conservatives because of his disenchantment with Mr. Diefenbaker and has decided not to seek a fourth term in Berthier-Maskinonge - Delanaudiere. He is also a lawyer.

Gerald Regan, 37, rookie Liberal MP for Halifax, became the party's provincial leader in Nova Scotia a few weeks ago and has given up his federal seat to concentrate on the Nov. 8 provincial vote.

Maurice Moreau, 38, is another of those who has decided that he needs more time for his family and professional career. He resigned his riding of York-Scarborough for the Liberals with a vigorous campaign in 1963.

Among others who have announced retirement:

Rodolphe Leduc, 68, Liberal member in Trois-Rivieres; Edmond Asselin, 44, Liberal in Montreal Notre Dame de Grace; James Forgie, 73, Liberal in Renfrew North; Louis-Joseph Pigeon, 63, Conservative in Joliette-l'Assomption-Montcalm; C. This new, modern Bank of Montreal opens Monday at the corner of Dundas Street East and MacDonald Avenue, directly across from the Belleville General Hospital. Bank Manager Winston Kent invites everyone to come and look over the modern, air-conditioned premises.

Bank of Montreal Will Open 3rd Branch Here on Monday

Belleville's third Bank of Montreal Branch opens for business Monday, under the management of Winston Kent.

Located on the north-east corner of Dundas Street East and MacDonald Avenue, the new air-conditioned bank will be open during regular banking hours and will provide a wide range of banking services.

With an area of 2,150 square feet, the new bank has a streamlined counter with seven tellers' wickets, two coupon booths for safety-deposit-box customers, a large steel-and-reinforced-concrete vault and an "around-the-clock" depository unit.

The spacious interior is cleverly decorated for even greater customer pleasure. The mushroom walls and light green speckled floor tile is offset by the modern, walnut-panneled counters. The attractive beige drapes feature the Bank of Montreal's insignia.

The outside of the bank is set off with white-faced brick, trimmed by black-faced brick. The smart, practical design of the building is accentuated by the cleverly landscaped patio walk between the building and the sidewalk.

Hugh Murray Limited was contractor. The building also contains ample office space on the top floor.

The Bank's manger, Winston Kent, was born at Simcoe. He joined the bank at Tilbury and subsequently served in various branches at Kingsville, Wallaceburg, Perth and Drumbo.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP)—When any of the political party leaders appears on your television screen, he invariably gives the impression of complete relaxation.

It's not that informal. He sits under a blaze of floodlights, with pancake makeup and powder keeping the perspiration from beading on his forehead, and with a teleprompter winding off every word of a well-prepared speech.

And that well-furnished wall behind the desk is only propped up there for the occasion.

While most politicians give the impression of relaxed enjoyment, it's generally accepted that few really enjoy it.

New Democratic Leader Douglas is known to hate the television process. He prefers live meetings.

But like other party leaders, he realizes the value of talking to voters by way of their TV screens. Neither Prime Minister Pearson nor Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has indicated any strong dislike for television appearances, although Mr. Pearson does not like appearing alone.

He prefers to go on unrehearsed shows, answering questions put by one or two interviewers. Some of his supporters say this is how he comes over best.

Television plans are still being made by all parties. The Liberals plan to have the prime minister, when possible, appear on question - and - answer programs.

The other party leaders are expected to remain with the more familiar format of a one-man appearance. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker will likely make about five national telecasts during the campaign—one or two less than the prime minister.

Social Credit Leader Thompson is said to enjoy television more than his rivals. His supporters—and even some of his opponents — have always said this is his most powerful medium.

Creditiste Leader Caouette has always depended heavily on television and he plans to use it extensively this campaign. All his TV appearances will be in Quebec.

Apart from private and local telecasts, the CBC makes free TV time available to the parties for nation - wide appearances. In this campaign, it is allotted on the basis of 7½ hours to the Liberals, 6½ hours to the Conservatives, four hours to the NDP and two hours each to the Social Credit and Creditiste parties.

USE VENOM ON CANCER

LONDON (Reuters) — British and Indian scientists have had some successes in experiments on cobra venom as a cancer cure, a leading British expert said Thursday. Dr. Edmund Ambrose of the Chester Beaty Cancer Research Institute warned that although some successes have been achieved in treatment tumors in rats in India, the work is "in a very preliminary stage."

Inco Planning Expansion At Sudbury

By GORDON GRANT

SUDBURY (CP)—A $79,000,000 expansion project aimed at increasing the capacity and life of its Sudbury area mines was announced Thursday by the International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd.

Henry S. Wingate, chairman, said the new project will add about 20,000,000 pounds of nickel and copper to the company's annual capacity. Economies provided will permit the mining of ores which, otherwise would be marginal, he said.

The company currently produces about 440,000,000 pounds of nickel a year—45 per cent of world capacity.

Mr. Wingate made the announcement at the 19th annual dinner of the Sudbury district chapter of the Quarter Century Club of Inco.

Included in the program is construction of a mill capable of handling 25,370 tons of ore a day, and a pipeline to transfer the concentrate from the new mill to a smelter at Copperclif, four miles from here.

Young Bull Moose Tours Shop Centre

PORTLAND, Me. (AP)—A young bull moose startled some and delighted other city residents in a city visit, then died as he attempted to cross a cove.

The moose first appeared in the western outskirts of Maine's largest city Wednesday night when he toured two shopping centres, then disappeared into a patch of woods.

He showed up Thursday morning in Woodford, a northern suburb, found a handy garden bird bath from which he drank, then stopped for a while in the yard of a home.

Later he ambled through part of the city at the height of the morning commuter traffic and came to Back cove, a mile from the downtown business centre.

The moose fled for the far shore when two game wardens tried to herd him ashore. As he reached a deep boat channel, the moose floundered, then died.

Says Seaway Justifies Cost

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) The St. Lawrence Seaway - Great Lakes waterway system has entirely justified the huge costs involved in creating it by producing benefits which are increasing yearly, Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill said Thursday.

"I think it is fair to say that the St. Lawrence Seaway in the brief span of seven years since it has operated a 27-foot channel, has had a profound impact upon the transportation system of both countries (Canada and the United States)—and especially on Canada," Mr. Pickersgill said.

Theft of OMA Funds Brings 10-year Term

TORONTO (CP)—A former Kingston man who pleaded guilty two weeks ago to embezzling more than $100,000 from the Ontario Medical Association over a three-year period has been sentenced to 10 years.

Frank Renwick, 39, was given the penitentiary term Thursday by Magistrate Charles Oppet, who said the theft had been discovered by a fluke. Police have recovered $65,000 of the $100,345 reported missing.

Renwick said in a pre-sentence report that an unnamed accomplice had made off with the money, but Magistrate Oppet said: "From the evidence before me, I don't know of anyone else who was in the scheme." He added that the missing money may have been invested in another country "to be available to the accused when he is returned to society."

Renwick, a bachelor, was paid $8,500 a year in his office job with the medical group, and witnesses said he appeared on the surface to live within his income during the three years the embezzlement scheme was in operation.

Police said Renwick established seven bills furnished officers throughout the city, labelling them with names of medical collection services, and collected cheques sent out to fictitious doctors from the OMA funds.

Renwick was arrested after a downtown bank clerk became suspicious when Renwick tried to cash a cheque for $15,000. Detectives said he might never have been caught once the association's plan was replaced by the provincial medicare plan.

PRESIDENT RETURNS

ROME (AP)—Italian President Giuseppe Saragat returned Friday from a six-nation visit to South America. Saragat spent two weeks touring Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and Venezuela.

In Trouble For Kissing His Wife

LONDON (AP) —Leonard Jones, 79, complained Thursday he got into trouble when he kissed his 69-year-old wife in the old peoples' home where they live.

"We were reported for kissing and cuddling in my ward," he said, "and the warden (administrator) gave us a good ticking off."

The Joneses were married last Easter and have had to live in separate quarters because the home has no double rooms.

"Now we have to go to a nearby park," Jones said. "But with the winter coming on, this isn't going to be very pleasant."

Administrator Thomas Calis said the borough council is building a new home for elderly persons and the Joneses have been promised a double room. It is expected to be ready next Easter.

"Wonderful," said Jones, "there'll be privacy at last."

Ten Freighters At Lakehead Wait for Loads

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Ten ships were at anchor at the twin ports of Port Arthur and Fort William Thursday, waiting for grain from Western Canada to fill their holds.

The shortage of grain at the ports, which has steadily become more acute, has resulted in a meeting called for today in Winnipeg by Trade Minister Sharp in a bid to speed up rail shipments.

Although it said there has been no change in the shipping situation, a Canadian National Railways official said there has been an increase in grain movement from the Prairies this week.

Mr. Sharp said earlier this week that Canada was still meeting its export commitments but "internal movement of grain is lagging."

He hopes that today's meeting with officials of the Canadian wheat board, the railways and shipping association may ease the situation.

Mr. Sharp has said getting the maximum amount of grain off the Prairies is of "urgent national importance."

Robert (Bob) Young New P.M. of Student Parliament

Wednesday followed by a spirited campaign between the Maroon and Gray parties, Robert (Bob) Young, grade 13 student and member of the Maroon party won the prime minister's role over the Gray's Ted Flindall. Bob's winning margin was just two per cent of the votes cast for prime minister.

But the defeated candidate for the prime minister's office still gets to sit on the parliament executive and Ted automatically becomes minister without portfolio.

Other offices of the executive are all filled by Grays: Tawni Meades, Deputy Prime Minister; Penny Weymark, secretary of state, and Alex MacLaurin as minister of finance.

Youth Freed On Charge Of Rape

MILTON, Ont. (CP)—Joseph DesGasperis, a 19-year-old Toronto magazine salesman, was acquitted Thursday by an all-male jury of a charge of raping a teen-age invalid.

The jury also acquitted the salesman of attempted rape and indecent assault on the girl, a wheelchair invalid who cannot speak only in monosyllables. The girl was normal until injured in a 1959 car accident.

Earlier, Mr. Justice S. N. Schatz told the Ontario Supreme Court jury they would have to decide if the girl knew what she was doing when she told the accused he could make love to her.

Flood Waters Ruin Many Fall Crops

CHICAGO (AP) — Torrential rains which have pounded the mid-continent for a week subsided today, but flood waters continued to roll over rich farmland, ruining fall crops in some areas in the United States.

Rivers in northern Arkansas spilled over their banks and flowed into low-lying croplands, adding to the crop damage already caused by wind and rain.

Heavy rains and high humidity have turned what had appeared to be one of southern Ohio's best lobacco crops into what may be one of the worst.

Officials in Ohio, Illinois and Kentucky complained of another problem: Lack of labor to harvest the crops.

In Oklahoma, the Washita River flooded the southern lowlands, but the river was falling.

Greater Educational Demands Causing Upswing in Suicides

FREDERICTON (CP)—Pressures of modern education have led to an appalling increase in the number of student suicides, the head of the educational administration department at the University of British Columbia said Thursday.

Dr. L. W. Downey warned the Canadian Education Association that efforts to achieve excellence tend to confuse quality with "hardness." He cited the increase in suicides as a result of emotional stresses caused by greater educational demands.

He said during a penal discussion on "new directions in schools for tomorrow" at the CEA's three - day convention here.

"We have . . . become overly concerned with the mastery of specific and often unrelated subject matter—at the expense of our avowed intention of fostering creative and critical thought and of developing to the fullest the unique potentialities of individuals."

Dr. Downey said in an interview later he based his statement on increasing pupil suicides on a confidential study and subsequent statistics undertaken—while he was head of the secondary education department at the University of Alberta. The figures applied in the province of Alberta and were limited to the high school level.

However, he declined to disclose any figures or by whom and when the survey was made. He said the public is unaware of the situation because the facts are kept confidential.

Dr. Downey told delegates that in the school of tomorrow the trend will likely move toward a system of educational inquiry rather than emphasis on achievement, and "the natural inclination of the human to inquire, to know and order his world will be the starting point."

The future system will reward a student for his ability to inquire into problems rather than for his capacity for memorizing solutions, he said.

Dr. J. R. H. Morgan, director of the Ontario Curriculum Institute at Toronto, and Dr. A. R. MacKinnon, dean of education at Vancouver's Simon Fraser University, were the other panel speakers.

Dr. Morgan said builders of future curricula must be prepared to accept and encourage divergent thinking and behaviour. Some people view human nature as a "dynamic thing that learns by doing . . ." and the process is developed by interaction with other individuals through a variety of experiences.

Speaking on team - teaching approaches to learning, Dr. MacKinnon said classroom experiments during the last decade proved the self-contained classroom is not the most efficient procedure of bringing about learning.

In team teaching, both teachers and pupils can learn most effectively from each other. No individual teacher can be expected to possess all the talents or the physical, mental and emotional resources which are required for bringing about successful learning in our modern society."

The convention, attended by more than 800 delegates representing all aspects of education, ends today.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

A lean, wiry six-foot-one length uncoiled itself from the chair, clutched its 180 pounds over its frame with a quick shake, stuck out a hand and said softly "How's everything with the McFarlands?"

The smile spread slowly over the thinnish face. I would have known it a thousand miles off. A lot of pucks have bounced off the guy who at one time could have qualified as a model in a pencil factory. He still could rate a second look.

He was Cesare Maniago, the Marco Polo of hockey, both pro and amateur. Cesare was the jumping-jack goalie of the senior "A" golden era playing for at least four of the six franchises.

He wound up holding the record of being the only goalie to help defeat his home-town club in an Allan Cup series. That was the year the Chatham Maroons took the hankie from the Smoke-Eaters of Trail,-B.C., where Cesare first saw the light of day and learned a lot of his puck-stopping ability.

I met Cesare at the New York Rangers press conference held at the LaSalle Hotel, Kingston, the other night, arranged by the Molsons (Ontario) Breweries. It was the shebang beautiful, beautiful, belt-stretching buffet within a few days, gorged by the ever-hungry news media reps. A "Golden" fiesta served by excellent hosts.

Maniago gone a long way hockey-wise since he noted his 19th birthday in a Queen's Hotel room here where we interviewed him. He is now 26.

He is shooting—and shooting hard—for the permanent goalie job with the Rangers. Last season with the Minneapolis Bruins he was voted the most valuable player of the Central Professional League. Jack Adams' healthy greetings baby and named the leading goalie of the circuit.

But he has top opposition for the "third goal-post" spot. Vying with him are Don Simmons, 34, former Leaf; Giles Villemure of the Montreal Canucks and Ed Giacomin, last year with the Providence Reds.

"Pretty tough company," smiled Cesare, "but I'm going to try awful hard for the job. I think I can make it."

Rangers' general manager Emile "The Cat" Francis and coach "Red" Sullivan kept a watchful eye on their charges, some 34 in all, plenty of youth sprinkled with veterans.

A number of former National Hockey League greats were there. A collector's item for camera hounds will be the shot taken of Jack Adams, former general manager of the Detroit Red Wings, now Central Pro League president; Michael J. Rodden, ex-NHL referee, hockey and football coach and the only sportsman in Canada to be honored in three Halls of fame; "Bun" Cook, one of the greatest Rangers of them all, who with brother Bill and Frank Boucher formed one of the greatest forward lines in the history of the game—and I think it was Terry Reardon, formerly with the Montreal Canadiens.

Back to Master Maniago. Cesare is now a happily married young man with an attractive wife and three months' old daughter living in Vancouver. He sent along his best wishes to all his former friends here and said, honestly and sincerely, repeating something he said while he was here that the former Maes were the best amateur club he played with in that era.

He has grown experience-wise. Personally he is the same self-effacing likeable youngster of a half-dozen years ago. His efforts in the Central Pro League last year rate him as one of the top candidates for the Rangers' goalie berth. And I know at least one guy who sincerely hopes he makes it. More power to his pads.

Saw the new famous Molson's crack line, the "Stanley Cup Playoffs of 1965" again. It's a must for hockey lovers. As was noted last year the program is free of charge by contacting Jim Williamson, Molson's representative at Trenton. Jim will arrange matters. And again, thanks Jim, for another wonderful job of "hosting."

National Hockey League

Will Honor Frank Selke

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Hockey League today announced plans for a testimonial dinner for Frank J. Selke, who retired as managing director of the Montreal Canadiens in May, 1964.

Selke, considered one of hockey's greatest builders and a powerful figure in the inner circles of the NHL for 36 years, will be honored in Montreal Monday, Oct. 18.

Selke's skills as an organizer have helped him achieve such goals as the creation of the hockey Hall of Fame and the assembling of the modern Montreal Canadiens.

He is among the few who have been honored by the league as honorary life governor and he was elected to hockey's Hall of Fame in September, 1960, in the "builder" category.

The dinner will be held two days before the annual all-star game, which this year is to be played at the Forum, home of the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens.

During his career in the NHL, Selke has been associated with nine Stanley Cup title holders—three with Toronto Maple Leafs and six with Canadiens.

Under his astute guidance, Canadiens finished first in the NHL a record eight times and won five Stanley Cup finals in a row from the 1955-56 season through 1959-60.

'Twins Get Higher' ★★★★★ ★★★★★ 'It's a Promise'

Giants, Twins Bosses Predict Series

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Herman Franks has made a promise: San Francisco Giants will stay on top.

Sam Mele has made a promise: Minnesota Twins will get a little higher.

The managers of the leaders in the National and American League pennant races, seeing things through different situations, each had a day off Thursday to reflect on the final 10 days of the 1965 baseball season.

Franks, whose Giants hold a two-game lead over Los Angeles Dodgers and 3½-game bulge over the third-place Cincinnati Reds, had this to say:

"I think we go better when it's tight. We've fallen back 10 times before and we've always regrouped. This is the last time we're falling back. That's a promise."

CLOSE AT HOME

The Giants, who have lost two in a row while the Dodgers have ripped off six straight victories, close out the season at home, beginning with a three-game set against Milwaukee Braves tonight. Then they tangle with St. Louis Cardinals before facing the Reds in a four-game windup.

Franks has tapped Ron Herbel, 10-7, opposite Tony Cloninger, 22-10, of Milwaukee but has not revealed any pitching plans beyond that. Dodger manager Walt Alston, on the other hand, has his three aces primed for a three-game set with St. Louis starting tonight.

Claude Osteen, 16-14, opens against Bob Gibson, 18-10, then 22-game winner Don Drysdale and 20-game winner Sandy Koufax take their turns. It's also likely the same rotation will be followed in a three-game series with Cincinnati and a windup four with Milwaukee.

The Reds, with most of their remaining games with the two leaders, first invade Houston for a two-game set starting Saturday night. Jim Maloney, shooting for victory No. 20, will get the Reds' final drive started.

The Twins, who have lost three straight but still lead Baltimore Orioles by eight games, were worried about only one thing as they prepared for a three-game series with Washington Senators beginning tonight. And that was champagne.

HIT LOSING STREAK

The Twins, who need any combination of two victories or losses by the Orioles totalling three to clinch their first AL pennant, were in for a champagne celebration at home but ran into a three-game losing streak that delayed the bottle-popping.

Now they've got to find a new batch of the bubbly.

"We can't haul the champagne in Washington because if his Minnesota tax stamps on it and the law night take a dim view of one transporting it that way across the country," said a Twins' spokesman.

"We'll buy some on the road," promised Mele. "We'll get the champagne if we have to fly to Paris for it."

Mele will send Jim Grant, seeking to become the AL's first 20-game winner this season, to the mound against the Senators and Frank Kreutzer.

Baltimore meets California Angels in a twi-nighter with Steve Barber, 13-9, and Wally Bunker, 8-7, going against Jack Sanford, 5-6, and Marcelino Lopez, 14-13, if the Twins win and the Orioles lose two, it's all over.

FOUR GAMES PLAYED

Four games were played Thursday but none had a bearing on the pennant races.

In the National League, Philadelphia Phillies swept Chicago Cubs 11-5 and 7-4 as Jim Bunning and Chris Short each posted victory No. 18. Bunning permitted 12 hits but held on for the decision over Larry Jackson, who became a 20-game loser. Short surrendered seven hits.

In the American League, Cleveland Indians edged New York Yankees 2-1 on Ted Wilfield's homer and a third-inning run built on a walk; Leon Wagner's single, an error and a ground out.

Kansas City Athletics whipped Washington 8-7 with a three-run, ninth-inning rally in which Bill Bryan smacked a two-run triple and Randy Schwartz singled in the winning run.

Sixth Game Tonight

Brooklin Player Is Suspended

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The speedy, tough Brooklin Merchants lead three games to two in their best-of-seven Inside with New Westminster Salmonbellies for the Mann Cup, but things could be a lot brighter.

They'll go into tonight's sixth game for the Canadian senior lacrosse championship with some forced lineup changes and at least one lengthy penalty.

For one thing, they've lost fiery forward Don Craggs for the remainder of the series. He was given an indefinite suspension for attacking referee Fred Severton and causing a disturbance in Wednesday night's game, which the Salmonbellies won 8-7.

In addition Merchants — who still have haunting memories of losing the series to another B.C. team in 1964 after building up a 3-1 game edge—will be without big Ken Buttle.

The bulky defenceman had to leave for his policeman's job in Peterborough, Ont. The Easterners put in a rush call for Bruce Norris of defenceman Bill Castator, who played in the first three series games but had to go back to his job in the East. He'll be here in time. HAS BAD ANKLE

Another defenceman, Bob Hanna, suffered a sprained ankle in the fourth game and still isn't able to operate at full speed. Other players display an assortment of fat lips and bruises.

B.C. lacrosse commissioner Tommy Gordge, who handed out the indefinite suspension to Craggs after Wednesday night's tussle which involved fans and police before it was broken up, had little to say on the incident. He said Les Craggs' case would be considered at the annual meeting of the Canadian Lacrosse Association in Montreal in January.

But some Merchants players had plenty to say — mostly about the quality of the refereeing in the series.

Elmer Trau and Jim Hinkson said Craggs, who has been with Brooklin since he was 16, is an "excitable" boy but they'd never seen him go for a referee like that.

"We usually get to him when he gets mad," said Hinkson.

Both Brooklin players said the referees' interpretations of infractions here are vastly different from back home.

Hinkson said in the East, if a player takes one hand off his stick and touches the opposing player's back, it is an automatic penalty, but "they only seem to call those type of penalties against us."

Clash In Montreal Tonight

Hot Larks Meet Ploen-Less Bombers

MONTREAL (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference invade Molson Stadium for an interlocking game against the Eastern Conference Montreal Alouettes tonight without starting quarterback Kenny Ploen.

Bomber coach Bud Grant said he let Ploen at home for the eastern trip—Winnipeg also plays at Toronto Sunday—because the veteran quarterback's strained wrist has not progressed well enough.

The signal calling chores will be left to Dick Thornton, a two-way performer who was at the helm last Sunday when the Bombers broke a four-game losing streak with a 19-12 win over Ottawa Rough Riders.

Barry Hanson, a former Alouette who was out of the Winnipeg lineup for five games because of an injury, is expected to make the lineup for tonight's game.

Should Hackbart be inserted in the Blue Bomber lineup, another NFL recruit, Ted Rodgkevich, a 245-pound guard from Baltimore Colts, may not make his CFL debut.

THE Alouettes, fresh from an 11-6 victory over the Grey Cup champion B.C. Lions in Vancouver last Saturday and a 34-13 win against Edmonton Eskimos in Edmonton last Monday, are only one lineup change for tonight's clash.

Charlie Baillie, a Montreal boy who played one season with the Als in 1961, will replace five-year veteran Dick Dalzell at centre for field goal and kicking situations. Dalzell was placed on waivers Wednesday.

Montreal coach Jim Trimble was reported to have become disenchanted with Dalzell's ability to get off a good snap to kickers in recent games.

Baillie also played here last season with the Quebec Rifles under Sam Etcheverry, now an assistant coach with the Als.

Trimble said his defensive unit will pay particular attention to pass-catching end Farrell Funston and halfbacks Leo Lewis and Dave Ratmey.

"That Funston is always a threat to us," said Trimble. "Lewis and Ratmey are both strong runners," he said.

The game will mark the home debut of fullback Pat Batten, who has received the nickname "Cotton Batten" from teammates. Batten's place kicking and running were important contributions to the Als' western sweep.

Ada McKenzie

Wins Eighth Senior Title

TORONTO (CP)—Ada Mackenzie of Toronto won her first major golf championship in 1919 when she captured the Canadian women's open title in Montreal.

Forty-six years later she's still winning Canadian championships.

Miss Mackenzie Thursday won her eighth title in the Canadian women's senior golf tournament with an 85-85—170 for 36 holes. She finished two days tourney eight strokes ahead of defending champion Mrs. A. B. Darling of Montreal, who shot 87 Thursday for 178.

Miss Mackenzie's victory broke the record she set three years ago in the 41-year history of the tournament which she had shared with Mrs. Gordon Lang of Toronto, winner of the first women's senior crown in 1923.

Mrs. Mackenzie was only eight strokes over par on each day of the tournament.

Mrs. Darling, a former Canadian women's open champion herself, is the mother of another champion, Judy Darling of Montreal. Mrs. Darling was second on Wednesday, six off the pace Mackenzie's pace, and fell two strokes farther back Thursday.

WON IN ROW

Miss Mackenzie won six senior championships in all, starting in 1955, but had her string broken by Mrs. J. C. T. Bell of Hamilton in 1961. Miss Mackenzie came back to win in 1962.

Mrs. Sibler, third after Wednesday's play, shot a second-round 95 and wound up sixth with 181. Mrs. Lang of Toronto was third with 94-86—180. Mrs. Mills also had the lowest score in the tournament, 158.

Mrs. S. B. Kimber of Montreal made the biggest comeback of the tournament to place first in the 19-24 handicap division. Mrs. Kimber, eighth Wednesday with 103, shot a 99 for 213. Low net score in that group was carded by Mrs. D. McBalla of Toronto with 164.

Mrs. E. F. Armstrong of Canada had the low gross in the 25-36 handicap range with 101-112—213. Her 163 net was also low in that division.

SIGNS CANADIAN

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (CP-AP)—Bob Howsam, St. Louis Cardinals' general manager, announced Thursday the signing of pitcher Reginald Cleveland, 16, of Cold Lake, Alta., for the 1966 baseball season. Cleveland will report to the Sarasota, Fla., club.

Letter to the Sports Editor

The men connected with minor sports, especially ball and hockey are not receiving their due credit or support. From harassed presidents, overworked coaches and the most courageous umpires; all deserve a better fate. Unselfishly, they give of their time, providing organization and steerage to little leaguers, and it is more than enough. Under and non-constructive criticism from any quarter — is too much.

Contrary to some popular thinking, fun and fore-most object of minor spog is sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct under the fierce strain of competition. The second and more tangible part is to give a boy a chance to play under organized supervision in order to learn and enjoy the rudiments of the particular game — the outcome depending on ability.

These are basic facts that any president, coach or umpire, I feel sure would agree with wholeheartedly. But sometimes these high ideals are put in the background under a deluge of unfair criticism. It is then that good people must come forward to counterbalance; a pat on the back, rather than a low blow, a word of well-done, rather than abuse. In other words, honest support and praise for what has been accomplished.

The cost and effort of such a gesture is so small as compared to the appreciation and gratitude these people including the sponsors, will derive from it.

Shack 'Tumbles Down' To Rochester

Fans Won't Like It

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Punch Imlach has made it official—Eddie Shack won't be a Toronto Maple Leaf this season.

"He's not going to be a member of this team," the Toronto coach said Thursday as the energetic left winger worked out with Rochester Americans, the Leafs' American Hockey League farm club at Peterborough, Ont., where both clubs are limbering up for the new season.

Shack's demotion will be bad news to his substantial cheering section at Maple Leaf Gardens, where he has performed for the last five years. Fewer tears will be shed by the many National Hockey League opponents—and not a few team-mates—whom Eddie has rolled in his heading charges towards the enemy goal.

"We could afford him when the team was winning," said Imlach, whose Leafs were eliminated in the Stanley Cup semifinals last spring. "But Larry scored only five goals last year. We have to replace him with somebody."

Shack's popularity with Toronto fans is a source of irritation to Imlach.

"He got plenty of cheers from fans that had bothered some of the other players," the coach said. "They felt if Shack was going to get all the credit he could do the work. It was a situation we had to correct."

The 28-year-old Shack, who was traded to Toronto by New York Rangers in 1960, has scored 69 goals in the NHL, 54 of them as a Leaf.

So far, Shack has sent three Rochester team-mates off the ice for repairs, one with a high stick over the eye, another with a kick in the ankle and the third with a flying puck that caught him in the groin.

"There's bound to be accidents," he shrugged. "So when it happens to me everybody wants to make a big deal of it."

Shack wasn't the only source of injuries at Peterborough. Leaf centres Dave Keon and Orland Kurtenbach and right-winger George Armstrong all were forced out of tonight's exhibition game as a result of broken bones. Keon suffered a fractured cheekbone by groin injuries while goaltender Johnny Bower, centre Ed Joyal and rookies Larry Johnston and Ron Ward have charleyhorses.

The Leafs are the farthest advanced in their training of the six NHL clubs. Montreal Canadiens started light workouts Wednesday, Detroit Red Wings skated for the first time Thursday and Chicago Black Hawks begin operations today.

Final Meet Of Season

The figurative bugle will call them to the post for the last time at the Fair Grounds Raceway tomorrow night.

Tomorrow night's meet is the last of the season's sixteen-card program of the Quinte Driving and Riding Club.

The curtain comes down in a blaze of equine glory for club president Gerald Vance has come up with what looks like the most attractive card of the summer-long season.

It should, with the co-operation of the weather man, attract the largest crowd of the year.

Forty horses, the largest entry list of the year, "face the barrier" in the nine-heat program.

Brighton's Reta Herrington, who has been racing her stable on the big circuits this year has entered Lu Attorney in the featured fifth and ninth events. Billy Sunday H will compete in the third and seventh races.

Lu Attorney will face such competition as Chuck's Delivery, Direct Dillard, Irena Han, April Magic, Miracle Miss, Leo Lad and Darn Tooting.

A number of new horses will be racing in the other events.

Eskimos, Ottawa Tomorrow

Tiger-Cats Bolster 'Stuttering' Offence

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tiger-Cats, whose stuttering offence belies their first-place standing in the Eastern Football Conference, have taken steps to get their attack rolling.

In their first eight games the Tiger-Cats have a net gain of 1,810 yards on offence, the lowest total in the conference. Even the winless Toronto Argonauts are 28 yards ahead of them.

The Hamilton defensive unit, probably the best in Canadian football, has operated effectively enough to produce six victories and a two-point lead over Ottawa Rough Riders in spite of the club's shortcomings on the attack. But coach Ralph Sazio signed two new players Thursday in an effort to restore the balance.

The newcomers, both offensive halfbacks, are Dave Fleming, a late cut from Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League, and Mel Anthony, who scored three touchdowns in leading Michigan to victory in the Rose Bowl game last January.

Sazio got down to the player limit by releasing offensive end Cloyd Webb and guard John Atanian.

The Ticats have until Tuesday, when they entertain Edmonton Eskimos, to work the new men into their lineup. Fleming, who has been with the club on a five-day tryout, is expected to be ready for the game although Anthony is not likely to start.

Despite their offensive difficulties, the Tiger-Cats lead the EFC in scoring with 186 points to 147 for Ottawa. But only 78 of these have come from touchdowns by the offence.

The defence has contributed five touchdowns on pass interceptions and the remainder of the scoring was accounted for by field goals, singles, converts and safety touches.

Western opponents visit the Ticker three EFC games before the weekend, beginning with Winnipeg Blue Bombers' game against Montreal Alouettes Saturday night. The Eskimos tackle Ottawa Saturday and the Bombers move into Ottawa to play the Argonauts.

The Montreal game will be televised by CTV and the Ottawa game by the CBC.

The Riders, whose pre-season-opening winning streak was shattered when they lost 19-12 at Winnipeg Sunday, may be strengthened by the return of linebacker Mike Blum, who sat out that game with a leg injury.

The Argonauts will take the field for the first time with a field-goal specialist, Scotsman Jackie Simpson, who booted four for Winnipeg before the Bombers cut him earlier this week. They will also dress a fourth Canadian end, Bill Hunter, from East York Argos of the senior Ontario Rugby Football Union.

TWO FLYERS MISSING

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Two members of the Niagara Falls Flyers, Memorial Cup Junior A hockey champion, have not reported at camp and are believed planning to remain at home. Defenceman Barry Wilkes of Toronto and rookie Jim Lorentz, a centre from Waterloo, have been missing while the league's last season's team have been working out with several newcomers.

Series All Even

Pointers Nip Hotelmen

Point Anne nosed out City Hotel 2-1 in a Commercial League finals squeaker-thriller last night to square the 4 - 7 series at one victory, each.

The third game is slated for Prince Charles School grounds Monday, starting five p.m. Note the time change.

It was a nip and tuck battle all the way, the Hotelmen scoring their run in the second with the Pointers hitting for two in the fourth and holding the margin for the win.

It was another topflight mound duel between the Pointer's Ron Maracle and Gerry Genereux. It was Genereux's first setback of the season. He also accounted for two of the team's hits.

He tossed a brilliant two-hitter, struck out four and walked the same number. Maracle gave up but six clouts, walking three and whiffing two.

Two Point Anne errors accounted for the lone Hotelmen run. A bobble put Moreau on first, went to second on an out and Murray was safe on a pitched ball. F. Donovan singled loading the sacks. The second error sent Genereux to first and Moreau across the plate.

Two walks, an error and G. Maher's timely single scored both Point Anne runs in the fourth.

Smart fielding rubbed out threats for both teams, Point Anne in the sixth and the losers in the fourth.

Moreau was the top gun for the City Hotel team, banging out two singles and fielding neatly. Hawkins, F. Donovan and Genereux's pair of singles rounded out the hitting.

Vic Whales and G. Maher accounted for the Pointers' two singles.

The teams:

City Hotel — Hawkins, Martin, Hull, Brooks, Moreau, Ehler, Murray, F. Donovan, Genereux.

Pt. Anne — Whalen, Horwood, Ellis, R. Maracle, Rosebush, G. Maher, MacDonald, D. Maher, Akey.

The score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| City Hotel | 0 | 1 | 0 0 0 — 1 6 2 |
| Pt. Anne | 0 | 0 | 0 2 0 0 — 2 2 3 |

Grand Prix Qualifying

Top Drivers Tie Record

Pacer Sets New World Mark, 1.57

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP)—Bret Hanover won the $70,000 Little Brown Jug pacing classic Thursday, setting a world's record of 1:57 for a half-mile track. Bret won the first heat in record time after rain had dampened the track and delayed start of the race, then came back to win the second heat in 2:57 2-5.

His combined heats also were a world record for a pacer.

A record crowd of 41,200 howled approval as the son of Adios, driven by Frank Ervin, whipped Tuxedo Hanover by 2½ lengths in the first heat and won the second over the same horse by two lengths.

Adios Vic, the only horse ever to beat Bret and rated his chief challenger in the classic for three-year-olds, finished fourth in both heats.

Bret, owned by Richard Downing of Shaker Heights, Ohio, raced the two heats in combined time of 3:56 2-5, shattering the world mark of 3:56 4-5 set by Overtrick in winning the 1962 jug.

POPE HEALTH EXCELLENT

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A high medical source at the Vatican said Thursday the health of Pope Paul, who will be 68 Sunday, is "excellent." The source added: "He is feeling better than you and me put together. Reports that his health is frail are absolutely untrue."

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—The Canadian Grand Prix for sports cars looked like a Mexican stand-off Thursday night when two leading international drivers tied the track record in qualifying trials.

Bruce McLaren of Auckland, NZ, and John Surtees of London, England, tied the lap record of one minute, 27.2 seconds over the 2.5-mile twisting, hilly road circuit at Mosport Park.

The record was established in 1964 when Jim Hall of Midland, Tex., turned the 2.5-mile road circuit in 1:27.2.

The two top qualifiers indicated that Saturday's race will be a battle among big engines with horsepower ranging from 400.

A total of 17 cars qualified and four others were tested for special permission to qualify today.

Jim Hall, a favorite among Canadian sports car drivers, blew the engine of his big Chevpowered Chaparral in a practice run but went to work immediately to install a new motor.

Saturday's race will have a rolling start—different from the last five years of the Grand Prix races. Previously, cars came to the grid in positions depending on qualifying runs. This year, for the first time, a circuit of the track, two abreast and following a pace car until a green flag drops. Then they will be off for 100 laps or 250 miles.

Toronado, Oldsmobile's front-wheel drive car, is the most radical development in production automobiles for 1966. It is 211-inches long, but only four and one-half feet high, and its fast-back design and long, low silhouette are the pace setters for the whole Oldsmobile line. Flat floors are made possible by front wheel drive. Elimination of the drive shaft makes the floor tunnel unnecessary and reduces vibration and noise in the passenger compartment. All Oldsmobiles, Ninety-Eights, 88's, Starfire and 4-4-2's, have a more streamlined look this year, with new colors and new distinction.

Injuries Hit U.S. Clubs

BOSTON (AP) — Denver Broncos, winless on the road since 1962, and the stumbling Boston Patriots, hopeful of maintaining an old hex, meet tonight in a duel of twice-beaten American Football League rivals.

A crowd of some 25,000 is expected for the Pats' 1965 home debut despite the club's woeful performances in dropping five straight exhibition games and both regular season games.

The Broncos, who have not won at Fenway Park since edging Boston 13-10 in the first AFL game Sept. 9, 1960, own the league's third-best offence, but rank last just behind the Patriots in total defence.

NFL HURTS

The Colts and Packers head into Sunday's games with a full cast in top physical condition because of the NFL's rotation system which includes Willie Davis, New York Giants all-pro defensive end, and Jim Ringo, Green Bay Packers' veteran centre.

Cleveland Browns expect Clifton McNeil to be ready to face St. Louis but linebacker Galen Fiss is extremely doubtful because of a pulled calf muscle.

The Cards will be without linebacker Larry Stallings.

Minnesota missed offensive tackle Grady Alderman last week and he again is a doubtful starter against Detroit Lions.

Washington's Charley Taylor, the Redskins' top runner, is doubtful for the Dallas Cowboys' game because of a sprained ankle. Linebacker Bob Pellegrini and punter-end Pat Richter may not see action and fullback Rick Casares definitely is out with a fractured rib.

Dallas guard Bob Isbell still is out. Tackle Ralph Neely and kicker Danny Villanueva, injured in last week's game with New York Giants, are expected to play.

Pittsburgh Steelers, already hard hit by misfortunes, have lost John Henry Johnson for five or six weeks with a knee injury.

San Francisco '49ers have lost linebacker Matt Hazeltine for six weeks and defensive end Dan Colchico for the season due to a ruptured achilles tendon.

In Playoffs

Says Gridders Paid More

TORONTO (CP) — J. G. (Jake) Gaudaur, president and general manager of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference, said Thursday the Canadian Football League pays its players more in the playoffs than the National Football League.

It had been widely believed that the NHL paid more for each playoff game than the CFL.

Gaudaur said he has checked the figures and found that football players on teams winning the Grey Cup averaged $587.30 a game in the playoffs.

He said hockey players on clubs winning the Stanley Cup earn between $250 and $437.50 a game, depending on the length of the semi-final and final series.

Gaudaur said that football players earn more each year than hockey losers. His research showed that each player on a team eliminated in the Stanley Cup semi-finals averaged between $142.86 and $250 a game. Players on semi-final losers in the Eastern Football Conference earn $300 each. Losers in the two-game EFC finals earn an additional $300 for each game played.

PROVIDES BONUSES

Gaudaur added that hockey provides bonuses not found in football. Players on the team finishing first in the schedule receive $2,250 in bonuses with $1,250, $750 and $250 for top player on clubs finishing second, third and fourth respectively.

Football playoff money is split among 32 players a team while in hockey it is split 18 ways.

A player on a team finishing first and winning the Stanley Cup would collect $5,750, Gaudaur said, but unless his team swept the playoffs in eight games, his average earnings a game would still be under the $587.50 a football player receives.

Hockey contributes $144,000 to playoff competitors, and adding the bonus the amount comes to $162,000 for between 12 and 28 games.

Football doles out $211,000 for seven or eight playoff games, depending on the Western Football Conference final, which is a best-of-three series.

Sugar Ray Wins, Plans New Career

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, five-time world middleweight champion, pounded out a unanimous 10-round decision over young Joe Walcott Thursday night, but after the fight he seemed more interested in talking about a new career in acting.

Robinson, also former welterweight champion, is 44 and his halcyon days as ruler of the three weights are a golden memory.

Robinson, who turned showbiz as a song and dance man for a while, said he plans to make two movies in the next six months. And he said, he has agreed to appear on Broadway "or a brief spell."

Robinson has one more scheduled fight, Oct. 1 in Johnstown, Pa., against Peter Schmidt of Toronto, the Canadian welterweight champion.

The 52-year-old pro said he will not play in any more money tournaments in the United States this year.

Leonard shot a 76 in the opening round of the Seattle Open Thursday.

He said he was frustrated by "scaling my guts out," and would "throw my clubs away for the rest of the year."

When asked again how long he would quit golf, he replied:

Consortium Will Finance Building Co.

TORONTO (CP)—MacNamara Corp. Ltd., the construction subsidiary of Gunnar Mining Ltd., will continue operations financed jointly by a consortium of five of the seven banks that have loaned money to Gunnar.

The future of both Gunnar and its subsidiary became uncertain after the company announced Sept. 1 that it had lost $2,705,477 in the eight months ended July 31 because of unexpected losses by MacNamara.

Announcement of the consortium's formation was made by Gunnar officials here Thursday. Participating banks are the Royal Bank of Canada, the Bank of Nova Scotia, the Bank of America, the Provincial Bank of Canada and the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

The statement said the Bank of Nova Scotia, although it has promised to co-operate, did not join the group because its loans to Gunnar were less than one per cent of the company's total bank debt. The one dissenting bank was not named.

DEBT ROSE

Gunnar has announced that at Dec. 31 its bank debt had risen to $45,507,027 from $35,-290,330. McNamara had lost $10,812,000 at that date.

Since Aug. 1, all of Gunnar's bank debt has been fully secured by the assets.

"We can never settle down to the task of getting back on solid construction ground, thanks to the far-sighted attitude of the banks involved," said Harold McNamara, president of the construction subsidiary and a member of the parent company's board of directors.

Under the consortium plans, declared Mr. Carvell will be made by the group as a whole.

Parry Sound Named Centre For Geographic Population

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP)—Using 1961 and 1961 census figures, scientists have determined for the first time the exact geographic population centre of Canada, pinpointing it in Canada's Parry Sound district 40 miles south of North Bay and 145 miles north of Toronto.

Its co-ordinates are longitude 79 degrees, 20 minutes, 30 seconds west, latitude 45 degrees, 47 minutes north, establishing it at a point 44½ miles southeast of Sundridge River near the north shore of Bernard Lake.

Canada's actual geographic centre is far removed in the Keewatin district of Northwestern Ontario at longitude 96 degrees, 48 minutes west and latitude 62 degrees, 23 minutes north.

Determining the population centre was a painstaking, trial-and-error task for economists in the Ontario department of economics and development.

LABOR OF LOVE

More than anything else, it was a labor of love—a time-consuming exercise," as it was described by Rody Kogler, a statistician who supervised the job under the direction of Don Stevenson, director of the economics branch.

To divide Canada's population precisely in half by north and south, east and west, the economists began by taking large population chunks of Canada's lands and cancelling them off against each other, narrowing down the working area.

Then it became a matter of dealing with populations of counties, township by township—only a few blocks in size—the smallest geographical population units provided by the census reports.

By drawing north-south and east-west dividing lines in general area of where it was indicated the population centre would emerge, and by balancing the populations on either side of the lines and moving them, the researchers were able to shunt the lines backwards and forwards until the populations on either side came out equal.

Where the dividing lines intersected each other was the population centre of Canada.

MOVING SOUTH

The line separating east from west runs right through the heart of metropolitan Toronto. The line separating north from south skirts the northern parts of Montreal.

The population centre was determined first on the basis of the 1956 census, and then on the basis of the 1961 census. Both census showed that Eastern and Western Canada are growing evenly. The line dividing east from west was almost unchanged over the 10-year period.

However, between 1951 and 1961 the centre of population responsible for the southward movement, the economists said.

And if it was not for the population increase in British Columbia, which falls mainly north of the line, the geographic population centre might have crept even farther south.

The experts declared the 1961 census will show much change in the location of the population centre.

For the economists, locating Canada's geographic population centre was not the main objective. Their interest was more in determining the population centers of the 10 economic regions of Ontario as part of a regional development study. This research was expanded to include the population centres of the provinces and the country.

Ontario's population centre has been moving northward re-flecting the growth of Ottawa and of Toronto's northern suburbs, principally North York.

In 1961, it was found at the intersection of Jane Street and Eglinton Avenue West in Metropolitan Toronto's York Township. By 1961 it had moved north about three-quarters of a mile.

The department of economics and development dividing Ontario into 10 economic regions, and in most of these the population centres are located in the largest city of the region.

For example, in Eastern Ontario it is in the southeastern part of Ottawa, at the intersection of the Rideau Canal and Bank Line Road; for Niagara, in the southeastern part of Hamilton, two miles west of the junction of Highways 20 and 560 for Lake Erie, at the eastern limits of London, Ont., near the intersection of Highway 2 and Commissioners Road; and for Northeastern Ontario, right on the border of Kitchener and Waterloo, halfway between King-ston and Lancaster Street.

The population centres of the northwestern Ontario region is in the northwest part of Port Arthur on the road leading to Oni-on Lake. In northeastern Ontario it is in the northwest part of Sudbury at the intersection of Spruce Street and the city limits.

Terms Given For Attack on Jewish Group

TORONTO (CP)—Two teenagers and a man received reformatory sentences Thursday of from nine months to two years for their part in a May 16 attack on a Jewish boy who was dragged from across from Toronto harbor.

Paul D. Little, 17, of Toronto, pleaded guilty to charges of assault causing bodily harm, received 18 months definite and 18 months indefinite and has been identified by two members of the youth group as the boy who threw the first punch.

Jason Little Arrowsmith, 19, who admitted swinging a plastic hose in the fight, was sentenced to 15 months definite and six months indefinite.

Maurice Thibeault, 26, of Toronto was sentenced to nine months definite and three months indefinite.

Brunswick was also charged with assault causing bodily harm but Magistrate Edward Negrych convicted of common assault.

Magistrate Donald Graham, who presided over the trials of all other youths, Brian W. Howe, 18, Vincent E. Price, 18, and Frederick Wilson, 18, of Toronto, had been charged with assault.

Judge Graham remarked, in which he called it "a disgraceful episode in the history of Toronto."

BUTTON HENRY, England (CP)—Village villagers at the Durham community kept indoors at night when the strike pickets failed to light up. The next day they were more prepared. They had set a large shining brightly. An engineer found the automatic time switch had mistaken day for night.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem ?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

When a lender is unwilling to grant a sufficient mortgage, the unthinking buyer may scurry about trying to find a lender who will make a larger commitment. To the prudent buyer, the lender's limit should be a warning.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am quarreling with my bank — they won't give me the right mortgage. I am buying a lovely house surrounded by plenty of land, large stately trees and an adorable garden.

I am paying $20,000 for the property and I need a $14,000 mortgage. The salesman tells me that the property is really worth $24,000 and everybody says I am getting a good buy. The highest mortgage the bank has offered me is $12,000.

I have heard that there are ways of getting lenders to increase their mortgage commitments. How is this done? — Lover of Beautiful House

ANSWER: Your bank is giving you a lesson in economics, so take the hint. There is some-thing wrong with the house and it is not worth the price you are paying. You are apparently so attracted to the house that you have lost your sense of reason. Adorable gardens and stately trees are desirable, but fundamental basics of value, construction, layout and area trends are more important.

Instead of quarreling with your bank and trying to force a higher mortgage, ask it to explain why the appraiser and loan committee recommended such a relatively small mortgage. You will learn much.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Success has created my problem. I am a physician, my practice has grown, and I must enlarge my office.

I have called in four highly-recommended contractors and have carefully explained the job to each. The first wanted $2,400, the second $3,000, the third $14,000 and the fourth $3,-500. I am afraid to call in anybody else.

Either my approach is wrong or my four so-called experts don't know what they are doing. How does one solve this problem? — Perplexed

ANSWER: Right now there are five people involved (your-self and four contractors) and each has a different concept of the job. Your present approach, at best, will lead to an unsatisfactory job but will probably end up in an expensive law suit.

The job is large enough to justify formal plans and specifications. Have them prepared by an architect, or a Contractor who may have an interest in the job. The cost of the architect will be somewhere between 5 and 10 percent, depending on complexity, but it will save you time, energy, arguments, and assure a technically correct design.

Then ask your four highly - recommended contractors to bid and have the architect supervise the job, you will be surprised how simple things will be after that.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Our neighbors are planning to install a swimming pool. Some of us are of the opinion that it should be installed on the side of the house as it would give a more affluent appearance to the block. Others are for putting it in the back yard for it would provide more privacy.

Before I give my view I would like your judgment. — An inquiring Neighbor.

ANSWER: In a case like this I think it would be to your best interest that you join the few eccentric individuals who are minding their own business.

Where one places a swimming pool is a matter of personal preference. It will not affect neighborhood values or amenities. If, in the future, your neighbors are unhappy with the choice, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have one less person to blame.

Early Programs Tailored For the Kiddy Audience

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. television a few seasons ago was described as a "vast wasteland" by Newton Minow, when he headed the Federal Communications Commission.

This season American television has become a vast playpen.

The adult viewer will find that almost every program on the three major networks earlier than 8 p.m. during the week is tailored for the kiddy audience.

Thursday night, for instance, an adult viewer seeking post-dinner entertainment had, at one point, the dreary choice among Daniel Boone, The Monsters, and Shindig.

Winters Named Candidate in York West

TORONTO (CP) — Conservation executive Robert H. Winters was nominated Thursday night to contest York West for the Liberals in the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Winters, returning to politics after eight years, will try to win back the seat held by Liberal Leonard (Red) Kelly, who retired to play full-time with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. Mr. Kelly had held the seat since 1962.

Mr. Winters represented the Nova Scotia riding of Queens-Lunenberg until his defeat in the 1957 federal election. He was a cabinet minister in the Liberal government of former prime minister St. Laurent.

His nominating convention attracted 450 supporters. Mr. Winters told his supporters he would be prepared, if elected, to relinquish his business holdings if it was required by law or by propriety.

"Everyone knows the sacrifices required for being a member of Parliament and I wouldn't be here unless I was prepared to make those sacrifices," he said.

Mr. Winters is president of Rio Algom Mines Ltd., Preston Mines Ltd., and Rio Tinto Dow Ltd. He is also chairman of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd. and a director of 10 other companies.

No Obstacles To Signing Of Agreement

WELLAND (CP)—There are no major obstacles left to be settled before an agreement can be signed between Hydro-Quebec and British-Newfoundland Corp. for development of Labrador's Churchill Falls, D. J. McFarland, Brinco vice-president, said Thursday night.

Delivering a speech on behalf of Brinco Chairman John Robert Williams, Mr. McFarland said Brinco has reached agreement with Hydro-Quebec on important terms and conditions that will govern the sale of Churchill Falls power to that utility."

Mr. McFarland gave no details of a possible agreement, under negotiation for several years.

Under the plan as it has been negotiated, Brinco would develop the power potential at the falls, estimated to be 8,000,000 horsepower. Hydro - Quebec would buy surplus power, using some for its own use and exporting the remainder as established 2,000,000 Kilowatts to Consolidated Edison Co. of New York. Consolidated Edison, which services the city of New York, will transmit the Churchill power at the start of 1970.

Mr. McFarland said the proposed linking of all of North America would eventually become essential if this continent is to make the most efficient use of its available sources of energy.

"Indeed, at the moment studies are proceeding into the second stage on a possible Canada-wide power grid," he said.

In southern Ontario, nearly all water power for electricity has been developed, and the province is looking increasingly toward thermal generation for its electricity, he said.

Increased Dues To Be Paid By Seafarers

MONTREAL (CP)—The Seafarers International Union of Canada (Ind.) has increased its dues by approximately $2 a month and eliminated standing assessments, a system whereby the union could assess members up to $40 a year to balance the union's books.

SIU President Leonard (Red) McLaughlin said Thursday the dues change involves collecting dues a quarter instead of monthly. The average sailor will pay $24 a quarter, he added.

In comparison, the old rate was between $15 and $40 a quarter depending on the type of classification.

A new registration fee of $15 a quarter was approved by union members. Mr. McLaughlin said this would allow young men who wanted to go to sea to put their name down for duty at SIU hiring halls without paying the $240 initiation fee.

Also within the SIU, the Canadian Marine Officers Union, an affiliate of the SIU of North America, has elected officers for the first time.

Gil Gauthier, who started the union, is president, John Newton, executive vice-president, and John McCuaig and R. V. McKinnon, area vice-presidents for Thorold, Ont., and Fort William, respectively.

Admits Houses Unfit for Habitation

TORONTO (CP)—A man who once rented 47 houses in downtown Toronto testified at a judicial inquiry into city slum conditions Thursday that some of his houses were unfit for human habitation.

Jagdish Ram (Joe) Shori said in the inquiry, headed by Judge Robert Forsyth, he rented and sub-let the houses because "people didn't have anyman .Rental operation failed and he lost $7,000 to $8,000. Many of the houses have been torn down, he said.

The inquiry is investigating the role of alderman James Marks that city officials are contributing to slum conditions through ignorance or connivance.

Alexander Cowley of Toronto testified that some of the houses managed by his company — Alexander Cowley Co. Ltd. — are sub - standard. His company was convicted three times in 1965 for violating housing regulations, he said.

United Nations Works Well If Major Powers Agree

WASHINGTON (CP) — One possible conclusion arising from the India-Pakistan ceasefire is that the United Nations works well if the major powers agree.

The UN record to date in the latest Asian crisis — although only the first and perhaps easiest step has been completed — is utter contrast to the sterile performance of the last session.

For widely divergent reasons of self - interest, the United States and the Soviet Union acted in concern on the Kashmir fighting, giving the UN a long-overdue boost in morale.

They had crippled the last session with a wasting argument about non - payment to-ward peacekeeping costs, which the U.S. finally abandoned quietly.

No one expects the current accord to establish a long-term pattern.

U.S. COOL

The U.S. has been cool to the good auspices of the UN in Viet Nam, although lately it has sought every avenue for a basis for peaceful negotiations. The UN was not welcomed by the U.S. in the Dominican intervention.

Russia, having declined to contribute to various peace-keeping chores from the Congo to Cyprus and the Gaza Strip, now shares with the U.S. an unprecedented interest in UN effectiveness.

Each of the two big powers have compelling reasons.

The U.S. still hopes that India and Pakistan will form some sort of containment against communism, especially the Chinese variety, even though Pakistan has slipped as a trusty ally.

The U.S. had little or nothing to gain from a renewed war between two allies which have received perhaps $10,000,000,000 or more in American military and economic aid over the last 10 years.

Russia is similarly tied to India, which it has supported against China at considerable cost. It has been reluctant to antagonize Pakistan by taking sides and remains eager to polish its Asian image as much as possible in competition with China.

SOVIET SUMMIT

Divergence of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. accord could come at any time. Russia has invited Prime Minister Shastri and President Ayub Khan to a summit meeting in Russian territory and they probably will attend.

President Johnson, who abruptly postponed scheduled visits by both men last summer and drew domestic and international criticism, now is believed eager to reschedule the visits.

Aside from any good that might be done in friendly talks, shaky ceasefire and grappling with the complex differences between the two countries, such a step seems essential to avoid letting Russia make too much diplomatic hay.

Canadian Navy Gets First New Submarine

CHATHAM, England (CP) — Canada acquired her first wholly - owned new submarine Thursday in a sunlit flotter of the maple leaves, sedate naval ceremony and the bubbling splash of Niagara champagne.

Her Majesty's Canadian Ship Ojibwa, a pencil-slender black silhouette among a visiting flotilla of grey Canadian destroyers, was commissioned for service in the Royal Canadian Navy in a harbor basin alongside the River Medway.

The climax of the commissioning ceremony came when Lt.-Cmdr. George Tomlinson, a native of the inland community of Lac du Bonnet, Man., ordered his crew of 65 officers and men to board and take charge of the 2,400-ton Ojibwa.

The bands of HMCS Stadacona, Halifax, broke into Hearts of Oak and a tune based on the Ojibwa Indian war chant.

Canadian High Commissioner Lionel Chevrier, his wife and other Canadian and British dignitaries followed the sailors aboard to the shriek of a bosun's pipe.

The Ojibwa, armed with eight torpedo tubes, is the eighth submarine commissioned for the Canadian navy but the other seven were second-hand U.S. or British boats.

Scharie

SCHARIE — Mrs. Harry Hicks entertained her neighbors at a Stanley party on a recent Tuesday evening. A pleasant social time was spent; and Mrs. Hicks served a delicious lunch at the close of the evening.

Mrs. Wilfred Simpson and Blaine Foster attended the convention in the County Home on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Elwood Hennessy of Toronto spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Finley Hennessy. She returned home Sunday accompanied by her children, Ann and Michael, who had spent two weeks with their grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hennessy and two children of Napanee were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Finely Hennessy.

TOMATO CROP HUGE

CHATHAM (CP) — Southwestern Ontario is harvesting the biggest tomato crop in its history, with yields in some areas up to 30 tons an acre, a marketing board official said Wednesday. Frank Parry said the over-all crop average might reach a record 20 tons an acre as a result of the cool, rainy weather in August and early part of September.

Joel Aldred Will Run in Algoma East

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Joel Aldred, 44, of Toronto, whose smooth delivery of TV commercials has made him known through North America, said Thursday night he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for the Nov. 8 federal election in Algoma East, the Northern Ontario home riding of Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Aldred announced his candidacy at a press conference. He has no direct link with the riding, held by Mr. Pearson since 1948.

He will seek the nomination at a Conservative convention Sept. 25. Mr. Pearson was nominated by the Liberals last week.

Mr. Aldred contested Toronto St. Paul in the 1963 general election and was defeated by Liberal Ian Wahn.

Way of Christian Love

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Christianity cannot be measured with a plumb-line or a yardstick; it must be measured with a tri-square. That is, Christianity is not just a vertical relationship to God or a horizontal relationship to one's neighbor. It is both, and they cannot be separated. They are like the two French doors Thomas Jefferson designed for the entrance to one of the rooms in his residence known as Monticello. They are attached to the same mechanism so that when one door is opened, the other opens with it. Close one door and the other closes with it. Neither door can be opened or closed alone.

So it is with Christian love. To love God means also to love one's neighbor. The Bible is very plain about this. It says one cannot love God and hate his neighbor at the same time (I John 2:9) In fact, the Bible insists that a person cannot know God, because God is love. (I John 4:8 RSV)

Jesus stressed the two-dimensional nature of Christian love in the Lord's prayer. He did not teach His disciples to pray, "Forgive us our debts" and stop there. He told them to add, "as we also have forgiven our debtors." Jesus put it bluntly when He said, "If you do not forgive men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matthew 6:12 and 15 RSV)

The two great commandments, "You shall love the Lord your God" (Deuteronomy 6:5 RSV) and "you shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Leviticus 19:18 RSV) had been proclaimed by the Jewish law for centuries. Jesus put them side by side. (Matthew 22:37-40) He wedded them together into an indissoluble union. He indicated that in God's mind they are one commandment. Like husband and wife, God has joined them together, and men must never try to separate them.

THREE CONSEQUENCES FOLLOW

This means three things. First it makes love the highest goal of the Christian life. As Apostle Paul put it, "Make love your aim." (I Corinthians 14:1 RSV). The Bible exalts wisdom, but it does not make wisdom the final test of Christian faith. If it did, only the learned could be Christians. It does not make mystical experience the final test, for not everyone has had a mystical experience. But everyone is capable of love. Everyone can show love toward his neighbor. Everyone can show his willingness to forgive. Everyone can show his willingness to enjoy fellowship.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for September 26: "Growing in Christian Love," I John 4:7-21.

Christian love is not a sentimental thing. It calls for disciplined living and a dedicated life. Paul indicates this when he said, "Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous or boastful; it is not arrogant or rude. Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful; it does not rejoice at wrong, but rejoices in the right. Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things." (I Cor. 13:4-7 RSV)

Second, it makes religion practical. It takes religion out of the realm of the abstract, and puts it into life. It relates the temple to the marketplace. It ties the mystical and the ethical together. A person cannot claim to be a Christian on Sunday if his life does not show it the rest of the week. The test of one's sincerity in worship is how he shows his love for God in his work. The measure of his nearness to God in his prayers is reflected by his conduct in his pleasures. His pious words are tested by his deeds. If his love for God and right relations with his fellow men must go hand in hand, He cannot look to God in love, and close his eyes to his neighbor's needs. He cannot truly love his neighbor unless God's love is first of all in his own heart.

SEEING THE INVISIBLE

Third, it enables men to "see" God. No one, the Bible says, has seen God at any time. (John 1:18; I John 4:12). But we can see Him in the manifestations of His love. Someone has said he could always tell where the lamplighter had been by the trail of light left behind him. And one can tell where God has been by the deposit of love He leaves in human hearts.

There are two supreme manifestations of God's love, says the author of I John. First, God sent Jesus into the world to give new life to all who would believe through Him. (I John 4:9), and, second, God gives us the gift of His Spirit. (I John 4:13) Since, says the author, we have such evidences of God's love for us, it naturally follows that we ought to try to love one another. (I John 4:11)

Fish Catches Take Upturn

—TORONTO (CP) — Fish production in Ontario has taken a substantial upturn, reflecting increased catches in both Lake Ontario and Lake Erie.

For the first six months of the year the catch was up 13.7 per cent at 18,435,000 pounds. The value to the fishermen was $2,145,000, an increase of 11.6 per cent over the same period last year.

Two-thirds of the catch—12,243,000 pounds — came from Lake Erie, for an increase of almost 20 per cent. But the biggest increase—81.2 per cent—was in Lake Ontario, which produced 1,642,000 pounds.

Lake Huron production was down slightly over the same period last year, as was Lake Superior and Lake St. Clair, the department of lands and forests reported.

Handsomely restyled for 1966, the all-Canadian Meteor has a longer body — up two inches to 220.4 from bumper to bumper — a new grille with long horizontal lines, shortened blinker lights and rounded front fenders. Added to the Meteor line for 1966 is the new sports model — the S33 — shown above. It incorporates all the changes in the Meteor line plus a 289 V-8 motor and automatic transmission as standard equipment. It is available with stick shift transmission fully synchromesh in all forward speeds. It goes on sale at Canadian dealerships on October 1, 1965.

Two Million Libel Suit Is Dismissed

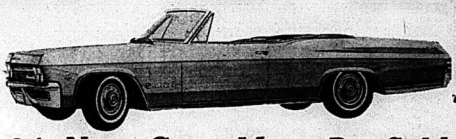
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A $2,000,000 libel suit, filed by former Maj.-Gen. Edwin A. Walker against two Louisville newspapers and a radio station, was dismissed in U.S. district court Thursday.

A Louisville lawyer for Walker, Richard C. Oldham, said the dismissal will be appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Walker sued the Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times Co., and WHAS, Inc. He claimed there was libelous material in accounts of his activities at Oxford, Miss., in the fall of 1962. This was during demonstrations over admission of James Meredith, a Negro, to the university.

Judge James F. Gordon based the dismissal on a U.S. Supreme Court opinion in a libel case against the New York Times Co.

The high court, in the Sullivan vs. New York Times case, held that a public official is not libelled unless he can prove that the statement published about him involves actual malice.



Gordon said there can be no doubt that the Mississippi occurrence was a matter of national concern. He also held that while Walker was not a public official at the time, there was no doubt he was in the public eye.

The judge said there was no evidence of "actual malice" on the parts of the defendants.

Rather, he said, the newspapers and radio-television stations were going about their business of keeping the public informed as to the "actions of public men and their activities in connection with matters of public interest."

Begin Kashmir Airlift At Trenton

Quiet Restored After Ceasefire Said Violated

NEW DELHI (AP)—The India - Pakistan ceasefire line was reported quiet today after both countries accused each other of violating the truce Friday.

India's defence ministry reported no major incidents from midnight Friday to mid-day today along the cease-fire line, where skirmishing and jockeying for a few more yards of ground had been under way since the "halt firing" order went into effect at dawn Thursday.

Pakistan accused India of laying down an artillery barrage Friday night 12 miles from Lahore, Pakistan's second largest city, and moving forward in three truce-like areas.

The Indians accused the Pakistanis of violating the ceasefire in the Ferozepore and Sialkot sectors.

Both countries threatened to retaliate. For the moment India and Pakistan were dragging their feet on the United Nations call for both governments to withdraw their troops to positions they occupied before Aug. 5, when the fighting started.

STAY AT FRONT

A Pakistani government spokesman announced in Rawalpindi that Pakistani troops would stay in their front-line positions until the United Nations agreed on means of solving the dispute with India over ownership of the Himalayan state of Kashmir.

India, meanwhile, was emphatically reiterating its long-held position that there can be no plebiscite in Kashmir—an integral part of the formula for settlement demanded by Pakistan.

Contingents of new UN observers to man the ceasefire line were scheduled to begin arriving today. Ten Danish officers were the first due in New Delhi. Ten others left Canada Friday night to join 17 Canadians already on UN duty there.

CHINA FRONT QUIET

No major incidents were reported in India's other tense frontier—the long mountainous border with Communist China. In a note delivered to the Indian Embassy in Peking Friday, China charged India with new "provocations and intensions" along their frontier. The note accused Indians of capturing Chinese border drivers, sheep and yaks and demanded their return — "not short a single one."

In reply, thousands of Indian demonstrators drove a flock of bawling sheep in front of the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi.

By JOHN CHADWICK
KHEM KARAN (Reuter)—United Nations observers in white began patrol the area, stated part of the ceasefire line where Pakistan alleges India had already broken the uneasy ceasefire agreement in Pakistan-occupied India.

Pakistan Army officers claim Indian troops made several attempts to regain territory in the 300-square-mile wedge of Indian soil occupied by Pakistani troops after pushing back an Indian thrust Sept. 6.

The ceasefire line, some three miles from this fallen border town, remains imprecisely defined amid the wheat fields of the East Punjab.

A burst-out Centurion tank, lifted into a ditch beside a tree-lined road, marks the edge of Pakistan forward positions seven miles inside India.

The charred body of one of the tank crew lay in the road a few yards away. Others were sprawled inside the wrecked tank.

Other Centurion, Sherman and French tanks stood as silent reminders of the last Indian attempt to regain the border town.

Pakistan recovery teams were hauling them away from the front line today, some with the bodies of their crews still inside.

Dead lay in the wheat fields, some with bayonets still protruding from their bodies. Vultures hovered overhead.

A Pakistan major claimed 2,000 Indians died in 17 days of fighting here. "Most of them were bayoneted," he said.

Indian parties with white flags have started recovering their dead. The Pakistanis object, that under cover of these operations they have planted mines and posted observers in trees in the no-man's-land between the two forward lines.

EXCHANGE OF BLOWS

There have been several exchanges of small arms and mortar fire between the Indian and Pakistani positions in the last 24 hours. Pakistani troops also fired machine-gun bursts at an Indian spotter plane which circled overhead.

One Norwegian and one Swedish observer from the UN team at ll.-Gen. Robert Nimmo, of Australia, the UN chief military observer, were at work here.

They have been recorded three movement between the lines, but we cannot guarantee their safety in this situation," a Pakistani officer said.

Charge Toronto Man Slew Girl Found Dead in Muskoka

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont. CP — Roy Donald Kelly, 22, of Toronto today was charged with capital murder in the slaying of five-year-old Terry Alcorn of Scarborough, a Toronto suburb.

The girl's fully-clothed body was found early today under a bed in a cottage about 10 miles east of here and 130 miles from her home.

Police said the accused's sister and parents, who own the cottage, arrived about 10 p.m. Friday to spend the weekend and found blood on the front room rug and a bedroom locked.

Police said it appeared the blonde, blue-eyed girl had been strangled.

Kelly, a milkman, was arrested in a car at a police roadblock seven miles from the cottage.

A neighborhood search which involved more than 100 of Mrs. Alcorn's Scarborough neighbors was called off late Friday when police learned of the finding of the girl's body.

An uncle of the girl travelled to Bracebridge and identified the body this morning.

Cheerleaders from Moira Secondary School do the can-can on the lodge around the front patio of the new Intelligencer building this morning. The girls had just finished a tour of Front Street, along with cheerleaders from the other three high schools and a band from the musicians' union, for United Appeal. The procession gathered in front of the new building to broadcast a program about the United Appeal over CJBQ. ## PC Head Outlines Platform

By STEWART MacLEOD

HALIFAX (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker hammered an education plank into his election platform here Friday night as he launched himself into the Nov. 8 election campaign with pledges to boost the Atlantic economy and settle the offshore mineral issue.

"Let's get together and do it," he urged as he officially got off the mark for the general election by speaking for 65 minutes to 2,000 people in a high school auditorium.

"Policies for the people—that's what we have," he said. Mr. Diefenbaker promised an increase to $5 from $2 in the per capita grants to university students "on an interim basis until a new formula is arrived at." There would be special allowances for universities which have a high percentage of outside students.

Research grants to the National Research Council would be boosted and grants to the Medical Research Council would be increased "very greatly." There would be an increase in university grants to the Canada Council, and all the recommendations of the Hall royal commission concerning health and education training would be carried out.

"And these are but a few."

PLEDGE 'SPECIAL' AID

On regional economic assistance: "The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council . . . has recommended that the entire Atlantic area be designated a special area for economic development."

CNR to Increase Speed Of Passenger Service Between Montreal, Toronto

Pool System Ends

MONTREAL — Canadian National Railways announced today it will improve the speed and frequency of its Montreal-Toronto passenger service, starting October 31, with five trains daily running in each direction during peak travel periods.

The announcement by Pierre Delagrave, vice-president, Passenger Sales and Services, follows on the heels of a joint statement by Canadian National and Canadian Pacific yesterday that the pool agreement covering joint operation of passenger trains on certain routes is being dissolved October 30.

The present fast daily afternoon train in each direction between the two cities will continue but will operate to and from Central Station and the schedule will be reduced to less than six hours.

Two new non-stop trains will be introduced, operating on a schedule between five hours, fifteen minutes and five hours, thirty minutes, the fastest running times ever scheduled in Canada.

One will operate in the afternoon in each direction on Fridays, Sundays and certain peak periods throughout the year, and the other, a morning train, will run during peak travel periods, such as Christmas, New Year's and Easter.

The present daily morning and overnight trains will continue to operate on existing schedules.

In Montreal, all of these trains will operate in and out of CN's Central Station, with underground pedestrian access to the Queen Elizabeth Hotel and the Place Ville Marie complex of restaurants, theatres, offices and shops.

Details on arrival and departure times for all trains will be included in the CN timetables to be issued for the fall and winter seasons.

Mr. Delagrave said that the large renovation program on passenger equipment undertaken by Canadian National this year is now well enough advanced to enable the railway to put into the Toronto-Montreal service the latest types of dining and parlor cars with greatly increased capacities and added comforts.

Between Montreal and Quebec City, CN will continue to operate its fast stainless steel streamliner, Le Champlain. In addition its Ocean Limited, Scotian and Chaleur will continue to provide connections between Montreal and Levis, without pressure or hindrance from anyone;

—Accepted the outline of a draft conciliation document charting Catholicism's approach to modern world problems, from birth control to nuclear war;

Catholic Bishops Working With Industrial Efficiency

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The second week of the fourth session of the Vatican ecumenical council ended today with the assembly of Roman Catholic bishops working with almost industrial efficiency.

The 2,200 bishops have an enormous amount of work to do before the council can meet its fifth closing date, expected in December.

In the week just ending, the 2,200 council delegates from around the world:

—Voted initial approval of the controversial declaration on religious liberty, which commits the church to a doctrinal view that every man has the right to worship as he wants

Name Canadian To Head Truce Team In India

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian officer has been appointed commander of the UN team which will enforce a ceasefire along the India-Pakistan border.

It is expected that Canada will have about 135 military personnel in the area by early next month.

And the joint is already jumping at the RCAF Transport Command's base at Trenton, Ont., where rushing UN peace-keeping forces to trouble spots is getting to be an old problem, solved with steadily increasing smoothness and despatch.

Maj.-Gen. Bruce F. MacDonald, 48-year-old armor specialist, will head the Canada - India-Pakistan observation mission which will try to keep peace through the Kashmir area disputed by the two Commonwealth nations where bitter fighting has occurred in recent weeks.

Another Canadian, Group Capt. G. B. Murray, 47, of Calgary will be senior air officer of the mission, leaving his post as commanding officer of the RCAF station at North Bay.

Coupled with the announcement that Gen. MacDonald, an Edmonton native with a 25-year military career behind him, would head the force was one of his promotion to major - general from brigadier.

FLY FROM TRENTON

An RCAF staff of about 35 will open start flowing toward the area, with the possibility that the airlift may start as early as today from Trenton.

Two C1ribou transport planes are prepared to fly to Rawalpindi, Pakistan, and are awaiting clearances for flights over the two countries. They will go via the Atlantic, Italy, Lebanon and Iran and are scheduled to reach Rawalpindi Oct. 1.

Two Yukon transports will leave Trenton Sept. 29 with air and ground crews for the Otter reconnaissance planes which will be flown to the troubled area in Six Caribou transports. Shipment of the Otters will begin Oct. 3. Three other Caribous will carry spares for the ground observers, spare parts and supplies.

In all, 13 planes, large and small, are involved in the operation, scheduled for completion by Oct. 20.

REMINDS OF SUEZ

The bustle at RCAF Transport Command headquarters is reminiscent of the operations mounted in 1956 for the UN venture in Suez and again last year for the UN mission in Cyprus.

In the latter case, Canadian troops were ferried to Cyprus by plane before the UN officially approved formation of the force.

Officials said that with every such operation the Canadian forces move faster and more

Student Vote Wooed

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson wooed the student vote Friday, announcing that he is seeking ways to allow students to vote at their university residences and has given the provinces the go-ahead to extend their allotments from the federal student loan fund.

On the voting issue, Mr. Pearson said the government has asked Cyril Carson, a Toronto lawyer who is a specialist in electoral law, for an opinion on whether the Canada Elections Act can be interpreted to allow away - from - home students to vote in university cities.

The Elections Act says students must be enrolled for classes before the election writs are issued if they wish to vote in their university city. Otherwise, they have to return home to vote.

HAVE COMPLAINED

There have been complaints from student associations that a large number — estimates range to 30,000—will be unable to get home to vote. The universities had not opened when the writs for the Nov. 8 election were issued Sept. 8.

The prime minister also announced that he will ask university presidents and principals to consider what action they might be able to take that would allow students to return home either on election day or by advance poll Oct. 30 and Nov. 1.

Mr. Pearson said an "unexpectedly large demand" by students for "federally-guaranteed bank loans to finance studies has created a situation where some provinces may not be able to meet all requests from their share of the $40,000,000 available.

To meet this situation, the provinces had been told that they may exceed their allotments by an amount sufficient to guarantee that all students who qualify under the financial need standards will receive loans.

UN Gets Off to Flying Start In Atmosphere of Optimism

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Despite a U.S.-Soviet clash over Viet Nam, the 20th anniversary session of the United Nations General Assembly is off to a flying start in an atmosphere of international friendship.

After five days of sessions the delegates seem to be in the mood for the message of peace they will hear from Pope Paul on Oct. 4.

That way to a successful session was cleared Aug. 16 when U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg announced the United States was dropping its threat to deprive France and the Soviet Union of their votes for their refusal to pay assembly peacekeeping assessments.

That meant the assembly could get back to voting on resolutions—something it had not done in the previous year for fear of a big-power clash.

Then on East - West fight threatened to break out over the presidency of the new session. But the two candidates, Yugoslav foreign minister Koca Popovic of Yugoslavia, withdrew on the eve of the session opened.

So when the assembly convened Tuesday afternoon, forces were more fluent and more of Italy was elected without opposition.

Next, the assembly admitted three new members—Gambia, the Maldive Islands and Singapore. That put the membership at 117 countries.

Yesterday a ruling India and Pakistan agreed to a ceasefire under pressure from the Security Council. That gave the United Nations an immediate concrete achievement after last year's inactivity.

It also showed that the United States and the Soviet Union could work together for peace. Both voted for all three of the council's ceasefire resolutions.

A further token of East-West amity followed when the assembly voted Hungarian Ambassador Karoly Csatorday chairman of its steering committee.

He was invited this time as Peron Communist to be elected to the post in 19 years.

Right after the assembly's general debate began Thursday, Goldberg charged Communist China with promoting violent revolution in other countries and said the United States had troops in Viet Nam at the request of that "free" But he restated U.S. willingness to negotiate on Viet Nam and made no criticism of the Soviet Union.

Today, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko repeated his government's charges of U.S. aggression in Viet Nam and his demands for withdrawal of U.S. troops. But he limited his mention of Communist China to saying that it should be seated in the United Nations.

Large Deficit Recorded

OTTAWA (CP) — A further deficit, amounting to $360,000,000, has been recorded in Canada's international payments during the second quarter of 1965, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Friday.

It compared with a $397,000,000 deficit in the first quarter of the year and one of $148,000,000 in the second quarter of last year. During the third quarter of 1964 the country ran a surplus current account balance of $214,000,000.

The bureau said small deficits on merchandise trade in the first six months of 1965 were turned into large deficits when non - merchandise transactions are taken into account.

"This widening in the current account imbalance accompanied a substantial economic activity in Canada and the United States in the half year, and volume of trade between the two countries was at record levels," DBS said.

For the whole of 1963 Canada had a current account deficit of $1,000,000, and in 1964 it amounted to a deficit of $433,000,000.

EXPLAINED BY SURPLUS

The $360,000,000 deficit in merchandise and non-merchandise trade in the second quarter of 1965 was covered by a surplus of $300,000,000 in foreign funding into Canada, mostly in short - term forms, compared with a $43,000,000 increase in Canada's official holdings of gold, foreign exchange and net balance with the International Monetary Fund.

Since the autumn of 1964 Canada has been running a surplus in capital movements amounting to over $300,000,000 a quarter. DBS said there was a continuing similarity in capital transactions over the three-

Bay of Quinte Club Curlers Prepare for Another Year

Early in October the ice-making machine at the Bay of Quinte Curling Club will go to action and soon the "Roaring Game" will be in full swing for another season. The old and prospective members will have a new cement floor on which to curl, complete with new headers, pipes and all other facilities necessary to make good ice. The noise of stones will probably be stilled but the skips will be better heard as they exhort a stone to reach its desired position.

The new floor was installed by the Hugh Murray Construction Company and Mr. Murray, being a valued member of the club, gave personal direction. The sides of the rink have been insulated against infiltration of water, and the floor has been laid on a solid foundation which will, it is hoped, eliminate the bad ice that was prevalent during the latter part of last season. It has been a wonderful improvement and will be appreciated by the members.

MANY MEETINGS

The president, Ken Pinder, and his effigent Board of Directors have not been idle during the summer months. Meetings have been held and everything has been discussed and final plans laid for the season. The men's curling draws will be held the first four nights of the week, while mixed curling will take over on Friday, Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Bonspiel dates have been set. The Bay of Quinte Mixed Spiel will be held from January 20th to 30th, inclusive, while the Men's Spiel will be from March 2nd to March 6th, inclusive.

The big spiel of the year has been moved back a month in order to attract more "name" rinks from outside the district. In the past the spiels had completed with other spiels and it was impossible for these rinks to compete because of commitments.

The Bay of Quinte Spiel is recognized as one of the main ones in the province. The prizes are the best that can be procured and everything points to another high class event.

For the local members the Sportsman's Spiel, sponsored by the late Steve Flintoft, is the highlight of the season. To make this year's more enjoyable there will be a President's Spiel and this event will be directed by the head of the club and his directors. In preparation for the season the juniors have not been forgotten and a concentrated effort will be made to induce younger persons to get interested in one of the finest pastimes and sports in the world.

With curling goes good fellowship and social activities and this coming year will find many events being arranged by the social director, Dawson Boyd. To start the season a special get-together will be held a week from tonight. A dance will be held on the new floor, followed by a midnight snack and a social hour. The hall will be especially decorated for the occasion and the event promised to be a real send-off for the season.

PROGRAM LAID OUT

The annual meeting will be held on October 20th at which time the program will be fully outlined and then the members from the hall will have a chance to criticize or praise the efforts of their directors. Following the meeting a social hour will be held for everyone to get acquainted. It is expected the opening will be a mixed spiel around the second or third of November and from then the rocks will roll till early in April.

The Curling Club is always seeking improvement and one way to improve is to have an active group of members. The dance on October 2nd is designed for that purpose. The members are asked to bring guests with the hope he or she may like what they see and join the organization. Mr. Maseglian is chairman of membership and is waiting to sign you up in a fine club.

Curling is the finest winter sport on the outdoor. It is a game of fine recreation, good fellowship and social activity. One can become most proficient and enjoy keen competition or can be one out to have a good time with it. It is a great leveller and many new friendships are made on the ice that endure for a lifetime. New members will be made most welcome as another curling season approaches.

Will Close Pinnacle St., Dundas-Bridge, to Speed Start of Paving Work

In order to speed underground sewer work and thus assure that the paving contractor will be able to get on the job as quickly as possible, vehicular traffic on Pinnacle Street, from Dundas to Bridge, will be closed off for the next two weeks.

Northbound traffic which normally would take Pinnacle Street is being diverted along Church Street, while detour signs are also up further east to take a bit of the load off Church Street.

"We want to assure that the sewer contractor will have his work completed in the Dundas to Pinnacle St. block in time for the paving contractor to get to work when the contract is let," stated city engineer Wilbur Bell.

For the next two or three days traffic will be permitted to exit into Pinnacle Street from the market square and Market St. but when the contractor gets up to this point the street will be completely closed off as far north as Bridge Street.

The reason for the detour, of course, is that the contractor is able to get ahead faster with sewer installation with traffic out of the way.

Council Approves of Sale Of Two Million Debentures

Belleville city council Thursday voted to sell $2,000,000 worth of debentures to provide cash for a number of capital works programs, either carried out or in the course of being carried out.

Midland Canadian Corporation and Wood Gundy Incorporated were authorized to negotiate sale of the debentures which would be payable in U.S. funds.

The interest rate given was 5% per cent.

Kinsmen Clubs to Build Institute for Retarded

SASKATOON (CP)—The Association of Kinsmen Clubs announced today it will finance the construction of a $350,000 national institute of mental retardation in Toronto.

Will Klein of Regina, national Kinsmen president, made the announcement to delegates attending—the annual convention of the Canadian Association for Retarded Children.

Sod - turning ceremonies are expected to take place in 1967, Canada's centennial, Mr. Klein said, and the building — a three-storey, glass-fronted structure—is expected to be completed by 1970.

The institute will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Association of Kinsmen Clubs in 1970, he said.

When completed, the building will include the national headquarters of the CARC, which will assume responsibility for the annual operational costs of the institute.

PLAN 5-YEAR DRIVE

Funds to complete the building will be raised during the next five years by the 415 Kinsmen Clubs throughout Canada. Membership in the organization now is about 13,000.

"The institute will be a clearing house of ideas, a point where every new development in the field of mental retardation will be examined and then made available to every other point on the map. Programs for retarded children will be evaluated and the beneficial results disseminated to other centres," Mr. Klein said.

He estimated that by 1970 about 2,000 volunteers, professional and technical workers will receive instruction annually from the institute.

A partial text of Mr. Klein's address was provided to the press before delivery.

"Around The Cat"

The women's section of the Belleville Curling Club held a successful season to a close on Thursday when play for the Bradley Cup, emblematic of the Club championship, was held. A rink skipped by Mrs. Carm Mott with Mrs. Pearl Legault and Mrs. "Doll" Argue won the trophy and the runner - ups were Mrs. Laura Boyle, Mrs. Lil Mascoro with Mrs. Rita Lloyd as skip.

At the conclusion of play the women retired to the clubhouse where a delightful lunch of sandwiches, candies, cakes and coffee were served. The hostesses were Mrs. Edna Jackman, Mrs. Nora Kyle and Mrs. Hazel Boyle.

Four rinks of women's doubles journeyed to Brighton recently and joined with rinks from Stirling, Trenton, Cobourg, Kingston and the host club in a tournament that was washed out by rain after the second game had been played. Prizes were awarded to all two - game winners and the one - game high. A rink of Mrs. Nora Kyle with Mrs. Elsie Jackman from the local club got into the prize money by winning both games and Mrs. Betty Wyse, Mrs. Ivy and Mrs. Carm Mott, Mrs. Vera McIntosh and Mrs. Lil Mascaro and Mrs. Jessie Fuller and Mrs. Grace Clapp failed.

The final tournament for the year at the local club will be played a week from today when a mixed trebles tournament will be staged. Instead of the skips picking their own players, the tournament chairman will put all the names of the members in a hat and will be drawn. Fowl will be given as prizes and these should come in handy with Thanksgiving Day only one week away. Due to vagaries of the weather at this time, of year, the games will start early and it is hoped they can be finished before darkness sets in.

Former Gov. Is Cleared Of Bribery

BOSTON (AP)—Former governor Foster Furcolo, 54, of Massachusetts, accused of conspiring to arrange a bribe, was cleared on a directed verdict Friday after five days of testimony.

The conspiracy charge was lodged against the Democratic former governor in connection with a delay by the 1960 Executive Council in approving the reappointment of a public works commissioner.

Furcolo Executive Council is an elected, eight - member body which, until its authority was curtailed by the voters in 1964, held veto power over the governor's appointments.

Furcolo served as governor from 1957 through 1960, leaving office after he was upset in the 1960 Democratic primary in an attempt to get the party's nomination for U.S. senator.

United Appeal Campaign Launched By Cheerleaders of Four High Schools

A UNITED APPEAL — Cheerleaders from each of Belleville's four high schools united for a United Appeal cheer at the Rite-Way Plaza last night. From left, Janice Gillespie of Moira, Suzie Johnson of BCI, Bev Hall of Quinte and Kathy Gist of Nicholson.

Betty Bannon of Quinte High School gives a red feather to one-year-old Kelly Fradette at the Belleville plaza. Betty and 26 other cheerleaders led festivities to celebrate the opening of the United Appeal campaign Monday.

* * *

United we stand!

And despite the rain, the wind and the cold last night cheerleaders from the four Belleville high schools united together to promote the 1965 United Appeal Campaign.

Sitting in red convertibles, the 27 girls from BCI, Moira, Quinte and Nicholson College, gathered at the BCI parking lot to start off the evening's festivities.

The procession, complete with a police escort, moved along Victoria Ave. to the Belleville Plaza. At the Plaza, the United Appeal A-go-go cheerleaders left the cars and spread through the mall and the stores, handing red feathers out to everyone and repeating the message, "United Appeal starts Monday. Be sure to support it."

They were supported by a seven-man band, representatives from the American Federation of Musicians of U.S. and Canada, Local 518, Belleville. The seven men, Joe Burchill, Bob Brown, Walter Aselstine, Mike McMahon, Don Johnson, Frank Reed and Doug Aselstine, gave their services voluntarily on behalf of the union.

A large crowd of shoppers, ignoring the rain, circled the band and the dancing cheerleaders, clapping enthusiastically with the music and shouting words of encouragement to the dancers.

HEADED FOR RITE-WAY

Then the girls and the band returned to the cars, and the procession left the Plaza and headed for the Rite-Way Plaza.

By this time the rain was coming down hard, but the girls, sitting in open convertibles, kept singing and yelling United Appeal cheers.

At Rite-Way, the procedure was much the same as before. First the girls spread through the store, handing out red feathers to everyone they saw and reminding them that the Appeal starts Monday. Then they gathered in the mall in front of the band and danced, sang and cheered spontaneously. Once again, a very large crowd gathered around and handclapped enthusiastically.

The same thing happened this morning with the cheerleaders gathering at the BCI parking lot and going to the Front Street along with the band. The girls handed out red feathers to everyone they ran through the stores giving them out and asking people to give to United Appeal.

The six convertibles were donated for the affair, four by Trudeau Motors, one by Kennedy Motors and the other by Elliott Motors.

Theme of the affair was to focus attention on the fact that the City of Belleville's socialist parties as their candidate for the premiership.

Regina Lawyer Reinstated by Law Society

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—Regina lawyer M. C. Shumlatcher, disbarred by the Saskatchewan Law Society last November, has been reinstated, benchers of the society announced Friday.

Shumlatcher, 47, was disbarred after he was convicted in Court of Queen's Bench of conspiracy to defraud the public in a series of stock transactions. He was sentenced to three years.

The conviction and sentence were quashed July 6 by the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal which also ordered a new trial. On Sept. 14, the Saskatchewan attorney - general's department announced it had decided not to carry further its case against Mr. Shumlatcher which had been before the courts in various forms since 1960.

In a statement, issued by Speaker A. M. Nicol of the law society, the benchers said the decision to restore Mr. Shumlatcher to the roll of the society was based on the quashing of the conviction.

The action restores to Dr. Shumlatcher full rights to practise law in Saskatchewan.

The statement added: "There still remains for consideration a number of charges preferred against him under the Legal Professions Act. These charges were laid some time ago but at the request of Mr. Shumlatcher were not proceeded with so that he would not be prejudiced in the conduct of his defence of the criminal charges then pending against him.

"The law society has engaged counsel to look into these matters thoroughly and to advise as to what action should be taken."

Provincial Health Ministers Given Medicare Plan Details

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial health ministers headed home from Ottawa Friday with the latest federal proposals — and counter-proposals — for a national medical care plan tucked in their briefcases.

The provincial ministers were wound up a two-day conference with federal Health Minister Judy LaMarsh, a meeting she described as "friendly most of the time, even when we disagreed."

The provinces have been asked to say by Jan. 1 whether they will come in or stay out of the plan the federal government hopes to have in operation by July 1, 1967, the centennial of Confederation.

Although some provinces are not completely happy with the proposed terms, it is expected none will turn down the federal offer of $14 or more per capita to meet half the per capita cost of the plan.

Some of the areas of disagreement came out at a joint press conference following the two days of closed meetings.

ASK FOOT TB BILL

R. S. Donahoe, attorney - general and health minister of Nova Scotia, said there has been a unanimous demand by the provinces that Ottawa foot part of the cost for hospital care for tuberculosis and mental patients. The provinces say it all now.

Dr. J. Donovan Ross of Alberta held out staunchly against Ottawa insistence that the plan cover everyone and be non-profit, ruling out private insurance companies.

Miss LaMarsh told the press conference the ministers had agreed to meet in a month or so in Manitoba to discuss among themselves portability of rights from one province to another.

The federal and provincial ministers would meet before the year-end to carry on detailed work on medical care insurance and the new resources fund of $500,000,000 over 15 years that the government announced just as the conference started.

A special committee of federal and provincial officials, plus representatives of medical, dental, hospital and nursing associations, will consider ways to allocate this fund and report to her, Miss LaMarsh said.

The conference spent Friday discussing terms on which Ottawa will contribute to medical care insurance. Conditions are that a plan be comprehensive in benefits, universal in coverage, have benefits transferable from province to province and be publicly administered.

TERMS UNDERSTOOD

No definition of the terms was committed to writing. But Miss LaMarsh said they were fully discussed and all provincial ministers understood them.

Miss LaMarsh said the goal is to have at least 95 per cent of the people covered in any province. But 90 per cent would be acceptable and hers could be some flexibility in this figure.

The Ottawa offer of $14 per capita was based on estimates that the national average of costs would run about $28 per person. If this proves too low, Miss LaMarsh said, an increase could be considered.

Dr. M. B. Dymond, Ontario health minister, said his province's costs run more than $36 per person. Mr. Donahoe mentioned Nova Scotia costs of about $35.

"I am confident there will be a series of schemes across the country by the target date," Miss LaMarsh said.

NO PRIVATE COMPANIES

She definitely ruled out participation by private companies in any program that would qualify for Ottawa aid. An acceptable plan would have to be operated by agencies responsible to provincial legislatures, open to public audit and non-profit.

A reporter asked:

"There's no place then for private insurance carriers?"

"That's right," she replied.

The regular monthly meeting of Hastings County Federation of Agriculture was held on Thursday evening in Stirling Agricultural office with a record attendance. Mrs. Percy Ray was appointed representative to the Rural Learning Association.

Delegates to a one-day Farm Leaders Conference in Hastings County were: Griffin Ketcheson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Forestell, Ross Ketcheson, George Carlisle and Mrs. Percy Ray.

A tome 5 meeting was announced to be held in Brighton Agricultural office on October 18. All members were asked to attend.

The annual Federation of Agriculture convention will be held in Toronto on November 9, 10 and 11. Delegates appointed: Griffin Ketcheson, Wilfred Forestell, Owen Ketcheson and Helen Ray. Alternates are Mourney Bateman, Burton Hubble, Ross Carlisle and Mayse Sills.

Plans were discussed for the annual Hastings County banquet to be held in Madoc Parish Hall, with Charles Munroe of the O.F.A. 1st vice-president as guest speaker. The date will be announced later.

A social half hour closed a very important planning meeting.

Few Can Read Or Write In Egypt

CAIRO (AP) — Only 14 per cent of Egypt's population can read and write, according to the best available statistics.

President Gamal Abdel Nasser is moving to increase the number, but doubts are being expressed over how the campaign will succeed.

Mobile movies are touring the villages, trying to stir up enthusiasm among illiterate peasants to attend classes, and factory workers are being urged to study.

Preliminary studies by the ministry of education show the government's project would cost about $30,000,000 over the next 12 years. Foreign experts believe it will cost much more if the program is to succeed.

$348.09 is a year's total electric bill for this eight-room home

—and that includes electric heating throughout!

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Burns live in Brockville, Ontario, in a two-storey home with 2,231 square feet of space. Last year, their total electric bill was $348.09. This covers all their appliances, cooking, water heating, lighting and electric heating. The Burns are one of many Ontario families recently interviewed about electric heating. Here are some of their comments:

"We sat down and figured it out and I'm heating this house for as little as it cost to heat my other home, yet I have another room and a larger, heated basement here."

"There is no maintenance whatsoever. You haven't got a worry in the world."

"If I ever buy another house it'll be heated electrically. It's such a steady, reliable heat. There are no cold spots in the house . . . no drafts or anything like that."

"You don't have to dust as much."

"Another reason I put electric heating in was that I knew it was the coming thing and that the house wouldn't devaluate as fast."

Electrically heated homes, insulated to Hydro standards, cost no more to heat than homes with other systems. In fact, in many areas in Ontario it actually costs less to heat a home electrically.

THERE IS MORE TO ELECTRIC HEATING THAN THE LOW COST

Flameless electric heating is the cleanest heating possible. It doesn't burn fuel so it cannot possibly create dirt, dust, film or soot.

Electric heating offers you room-by-room or zone temperature control. You enjoy even, comfortable, healthful warmth—always. You gain extra living space with electric heating too, because there is no bulky fuel-burning equipment.

Annual servicing is eliminated. Cleaning and inspection are not needed. Electric heating is the most carefree heating system of all. With all its advantages, no wonder so many people throughout Ontario are turning to electric heating for the comfort, convenience and economy they want in a heating system.

Electric heating is one of the many features of the famous Medallion All-Electric homes. For full information, consult a qualified electric heating contractor, or your Hydro.

ELECTRIC HEATING FOR YOUR PRESENT HOME

If you are planning home extensions or if parts of your home are not now properly heated, you can install supplementary electric heating for less than it costs to extend your present heating system.

More on Pollution

Further to our recent comments on pollution it is interesting to note that new regulations, methods and attitudes will soon be brought to bear on the problem of polluted air over Canada's growing urban areas.

The foundation for such a program, according to James Purdle in an article in Civic Administration, was laid in Toronto recently when 1,500 delegates from around the world attended the annual conference of the Air Pollution Control Association.

Mr. Purdle says that most of the mechanical equipment for testing and controlling air pollution already exists and the next step should be the establishment of regional air quality standards across the country. A central agency is proposed, supported by Ottawa and the provinces, for collection and dissemination of technical and administrative data.

The municipal role in this program would be to co-ordinate control measures in each region and to enact by-laws to give them effect. By-laws would specify permissable emissions of smoke, excessive solid matter and odors.

Other developments within the next decade will include the control of domestic heating units, the amount and types of fuel they can use, for example, control of sulphur content of the fuels; installation of equipment in cars and buses to eliminate fumes, and prohibition of cars in poor operating condition.

These are just a few of the proposals, but they are illustrative of the extent of the problem. The air we breathe in downtown areas in cities throughout Canada is not as pure as it should be. Thus, controls are necessary for the public good and the sooner they are implemented the better.

Ontario Publicity

The Ontario department of travel and publicity's colorful brochure, Ontario—Vacationland of Hospitality and Variety, is among the finest put out by the provinces.

It came as a surprise therefore to be informed by the Chamber of Commerce in Belleville that this brochure, which had been available in both English and French editions, is not being printed any more.

Instead, it seems the department is concentrating on regional brochures affording more detailed information than was provided by the one in question.

What this brochure lacked in information, however, was amply compensated by the beautiful photography, and the pictures gave an overall impression of the province likely to attract more visitors than would the printed word.

Other provinces—and Nova Scotia is an example—are still publishing their photo-brochures and it seems incomprehensible that Ontario should cease publication of its own booklet.

Recently we sent one to a friend in New Zealand who replied saying it had been much admired and was in keen demand by the younger members of the family in connection with school studies. This alone would suggest the brochure should be retained.

Tire Squealers

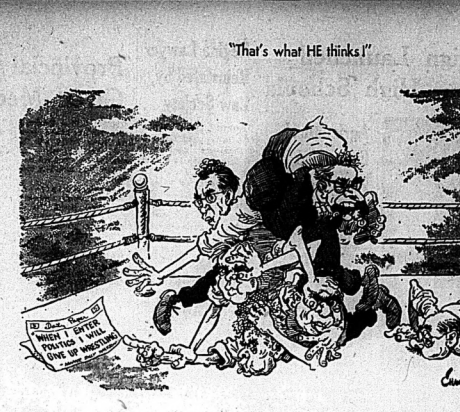
Tire squealers have several things in common. They are all young, brash and unable to drive their cars without putting on the dog. "Look at me," they say in effect as they wear out the rubber on their tires, failing to realize that they are objects of derision and more to be pitied than admired.



It would be a good idea to tighten the law in this regard. The squealer is a public menace; invariably they are also the types that drive too fast, eventually get into an accident, and are a menace to other road users.

In Windsor, the city administration has been asked to prepare a report on the anti-noise by-law to determine what control exists over the squealing of car tires. One alderman said the problem was on the increase. Controlling the tire squealers should not be too difficult if a hard and fast ruling exists and police ensure that it is enforced.

A few miles north of Rimini, on the coast-road to Ravenna, I came to a trickle of summer water that was flowing under a bridge. It was once the boundary between Cisalpine Gaul and Rome, and any general who crossed it with his army, without the permission of the Senate, was committing rebellion." Caesar crossed it because his spies had told him that his enemies in the capital were plotting his downfall, and he knew that he had to march on Rome or perish. It was the greatest gamble of his life and, as he ordered his legions to advance, it is said he remarked, like a true gambler, Alea jacta est—"The die is cast;" and ever since men have been casting their various dies and crossing their Rubicons.— H. V. Morton in A Traveller in Italy.

How West Was Won Being Revived by All Parties

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If we're going to make it, says Prairie Liberal Strategist Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp, we've got to Win the West.

If we're going to take it, says Conservative Wheat-Country Grand Planner and former Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton, we're going to have to Hold the West.

And so these two super-politicians are doing their best to turn this election into a private and intensely personal test of political strength.

The two wheeler-dealers who operate in the heady world of multi-millions — of bushels, tons and dollars — see it the make-or-break fight for Western votes and National power — precisely the same, if seemingly opposite terms.

Mitchell Sharp who never, in the wildest flights of Madison avenue imagination, could be called "Ol' Mitch" —being the brittle, honed-to-a-fine-edge kind of character his is — say the Liberals must hold Ontario, do the best they can in the Maritimes, and win in the West.

Alvin Hamilton, whom everybody with easy familiarity calls "Ol' Alvin" — being the comfortable-as-an-old-shoe character that he is — says the Conservatives must hold the West, do the best they can in the Maritimes and win in Ontario.

HOW NOT TO DO IT

So to these Biggest of Big-Time Businessmen for whom a city really isn't a deal unless it runs into nine figures, the West this time is the Go-For-Broke-Country.

Since both have done smashingly in stuffing the over-stuffed pockets of the prosperous Prairie grain — men with currency up in the big, fat, richly-coarse denominations, it is pretty well a stand-off in the vote-winning department of how to keep the Western taxpayer in a mellow mood.

The break, then, could come in the Boob and Bobble department.

For it was just eight years and four months ago this very end-of-September that the late, great C. D. "Trader" Howe, in one of his tough-and-gruff moods, poked a protesting Manitoba farmer in the stomach and growled: "Man, you look pretty well-fed and fat to me!"

It happened at Morris, not far out into the flat and fertile wheatlands from Winnipeg in the 1957 campaign, and both Liberals and Conservatives had the old CCF-cum-NDP, too, remember it as the turning point on the Prairies of the election. It definitely was the clincher in '58, and then perhaps both in '62 and '63.

And who knows, that well-remembered yet, it could still count this November '65.

Back then, the farmers who might have laughed off "Trader" Howe's little joke in any other year were just plain mad in the Spring of '57.

Their unsold crops were piling up in the grain elevators and they were feeling the pinch of a tightening cost-price squeeze.

NEVER AGAIN

And they were scarcely in the mood for any hearty ha-has even from old "C.D." who had sold so much wheat for them in days gone by.

The "Trader's" poke in the farmer's midriff cost the Liberals vital votes, and kept costing through every election since.

This time nobody is poking farmers, or making unfunny jokes.

Instead, they're patting them on the pocketbooks where they hurt or feel good the easiest.

The farmers who never had it so good — in the West that is, if not exactly in Ontario, British Columbia, Quebec or the Maritimes — are going to have it all that much better, to audit the pocketfuls of promises being pledged them.

How good is it?

Well, back in the '62 election, the then Conservative Trade Minister George Hees bidded about it, but not publicly, and certainly not out West.

He told of approaching the gate of a Saskatchewan farm just as the lady of the house wheeled through, scraping her white Caddy on the post.

George sympathized with her, but she told him no-never-mind, for she'd just wheel out the other job. And she did, a second white Caddy.

Farmers are sure high-on-the-hog good out West," reported George Hees then.

Now, three years and how-many - wheat - deals - and - hundred-of-millions of dollars later — there's one big sales and about a billion — things, if you can believe it, are even better.

India Medics' Record Good

Toronto Star

The Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons appears to have hung itself on its own argument.

It said its decision to bar Indian doctors from practice in this province was based partly on their past results in Medical Council of Canada examinations.

But a study of those results by the Star and the Toronto Labor Committee for Human Rights reveals:

Graduates of Indian medical schools have compiled one of the best records in the examinations; more than 75 per cent passed on the first attempt.

During the past 45 years only three Indians failed the examinations outright and they were all from one "unlisted" medical school.

The percentage of Indians passing was higher than that of graduates from 15 or 17 European countries whose schools the Ontario College "recognizes" while rejecting the Indian schools.

* * *

No cause there to bar Indian doctors. How the College has retreated to the position that the Medical Council examinations are only one of many criteria used to assess applicants. It has said it is excluding Indian-trained doctors partly because the quality of Indian medical education has dropped certain standards in very recent years, due to the rapid increase in medical schools there."

But this second line of defence doesn't hold up, either. It doesn't apply to most of the Indian doctors now in Canada who are seeking full registration. They qualified before the big expansion of medical education in India, or in established schools. Yet the Ontario College denies them permission to sit for the Medical Council examinations which they must pass to qualify for practice in Ontario.

While denied a chance to practice, some of them are acceptable as hospital trainees and supervisors of new medical students here.

* * *

All this keeps alive the suspicion that the College of Physicians and Surgeons is discriminating against these doctors for reasons not related to their medical knowledge.

The Ontario Human Rights Code, which bars discrimination on account of race or color, does not apply to the licencing of doctors. If the Ontario Human Rights Commission is (charged with enforcing the code) reason: Colleges, manufactoritly, the Government should step in. After all, the College of Physicians and Surgeons has been granted its licencing power by the Ontario Legislature. The Government should ensure that the power is not being abused.

Nevertheless the fact that it is the richest consumer market in Canada, that a number of boutiques and coffee shops have blossomed forth, does not mean that people in Toronto live in a perpetual state of vibrant excitement. If so, this sensual vitality is not visible on the faces of people in the streets.

Mrs. Argue's obsequiousness seems designed to flatter the market to which she herself seeks to cater.

Is Toronto So Exciting?

Peterborough Examiner

Mrs. Marlene Ann Argue, the director and business manager of a new magazine for wealthy Torontonians, has made a number of extravagant claims about that city.

It is, she said, Canada's most sophisticated city. "It is second only to New York on the North American continent in the vitality of its artistic and night life, she said, and its theatres, boutiques and arts centres are "absolutely exciting."

These remarks will warm the heart of Toronto's mayor, Philip Givens, but they will raise eyebrows in other parts of the country.

Montreal is convinced of its position as the nation's cultural centre and it has been ranked as an exciting city in North America. The first, perhaps, is San Francisco which Mrs. Argue also seems to have omitted from her list, to say nothing of the other major American metropolises.

Residents of Vancouver, which Mrs. Argue recently left, will also feel that their city compares favorably in some respects with Toronto.

There is no doubt that the variety and quality of Toronto life has changed considerably in recent years and that it has

Blood Tests Not Enough To Diagnose Some Diseases

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can leukemia, bone diseases, arthritis and the like be determined by various blood tests?

Are rheumatism, lumbago and arthritis closely associated? — J. M. B.

* * *

When you say "Leukemia, bone diseases, arthritis and the like," that covers a lot of territory.

A variety of blood tests are very helpful in diagnosis of these diseases. If your question implies that blood tests alone are sufficient, the answer in general is no. Bone marrow studies, X-rays, the patient's symptoms and other information need to be taken into account.

As to your second question, rheumatism and lumbago are not specific diseases. They are scientific terms. Rheumatism implies stiffening and pain in the joints, but the word is used so loosely that we find people using it for anything from neuralgia to torticollis.

Lumbago implies pain in the lower back, usually from muscle strain rather than from any ailment of the joints or bones, but there are exceptions. The term refers to the lumbar, or loin region.

Arthritis is a more specific term. It refers to disease of the joints — any joints. Even so, it still includes a goodly number of different forms. There is rheumatoid arthritis, a serious, acute disease which causes a good deal of pain and crippling. There's osteoarthritis which is a gradual type related more to ordinary wear and tear on the joints due to any acute attack of disease.

A severe blow may damage a joint.

Bursitis, or inflammation of the bursa, or pad, over which the tendons ride, can cause great pain in joints.

Gouty arthritis is pain caused by deposits in joints as a consequence of gout.

Calcium deposits remaining from the healing of old injuries may or may not be painful.

Infectious arthritis is one more frequent forms of joint pain, or arthritis. Obviously with dissimilar causes, they require entirely different treatment. Accurate diagnosis is of the utmost importance.

Dear Dr. Molner: In 1961 a doctor gave me tranquilizers. I have a good many left in a tightly-capped dark bottle. My present doctor has given me the same medication. Would it be safe to use the first bottle? — C. T.

* * *

These capsules keep very well, so I see no reason why you shouldn't use them.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain cause and treatment for conjunctivitis — C.K.

Let's make that plural — causes.

Conjunctivitis is inflammation of the outer lining of the eyes, or conjunctiva. This can result from several causes. Bacterial infection is one, more often called "pink eye" and highly contagious. Treatment is based on antibiotics and isolation until the infection is subdued.

Other causes include virus infection; allergic irritation, such as with hay fever; irritation from wind or dust or bugs; irritation from chemical fumes. Treatment depends on which cause is found, but the basic aim is to avoid the irritant.

* * *

"Don't Quit because of Arthritis" is the title of my leaflet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write in Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun — Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and a dime in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

The shrill song of the periodic cicada, or 17-year-locust, which was heard in this section for a few weeks the year, honors from one of the most complex musical instruments in nature, according to the National Geographic. The male is the music maker.

There are two great races of cicadas — the 13-year locust and the 17-year locust. They are peculiar to North America, which has 30 colonies of the two types.

The life of the cicada begins in a tree and ends in a tree af, ter 13 or 17 years of underground existence as a grub. When the grub emerges it turns into a gaudy, pop-eyed, green ish - bodied bug with gauzy wings. In this state it eats little, the principal damage being done by the female, who is something of a carpenter.

While the male plays the musical instrument the female saws slits into the limbs of trees for egg deposition. Then the eggs hatch in a few weeks the moths tumble to the ground. Each grub digs itself a home near a sap-filled root. It remains there unless the food supply fails.

The plans for the observance of the 60th anniversary of the founding of Christ Church Parish are well matured. The Jubilee tea will be held in the city hall on Oct. 14th. The first church building, a log affair, roughcast structure, was built in 1804 on Moira Street west near the site of the present. It was dedicated on January 1st in 1815. In this church was buried to the grave. Services were taken immediately to build the present church on Colborne Street, and it was dedicated on April 9, 1832. The Rev. C. O. Clarke is the present rector.

Mrs. Diamond of Bass Lake is the guest of Mrs. Wiggins, Everett Street.

On the 29th inst., the Rev. Charles Cook, D.D., LL.D., B.D., pastor of Victoria Street Church in this city, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of his arrival in Belleville from New Haven, Conn. His pastorate has been one of great spiritual and material progress in the congregation. The mortgage debt has been reduced from $12,000 to $5,000; a new pipe organ has been installed; class rooms have been added; decorated throughout. The membership of the church has greatly increased.

Even in Tahiti!

Ottawa Citizen

The problem of people moving to urban areas is apparently universal one. It has raised its head even in the South Pacific. In Tahiti, for instance, the capital Papeiete now has 24,000 residents, which is one-third of the entire population of French Polynesia. The same thing is true in Fiji, Papua, Western Samoa and New Caledonia. To paraphrase the old song, it seems to be a question of how are you going to keep them down on the plantation after they've seen Papeete.

Sweden

By Jet to Land Of Midnight Sun

By BARRY McCULLAGH

The Comet jet shot into the firmament like a thing possessed, bound for Stockholm via Copenhagen. The noise on take-off was deafening and the Swedish woman in the seat next to me held her hands to her head in an attitude of mock terror.

London was quickly left behind as the aircraft, its engines now muted to a low-pitched whine, headed out over the North Sea. The early evening brightness gave way to a twilight of red and grey as another day drew toward its close.

I was aboard British European Airway's night flight to the Swedish capital and I felt a keen sense of anticipation. Sweden — so near and yet so far, even from Britain; a country with a standard of living comparable to Canada's; only about three hours away from England by air and yet so close to the mysterious world of Russia and the Baltic lands that are still largely closed to western visitors.

ADVANCED SOCIETY

Sweden, though it lies on the fringe of the eastern world, is the product of its own peculiar genius, owing little to either east or west. An independent state, it has a long tradition of peaceful progress and is peopled by a race that has been described as one of the most homogenous in the world. It is a welfare state par excellence, with the problems that, paradoxically, go with cradle-to-the-grave benevolence — piling people who are restless and express their inner insecurity in irrational and violent fashion. But such phenomena is common to other modern societies the world over. It is the complex that proves the rule of an orderly, progressive and attractive society inhabiting a land of climatic extremes, like our own.

My affection for Sweden began some years ago when I heard my brother-in-law describing a canoe trip he made in the far north of Scandinavia during university days. The desire to go there increased when he gave me a gift of money for my birthday "to be spent only in Stockholm." Interest reached fever pitch when on June 30, 1956, in a newspaper capacity, I attended a luncheon given by the City of London in the Mansion House for the then King and Queen of Sweden. King Gustav and Queen Louise had made the journey to Britain in a cruiser and I sat with a Swedish journalist who accompanied the Royal party. He told me more about Sweden.

Nearly a decade was to pass before I went to Sweden. And that is how I came to be flying over the ocean on that balmy May evening in 1961. Suddenly the lights of Copenhagen appeared below and there was a brief stop there. Airborne again and then, barely an hour later the Comet touched down at Stockholm. It was a new airport, and even at that late hour of midnight workmen were busy putting finishing touches to the interior of the building. As the passengers walked toward the terminal a stewardess standing on the tarmac smiled her greeting. Here was a warm smile and I pondered why it was the Swedes were supposed to be a cold race.

But this was the time of year Swedes enjoy most, after emerging from their long winter night, and smiles come more easily.

The airport was so new and modern that arrangements for baggage handling somehow were awry, so that it was about 1.00 a.m., when the bus finally deposited me at the city terminal where my Swedish hosts were waiting.

From there by taxi to the suburb of Roslagsnasby, which is 20 minutes by suburban train from the city centre. Here my friends lived in a modern apartment block. Several of these gleaming latter-day Swedish homesteads stood at intervals in a rectangular pattern in an area that once was forest. On one side were the pines and on the other suburban Roslagsnasby with its shopping centre and homes. Children played in sandpits which I was to see even in public squares down town.

DAYLIGHT AT 2 A.M.

When I finally got to bed it was 2 a.m., and in the nature of things in this part of the world in May it was now daylight. That, combined with the excitement of the trip made sleep difficult.

From the 14th floor balcony I looked toward a wooded horizon and I was reminded of the visits of the Gatineau country as seen from Parliament Hill in Ottawa. Every 20 minutes the suburban train rattled past on the track nearby.

A Saab jet fighter of the Swedish air force streaked overhead and was soon almost out of sight over the forest hinterland. As in Canada, urban and rural areas lie in close proximity. I wondered from what secret base the plane had come, Sweden has developed a defence system like the U.S. Strategic Air Command. Ten thousand fighters housed in bomb-proof hangars hewn out of rock are on constant alert for any possible attack from the east. Similarly, naval vessels are berthed in safe anchorages around Sweden's rocky coast. A network of underground shelters is available for the civilian population and serve in peacetime as hospitals, dance halls and the like.

Stockholm is a blend of the old and the new. The old city, with its cobbled streets and narrow alleys lined with stores offering the products of a wealthy economy symbolizes the history of a capital whose origins go back to the 12th century.

By the close of the 12th century there were defence works on the present Stadsholmen, and around the middle of the 13th century a community was founded at this spot by Birger Jarl.

Today the relatively modern City Hall, perhaps the most famous building in Sweden, dating from 1923, blends perfectly with the older buildings along the harbor, while only a stone's throw away is the complex traffic system at Slussen (sluice-gate roundabout.)

Buildings of comparatively recent origin are being bulldozed to make way for modern office blocks and factories, in keeping with Sweden's desire to keep in the van of progress.

SWEDEN OF TRADITION

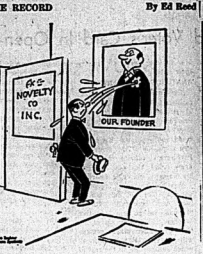
Kathleen Knott has written a book called "A Clean Well-Lighted Place" which aptly describes the Sweden of today. She writes also of the Sweden that is like traditional Ireland, peopled by "wee folk," goblins, witches and so on. Legend and myth theme abound in the Swedish countryside.

Stockholm is almost surrounded by water, hence the popular title Venice of the North. Tour boats leave from the harbor area and one trip takes the visitor along a narrow canal. Amid the peaceful rural scenery on either bank there are the homes of many of Sweden's top families. And as in Canada Swedes enjoy cottage life and boating.

There is much to do and see in Stockholm. Around the harbor, within easy reach of the downtown area, are the Royal Palace and the Opera House, which is also the home of the Swedish ballet whose choreographer is Montreal-born Brian Macdonald.

In the harbor was a brigantine like those used for training cadets. This one is used as a youth hostel and it has the improbable name of Ulf Chapeau, a reminder that in the port of Gothenberg there are many families bearing Scottish names, from the days when merchants from that country traded regularly with the Swedish port.

There are a number of excellent restaurants. One evening I was waiting for a friend outside the restaurant at Katarinahissen from which one may enjoy a fine panoramic view of the city. The Swedes are fond of their liquor and here was this well-dressed but inebriated gentleman on the sidewalk. He lurched toward a girl standing nearby. She edged toward me and thinking I might divert the fellow's attention I asked the girl, in English, if indeed this was the Katarinahissen. It seemed the most natural thing in the world in Sweden that she should reply, also in English, in the affirmative, and suggest that my friend might be waiting inside. Meanwhile our tipsy friend tottered onto the street and threaded his way through the traffic to the other side.



The flight back to London was made in a French-built Caravelle of SAS. With engines in the rear, the take-off was as quiet as the Comet was noisy. At Copenhagen a girl was announcing a polar flight to Los Angeles and she had a lilting voice so that it sounded like Los An-ge-les. Whoever was on that flight could have no doubt that he was indeed en route to the far-off destination in the United States.

At the airport at Stockholm a blonde girl standing in front of me at the ticket counter carried a case bearing a miniature Red Ensign and the emblem of Sweden. Thinking she was Swedish I asked if she were going to Canada. She said she was Canadian, from Toronto, and was on her way to Copenhagen to join friends for a motor tour of Spain. She and another Canadian girl had spent a couple of years nursing in a Stockholm hospital.

Arriving in London I had time for only a few hours sleep and then I was on my way back to Canada. Six hours after leaving London the jet landed at Montreal where it was raining. Somehow it always seems to be raining when I land at Montreal.

OFF THE RECORD By Ed Reed

Contemplation of Death:

Is not a pleasant thought, but no one can deny its inevitability. For that reason intelligent people do not blindly close their eyes to its coming. Now while your family is all together, ask your pastor, your attorney or other trust officer their opinion of planning in advance. I am confident they will advocate the wisdom of pre-need monument and plot purchasing. At present widows purchase two thirds of the family requirements. Much of this purchasing is done under the stress and strain of the emotional shock of death. Pre-Need buying is just the simple matter of facing a situation squarely and taking care of it before the need arises. Your family cemetery monument is your protected possession forever, free of taxes, and against which no assessments, levies or liens can be placed. For that important first step call me today, you will never regret it, and the members of your family will be most grateful for your foresthought.

CHRIST CHURCH 1865 - 1965

"The Lord gave the word. Great was the company of the preachers." — Psalm 68-11.

* * *

"During the past thirty-five years Christ Church rectors have been men of faith and vision and are known and remembered by many this presently worship in the church," concludes Mrs. Earl Hickey in her informative and moving account of Christ Church in commemoration of its one hundredth anniversary.

The Rev. G. G. Wright came in 1931, when churches and members were endeavoring to pull out of depression years. After a most successful ministry he died very suddenly on a Sunday evening, August, 1944.

In the fall of 1944, Rev. J. Grant Sparling became rector after serving as Command Chaplain in Calgary with the RCAF during the war years. He went to Edmonton in October 1950 to become Dean of Christ Church Pro-Cathedral.

Following a heart attack Easter Sunday evening, he died April 1, 1956. He is remembered for his never failing readiness to serve. Since his death, Mrs. Sparling has been Dean of Women at the University of Alberta in Edmonton.

Canon L. R. Smith came as rector in September 1950, remaining until 1956, when he accepted the rectorship of the beautiful Gaskinoyo Anglican Church. His compassion for the troubled, sick and aged will long be remembered. The new addition to the Parish Hall was built during this ministry.

In 1952, Rev. R. G. Fleming came from Ottawa and served for two years, following which he was appointed Dean of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston. Even though his ministry was short he will be long remembered.

On July 26, 1955, the Rev. Everett P. Smith entered into rest, after serving in Christ Church for 30 years. He was superintendent of Sunday School for 12 years, ordained to the priesthood Feb. 1943, and was assistant rector for 12 years. In July 1954 he was appointed rector of Point Anne and Shannonville, where he served until his death.

The present rector of Christ Church, Canon R. B. De Blois Wright was appointed in September, 1954, after serving as rector of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene in Picton for nine years.

Canon Wright is one of 12 members of his family during the past 100 years who have served as priests in the Anglican Church of Canada.

In his "State of the Parish" remarks at the annual vestry meeting in July 1960, Canon Wright challenged the present membership to a vital reappraisal of the task of the church in the community. He said that much was owed to the gallant souls who had planted the faith so firmly in the soil of the new land. The future emphasis must be upon "Mission" The task the church has been called upon to carry out by Its Lord, is to proclaim Christ to those near and far away.

The Parish today numbers some 3,000 on its rolls.

Many, many memorials have been gifts to Christ church, too numerous to cover. The very early ones were mentioned in previous weeks' articles.

However, one of distinct significance and not visible or perhaps known is the unique marble slab in the mensa of the altar. This slab contains mementoes from shrines along one of he paths over which the Apostolic Church was brought from Jerusalem to Canada via the ancient Celtic Church of Britain, Wales, Ireland and Scotland. The Canterbury tile is from the Saxon Church founded by Augustine in 597, also dear to ancient sources.

The marble slab was a 1941 Epiphany gift from Mr. J. M. Black, native of Stirling, in commemoration of his admission in 1890 by Rev. Samuel Daw to the first surpliced choir of Christ Church and of his confirmation July 12, 1891. The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, D.D., 5th Bishop of Ontario himself a pupil dedicated the slab February 16, 1941.

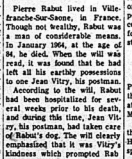
Mr. Black was a Wesley an Methodist until the centenary of the death of the Rev. John Wesley in 1891.

The communion table, reredos and altar were gifts by Christ Church congregation in memory of the men and women of Christ Church who served in the 1914-18 war. The unique carving was the work of the late W. B. McPherson, once a citizen and artisan of Belleville.

Memorials at this time are in the form of dedicated stained glass placed on an altar memorial board. The money gift which accompanies the plaque is used for specific needs in church adornment.

Members of Christ Church who are serving in Holy Orders are:

Rev. Charles Staples, Associate Secretary of the Youth Division of G.B.R.E. and his assistant, Miss Muriel Sparling, daughter of Mrs. Sparling of Edmonton, and the late Dean Sparling.



Rev. Robert Stewart, Marmora, who was ordained to the priesthood in 1960 and has served as assistant at Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, Sardis, B.C. and St. Johns, Winnipeg, Man., before his present rectorship. He is the son of the late G. A. Stewart and Mrs. Stewart of South Park Street, Belleville.

Rev. George Meades, a Lay Reader is now rector at Bobcaygeon, Ontario.

The present staff includes:

Rev. Allan Lauder, assistant curate; Mrs. Charmee Fuzzen, parish secretary; Mr. John Croyden Withers, organist and choir master; Mr. Derk Spitsman, (from Holland), parish verger; Mr. Clarence Fuzzen, superintendent of Christ Church Sunday School; Mr. Stewart Bull, Superintendent of St. George's Sunday School, and two lay readers, Mr. Herbert Cavalier and Mr. Jack Fletcher. The lay readers share in the services, and also conduct services in Missioo Parishes where there may not be a resident priest.

These article are now completed with the hope that fitting tribute has been paid to the past, and to those whose inheritance has enriched the present.

KINDNESS COMES BACK

Pierre Rabut lived in Villefranche-Sur-Saone, in France. Though not wealthy, Rabut was a man of considerable means. In January 1964, at the age of 94, he died. When the will was read, it was found that he had left all his earthly possessions to one Jean Vitry, his postman.

According to the will, Rabut had been hospitalized for several weeks prior to his death, and during this time, Jean Vitry, his postman, had taken care of Rabut's dog. The will clearly emphasized that it was Vitry's kindness which prompted Rabut to name the postman as his beneficiary.

Kindness gives birth to kindness. It is here a boomerang. Because it has a way of coming back to the one who gave it. It is the golden chain by which society is bound together, and . . . wherever there is a human being, there is an opportunity for kindness. If we are truly kind to others, someday, somewhere, others will be kind to us.

Army Sword Voter's Card In Open-air Parliament

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

APPENZELL, Switzerland — To begin with, Appenzell is only half a canton, one of three half cantons (provinces) in Switzerland, and the least populous. The other half is called Appenzell also. That is, one is Inner Appenzell and the other Outer Appenzell.

They don't talk to each other. Inner, which is mostly Catholic, is virtually surrounded by Outer, which is nearly all Protestant. Both are nearly surrounded, in turn, by the comely canton of St. Gall, in the northeast corner of Switzerland just below Lake Constance. Inner Appenzellers, 13,000 strong, disgustedly likken the situation to a five-franc piece in a dung heap.

It's not that Appenzellers don't like anybody. But their home is a combination of Dogpatch, Sleepy Hollow, Kutztown and the place where all those jokes take place about the city slicker passing through who stopped to talk to a farmer, et cetera.

It is a land of kind, quick-witted, upright, wise-eyed, curious country folk who live scattered among the green hills on dairy farms with the barns attached to their houses. They don't mind an occasional city slicker passing through and chatting, but they wouldn't want him to live there. Or marry their sister.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

They practise a form of old fashioned democracy an annual open air town meeting where everyone speaks his piece, all laws are passed officials elected and appointed. Each citizen shows up at the drive in Parliament wearing the Swiss army sword that is his badge of his majority, his voter's card.

Appenzell's are so independent that they not only have their own Toonerville Trolley railroad, but no less than five of them. They link up at St. Gall and other major centres with the Swiss Federal Railway which suffices for all the rest of Switzerland.

Each voter train has its first and second-class compartments; just like downtown. One line even has a dining car, though there is scarcely time on any run for anything but a quick Appenzell Alpenbitter, a bittersweet herb aperitif served with soda.

Appenzell was founded as a retreat for monks of St. Gall's Benedictine Abbey, and split along the same religious lines during the Reformation. But unlike St. Gall, which is about half Protestant and half Catholic today, the breach never healed.

The capital of the canton, whose governor is a local baker, is the town of Appenzell, a metropolis of 4,000. It is probably the most genuinely quaint of Swiss towns, its ponderous old half-timbered houses, unchanged by the years, gaily painted with decorative and original floral patterns unknown elsewhere. A pharmacy building is a veritable outdoor art gallery, its facade decorated with pictures of all the herbs and plants from which common medicines are derived. The custom artifying houses started in the dim past among farmers who thought ways to while away the unproductive winter months and Appenzell paintings are greatly sought after by collectors.

Herbs and medicines are so much a part of the Appenzeller folkways that the province has become a haven for practitioners of folk medicine and dentistry. Its laws far more liberal than in the rest of scientifically sophisticated Switzerland. Just outside of St. Gall are whole streets populated almost exclusively by home-spun paths, osteopaths, naturopaths and other toilers on the fringes of the medical vineyards.

Appenzell town's main industries are its famous embroideries, taverns where wily farmers meet to dicker over the price of cows (all deals are sealed with a handshake and accounts settled monthly in the taverns), and cow bells.

SYMBOLS OF AFFLUENCE

The weighty bells with their hand-tooled leather and brass straps and gaily colored fringes, far from being just tourist souvenir, are symbols of the Swiss farmer's affluence — his Cadillac and his pride. The more cows they are, the more his neighbors are supposed to be impressed. They are actually too heavy for the lead cows to carry for long, so they wear the big ones only when going to the hills for the summer, or coming back down at the end of it. In between, they wear smaller ones.

Lately, collectors have become enamored of antique cow bells. The wily gnomelliers are delighted to sell the old junks. With the money they can proceed directly to the shop of Fuchs Brothers and buy two new ones.

St. Gall is a fetching, peaceful and soft-paced city of intriguing old streets, ornamentally carved erker windows, broad tree-lined boulevards, smart shops, and lady traffic cops. All of it is set in a rolling green valley with instant countryside and scenic Lake Constance at its fingertips.

It was founded in 613 by an Irish monk named Gallus who fell ill here while riding the circuit with 12 brethren, and decided to stay among the peaceful hills. Much of the character and history of the city has been wrapped up in its religious history.

The Benedictine Abbey became one of the most prominent in Central Europe, and developed a fine university that from 700 to 1100 A.D. was the most famous in Europe. Its Medieval museum of 400 volumes, monumental for its time, has grown into one of the finest collections of its rare kind in Europe. The present Abbey's lovely Baroque library houses some 100,000 works, among them 2,000 hand-inscribed volumes up to 1,300 years old. The library displays one of three existing codices of the Nibelungenlied, and the first Latin-German dictionary, dating from the tenth century, as well as a hymn book from the eighth century containing the first rudimentary musical notes.

A contender for ancient is St. Gall's brand new business university campus, on a hillside very close to the site originally set aside for schools by Gallus. Its block-like unpainted, formal concrete buildings decorated with way-out modern paintings and sculptures probably was not what the monk had in mind.

Ann Landers
Wealthy Widow Told Lot Could Be Worse

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You've had many letters in your column about widows lately. I was especially interested in the one signed, "Not So Soulful Reminder."

It's true that when you weep you weep alone. Even my late husband's brothers and sisters have fled the scene. They go to parties, take trips and enjoy themselves. Their lives have not changed one iota.

What really bothers us is when people say: "Your children are grown. You have a lovely home and plenty of insurance. Consider yourself lucky." It could be worse. I'd like to know how much worse it could be. The most important thing in my life is gone. What good is a beautiful house and money?

ANN LANDERS

I'm sure I am not the only widow who feels this way. Please print my letter for all of us who are — LOST AND BEWILDERED.

* * *

DEAR LOST: You may feel that I, too, am unsympathetic but your friends are right. I could be worse, and if you read some of the letters I get from widows who are left with small children, no income and swamped with bills, yet, you'd know how much worse it could be.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have been friendly with Mr. and Mrs. X. for many years. I cannot count the number of times we have had them to our home for dinner. We've never failed to include them whenever we have a party. They invited us to a picnic one night, and we were told to bring our own food. We didn't mind too much because this is the way people do on picnics.

Last week we were invited to have dinner with them in a restaurant. Both my husband and I agreed it was about time they reciprocated. Ann, when the waitress came to take our orders Mr. X. said "Separate checks, please."

My husband and I are shocked and burned up. How can we let them know we think they are petty and cheap? — SPEECHLESS COUPLE.

* * *

DEAR COUPLE: If you remain speechless they'll never know. I wish some of you who wrote to me about such "problems" would produce the answer yourselves by facing the offenders and treating with them instead of asking me to provide an easier way out.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband does portrait paintings as a hobby. A member of the family often expressed the wish that Henry would do his wife's portrait. They agreed on a price and everyone seemed pleased.

After several weeks of hard work he finished the portrait and I thought it was wonderful. So did all the neighbors who saw it. When Henry presented it to the man he didn't say much but we could see he was disappointed. He sent my husband a cheque in the mail the next day and didn't write a note saying that his wife liked it or anything.

We have been to their home twice and the portrait is no where in sight. We didn't mention it and neither did they. Henry feels he should return the money and take the portrait back. What do you say — Yes or no? — MRS. DON'T KNOW.

* * *

DEAR MRS.: No. Henry is under no obligation to return the man's money. He did his best and if the portrait did not please the family, it's too bad.

* * *

Confidential to ME OR MY CHARIOT: One way to make sure is to leave the car in the garage for two weeks and ask her to ride the bus or walk.

* * *

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits — the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cloistered Nuns Seeking Land for More Privacy

By ANNE MASON

EDMONTON (CP) — High-rise apartments are making it difficult for a group of cloistered Roman Catholic nuns to maintain privacy while living in their high-fenced grounds in downtown Edmonton.

So the Sisters of the Precious Blood open their doors to the public today for the first time since they established here 64 years ago. By holding a bazaar, tea and bake sale, they hope to muster money toward a new home.

A high wall surrounds the exercise grounds where the order's 27 nuns walk daily and play badminton or have picnics during recreation time — an hour in the afternoon and an hour in the evening.

But a 13-storey apartment block across the narrow street and behind the sisters dittle privacy in the grounds, said Mother Francis de Sales, interviewed in a parlor behind a grilled enclosure.

"Every time we went out for picnics people would be leaning out of the windows watching us. They were even taking pictures."

The nuns are a contemplative, monastic order whose prime purpose is prayer for the world and their diocese.

Secretarial work sold to the church or Roman Catholic organizations is their main source of income. The nuns want to extend and improve recreation facilities to attract novices.

To attract recruits the mother superior wants a more modern monastery with an infirmary, more grounds, brighter walls and more windows. Land has been bought in a section of Edmonton where there is little possibility of future apartment blocks.

Manor Aux. Plans Bazaar

The Women's Auxiliary of the Hastings Manor held its first meeting of the fall season in the library of the Manor on Monday.

There was a splendid attendance of members and some visitors.

The president, Mrs. A. Daniels, welcomed everyone and gave a bit of philosophy from the book "The Quiet Hour" written by Fabiola Strong.

The usual reports were given, including an interesting summary by Mrs. Yorke of the convention held recently in Fort William. Mrs. A. Kingston reported there had been 11 tiny bowls with a carnation sent to residents in the Belleville Hospital during the summer months. Mrs. E. Ray reported on the tuck-shop which has been carried on as usual during the summer months. Much credit is due Mrs. Ray and her assistants for this work and it is greatly appreciated by both the Auxiliary and the residents.

The birthday cards for the month of October will be sent out to the residents through the kindness of the Centenary U.C.W. This gesture is much appreciated.

The main business items discussed pertained to the tea and bazaar to be held at the Manor in October. Mrs. H. Ketchesoh will convene this event with Mrs. D. Atkins as tea-room convener; Mrs. C. Holmes in charge of the bake - table and Mrs. A. Bongard the handicraft. Mrs. E. Green volunteered to take charge of the selling of tickets.

At the conclusion of the business period the members met with the residents for the customary birthday party. After greetings and best wishes had been extended the guests, a circle was formed around them and the birthday song sung. Pictures were taken of the eldest guest present, Mr. Joe Dostator, who cut the large birthday cake. Mrs. Rose Silver and Mrs. D. Hedger poured tea while everyone enjoyed lunch. The residents thanked the Auxiliary for a delightful party.

The next meeting will be held on October 20th.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT FRANK JOHNSON

Johnson – Darrah

Donna Lee Darrah, daughter of Mrs. Helen L. Darrah of Belleville and Robert Frank Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Johnson of Kingston were united in marriage by Rev. M. G. McFarlane Tabernacle Church, Belleville on Saturday September 18, 1965, at 12:00 noon.

Mr. C. E. Templer played the wedding music and the soloist was Mr. Tom Hinchey.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Dale S. Darrah of Lorn, Ontario, wore a white gown of satin leaf and rose embroidery on white silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline outlined with satin flowers and pearls and the elbow - length sleeves in push - up effect were enhanced by satin motifs. The full floor - length skirt, which cascaded into a chapel train, was accented by a repeated satin fly pouffe bustle back. Her headdress was a large white rose studded with seed pearls, and held her bouffant tulle veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

The bride's attendants were Donna Spencer as maid of honor, and Kathy Slavin, Sharon Fisher and Laureen Fisher as bridesmaids. The maid of honor and two bridesmaids were coral organza and taffeta sheath dresses with Empire waistlines. The hemlines of the floor-length skirts were set off with coral taffeta piping and leaf and dart applique. Their headpieces were of coral taffeta roses and they carried cascade bouquets of coral roses and white carnations. The third bridesmaid wore a dress of mint green peau de sole with scoop neckline and elbow length sleeves with a flying panel at the back fastened with a soft bow. Her headdress was a wedding ring band of peau de sole and tulle.

The flower girl, Sandra Darrah, niece of the bride, was dressed in coral floor-length organza and taffeta with short sleeves and a coral sash. She wore roses in her hair and carried a basket of coral roses and carnations.

The groomsman was Larry Searle of Kingston and the ushers were Raymond Mollison of Kingston, Henry Dervis of Kingston and William Kritsch of Montreal. Rodney Darrah, nephew of the bride, acted as ring-bearer.

At the reception in Tabernacle Church parlors, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a cranberry satin brocade three-piece ensemble with cranberry and black accessories and a corsage of pink roses and white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a dark green wool suit with a lace bodice, beige and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses and white carnations.

For her wedding trip to the Pocano Mountains in Pennsylvania, the bride chose a three-piece suit of imported fleece wool and mohair in pumpkin shades and a white gardenia corsage.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will live on Teresa Crescent, Kingston.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT H. HALLADAY

Halladay – Taylor

The Church of St. Michael and the Archangel in Belleville was the scene of the wedding on Saturday, September 18, 1965 at 10:00 of Marie Anne Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Taylor of Bellesville, and Robert Harry Halladay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Halladay of Trenton.

Rev. Father Terrence J. Boyle officiated at the ceremony and the organist was Miss Dorothy Grant.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length dress of fine white boucle wool in A-line style with a semi-scooped neckline, puffed sleeves bound at the elbows with satin and a pill-box hat of matching material with a short veil. Her bouquet was of white carnations and stephanotis.

Miss Faye Spinelli, as maid of honor, wore a light blue imported boucle wool dress and pillbox hat of the same style as that of the bride's. She carried a cascade bouquet of ice blue and white chrysanthemums.

The bridegroom's attendant was Mr. Hubert Pointer, and Mr. Michael Taylor, brother of the bride, ushered the guests.

At reception, held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Taylor wore a black silk worsted two-piece suit with gold accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Halladay wore a brown silk print two-piece suit with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow baby roses.

For her wedding trip to Northern New York State, the bride donned a two-piece navy suit with a double breasted jacket, navy accessories and a corsage of red American Beauty roses.

On their return, the couple will live at 351 Dundas Street West, Trenton.

Jute Box Very Popular In Aklavik Restaurant

AKLAVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — "The juke box darn near drove me out of my mind until I got used to it."

Jeannette Gauthier, wife of a northern affairs department shop carpenter, has to get used to many things when she opened the only restaurant in this Arctic community.

The Eskimo, Indian and white teen-agers who frequent her cafe play the juke box frequently, she says. "It's very, very popular."

Mrs. Gauthier also has some unusual problems.

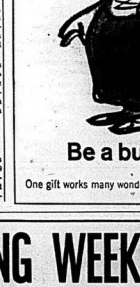
She has to buy enough supplies from Edmonton wholesalers to last through the winter until the first barge arrives in the spring. Aklavik is on the Mackenzie delta 1,200 miles north of Edmonton.

And Mrs. Gauthier has to contend with muck tracked into her cafe from the community's unpaved streets and boardwalks. "I wash the floor three times some days."

Mrs. Gauthier, who has four of her six children still at home, went into business when she found she had too much time on her hands.

"Cooking was the only thing I figured I could do."

She learned part of the former RCMP barracks, paid $15 to obtain a territorial restaurant licence and set up business in the former kitchen.



"I didn't know how to get started so I looked in the Edmonton phone book and found addresses of where to get stuff."

She bought 30 of everything, her husband Albert made seven booths, she rented some equipment, ordered a coffee urn from Edmonton — and opened for business.

Mrs. Gauthier, who employs five residents and has also started a bakery, keeps the cafe open from 7 a.m. to midnight. She enjoys it so much she says she plans to put in more booths soon.

All Progress Is Outgrowth Of Intelligent Discontent

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

One of man's worst enemies is contentment. When anyone comes to the place where he can say, "I do not care to know more than I already know," or "I do not wish to do more than I have already accomplished," or "I do not wish to be anything other than what I already am," he is as good as dead.

Men praise contentment and covet it; but peaceful contentment is animal-like; it is man's discontent which distinguishes him from the rest of the animal kingdom. No cow is disturbed by its ignorance, but even a wise and highly educated man is dissatisfied with his limited knowledge. No common cow wishes it were a pedigreed cow; but many a person wishes he were a better person, and the better he is the more he desires improvement.

In Jesus' parable of the rich fool, we hear the fool say to himself, "Soul, you have ample goods laid up for many years; take your ease . . ." And God answers, "Fool! This night your soul is required of you . . . ." Whenever anyone drifts into unconcern about improvement, God's indictment is "You fool!" When the student believes he has studied enough, when the doctor thinks he has learned enough about medicine, when the preacher rests upon his "sermon barrel," when the churchman or philanthropist believes he has given enough to church and charity, when anyone thinks he is good enough, the accusation rings out from the heart of the universe, "You fool!"

ROOT OF PROGRESS

All progress is an outgrowth of discontent with things as they are. A foolish contentment, that means stagnation.

But discontent has both malignant and magnificent uses. It can make for insensitivity to the beauty and goodness that surround us. As Jean Paul Richter said of one kind of fault-finding, "Criticism strips the tree of both caterpillars and blossoms." Dissatisfaction, when it becomes chronic, is that indiscriminate finding! It can become an habitual, pessimistic view of life that always sees thorns, but never roses.

Discontent can issue in fretful grumbling and whining complaint. Chronic complaint—is much like alcoholism. When alcoholism has a person in its grip, he drinks not only whiskey and gin, but if the more common varieties of alcoholic drink are not available, he will seize upon almost anything having a touch of alcohol—hair tonic, shaving lotion, wood alcohol. So, once a person becomes a compulsive faultfinder, he will complain about anything, husband, wife, children, parents, neighbors, club members, government, school, church and even about God Himself. And he will complain when life is good as well as when it is most difficult.

MUST USE IT WELL

But discontent, nobly used, brings needed change. In Saint Paul's letter to Titus we read Paul's reply to some lost letter Titus had written. Titus must have complained that he did not like Crete, the station where he had been posted as missionary. Perhaps Titus had asked,"Why do you insist on my staying at Crete?" What business does a Christian have in this pagan place? How can one live a good life here amidst these unprincipled, immoral Cretans?"

Paul answers, "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that they shouldest set in order the things that are wanting." Dr. James Moffatt translated this passage, "I left you behind in Crete in order to finish putting things right."

The Paul quoted a native of Crete who unflatteringly said, "Cretans are always evil beasts, lazy gluttons." Far from assuring Titus that everything was really splendid in Crete, far from insisting that Titus must be contented there, Paul declared the place was as heathenish as one could imagine, and discontent was the proper mood.

REMEDY FAULTS

But dissatisfaction should be expressed through remedy rather than through fretful faultfinding. The remedy for Crete's ills was Christ. So preach Christ to the Cretans! Titus did. That was the way he handled his discontent.

When the world does not suit us, how do we handle our dissatisfactions?

Do we let difficulties and dissatisfactions call out the worst that is in us? When we feel small and insignificant in a complex, confused, problem-filled world, do we recall that nearly every change for good has begun in the discontent and aroused conscience of some individual?

Some years ago excavations were made in Crete to uncover the ruins of the ancient Christian churches there. Guess whose name was carved in the stones of those ancient churches. Saint Titus! So he turned out to be no life grumbler after all, but a man who struggled toward sainthood while dealing with his discontents.

What are you doing with yours?

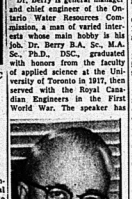
BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1965

Adam Stalker, City Clerk, Looks for Heaviest Vote On Record on December 6



WHIPPER WATSON, (right), tests political muscle of South Hastings PC candidate Lee Grills after meeting last night.

Dr. A. E. Berry Special Speaker At First Meet

The first meeting of the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada, Quinte Chapter will be held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, on Tuesday evening.

Dr. A. E. Berry, president of the Conservation Council of Toronto, Ontario will be the guest speaker and has chosen as his topic "Todays Water Management Problems".

Dr. Berry is general manager and chief engineer of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, a man of varied interests whose main hobby is his job. Dr. Berry B.A. Sc., M.A. Sc., Ph.D., DSC., graduated with honors from the faculty of applied science at the University of Toronto in 1917, then served with the Royal Canadian Engineers in the First World War. The speaker has obtained numerous awards, too many to mention for his activities in the field of water supply and sanitation. He is a member of the Professional Engineers of Canada and resides in Toronto.

The president of the Quinte Chapter is Gordon McInroy, Superintendent of Public Works for the City of Belleville and he will officiate as chairman on this occasion. Mayor Jack Ellis of Belleville will be an honored guest.

APPLAUD BALLET

GLASGOW (CP) — Thunderous applause and four curtain calls greeted the Royal Winnipeg Ballet at the first of two performances here, part of a four-city United Kingdom tour in connection with the current Commonwealth Arts Festival.

While most Bellevillians may ponder the end of the November federal election, there's one nook in the city just as equally concerned with the smooth start of another election.

That spot is the office of city clerk Adam Stalker, the man responsible for organizing Belleville's municipal elections December 6.

Mr. Stalker, a veteran organizer of city elections, is preparing early — and for good reason. It promises to be the heaviest franchise on record, he figures.

There are several crucial factors supporting his guess:

1. This year sees the two-year office of mayor falling vacant and up for grabs;

2. This year introduces a record slate of council seats — 10 combared to 14. — hinting at a heavy run of candidates;

3. This year brings on liquor plebiscites — for retail outlets in northeast Belleville and cocktail lounges throughout the city.

4. This year again renews the possibility of a Sunday-movie referendum.

But the city clerk's biggest concern right now is the voter-list common practice the many voters never to check the post-poll list and determine if they are registered before election day. If they're not they begin phoning Mr. Stalker's office.

While this was sufficiently demanding in other years, it becomes more involved in this complicated election.

WHO CAN VOTE?

Complications arise with the liquor retail outlet franchise. Only residents in an area east and north of McDonald Avenue may vote on this question.

Then there is the owners and tenants list and the theatre franchise extension register whose members may vote on this question but that of the liquor retail outlet.

The franchise extension is to vote given to all persons other than owners and tenants who are 21 years and over and living in Belleville since January 1, 1965.

Quite complicated?

So it is!

That's the reason the city clerk is anxious to have all eligible voters check their registration as soon as possible.

Up to September 30 the procedure for adding new names are not listed is comparatively easy. All they have to do is contact Mr. Stalker's office. After that date the voting rolls are under municipal officers.

The last chance is slightly more complicated and comes sometime in November. Then County Judge J. C. Anderson will hold a special court of revision in the city hall to add those not registered to vote by that date must present themselves for enrolment — if they desire to vote.

"In past years," said Mr. Stalker yesterday, "most people leave it until the last day — election day — quite peeved when they come here and find they can't put their names on the roll."

"All we're hoping is that they contact us here as soon as possible before the end of the month."

VIEWING VOTERS' LISTS for next municipal election are city clerk Adam Stalker (seated) and assistant Wayne Wood. Besides more names, there'll be more lists than ever.

Whipper Billy Watson Pleads For Physical Fitness Program

Whipper Billy Watson flexed his political muscles in Belleville last night — and stood staunchly behind John Diefenbaker.

The famed wrestling champion, now running as Conservative candidate in York-East, said he declared himself solidly behind his party leader.

Speaking to a meeting of the Bellevitle Progressive-Conservative Women's Association at Quinte Centre, Mr. Watson said since announcing his candidacy he had been queried why he supported Mr. Diefenbaker.

"Right from the very start I've been behind Mr. Diefenbaker. Some people didn't want to declare themselves. Let me tell you they're declaring themselves right now," he said.

"If we could only take him everywhere and let the people meet him and let them know the kind of person Mr. Diefenbaker really is we would not have any trouble at all electing him at the next general election," he added.

The major theme of the champion wrestler's address called for more emphasis on a physical fitness program for youth — as a cold war diplomatic role.

Canadian athletes compete in international events against Communist countries, he reminded the meeting. Yet they are not sufficiently equipped to do so.

"When I think of the young people who represent us internationally I suddenly realize to myself that here we send young people who represent us against the Communistic countries of the world and these people are not equipped," he said.

WANTS "FIELD HOUSES"

He said "field houses", for athletes willing to train for international events should be established across Canada — and there were equipped was time buildings now idle which could be used for the purpose.

"We send a hockey team to represent us in a world championship—and knowing in my own heart we've a better team sitting at home," said Whipper Watson.

"But do the people in the other countries know this? They think we're sending the best."

This was one realm where communist countries are gaining the upper hand.

If elected one thing he would go for first was aid to Canadian athletes competing internationally and a national physical fitness program "second to none."

Such a program, through lower medical expenses and industrial hours lost could save Canada $100 million in the next ten years, he claimed.

LOSING YOUNG CLAIM

Mr. Watson also warned Canada was yearly losing hundreds of its young people to the United States where they can receive athletic scholarships.

"Why don't we give scholarships to our young people here in Canada?" he demanded.

"The province of British Columbia already has recognized this factor," he said.

Among earlier, speakers at the meeting were Clark Rollins and Lee Grills, named Wednesday as the Conservative candidate in South Hastings.

Since his nomination Mr. Grills said he had toured the entire riding and "every place I went it was most encouraging."

"But they all realize we have a battle on our hands," he added. "We have a real job ahead of us. I intend to make a real tour of the riding—of every part of it—at least once a week," he promised the party workers.

Dr. Berry's Special Speaker At First Meet

Bob Storie, fourth from left, the new Prime Minister of Quinte High School, shakes hands with Dave Jowatt, new Leader of the Opposition, after results of the school's elections were tabulated yesterday. From left, D. Trumble, Staff Adviser; Paul Duncan, Minister of Publicity; Dave Jowatt, Bob Storie, Joan Leslie, Minister of Social Affairs and Joanne McFarland, Minister of Finance.

Bob Storie's Action Party Wins Quinte S. S. Election

Bob Storie, a Grade 13 student at Quinte Secondary School, is the new Prime Minister of the school's student council for 1965-66.

He will officially assume his duties Wednesday with the opening of student parliament there.

Bob, leader of the Action Party, was elected Friday when his party received the most seats in the House, a total of 22. The opposition party, the Everybody Party led by David Jowett, also a Grade 13 student, gained eight seats in the House.

Though the spread in the number of seats 33-8, seems great, spread in the popular vote was only 10 per cent, with 55 per cent voting Action and 45 per cent voting Everybody. Over 1400 students voted.

The Action Party has promised to improve Quinte by means of a dual major project, backed up by a number of lesser plans. The projects are aimed at all sections of the student body.

The major plan includes shelves in every locker to keep muddy boots separate from the books. Also under consideration is a Commonwealth Education Plan in which Quinte would play a major role in attempting to aid education in the Commonwealth.

Other projects the Action Party hopes to complete are benches for students waiting for buses, a new design for school jackets, a tuck shop for students after school and extra financial aid for all clubs.

The new Prime Minister promised, "in fulfilling its objectives, the Action Party will maintain a vibrant and enthusiastic outlook on all problems which I am sure will enable us to meet all challenges."

The defeated candidate for Prime Minister, David Jowett, becomes the Leader of Opposition in the House. His party campaigned on the platform of benches for students waiting for buses, a Winter Carnival for Quinte, buses to inter-school sporting events and regular Friday night dances.

Staff Advisor, D. Trumble said, "The elections are run just the same as the national elections. Each class nominates a candidate from both parties from the class and students vote for the one they want. The student winning from the class then holds that class seat in the student parliament.

"The party winning the most seats comes into power, and the leader of that party becomes Prime Minister. The Prime Minister then choses his own cabinet.

"Parliament opens Wednesday with all the hoopla of a regular parliament, the mace, the Governor General and the speech from the throne."

Railway Shop Workers Seek Wage Parity

WINDSOR (CP) — Canada's 28,000 railway shopcraftsmen employees will seek wage parity with their counterparts in private industry, President Thomas W. Read of Division 4, Railway Employees Department (AFL-CIO), said Friday.

He said the difference in rates averaged about 45 per cent lower on the nation's railroads for identical skills such as blacksmiths, boiler-makers, sheet metal workers, electrical workers and pipefitters.

The division held its quadrennial convention here and brought together 200 delegates from across Canada.

Mr. Read, of Montreal, also announced that "for this round only the shopcrafts section will go it alone" on wage talks with the railways.

MINISTER FINES $25

MONTREAL (CP) — Alphonse Lefebvre, 40, pleaded guilty Friday to charges of stealing 85 cars worth more than $250,000. He was remanded in custody until Monday.

International Hardware Co. Opens United Appeal Drive

International Hardware held a "key" meeting yesterday to "unlock" the doors to the company's in-plant United Appeal Campaign and open the way for a great success.

Management and employees joined forces at the meeting and set their 1965 United Appeal sights very high.

"I want to acknowledge and welcome our guests from the United Appeal, General Chairman, John O'Flynn and Executive Director, Les Gnaedinger", said R. C. Bastable, office manager and general accountant for International Hardware. Mr. Bastable is also chairman of the company's United Appeal campaign.

"Also", he said, "I want to express my thanks to the employees present for offering to help in canvassing the plant for the appeal. It is very much appreciated.

"Last year we did not have as many canvassers and our efforts fell a bit short of what we had hoped for. However, with this large turnout of canvassers, we hope to far exceed last year's efforts.

"We are not putting pressure on anyone to give. Donations must be strictly voluntary or else the purpose of the whole Appeal is lost".

Mr. Bastable introduced Bruce Craft, an employee in the plant's machine shop who has been appointed vice-chairman of the company's campaign because of his outstanding efforts on behalf of last year's in-plant campaign.

"Last year," said Mr. Bastable, "Bruce Craft obtained 100 per cent participation in his department, the machine shop, which is one of the largest departments in the plant."

When asked about the best approach for canvassers to take towards their fellow workers, Mr. Craft said, "The credit for the 100 per cent participation in our department must go to the employees themselves. After all, it was they who donated the money.

"I think it is important to stress the idea that any amount, no matter how small it is, will be accepted gladly. Some may have more money to give than others, and can afford to give more. Even little donations add up and help with the total. After all, a gift of only 10 cents each week adds up to over $5.00, and if everyone gave even that amount we would be well on our way to going over the top."

Mr. O'Flynn spoke on behalf of the United Appeal and thanked the employees for helping out with the in-plant campaign.

"I am sure, judging by this large turnout, that this year's campaign will be a success.

"The city always seems to fall about 20 per cent below the United Appeal objectives, a gap which we hope to cross this year. And to do that, we need greater participation.

"The budgets requested by the various participating organizations in the Appeal are very carefully calculated and are checked and re-checked by our budget committee.

"The Appeal's objectives have risen over $20,000 this year. The higher objectives are a result of requests for $7,000 from the two new agencies, Family Counselling and March of Dimes, and increases of $4,000 for the Children's Aid, $7,000 for the Victorian Order of Nurses, $1,300 for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, and $1,300 for the St. John Ambulance Brigade.

"We are aiming at one campaign to cover every worthwhile charitable agency in the city," Mr. O'Flynn said. "We are working hard to make this possible, and I am sure that once we can approach our objectives in the United Appeal campaign, these outstanding agencies will enter.

"The campaign opens Monday and we hope to have it finished before the 15th of the month. We are aiming for 60 per cent participation from our larger industries to put us over the top.

"What an employee should give," he added, "is up to the individual. But the average among the 15 large industries in Belleville is $13 an employee. Paid out at one pay cheque, that may seem like a lot, but it only amounts to 25 cents a week, and for the good that it will do it is certainly well worth it many times over."

D. C. Boyd, vice-president and general manager of International Hardware, spoke to the meeting on behalf of management.

"I personally am very interested in the United Appeal. We always hesitate to ask our employees to give any more money than is necessary for different reasons, but I feel we are obligated, as citizens of this community, to donate towards the United Appeal, which, after all, is working for the betterment of our community.

"I'm sure that each and everyone's own principles will guide us in making this year's drive a great success."

Mr. Bastable said that the company "is stressing payroll deductions this year, rather than cash donations—though cash donations are gladly accepted of course—because it is much easier on a person to pay 25 cents or 50 cents a week than it is to pay a lump sum all at once out of one pay cheque."

Central African Art Similar To That of Eskimos, Indians

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP)—Give an expressive Central African a lump of soapstone and he's likely to turn it into a piece of sculpture surprisingly similar to a Canadian Eskimo carving.

Colored beads in the hands of an artistic Nigerian often end up in vivid geometric patterns reminiscent of North American Indian beadwork.

Examples of parallel development of artistic expression in widely separated parts of the world abound at the first Commonwealth Arts Festival, a 16-day, four - city, jamboree of music, drama, dance, poetry and visual art assembled from 24 Commonwealth countries. It runs Sept. 15 to Sept. 30.

One of the most striking similarities is between contemporary arts from five Commonwealth countries in the foyer of Royal Festival Hall, the Eskimo art in a show called Treasures from the Commonwealth across the Thames in the Royal Academy.

A sculpture in soapstone by an artist named Zindoga of the Lodzi tribe of Southern Rhodesia might well have come from Rankin Inlet on Hudson Bay, but for the subject. Zindoga's hen and chickens, however, are reminiscent of seals and pups done by Eskimo artists.

USE SAME MATERIAL

Frank McEwen, a bearded Briton who is director of the Rhodesian National Gallery Workshop School in Salisbury, agrees on the similarities between the soapstone work of his charges and that of Canadian Eskimos.

"Surprising you should remark on that," he said in an interview, "though not so surprising, I suppose, from a Canadian.

"I know Eskimo art and the comparison with the stuff my fellows are doing has struck me since we started the workshop eight years ago.

"It may be the material—our fellows mine their own soapstone—and the animal subject matter that produce similar results by two such different people."

McEwen, an artist who spent much of his life in France before moving to Salisbury, helped organize an exhibition of French art for the Toronto Art Gallery in 1951 and wrote the catalogue for it.

It was then that he became familiar with Eskimo art and was attracted to the older carvings, "but not this stuff the Eskimo are mass producing now—airport art, I call it."

TEND TO MASS-PRODUCE

McEwen considers the temptation to mass-produce and become repetitive the biggest problem among the artists in his workshop. Most are persuaded to resist temptation "but a few deteriorate once they have sold a few pieces."

The director said his school is not really a school at all, providing a minimum of guidance, stressing freedom and doing little more than providing materials and acting as agent for sales. The workshop sold more than 1,000 pieces of art last year for about $75,000, keeping 25 per cent of the take to maintain facilities and provide materials.

The artists, painting in oils or carving soapstone, granite, marble or wood, are mostly tribesmen or town Africans who drift into the workshop with little more than a desire to express themselves.

"These people, mainly Lodzi, have no tradition of visual art at all," McEwen said. "The tribes had music, but no painting or carving.

"I try to be careful not to impose a European tradition on them, either. Then they work completely free of any limitations of tradition.

"That may partly explain the affinity between the soapstone carving in Salisbury and the original Eskimo carvers, who also were free of any alien influences. Apparently that style of carving is the basic result of primitive artists working in that material."

McEwen pointed to another example of cultural parallelism in carving in wood of a larger-than-lifesize man's head with spiral eyes.

"Spiral eyes are a character-istic of primitive art that appears, independently all around the world. Yet the man who sculpted this head, an untutored chap named Likoto, could never have known it's a North American primitives or Asian natives represented eyes as spirals."

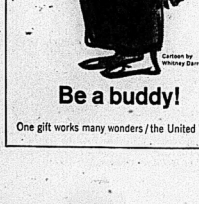
they talk a fella's language

So much happens so quickly these days that a lot of things could sail right over a fella's head. But they don't. Thanks to the daily paper. In this rapidly changing world, the daily newspaper keeps you up to date; and goes right on talking your language. Yes indeed, whether it's a new art form or a design for a rocket ship, you look to your daily paper to learn about it.



In fact, some 53% of Canadians read their daily paper for just that reason: "as the best way to keep up their education", according to a survey validated by the Canadian Advertising Research Foundation. Of course, they read the paper for other reasons too. For homemaking hints. For sports and financial news. For information about local social events. For theatre and TV listings. And for ads.

Yes ads. Daily newspaper advertising is news. News about products and services. So Canadians use their daily paper as a shopping guide (83%). They prefer newspaper ads to ads they see and hear elsewhere. Because they find newspaper ads less irritating (92%) and more reliable (41%).

When you talk to people through the daily newspaper, you're talking their language. And that's a mighty smart move. Especially if you're an advertiser.

Standardized University Entrance Tests Proposed By Education Association

FREDERICTON (CP)—Standardized university entrance tests, educational finance and the place of skilled manpower in society highlighted discussions and a wide range of proposals during the Canadian Education Association's three-day annual convention which concluded here Friday.

There was even a suggestion that classroom teachers be exempt from federal income tax and a statement that increased scholastic pressures had led to an alarming increase in the number of suicides among students.

Shortly after the conference opened Wednesday, the standing committee of provincial education ministers announced it had approved in principle establishment of an independent university admissions agency. The ministers, meeting in conjunction with the CEA, handed the project over to a committee for further study.

The Canadian Council on Admission to College and University, a tentative title, and local councils will consist of a central council and English- and French-speaking committees to develop the testing services to which any university may belong without compulsion or obligation.

Money for education at the national, provincial and local levels took up two days of panel discussions. Dr. E. D. Hodgson of Edmonton said the trend towards more provincial support arises from the fact that provinces have a broader tax base than local authorities, while E. Brock Rideout of Toronto supported retention of as much local autonomy in educational finance as possible.

Dr. Z. X. Pidlaski, Ontario deputy education minister who was named CEA vice-president Friday, proposed that teachers be exempt from federal income tax thereby giving teachers a pay boost in the form of a "dollar for dollar" from the Canadian government.

SUICIDE RATE 'APPALLING'

Dr. L. W. Downey of Vancouver told the 600 delegates to the 42nd convention that emphasis on achievement in modern education had led to a "hardness" in the educational system that placed mental pressures on high school students. He said confidential files in Alberta showed an "appalling" increase in student suicides at the high school level, but he declined to give statistics.

During the final day's session, Dr. Arthur Porter, head of the University of Toronto's industrial engineering department, said the term "skilled manpower" was being substituted with lower "echelons of society" even though "blue - collar" workers play an important social role and make almost as much money as "white-collar" workers. He proposed a manpower council similar to those already set up nationally on economics and science.

Dr. H. T. Coutts of the University of Alberta was elected association president, succeeding Dr. W. C. Lorimer of Winnipeg. L. R. Peterson, British Columbia education minister, invited the association to meet in Vancouver next year.

RELIGION HANGS ON IN RUSSIA — Monastery domes and belltowers rise from a hill in the centre of the Soviet city of Zagorsk, one of the leading religious centres still existing in the U.S.S.R. Within the walls of the monastery, whose origins go back to the 14th century, are 11 churches, a seminary and a home for 93 monks and novices. While young Russians come to visit the grounds most of the worshippers at the daily services are elderly women. (CP Photo)

Zagorsk Soviet Centre Of Christian Religion

By JOHN BEST

ZAGORSK, U.S.S.R. (CP) — From a distance Zagorsk looks like any number of Soviet cities with its smokestacks and columns of nondescript apartment buildings.

But you come over a hill in the centre of the city and there rises a cluster of domes and belltowers that evokes Russia's pre-revolutionary past.

They make up one of the leading religious centres still existing in the atheistic state, the Zagorsk monastery whose origins go back to the 14th century.

Within its walls are 11 churches and a theological seminary and a home for 93 monks and novices. This centre, says an Orthodox Church publication, "has first place among the Russian monasteries."

Sergius, a giant in the pantheon of Russian saints, built the first church in 1340. St. Sergius is especially revered for having been a unifying influence among Russian Christians at the time of the Mongol invasion.

He lies buried in the Church of the Holy Trinity, built on the site of Sergius's church 100 years later. Services go on there all day every day from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.

To the strains of hauntingly beautiful, slow-cadenced congregations shuffle about inside, prostrate themselves before a crypt containing the saint's relics, then rise to kiss the top of the tomb.

FEW YOUNG PEOPLE

Most are elderly women though a small number of men and young people can also be seen in the shifting crowd of worshippers. It's a standing-room-only congregation; as in almost Russian churches, there are no seats.

Largest church on the grounds is Cathedral of the Assumption, consecrated Aug. 15, 1585. Beautiful frescoes and icons decorate its walls and ceilings.

Just outside the church is the tomb of Czar Boris Godunov and his family. The czars maintained an official residence at Zagorsk, making it a sort of spiritual royal headquarters 40 miles northeast of Moscow.

Peter the Great came here a couple of times to escape palace plots in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, and the last Russian czar, Nicholas, often came here on religious occasions.

On the walls of the patriarchal residence is a gallery of church leaders dating back to the 15th century, their portraits marked by dark beards and piercing eyes. In a position of honor in the main hall is a chair in which, the visitor is told, Peter the Great used to sit.

The monastery grounds on a summer afternoon swarm with a motley array of people.

CHILDREN SCOFF

Bearded priests in black soutanes, their heads hooded in the Orthodox manner, walk along the pathways, stopping in front of each church to bow and bless themselves.

Old women in black dart from one building to another, blessing themselves furiously as they go. The occasional cripple makes his way tortuously into a church.

Tourists move about with cameras, stopping now and then to take a picture, glowered at by the faithful who happen to see them.

Conspicuous among the visitors are small groups of Red Army soldiers, browsing around apparently determined not to be impressed.

Young boys and girls, brought up to ridicule things religious, come to scoff at the spiritual activities of the old. But they do it silently.

While the Soviet government permits the monastery to continue operating, in accordance with state - church agreements, it doesn't quite let religion have the whole show.

In the middle of the grounds is a state-run museum open to the public. It contains pre-revolutionary and communist - era handicrafts as well as Soviet-era paintings. Nothing in the museum has any religious association.

Persistence Of Enumerator Finds Body

OTTAWA (CP)—The persistence of a federal election enumerator led to the discovery of the dead body of a 45-year-old Ottawa woman and of her starving 30-year-old brother.

Police said Friday Miss Elsie Millar, who lived with her brother Mrs. Mary Ann Millar, had apparently been dead for some time without the older woman realizing it.

The enumerator returned to the apartment and found a slip she had left on an earlier trip still outside the front door. She spoke to the building's owner, who found the dead woman.

Coroner Dr. J. S. Cross said an autopsy showed that Miss Millar had suffered from a rare blood disease. Mrs. Millar is recovering in hospital.

Socred Leader Nominated in Red Deer

RED DEER, Alta. (CP)—Robert Thompson, national Social Credit leader, Friday night charged that the proposed national medicare scheme is a violation of the individual right of choice.

Kicking off his election campaign in his-home constituency of Red Deer, he said the compulsory plan means Prime Minister Pearson "is not concerned with finding out what the people of Canada want."

Mr. Thompson was speaking to a meeting which nominated him Social Credit candidate for Red Deer in the Nov. 8 federal election. He has held the seat since 1962.

Compulsory medical care legislation is a denial of the aims of the Fathers of Confederation. He considered individual freedom the key factor in society, he said.

In a brief second address, Mr. Thompson said: "I'm quite convinced that Mr. Pearson has made the biggest blunder of his political career in calling this election."

The call for a majority government doesn't hold water, Mr. Thompson said.

"The best government we've had in Canada in recent years was the Conservative minority government between 1957 and 1958."

Yet when this government had a majority in 1958 to 1962, "Mr. Diefenbaker (then prime minister) went out and flubbed the whole thing, because he couldn't handle it."

NDP in Tune With Quebec Says Douglas

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party, more than any other, is "in tune" with the hopes and aspirations of the "quiet revolution" in Quebec, NDP Leader Douglas said Friday night.

"Ours was the first party to call for the two-nation concept in Confederation and for the principle of co - operative federalism which recognizes the rights of partnership of English- and French - Canadians within the bosom of a single state," he said.

Mr. Douglas was speaking at his nominating convention in neighboring Coquitlam. The leader was nominated by acclamation to contest the Burnaby - Coquitlam seat for his party in the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Douglas said the first goal of the Canadian people must be national unity.

August Deficit Cuts Surplus By $6,700,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal treasury spent $602,400,000 and took in revenues of $595,700,000, leaving a deficit of $6,700,000 in August, the finance department reported Friday night.

The August deficit cut into the treasury's surplus earlier this fiscal year, leaving it at $468,900,000 for the first five months.

The treasury frequently piles up large surpluses early in the fiscal year, and they are usually cut when higher expenditures are made near the end of the fiscal year, March 31.

During August last year, the report said, revenues amounted to $538,700,000 and expenditures to $564,600,000, leaving a deficit of $17,300,000. At the end of the first five months of last fiscal year there was a surplus of $432,300,000.

In the first five months of the current fiscal year, the treasury received $931,100,000 in personal income taxes, compared with $896,500,000 in the same period last year.

Corporation income tax collections amounted to $728,800,000 in five months this fiscal year compared with $697,400,000 last year, and sales tax receipts were $544,900,000 in five months this year compared with $472,300,000 in the same period last year.

DO YOU KNOW

The sheltered waters of the Bay of Quinte, the Long Reach and Hay Bay were once favorite fishing and hunting areas for the first known inhabitants, the Huron Indians. Indian burying grounds are common and Indian artifacts have been dug up in abundance. Some of these may be seen in the Loyalist and Addington County museum, Dundas Street West, Napanee.

Scenic Highway 33 from adjoins town to Collins Bay follows an old Indian trail, later a settler's trail. This carries into the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario, with rolling cultivated fields on the one side, and homes dating back to the early 1800's. There are picnic tables, eating and playgrounds all the background of the area.

Duckhorn's aristocrats as well as the rank and file became fair game this morning.

A half hour before dawn and even earlier for some trigger happy types the peace and quiet of the district's waterways were shattered as thousands of nimrods let go with thousands of shotgun at anything within sight that flies and quacks.

The 1965 wild duck season got under way to close on December 15th in Ontario. Fair game will be ducks, rails, coots, gallinules, Wilson's snipe, woodcock and wild geese.

Many of the hunters will come home with a big limit but they will be the experienced men who know where to find the birds and can tell, at a glance, the difference between eatable ducks and those that taste like the bottom of a garbage can. (Who knows what that tastes like?)

Bag and possession limits for waterfowl remain essentially unchanged in Ontario, according to the 1965 Migratory Bird Regulations.

These limits are five and ten for ducks, geese, rails, coots and gallinules, ten and 20 for Wilson's snipe and eight and 16 for woodcock.

Ontario hunters may take four woodcock per day as part of their daily bag limit and may possess eight. On and after October 15 two additional scaup or goldeneye may be taken daily, and four may be possessed.

The daily duck bag may include two canvasback or redhead ducks and two may be possessed.

"We expect a big invasion of the duck haunts all over the district," a Lands and Forests official told me. "That is on opening day. Hunting-wise veterans have developed the habit of staying at home on the morning of opening day.

Better, they claim, to wait a couple of days until the amateurs, after a couple of days of duckless shooting sprees, decide to stay at home.

The Hon. Kelso Roberts, minister of Lands and Forests, has announced part of the open seasons for deer hunting in those southern parts of the province where seasons are held annually. Most of these seasons are similar to those held in 1964.

It's a boon to hunters who do not believe in long treks. You can eliminate extensive preparations and worries about hunting camps.

To you guys who like a short haul there is a six-day season from November 8 to 13th inclusive in the counties of Hastings, Frontenac and Lennox and Addington lying between Highway Number Two and Highway Number Seven. How's that for a short hike and a quick bag.

That also applies to that part of Peterborough county south of Number Seven. That part of Lanark lying between Highways Seven and 15 and that portion of Leeds county lying west of and north of Highways 32, 15 and the Narrow Locks Road.

A four-day season from November 8th to 11th inclusive will be held in the remainder of Leeds county. There is no restriction on the use of firearms.

If you like to add to the dinner menu a delicious Hungarian partridge the season opens September 25th through November 27th in this part of the province. The bag limit is eight per day, 16 in possession.

If you prefer bobwhite quail you can hunt them in Middlesex, Elgin, Lambton, and Kent counties from November 1 to the third. Bag limit five, possession 10.

If you are gourmet-minded and prefer pheasant under glass you can shoot them in this district of Ontario from September 15 to December 15, with a bag limit of three birds per day. Shooting hours are from eight a.m. to five p.m. over the province.

A number of friends of mine go to Pelee Island for their pheasants. It's good hunting but a split season has been established.

The first is from October 21 and 22 with a two-bag limit of eight cocks, two hens and from October 28 to 29 with a two-day bag limit of seven cocks and three hens.

Closer at hand you can hunt pheasants in Durham county from October 2 to December 15th and in other parts of Ontario from September 25th to December 25th. The bag limits in these parts is three birds per day.

Surging Dodgers Cut Lead To Game

By MIKE RATHBY
Associated Press Sports Writer

When you talk about the key pitchers in the National League pennant battle, don't overlook Tony Cloninger of Milwaukee who can become the biggest winner since the First World War.

Cloninger fired the first shot in the 30-day pennant stretch Friday night, stopping San Francisco Giants on five hits and driving in three runs in an 8-3 Milwaukee victory that trimmed the Giants' lead to one game.

The loss was the Giants' third straight and halved their league lead over Los Angeles as the streaking Dodgers rolled to their seventh consecutive victory, edging St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 on Jim Lefebvre's two-run single in the eighth inning.

Cloninger, 26, who has won 22 games and is tied for the most victories in the majors with Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, will get at least two more starts this season—and one of them undoubtedly will come at Los Angeles in a four-game set that winds up the regular season.

If the right-hander can win those two starts, he will become the biggest winner for the Braves since Dick Rudolph and Bill James won 27 and 26, respectively, in 1914. Only Johnny Sain, with 24 victories in 1948, has won more games than Cloninger in the last 51 years.

Cloninger drove in the tie-breaking run against the Giants in the sixth inning, smacking a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded that snapped a 3-1 deadlock after San Francisco manager Herman Franks had ordered Ron Herbel to walk Woody Woodward.

BRAVES ZOOM AHEAD

Ty Cline followed with a two-run double, and Rico Carty drove out it out of reach by adding four runs in the seventh on Mack Jones' two-run single and an error by third baseman Jim Hart.

Cloninger, who has lost 10 games, surrendered a run in the fourth inning when Willie Mays singled, stole second and scored on Willie McCovey's double. McCovey hit his 38th homer in the eighth inning.

Dodger starter Claude Osteen and Bob Gibson were dueling on even terms until the Cards' mate pulled ahead 2-1 in the fifth on a double by Bill White and a single by Gibson. A walk and singles by Dick Groat and White made it 3-1 in the sixth before the Dodgers started to move.

A walk, Darrel Griffith's pinch single and a sacrifice fly by Maury Wills trimmed the score to 3-2 in the seventh, then singles by Willie Davis and Ron Fairly drove Gibson from the mound in the eighth.

Hal Woodeschick came on, issued an intentional walk to Lou Johnson that filled the bases, and then Lefebvre ruined the strategy by smashing a single up the middle that produced the tying and winning runs.

It was the 36th run batted across in 16 games this month for the switch-hitting second baseman.

The leaders go at it again today with the hitch-hikers Cincinnati Reds, now just three games back, getting into the act after a night off.

The Giants will start Bob Shaw, 16-6, against Ken Johnson, 10-11, of Milwaukee while the Dodgers' throw Koufax, 23-6, against Nelson Briles, 2-2, of the Cardinals. Jim Maloney, 18-8, gets the call for the Reds against Robin Roberts, 9-9, in a night game at Houston.

On other NL game scheduled for Friday night, New York at Philadelphia, was rained out.

'Breaks' Won It

Bombers Nip Larks In Mud Bath

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Bud Grant of the Western Football Conference Winnipeg Blue Bombers concedes that it was the "breaks" that allowed his club to defeat the Eastern Conference Montreal Alouettes 14-9 here Friday night and grab a share of first place in the West.

But the Winnipeg coach is not ready to refuse his players credit his club picked up for the win.

Following Friday night's mud bath, Grant said his club was able to defeat the Als when "the breaks made the difference in the game. The Alouettes' poor football weren't evident because of the field conditions."

Grant was referring to the mud which developed following a steady downpour of rain which started at 5 p.m. and continued throughout the contest.

"Neither team moved the ball consistently. But I thought Montreal played real well," Grant said.

Montreal coach Jim Trimble was not dismayed by the loss which left his club in third place in the Western Conference behind second place Ottawa Rough Riders and six behind Hamilton Tiger Cats.

"They earned their points, and we earned ours," Trimble said.

The difference in the night's play was a recovery of an Alouette fumble on the Montreal 12-yard line by tackle Frank Rigney, which he ran for a touchdown.

TIED FOR FIRST

For Winnipeg it marked the second victory in a row this week against EFC competition. It moved them into a first-place tie with Calgary Stampeders one point ahead of Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Last Sunday they downed Ottawa Rough Riders 19-12 in Winnipeg.

Rigney's first-quarter touchdown came at the 8:22 mark when Montreal's deep man, Larry Fairbairn, fumbled Ed Ulmer's punt and Rigney of the Montreal eight yard line. The ball bounced to the end zone and Rigney just scooped it up and looped over the goal-line unmolested.

At the 12:06 mark of the second quarter, punter Jim McKean kicked a 42-yard single for the Als. On the play, the Bombers' Billy Cooper conceded the point six yards deep in his end zone.

The half-time score was 7-1 for Winnipeg.

It took Bernie Faloney six plays to move the Als from the Winnipeg 34 to J. W. Lockett's touchdown at the 7:12 mark of the third quarter. The Montreal fullback's final drive was for 12-yards on a trap play, which saw him cross the Winnipeg goal line standing up. Pat Battersby converted for the extra point.

Seven minutes later Winnipeg quarterback Dick Thornton marched his club on their best drive of the night, 76 yards for his own 34 yard line to a touchdown.

Thornton was good for 32 yards with a pass to Winnipeg's sure-handed end Farrell Funston to start the march. Lewis Carr threw for three on the ground then Thornton gained seven yards.

RAN 22 YARDS

Lewis, the Bombers' speedy halfback veteran, then ran 30 yards around the left end to take the ball to the Montreal one-yard line.

From there Art Perkins vaulted the Alouettes' front wall to gain the touchdown. Norm Thomas kicked his second convert of the night to end the scoring.

Crack British Driver

Surtees Critically Injured

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Twenty-four of the world's finest sports cars were assembled in the paddock here today for the 250-mile Canadian Grand Prix and it looked like a contest between a tall Texan and a tiny Mexican.

Jim Hall of Midland, Texas, took his Chev-powered Chaparral around the 2.5-mile road circuit Friday in one minute, 26.1 seconds to qualify with an average speed of 102.8 miles an hour. While practice or qualifying marks do not count, the six-foot-two Texan abraved 1.1 seconds off the record he set in the international sports car race here last June.

Despite his fast time, Hall will start in the back row. A blown engine forced him to leave his time trial 24 hours late.

Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico City took the four-litre Ferrari around in 1:30.8, fourth best qualifying time, but his victories in the 1961 and 1962 Canadian Grand Prix made him a threat.

A serious accident Friday in which John Surtees of London, 1964 world champion and winner of both the international race here last June and the international race at St. Jovite in Quebec last Sunday, was the Grand Prix of the United States.

TORONTO (CP)—John Surtees, world champion racing driver of 1964, was in critical condition in hospital today after his sports car crashed during a practice run at Mosport Race Track Friday.

Hospital officials said the 31-year-old English driver was "holding his own" and would not undergo surgery until later today unless his condition deteriorated.

Surtees suffered a broken spine, broken pelvis and possible internal injuries when his car hurt a wheel and left the track 40 miles east of Toronto.

He was unconscious when pulled from the wreck, but regained consciousness as he was placed in an ambulance. The car was a mass of twisted metal and shattered glass fibre.

Rain Washes Out Ball Game

The South Hastings Baseball League finals game between Latta and Shannonville slated for last night was rained out.

The series resumes tomorrow (Sunday) at the Fair Grounds starting at 2 p.m.

The Centreville - Cannifton ROBA Intermediate finals will be played later.

Maris To Undergo Surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Maris, who has played in only car but a wheel and left the track 40 miles east of Toronto. 1965 season, will undergo surgery on his right hand Monday.

The surgery is intended to repair a chip fracture that has bothered the Yankee right fielder out of the regular lineup since June 28. He has made four pinch - hitting appearances since.

Maris injured the hand in a slide home against Minnesota Twins June 30. He missed five days and returned for four before the end of the season. He said he heard something pop when he took an awkward swing in a game against Washington Senators June 28.

Maris is expected to leave the hospital Thursday. Recovery could take six weeks, officials said.

Ole Satch Faces Red Sox

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)— An old-timer will leave his rocking chair tonight to pitch for Kansas City Athletics, cellar-dwellers in baseball's American League.

Leroy (Satchel) Paige, 59-year-old Negro hurler, will start against Boston Red Sox. It will be his first assignment since he was signed two weeks ago by team owner Charles O. Finley.

"How long do you think you will play?" Paige was asked Friday.

"I don't know, but I'll be there," he replied.

The starting hurler for the Red Sox will be Bill Monbouquette, who is 30 years younger than Paige.

Paige's last appearance in a game was at Anchorage, Alaska, a month ago. And he did a brief stint in an old-timers game at Houston.

Duck-Hunting Season Opened Today

TORONTO (CP) — The 1965 duck and goose hunting season opened today in most of Ontario.

Some hunters will not return home.

Last year, 217 people were killed or injured in hunting accidents and 14 died. Almost 30 others died of drowning or exposure after their watercraft capsized.

Ernest Taylor, director of outdoor recreation for the Ontario Safety League, urges hunters using boats to wear lifejackets and observe boating restrictions for their craft.

The season ends Dec. 15. It does not open until noon EDT Oct. 2 in Essex County.

OPEN CAMP

MONTREAL (CP) — It was speeches, inflation and shots, equipment issues, skating and instruction in a new exercise program when more than 90 hockey veterans and hopefuls gathered Monday. And by Tuesday the first day of Montreal Canadiens' pre-season training camp.

Coast Bomb Blasts Brooklin 17-7

Series All Square

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Brooklin Merchants' coach, Bud Christie, was still confident after his Mann Cup finalists took a 17-7 shellacking from New Westminster Friday night.

It was their worst beating of the series and tied up the best-of-seven Canadian senior lacrosse final at 2-2. The final game will be played tonight.

But Christie, rumbled in the dressing room of another B.C. team which in 1964 came back from a 2-1 game deficit to beat the Merchants for the cup, said:

"I never think back to last year. I think we'll win tomorrow. It's this one we want to win."

More than 5,200 fans attended. It was the largest crowd ever to witness a sporting event in New Westminster Arena.

The Westerners led 4-1 after the first quarter and 10-2 at the half. The Merchants outscored them 3-2 in the third frame but were outscored five goals to two in the final period.

The Merchants had a 2-1 lead in games going into the fifth game last Wednesday night. But they lost it 8-7 in a tussle that saw Brooklin forward Don Craggs get six Indefinite suspension for attacking a referee.

SCORES FOUR GOALS

Chief Sepka scored four goals and Wayne Shuttleworth three for New Westminster Friday night. It was Sepka's third four-goal effort in the series.

Gerry Burrows scored three for Brooklin and Glen Lotton added two. Singles came from Bobby Allan and Larry Ferguson.

Doug Wellsmith, Ron Plaies and Ron Loftus each scored twice for the winners. Single goals came from Bill Coakley, Ed McDonald, Bob Parent and Bill Wilkes.

New Westminster lost forward Paul Parnell late in the first stanza. Parnell, who scored six goals in the series and 71 in regular season play, was taken to hospital with a concussion after a crosscheck by Brooklin's Bill Castator.

Christie's squad went into the game minus the injured Jack Maggett, Craggs, and Ken Ruttan who had to go home to work.

Redmen Win Over St. Mary's

HALIFAX (CP) — Quarterback Glen St. John' sparked McGill University Redmen to a 21-14 win over St. Mary's University Huskies in an exhibition football game before more than 3,500 fans Friday night.

St. John plunged over for two McGill touchdowns in the first half as the Montreal squad rolled up a 14-7 lead heading into the third quarter.

The veteran quarterback also completed nine of 15 passes, including one for a touchdown as he directing the Redmen to their first victory of the season.

HEADS HOME

Twins Rained Out

Orioles Keep Pennant Battle Alive

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chico Salmon, who used to be afraid of ghosts, threatened to frighten Detroit Tigers out of fourth place in the American League.

While Minnesota Twins piled toward the AL pennant and Baltimore Orioles kept waiting to keep the race alive, Salmon has given Cleveland Indians a big boost toward fourth.

He singled across the winning run in the 10th inning Friday night, giving the fifth-place Indians a 3-2 triumph over Detroit just four days after the Indians edged the Tigers 5-4 on Sal. mon's run-scoring single in the 14th inning.

Those clutch hits plus his first major league grand-slam home run earlier this month have been the high spots of the catcher-wise six-o season for Salmon, 25, who didn't get out of the army until after the season had started.

But it was in the army that Salmon lost his fear of ghosts, "not just for now, for ever."

"I tell them when I get in that afraid of ghosts all my life," the Panamanian explained, "and they tell me, they moving Bob.' All the time everybody tell me keep moving, and I keep moving.

While Salmon threw another scare into the Tigers, rain washed out Minnesota's game at Washington and Baltimore defeated California 4-3 to keep alive the Twins' two-game pennant-clinching number at three.

Rain also washed out the second game of the Orioles - Angels doubleheader and Chicago at New York. Kansas City-Athletics whipped Boston Red Sox 8-0 in the only other game.

Baltimore scored twice in the 7th games of the Twins behind Jerry Adair and Brooks Robinson. Adair drove in the first run with a single and a homer while Robinson rapped three hits, knocking in two runs.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter held the Red Sox hitless for six innings, but Carl Yastrzemski led off the seventh with a double. Hunter walked up with a two-hitter and rapped three hits. Wayne Causey and Dick Green each batted across three runs.

QSS Soccer Team Wins Over OSD

If the opening contest of the year is any indication of the strength of Quinte Secondary's senior Soccer team, then the season will be a good one. Quinte whipped a visiting O.S.D. squad 7-0 on Friday afternoon.

The shutout was well earned by the Quinte goal keeper, as he handled all of one shot in the entire game.

SIGNS CONTRACT

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pedro Gonzalez, Cleveland infielder who is under suspension for the remainder of the current baseball season, signed his 1966 contract with the Indians Friday. There had been reports that Gonzalez would not return to baseball next year after American League president Joe Cronin fined him $300 and suspended him "for engaging in physical attack with a baseball bat" on Detroit pitcher Larry Sherry.

Batting — Jim Lefebvre, Dodgers, smashed a two-run single in the eighth inning as Los Angeles came from behind to whipped St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 for its seventh straight victory and moved to within one game of National League leading San Francisco.

Richardson Meets Brennan

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP)— Cape Breton fighter Blair Richardson will try tonight to lift the British Empire middleweight boxing title from Gordon Brennan of The Bahamas, a dedicated 36-year-old who has never been knocked down in 77 professional bouts.

The 12-round battle, expected to bring more than 7,000 fans to Miners Forum here, is the most important fight for Richardson in his eight-year career. A win could mean a shot at Joey Giardello's world crown.

REMOVES TARIFFS

CANBERRA (AP) — Acting Trade Minister Paul Hasluck announced Tuesday the Australian government will remove tariffs on a wide range of handicrafts imported from less developed countries. He said India and Pakistan were among countries which had sought the concession.

Colts Meet Packers In Feature Clash

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two head-to-head tussles between contending teams highlight a full schedule of games Sunday in the second week of National Football League season play.

The featured encounter has Western Conference champion Baltimore Colts confronting powerful Green Bay Packers. Both teams won their initial starts last week and both boast healthy squads.

NFL champion Cleveland Browns meet St. Louis Cardinals, considered strong pennant contenders despite a surprise opening loss to Philadelphia Eagles 34-27.

New York Giants are 21-point underdogs against Philadelphia due to injuries and last year's last-place finish.

CONFIDENT EIGHT REDSKINS

Experts foresee a close fight between Dallas Cowboys and Washington, but give the edge to Dallas on the strength of its season-opening victory against New York.

Minnesota, seeking its first win, tackles Detroit Lions, victors last week against Los Angeles Rams; Chicago Bears clash with the Rams; and San Francisco 49ers are expected to crush Pittsburgh Steelers in Sunday's other action.

In the American League, Cookie Gilchrist sparked a powerful ground attack which led Denver Broncos to their first win in three outings, a 37-20 decision over winless Boston Patriots Friday night.

Sunday, Buffalo Bills seek to extend their two-game winning streak against winless New York Jets. Kansas City Chiefs meet front-running San Diego Chargers in a Western Division game and Houston Oilers visit Oakland Raiders.

Gilbert To Wear Back Brace

NEW YORK (AP)—Rod Gilbert, New York Rangers' leading scorer, has been fitted with a steel back brace that may enable him to play in the National Hockey League this season.

He underwent spinal fusion surgery in 1961 after he was injured in a junior game at Guelph. He complained of pain in his back last Tuesday at the Rangers' training camp in Kingston, and was sent to New York for examination by the club's physician, Dr. Kazuo Yanagisawa.

A Ranger spokesman said Friday that Gilbert has returned to Kingston and would attempt to resume skating today.

General manager Emil Francis said that Gilbert is in no immediate danger of injury but that he likely will need another operation sooner or later.

"We're hopeful he'll be able to play throughout the season without undergoing another operation," said Francis.

Wrestling At Arena
Blondes, Hangman Lose

It was strictly a six-man show at Memorial Arena last night—but the ensemble number in the finale stole all the fireworks.

The Terrible Two, Ronnie and Terry Garvin, teamed with the Hangman against Cousin Bill Williams, Jack Clay and Vic Rossettanni in a three-way split and all-out grand warfare.

In the main bout six-man tag team tussle referee Marcus Freeman was busier than the one-armed postman with the hives.

How he escaped without a permanent kink in the neck and cross-eyes will never be known. But he did a good job keeping three men in one eye at a time, one of them outside the ring half the time.

Williams, Clay and Rossettani won two of the three falls, an unfortunate occurrence for "The Hangman."

The Garvin blood is thicker than Hangman tomato juice. When the decision was announced the blonde brothers turned on their wrestling partner and gave him the works. In fact they kept it up on the way to the dressing room.

It was lively concerted action all through. Never a dull moment as all six hop-skipped the ropes to lend aid to a partner.

Garvin the Younger kept up with his roadwork all through the three-brawl affair. He preferred the out-of-doors and track a lot of the time mainly to pick up a "secret weapon."

Brother Terry stole some of the limelight by slugging the referee and getting disqualified for his second fift against Rossettanni.

Ronnie pulled something new when he Bulldog Brawled over the ring against Big Jack Clay in the scheduled third fall and walked out with the pinfall muscle.

The Hangman who will never get the popularity parade, entered the proceedings gory by defeating Cousin Bill Williams in the opener after twelve minutes of skullduggery action.

Next week's show will be the final card of the season. Arena manager Bob Burrows said he will start licensing immediately following.

Blames Track, Crowd

H.U.L.L., Que. (CP) — The driver of a runaway stock car that killed one person and injured 16 Thursday night has blamed track conditions and lack of crowd control for the tragedy.

Raymond Guindon, 23, of Otawa said in an interview Friday the car ran away and veered with mud from the dirt track when he lost control of the racer at nearby Canlay Raceway.

Eugene Mineault, 25, of Otawa died when he and other spectators crowded along the top of a six-foot embankment were mowed down and dragged by the Guindon car.

"When the car started to slide I couldn't see where I was going. I went up the bank on two wheels and then I saw the crowd. They were standing right on the bank real close to the track."

The accident touched off bedlam at the track. There were no police or ambulances present. Spectators took the injured to hospital. Six persons were admitted, two of them in serious condition. Most had broken limbs.

Guindon estimated he was travelling 50 miles an hour at the time. He said the crowd was too close to the track. "I know I won't race on a track with the crowd that close again."

Track owner Guy Boyer of nearby Limbour, Que., said he believed the embankment where the accident occurred was foolproof protection.

Dan Blocker Has Hard Time Keeping Horse on Ground

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dan Blocker had been rassling a horse all morning, and his usual sunny mood was beclouded.

"I was supposed to keep the critter from getting up," he related, "and horses don't like to lay down for long. It hurts 'em. Why this horse kept tryin' to get up and they kept yellin' to me: 'Hold him down, Dan.'

"I'm tellin' you, when a horse wants to get up, you could tie him to a fire hydrant and he'd pull it out of the sidewalk."

Dan had collapsed into a booth of his daily lunching place, a bar and grill near Paramount Studios where Bonanza is filmed. To revive his spirits he ordered a tall glass of buttermilk.

"No booze for me," he explained. "Gotta mess of dialogue this afternoon and I'd blame well better know it."

The outsized (six - foot - four, 280 pounds) Texan is a conscientious actor and family man. Those are two reasons why he expects to stick with Bonanza although the series no longer challenges him.

IT'S GOOD LIVING

"I'm a professional," he explained. "I treat acting as a darned good living, not because it fulfills my soul's need to express myself.

"Sure, it's an added kick if you have a role you can bring some creativity to. I had that in the first two years of Bonanza. But it's different now.

"When you've done the same part for seven years, there's nothing new you can add. By that time you've catalogued all your reactions; you just reach into the file and pull out what's needed.

"After all, how many ways can you say, 'Yeah, pard'n'? Paw is Canadian - born actor Lorne Greene.

Dan is the first to admit the financial advantages of being in a hit series. His weekly cheque not only supports his wife and four kids "but a whole herd of others." Each time he makes a show he collects $10,000.

But he also claims he is not overpaid.

"I'm getting $10,000 for a week's work, and I mean it's work," said Dan. "Dean Martin gets $15,000 for one afternoon a week. I'd be glad to compare Bonanza's rating with his and see which is the better buy for NBC."

most. This is Conservative policy and it will be carried into effect.

When the Atlantic Development Board was established, the Conservative government gave it "unlimited monies," the Liberals "reduced it to $100,000,000, most of which has been used.

"We propose to see that the board will have sufficient money to carry out its demands."

On offshore minerals: Prime Minister Pearson is "passing the buck" by referring the question to the Supreme Court of Canada. "If elected, we intend to deny an application to the court and get together in the spirit of Confederation to arrive at an agreement that is fair, reasonable and proper. . . This is not a matter of legal interpretation."

"We're united," said the Opposition Leader. "I have been amazed in the degree to which in a few short weeks in every part of this nation, our party is united in the face of a serious national situation."

The loudest applause came when Mr. Diefenbaker repeated his pledge to increase old-age pensions to $100 a month from $75, and he was also cheered for his promise to allow homeowners to deduct municipal taxes from income tax. This would be up to a limit of $500, he said.

Higher tax deductions would also be allowed for donations to universities. And he said taxation should be reduced.

Appealing for support, he said that "in 1957, they said it couldn't be done.

"They said I didn't have a chance. I knew better. I knew the heart of the average Canadian."

This time the future of Canada was at stake. "Tinkering had divided the country more than any time in its history.

"Action must be taken. In the spirit of Confederation we should convene a conference of federal and provincial governments and other representative organizations in a constitutional constitutional confederation conference to bring about changes found necessary based on 100 years of experience".

Premier Stanfield appeared on the platform with the Conservative leader "to indicate our support to the party, Mr. Diefenbaker and his candidates within this province."

Today, Mr. Diefenbaker flies to St. John's, Nfld., for an evening rally. He returns here Sunday to board a train for a day of whistle - stopping Monday through Quebec. He will remain in Quebec Tuesday.

Will Increase Grain Flow Says Minister

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp said Friday a special committee will be established to oversee grain movements from the Prairies to the Lakehead terminals.

His announcement followed an emergency meeting called to discuss a bottleneck in the grain flow which has left lake vessels sitting idle at the Lakehead for lack of cargo.

Transport Minister Pickersgill flew in from Ottawa with Mr. Sharp for the session, attended by the presidents of the CPR and CNR and the heads of the major grain - handling companies.

Mr. Sharp also announced that the government has extended special customs duty treatment to the railways, enabling them to lease additional diesels from the U.S. to handle shipments to the Lakehead.

The new committee, to meet weekly in Winnipeg, will be composed of officials of the Canadian wheat board, the railways, the Prairie pools and private companies.

HAMILTON COMMENTS

At Melville, Sask. Friday night, former agriculture minister Hamilton said the federal and Saskatchewan governments are not giving leadership to Prairie farmers in the present harvesting situation.

LINE-UP FOR WATER — Schoolchildren in Orleans, Ont., line-up for the water wagon, as most of the town's wells are polluted from overflowing septic tanks. The town's eight-year-old, $1,000,000 water and sewer system plan, that should have taken two years to complete, has been caught in a financial morass. Health officials say an epidemic could break out in the 2,500-resident area at any time. Residents pay $10 for every 1,000 gallons of water trucked in. Orleans is about seven miles east of Ottawa. ## Strike Notice Served On 3 Oil Companies

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Oil-Chemical Workers union, on strike against British American Oil Ltd., has served 48-hour strike notice on three other big gasoline-oil companies.

The strike notices which expire Sunday involve Imperial Oil, Standard Oil and Shell Oil refineries and marketing divisions on the B.C. lower mainland.

R. J. Philp, national representative of the Oil, chemical and Atomic Workers union (CLC) which is already on strike against BA, said Friday night further strike action depends on the three companies.

He said the strike notices resulted from refusal of Imperial, Standard and Shell to stop using the trucks of Rempel-Trail Transportation Ltd. and H. M. Trimble and Sons Ltd. The union claims these trucks were delivering to the struck BA company, crossing union picket lines to do so.

"We don't want to extend the strike," he said. "But if the industry forces the issue we will have no alternative."

A spokesman for Imperial said he had been told by the union to expect a strike at 3 p.m. PDT Sunday.

COULD NOT AGREE

H. L. Cavanagh, manager of Imperial's big Ioco refinery near Vancouver, said his company could not agree not to use the two trucking firms which have been doing business with Imperial for years.

Strike notice was also served on the Pacific Petroleum Company's refinery at interior Twyford, B.C., on the same trucking issue. There 82 refinery employees had previously voted in favor of strike action in a government - supervised ballot.

And in Calgary a boycott of BA products was being organized by the Calgary Labor Council.

A union official here said Texaco and Home Oil companies were not served strike notices because they had not used the disputed trucking firms.

BA and its subsidiary, Royalite, have been struck by the union in Kamloops in the B.C. interior, in Moose Jaw and Clarkson, Ont., by the Oil-Chemical Workers Union and at its Port Moody refinery by the independent Oil Workers Union who demand the same contract as the Oil-Chemical Workers.

The union seek a 35-cent-an-hour wage increase in a two-year contract and job security provisions. BA has offered 25 cents over 30 months. Base rate on the West Coast at present is $2.75 an hour.

In Vancouver Friday a BA spokesman denied a union claim that the strike has cut off 58 per cent of the company's 171,000 - barrels - a - day production.

CABINET TO DECIDE

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial cabinet will be making basic decisions" about the future of Metro Toronto "within the next four to six weeks," Mayor Philip Givens said Friday. The mayor told city council it was too late to set up a committee to study the H. Carl Goldenberg report which recommended the provincial government that the Metropolitan area be divided into four cities.

The current account deficit in the second quarter of 1961 was more than double what it was in the April-May-June period of 1960.

"Imports again rose sharply, by more than eight per cent, while the total value of exports was virtually unchanged with increased exports to the U.S. generally offsetting reductions in grain shipments to Eastern Europe," DBS said.

"At the same time the deficit on non-merchandise transactions rose by 10 per cent to $328,000,000, more than reversing the contraction in the first quarter."

Non-merchandise transactions include payments of interest and dividends, and payments for travel, freight and shipping services. After balancing out foreign payments into Canada, Canadians spent 90 per cent more abroad on travel, freight and shipping.

India-Pakistan War Gives World Another Chance to Judge UN

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The cost of the India-Pakistan war, in human sacrifice and material destruction, is yet to be assessed. Both sides may find it is more than they can afford. Yet the war and the United Nations - called ceasefire have their positive sides—they have given the world another chance to judge the value of the UN.

The old familiar debate of whether Communist China should be admitted to the UN has been revived, along with the United States argument that China should be kept out because it is an aggressor.

Perhaps a year ago the whole debate would have sounded hollow. The life of the UN was in jeopardy. Its value was in doubt. And China seemed to be doing its best to attempt to batter the UN to the ground, threatening to establish a stronger rival in its place.

WIDENS HATRED

But for a country which seeks to influence the world, China appears to have followed a dubious course. It widened its hatred of the U.S. to include India and the Soviet Union. It encouraged the Viet Cong guerillas in South Viet Nam and cheered Pakistan in its struggle with India. It even threatened India with a Himalayan attack on such flimsy charges that much of the world concluded China was merely seeking an excuse for bloodshed.

China now has become a fledgling nuclear power whose only raise a question in reasonable minds whether a rival UN force under China's guidance could be trusted or could wield any major influence.

In a way, therefore, the world should be grateful to China, for its actions have increased international concern for a forum which could show peaceful consensus and judgment. The UN has been given a new chance to show what it can do. And the outlook seems moderately hopeful for even such a critic as France, which virtually cold-shouldered the UN in the past, decided to send its foreign minister to the UN General Assembly in New York for the first time in three years.

Windows Likely Source Of Leak

By EUGENE B. SHLMOE

Dust and air leaking into the car usually goes unnoticed, but let it rain and you know there's a problem. Naturally, the big chore is to locate the exact source or point of leakage.

In most instances cases, the trouble occurs around the windshield or the rear window. This may be due to improper weather-strip installation, rough or uneven moulding, poor seal at the molding ends, or perhaps the weather-stripping is working loose, cracking or rotting.

If evidence of water leaks are found in the trunk, but the faulty source cannot be pinpointed, double-check the rear window. Water could be seeping through cracks in the rear seal package shelf and dripping into the trunk.

In the case of leakage around doors, poor weather - stripping could be the reason, although the door lock opening is highly possible too.

B. B. writes: "Each time I hit the brake pedal yesterday, I can hear water. I've seemed to be needed. Isn't this a strange condition?"

It indicates a leak in the cylinder needs service. The compensating port is apparent. ly clogging.

From H. R.: "I usually keep a pail in the backyard, and there's a dark oil stain in the concrete due to a leaking oil gasket. How do I remove this?"

There are several good grease and oil solvents on the market.

Ask your service station man what he uses to keep his floors dry and clean.

G. D. asks: "Isn't it rare when a persistent engine miss is due to loose or corroded cable connections, as you recently suggested?"

No, it isn't, particularly at the distributor cap and coil. Nor is missing due to cracked or worn cable insulation a rarity.

OPP Precision Group Star Attraction at Fair Opening

PICTON (Staff) — The county fair at Picton was attended Friday night, opening night, with the largest attendance in its history. There were some four thousand paid admissions to see one of the province's best agricultural fairs.

Feature of the evening was a performance by a precision motorcycle group of Ontario Provincial Police. 17 of the Golden Helmets troop performed their intricate riding manoeuvres before a capacity grandstand audience. This is the first time the Golden Helmets have performed east of Toronto.

The county fair, being held at the peak of the harvest season, has developed a wide reputation for its excellent display of harvest produce of all kinds.

Following the night's performance by the Golden Helmets, an old time fiddlers' contest was held in the community centre. First place winner was Roland Whatley, second Gerald Clement and third Lionel Zachariah. Winner of the novelty number was Al Rowe and the oldest fiddler was Ray Clement. Master of ceremonies for the contest was Ralph Forrester. During an intermission in the contest there was a fine performance by Prince Edward County square dance team. There are new members in the team this year and they recently took third place in the Ontario championships.

The county fair this year has been cut down from three days to two. They call off such competitions and the Holstein show was held on Friday which is also the day for the children's school parade to the fair grounds to fit. Horses on the line were judged starting at 9:30 a.m. Saturday the judging starts at 1 p.m. Many entries are listed for heavy and light horses, ponies and jumpers. With the good weather on hand it is anticipated that this year's fair will have capacity crowds during the closing at midnight Saturday.

McIntosh Apple Harvest Now In Full Swing

PICTON — The harvest of McIntosh apples is in full swing in Prince Edward County. Spot picking along Redgrenville Bay front began Sept. 13 and in other areas Monday of this week.

About 80 per cent of the apples harvested in Prince Edward County are of the McIntosh variety.

It is expected that the overall crop may be five per cent under that of last year, but will still be large.

With much moisture, there has been an unusual sizing of some Macs. These are not suitable for controlled atmosphere freezing, or for selling in 5 pound bags, but will be disposed of in hampers and baskets.

Color is quite good, according to fruit and vegetable specialist Evans Estabrooks, who noted that the oversize apples are really of fine flavor.

Three Running For Liberal Nomination

PICTON (Staff) — Liberal nomination convention for Prince Edward-Lennox is to be held Thursday, October 7th at 8 p.m. at Napanee Collegiate auditorium.

Speaker for the occasion will be the Hon. Harry Hays, Minister of Agriculture. It is expected this will be a keenly contested convention. There are three known candidates and a possible fourth, this would indicate a very interesting contest. All of the candidates have requested that their names be withheld until the nomination.

Want Majority To Move Ahead Says Minister

AMHERST, N.S. (CP)—Labor Minister MacEachen said Friday night that the Liberal government is calling for a mandate in the Nov. 8 election "to nail down what we've already done and move forward to implement new programs."

It had been "obstructed and stopped" by a minority opposition party in the last Parliament and felt that "we can do more, better and faster with a majority government."

Mr. MacEachen spoke at a party nominating convention which named Elmer Bragg, a northern Nova Scotia lumberman, to contest Cumberland in the election.

HOWE RETURNS NEEDS ACTION

QUEBEC (CP) — The icebreaker C. D. Howe docked here Friday night after a 90,000-mile trip in the Canadian Arctic. The ship left Quebec last June with a crew of 85 and medical personnel numbering 21. It travelled to most of the northern ports and more than 3,000 Eskimo were given medical examinations and received dental treatment on board.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters) — Commonwealth finance ministers who met here are concerned at the lowered growth rate of developing countries caused by the falling price of basic commodities. Early action is needed to fix stable and acceptable price levels, they said in a communique after a two-day conference behind closed doors.

Successful Living

Possible to Be in Love Though Only Seventeen

DEAR DORIS: My question is: How do you know whether or not a girl of 17, who wrote to you, is in love?

Most older people seem to think that just because a person is still in his or her teens that he doesn't know the meaning of love, but only that of infatuation or "puppy love."

DORIS CLARK

I was only 17 when I first met the boy I later married and he was just 17 also. Although at first neither of us found the other particularly special or attractive, we soon grew to love each other — while we were both still 17. We dated for two years and then were married for over a year now. Our love for each other has deepened rather than lessened. Nor does there seem to be any indication that it will lessen.

Being a teen-ager doesn't always mean being scatterbrained and irresponsible; it can mean being old enough to accept the responsibilities of a home love, marriage and parenthood. Why don't you give the teens a break? — IN LOVE AT 17.

* * *

DEAR SEVENTEEN: The teens need more than me to give them a break. The odds are against them. A recent sampling showed that five out of six marriages of 16— or 17-year-olds fail.

I grant you there are some seventeens who have matured early and may be readier to choose— but even you waited two years to be sure!

* * *

DEAR DORIS: If I made a will without a lawyer, but had a friend sign it, would it be legal? I've heard that something of this sort has been done. — WILL-ING.

* * *

DEAR WILL-ING: And so it has — usually to the dismay of the lawyer who later has to straighten things out. The requirements for making and witnessing a will are sufficiently complicated that most people find it highly desirable to pay for professional help.

To name a few details which can make or mar a will: the place you sign, the place a witness signs, the witness you pick, the number who sign, the specific you bequeath — and those you forget to mention; what you meant when you said "everything in the house" (were you counting the late Uncle Charlie's stocks, which were in the drawer?); ad infinitum.

It's not unusual for a "simple" self-made will to cost the beneficiaries hundreds of dollars before they get what's theirs. If the testator had squandered $10 or $15 for the clear-headed knowledge of a lawyer, the bereaved would have blessed him greatly.

* * *

Confidential to WAS REHAPTIZED: I appreciate your comments. You will find that we made another reference to this subject in a more recent column, pointing out that there are two schools of thought on the question.

* * *

Confidential to STILL CARING?: Perhaps he really means it when he says he is afraid he will get you into trouble; but perhaps he is growing cool. When a relationship reaches the point where a couple has nothing in common but sex, it's not good enough. You both need time to grow up.

Liberal Rule Brings Wealth Says Gordon

RENFREW, Ont. (CP)—Canada has become prosperous once again because of policies introduced by the Liberal government, Finance Minister Gordon said Friday night.

"Some people say this improvement in conditions is only Liberal party luck," he said. "But I have noticed that good luck and good management go hand in hand."

Addressing a Liberal nomination meeting for Renfrew South voting, Mr. Gordon said all the signs indicate that Canada's economic growth this year is again outstripping that of the United States.

Last year U.S. output had increased 6% per cent while Canada's went up nine per cent. Another nine-per-cent gain was expected for 1963.

Mr. Gordon said this means that Canada's growth has been 25 per cent faster than that of the Americans over the last two years.

INCOME RISING

During the years 1958-62, when the Conservatives were in power, real income per capita had risen an average of $10 a year. Since the Liberals resumed office this had jumped to $65 a year, "really quite remarkable."

Since April, 1963, Liberal policies had stimulated capital investment and created 500,000 new jobs.

"There was a lot of criticism of our new policies when they were first introduced," Mr. Gordon said, "But they turned the trick . . . we are prosperous once again."

He said Conservative Leader Diefenbaker has been "lifting the air with promises" in the election campaign. Four of them, which the finance minister did not specify, would cost $672,000,000.

McFarland Co. Gets Judgment Of $63,327

OTTAWA (CP)—Judge A. E. Honeywell allowed a $825,527 mechanics lien to M. Sullivan and Son Ltd., Arnprior, Ont., against Rideau Carleton Raceway Holdings Ltd. here.

The construction company built the concrete and steel grandstand at the $1,000,000 track in 1962. However, the track went bankrupt at the end of its first season and was placed in receivership two years ago.

Other judgments allowed went to H. J. McFarland Construction Co. for $63,327, Bedard-Girard Ltd. $101,183.

Judge Honeywell reserved judgment on an $88,714 claim by Balharrie-Helmer and Associates, architects. The hearings continue.

ELECT LEEMANS

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Senator Victory Leemans, a Christian Democrat from Belgium, was elected president of the European Parliament Friday following bitter debate. Some Socialist members protested Leemans' candidacy, recalling he had served as secretary-general of the Belgian ministry of economic affairs during the Second World War German occupation. After the war, Leemans was officially cleared of any wrong-doing.

Retired Wife Gives Warning: Don't Move to a New Town

By THOMAS COLLINS

"Men, it seems, always make the profound statements about retirement. Well, I'm a wife. And I have a profound statement — about the perils of picking up and moving when you retire. And a lot of people may wind up a lot happier if they'll listen to me . . ."

This is Mrs. Gladys Jane Buckner speaking. She is 67. She is a refugee from a retirement town to grapefruit country.

"I know all the allures of closing the books on a city you have known too long and heading to the sunshine," she says. "I slept with them for three years before my husband retired. And then we sold out, packed up, and took off.

"Everything was perfect for the future, except for one small item: my husband's health. Nothing — his old company, his pension, our doctor, our religious faith — guaranteed that my husband wouldn't grow ill. But he did. Five months and two days after we staked out a claim in our retirement paradise . . ."

In the beginning, according to Mrs. Buckner, things went pretty much by the rule book. The costs of moving and getting settled were above their estimates neighbors, merchants, and the Welcome Wagon came calling) and pleased them. There were welcoming letters from a bank, a laundry, and door calls by the newspaper delivery boy and a dairy. Then began the slow, pallent — and sometimes disheartening — process of learning the town, and trying to get acquainted with people and make some friends.

SUSPECTED CANCER

"My husband's illness began with pains," Mrs. Buckner continues. "They grew worse. Finally we called on a local doctor and he apparently suspected cancer. He arranged for my husband to go into a hospital.

"There were 10 days of this as they made test after test. And all the while I sat home alone and worrying, while he lay in the hospital, without flowers and with nobody in the whole area to care about him, except me. He had one visitor, a neighbor who made a brief courtesy call. Not because the town's people were evil, but because a retired couple has to live in a new town a long, long time before anybody can really be interested in what happens to them.

"When my husband came home he was virtually an invalid. The doctors didn't know what was wrong with him. They gave him medicines. They suggested he stay in bed, except for occasional sitting - up periods in the living room. They provided some tranquilizers for a rather bad nervous condition that had come in the wake of his illness."

Mrs. Buckner settled down to the "prison" her home had become. A couple of neighbors made brief calls, then weren't seen again. The pastor of their new church dropped by. "There was not another face to come through our door and break the monotony. And again the people weren't evil — it's just how things are with retired newcomers in a town."

LONELY BATTLE

She goes on: "I made hurried trips to the grocery and drug stores and where else it was necessary to go, not wanting to leave my husband alone too long. I completely discontinued our campaign to make some friends. I had to. I lost the contacts I had earlier made with people who might have become friends. For seven dreary months my husband and I fought this lonely battle."

Then Mrs. Buckner wrote her doctor back in the old home town, got the name of a New York stomach specialist, yanked $4,000 of savings they were hoarding to will to their children, and flew her husband to a New York hospital.

"There was no malignancy. But the specialist recommended an operation. We agreed. My husband got well again. And $8,300 poorer than the day we left it, we moved back to the old home town.

"Never again!"

Most retired people moving to a new town would not face serious illness before they were able to establish themselves among friends. But the changes in climate, water and food that accompany such a move, plus the drastic change that comes in a man's mental and physical setup with retirement — these are the sort of things that can throw a man's health.

Go on and move if you've planned to. Just stay in close touch with your doctor for a couple of years.

N. Z. Instantor Revolutionary Teaching Aid

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

ROTORUA, N.Z. (CP) — Two New Zealand school teachers have brought the computer era into the classroom. They have been testing a revolutionary new teaching device on a guinea pig class of pupils, with marked success.

The new device, called an "instantor" by its inventors, shows the teacher instantly whether the pupils are all paying attention and whether they have understood the lesson. By correcting wrong ideas immediately, it prevents mistaken impressions from taking root in young minds.

The "instantor" is the work of T. Hallett, science master, and R. Schwenn, art teacher, at Edgecumbe College, near the east coast of the North Island. It took them 12 months to build with their own funds.

The basic idea of the device is to give instant indication of how well a lesson is being followed. Each pupil has a small box on his desk with a numbered dial. There are 10 spaces on the dial allowing a choice of 10 answers to any question.

The units on pupils' desks are linked electronically to a master panel on the teacher's desk. When the teacher asks a question, pupils set the dial to what they believe to be the correct answer.

ERROR IN LIGHTS

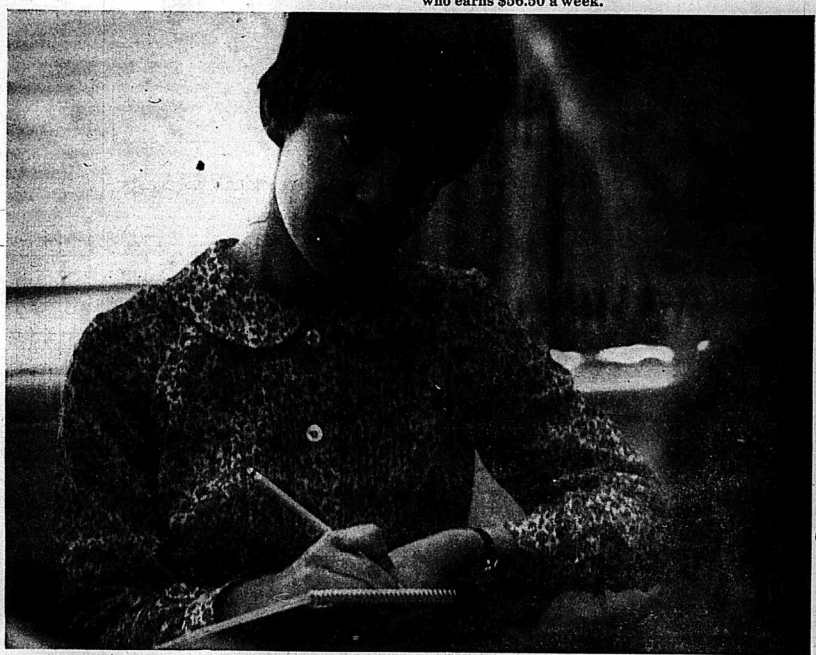
A few seconds later, lights on the master panel and on the pupils' units indicate whether the answer was correct.

Results are recorded on a punched card.

If the answer is wrong, the pupil selects other answers until he chooses the correct one.

The device provides a check on whether the pupils are concentrating, and meets the insistence of child psychologists that wrong ideas should not be given time to consolidate in a child's mind.

If most children in the class give an incorrect answer, the teacher knows that the point has been missed and goes back over that part of the lesson again.



The pupils, after three days of testing of the "instantor," were enthusiastic over the results.

The inventors say the device could be built for about $1,500.

"There are still some bugs to be ironed out," Hallett said. "When we have dealt with those, we hope to demonstrate the 'instantor' to the education department."

The Canada Pension Plan and its benefits

Here is what the Canada Pension Plan will do for people like Huguette Samson, a 22-year-old married woman who earns $56.50 a week.

Huguette and her husband, who is earning $4,200 a year, hope that Huguette will work for a few years before family needs require her attention full time.

Assuming that Huguette does just this, her contributions to the Plan will benefit her in several ways. For example, if she works only for another five years, at age 65 she will receive a small retirement pension of $8.38 a month in addition to her $75 a month Old Age Security.

Through her husband's contributions to the Plan, should he die when they have three young children, Huguette would receive a widow's pension of $57.81 a month plus $25 a month for each child—a total of $132.81 a month. She would also receive a lump sum payment of $500.

At age 65, based upon both her own and her husband's contributions she would receive a pension of $57.53 a month plus $75 a month Old Age Security—a total of $132.53.

If she decided to supplement her income at any time by returning to work, she could still receive the widow's and orphan's benefits, could substantially increase her retirement pension, and could also ensure her entitlement to a disability pension if she became disabled.

All benefits under the Plan will maintain their value. The actual benefits payable will probably be higher than those given here since benefits will be adjusted to meet changes in living costs and in wage levels before they are paid and changes in living costs after they become payable.

What will the Plan cost you?

If you are employed and, like Huguette, have earnings of $2,938 spread evenly over the year, you will pay at the rate of 81¢ a week. Your employer will pay the same amount.

This advertisement is one of a series which relates some of the important benefits of the Canada Pension Plan to individual circumstances.

Issued by authority of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, Canada, The Honourable Judy LaMarsh.

Lake Winnipeg Fish Boat Sinks Drowning Nine

RIVERTON, Man. (CP) — Wreckage from the Suzanne-E drifted to shore Sunday but no trace was found of eight of the 10 persons who were aboard the fish freighter when it capsized and broke apart during a violent storm on Lake Winnipeg Friday night.

Everett drifted on a piece of wreckage for 11 hours, reaching the shore of Black Island at dawn Saturday, then walked 1½ miles in bare feet through snow and rocks to get help at a fishermen's camp.

The body of the captain, Richard Charles Johnson, 32, of Stonewall, Man., was found Saturday night on the beach of Black Island.

Johnson climbed on the same piece of wreckage as Everett and Allen Clemons, 20, of Selkirk, Man., but Everett said the captain died during the night.

Clemons left the makeshift raft during the night in an attempt to reach Deer Island.

TIPPED BY WAVE

Everett said the Suzanne-E, a 19-year-old 75-ton vessel owned by Booth Fisheries Ltd. of Selkirk left Selkirk Friday morning in fairly good weather for a semi-weekly trip around the 250-mile-long lake to pick up pickerel and sauger at fishing stations.

About 10 p.m., 90 miles north of Winnipeg, 20 and 30 - foot waves started to hit the steel-ribbed wooden hull, and when the captain attempted to turn about the Suzanne-E was hit sideways by a giant wave and flipped. Everett said four men were on deck and six sleeping in the hull at the time.

Within three minutes the hull broke in two at both parts sank. Only the pilot house and some other small wreckage remained floating. There was no chance to get into the ship's two lifeboats.

RCMP said there would be no air search today but a water search will continue with divers on hand. They said the eight missing persons are presumed drowned.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Low temperatures were recorded over most of Ontario today. Increasing cloudiness is expected tonight which will lead to moderate temperatures somewhat, but they will remain well below normal.

Viet Cong 'Executes' Two Yanks

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. B-52s hit South Viet Nam for the 33rd time today as government troops claimed they killed 48 Viet Cong in a single engagement and the Viet Cong announced they had executed two U.S. advisers.

The United States admitted that—its planes twice had bombed by mistake a bridge in the north - south demilitarized zone Sept. 16-17, killing more than 23 persons.

The B-52s struck a Viet Cong area 35 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border. U.S. intelligence reports have said a Viet Cong headquarters is located. Results of the strike were not announced.

Communist broadcasts announced that the Viet Cong executed the two Americans in reprisal for the execution of two Communist sympathizers last week by a South Vietnamese firing squad. A U.S. spokesman accused the Viet Cong of "wanton murder of American military prisoners."

Radio Hanoi identified the Americans as Capt. Humbert R. Versace of Baltimore, Md., and Sgt. Kenneth M. Rorabach. Versace was captured in October, 1963, and Rorabach a month later.

South Vietnamese troops claimed 48 Viet Cong were killed in an unsuccessful attempt to overrun an outpost southwest of Quang Ngai Sunday.

Solution Is Seen Emerging

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN (AP)—A solution is beginning to emerge to the current crisis in the European Common Market, but the rift between President de Gaulle of France and his partners on uniting Western Europe remains as deep as ever.

The short-term solution is being nursed by Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, a politician with experience as a compromiser. He gets along better with de Gaulle than most. Possibly he would not have brought up his latest idea without some encouragement from Paris.

Spaak proposes a special conference of the foreign ministers from the six Common Market countries, West Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. These ministers ordinarily meet every month or so in Brussels as the council of the European Economic Community — the highest authority in the Common Market.

The difference is that Spaak wants to bar the attendance this time of the commission, the nine-man Common Market executive that de Gaulle considers "supranational." It is also possible that the ministers would not meet in Brussels, Common Market headquarters.

TO DECIDE SUBSIDIES

Purpose of the meeting would be to decide on subsidies for the farm exports of the six countries. This was to have been settled by June 30, and the failure to meet the deadline has been the reason given in Paris for boycotting major Common Market meetings since.

France, the biggest exporter of farm products among the six, is vitally interested in subsidies.

Canadian Truce Chief Flies From Cyprus to New Delhi

From Reuters-AP

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (CP) — The India-Pakistan truce line was reported tense and troubled today as a Canadian truce expert headed for the area where both sides have charged numerous violations since the ceasefire went into effect five days ago.

Maj.-Gen. Bruce MacDonald of Edmonton, former head of the United Nations peace force for the Nicosia zone of Cyprus, will head the UN India-Pakistan observer mission along the ceasefire line. One report said that at present there were only 10 UN men to cover a 1,000-mile front from south of Kashmir.

MacDonald drew to New Delhi by way of Cairo, after spending Sunday there in Beirut. He was due in the Indian capital Tuesday morning.

UN Secretary - General U Thant informed the Security Council that the ceasefire is not holding" and said both sides were stalling on troop withdrawals.

CHARGES ATTACKS

Pakistan charged India with two major attacks, and claimed the attackers were repulsed.

The Pakistani government said Indian troops attacked Sunday night with tanks and artillery on the Fazilka front, near Lahore, but were driven back. Five Indians were killed and 73 captured.

All-India Radio said the Pakistani report of 90 Indian dead was untrue but it admitted that 71 Indians were killed during two officers.

The Indian defence ministry spokesman said that more than 1,000 Pakistani troops moved across the Sutlej River into Indian territory in the Fazika area.

But they don't get out there is going to be a fight," the spokesman said.

The UN report Sunday night called the situation around Lahore "explosive."

Radio Pakistan said Sunday that Indian troops were forced to evacuate outposts in the Fazilka area after an all-night battle. It said Indian troops violated the ceasefire Saturday by setting up an outpost on Pakistani territory.

SAYS REFUSE RAIDS

An official Pakistani spokesman said his country's troops beat off an Indian attack on a post northwest of Ramgarh, in Rajasthan near the Arabian Sea. He said the troops captured two more posts in the same area which, he said, Indian forces captured after the ceasefire.

In letters to Thant during the weekend, India charged that the Pakistan attacked in the area the two fronts, as well as near Gadra in the disputed Himalayan state of Kashmir. Pakistan also protested the alleged Indian intrusions into Thant.

Thant said in a two-page report to the Security Council that the intervention in the Lahore area began Friday night.

Private Broadcasters Want Present Control System Kept

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Canadian Association of Broadcasters will "vigorously" seek continuation of the present system of control of broadcasting with modification of the Board of Broadcast Governors set-up. This was announced here Sunday night after a C.A.B. board meeting on the eve of the annual meeting of the Atlantic Association of Broadcasters.

The board said minor modifications could strengthen the Broadcasting Act to permit the BBG to exercise "fully and without question the powers Parliament obviously intended it to have."

The board was critical of the Fowler committee's recommendation for a single Canadian broadcasting authority, saying this tended to create "a broadcasting dictator" with powers to decide "what Canadians will and will not see and hear."

The present BBG has three full and 12 part-time members. The C.A.B. favors an agency made up of three of five full-time members. These would be assisted by part-time advisers representing geographically.

The board disagreed with the Fowler committee on morning TV programs for education purposes.

It felt the committee should have been in closer touch with broadcasters before making its report; and it disagreed with the report's criticism of the use of talent by private stations.

The committee had ignored the "nearly $50,000,000 spent yearly by privately-owned stations on full-time writers, announcers, program directors and other Canadian talent to say nothing of the substantial sums produced by these stations' activities through advertising agency expenditure on talent."

Labor Party Not Happy With Govt.

By CARL MOLLINS

BLACKPOOL, England (CP) — The Labor party was warned by its conference chairman today that the next 12 months "are going to be hard" and supporters should not try to rock the political boat if they want the Labor government to remain in power.

Calling for unity among the socialists, Labor Minister Ray Gunter told the 1,200 delegates at the opening of the week-long annual conference that the "Frankenstein Land" could not be reached in the first 21 months of the government's tenure.

He said the government's policy of retaining a tight rein on the economy until the critical balance of payments deficit is overcome, Gunter said: "There certainly will be no frenzied land in terms of more houses, more hospitals, more schools once this country earns its own keep, unless that deficit is turned into a surplus."

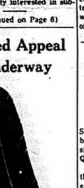
Lesage Says Separatism 'Economically Impossible'

MAILLARDVILLE, B.C. (CP) — Separatism for Quebec would be economically impossible, Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec said Sunday.

He told a dinner gathering in this predominantly French - speaking community that separatist feelings could be explained as "egotism."

But a strong Quebec, he said, would not mean abandonment of the rights of French-Canadian minorities in other parts of the country.

"On the contrary, an affirmative, expansive Quebec could do more to help you."



The audience of some 300 French - Canadians listened rapily to the premier's words. And when Mr. Lesage said: "Be assured, Quebec won't forget you," one girl took out her handkerchief and wiped away a tear.

Mr. Lesage said Quebec had already begun a program of aid, financial and otherwise, for the French-Canadian minority in British Columbia.

First RCAF Group Leaves Trenton For Pakistan

TRENTON — An advance party of RCAF personnel left RCAF Station Trenton at 11.00 a.m. Saturday on the first leg of the journey to Rawalpindi, West Pakistan.

These men comprised the advance party of the newly formed 117 Air Transport Unit which will fly United Nations Observer teams in Kashmir. Wing Commander R. T. Heaslip of Oshawa, Ont., will command the unit to be based at Rawalpindi in Pakistan. Canada will provide three Caribou and six Otter aircraft. The twin engined Otter will be loaded aboard C130E Hercules transport aircraft to be airlifted to Rawalpindi.

The remainder of the personnel will leave Trenton Wednesday and will be operational within hours of their arrival.

Experience gained in the Congo, Yemen and in Cyprus has enabled ATC to respond quickly and efficiently to United Nations call for Canada's participation in another peace keeping force.

Working around the clock Saturday, crews prepared an Otter every four hours for loading into Hercules aircraft.

"On a job like this my men just go, go, go, everyone pulls together, we've got this taped now," said crew chief F. H. Sergt. R. Lovejoy.

F/L Bill Monkman of Belleville briefs his crew prior to departing on a 5,000-mile Caribou trip to Rawalpindi in Pakistan. His Caribou aircraft is one of three that will form part of the RCAF, new 117 Air Transport Unit which will fly United Nations Observer teams in Kasmir. ## Britain Revokes Self-rule For Aden in Southern Arabia

ADEN (Reuters)—The British high commissioner today abolished an 11-hour dusk-to-dawn curfew in Aden's old Arab sector—scene of Cyprus - scene of numerous assassinations and grenade attacks by Arab terrorists.

About 100 British service families live in the settlement, which has been under curfew since the start of the month when the British speaker of the Aden legislative council, Sir Arthur Charles, was assassinated.

The curfew also was lifted in the Little Aden area, 16 miles from here, where a British army base and the British Petroleum Company's oil refinery are located.

The rest of the 73-square mile barren, dusty British protectorate remained under curfew restrictions imposed Saturday when Britain revoked self-rule following a mounting wave of terrorism.

British security authorities today reported all quiet through out the state with no incidents during the night.

Bars and movie theatres were declared out of bounds to all British servicemen Sunday and a night curfew was extended to 11 hours after sporadic night clashes between British patrols and Arab terrorists.

Opposition parties warned people in this British protectorate on the South Arabian Peninsula not to co-operate with Sir Richard Turnbull who took over direct rule and dismissed the Aden state legislature Saturday. Aden is the main British military base in the Middle East.

The Colonial-backed Organization for the Liberation of the Occupied South said "co-operation with Turnbull would be a crime against the country."

Britain revoked self-rule in Aden because of mounting terrorism. The council of ministers was accused of condoning it.

Former chief minister Abdul Qawee Makawee Sunday night said they had obstructed progress but admitted "we have been elements of obstruction in the way of British plans aimed at promoting her interests at the expense of the people of South Arabia."

He said: "We reject co-operation demanded of us as between master and servant."

A British spokesman said Sunday the high commissioner would set up an advisory committee of "anyone in Aden who could constructively contribute to a proper administration."

The rebel organization issued a statement Sunday calling on "all citizens who fear God" to refuse to work for the new administration.

The newspaper Al Yaqdha, owned by United Military Party President Abdul Rahman Girgrah, denounced the British assumption of power as a "retrograde step."

The paper also criticized Abdul Qawee Makawee for "constantly opposing and provoking Britain."

Britain has pledged to unite the parts of South Arabia—the state of Aden, 18 western and three eastern protectorates—in a South Arabian Federation since 1959.

Travelogue On "Africa" Much Enjoyed

Approximately 350 Belleville residents took a two-hour trip to Africa on Saturday.

That was roughly the number of interested people who attended the Philip E. Allen travelogue film "Light on Dark and Africa" shown at Belleville Collegiate at afternoon and evening presentations.

Sponsor of the film with commentary by Mr. Allen, Canada's unofficial foreign ambassador and world traveller, was the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

Filmed in brilliant color, the the travelogue took viewers on a trip through Capetown and the seacoast centres of Fort Elizabeth and Durban.

Then the trip swung inland through world famous gold producing centre Johannesburg and the Rhodesias and on into tribal country where thatched huts and primitive living in marked contrast to modern day skyscapers of the coastal cities.

Famed Kruger National Park with close up views of animal life and colorful views of 300-foot high Victoria Falls proved an appropriate finish for the much appreciated travelogue.

Credit Lessons With Saving Boy's Life

Swimming lessons taken at the Belleville YMCA were credited Saturday with saving the life of a young Bridge Street boy who tumbled into the water after falling from his bicycle on the government dock.

Billy Turner, son of Mr. Max Turner, 101 West Bridge Street, was riding his bike on the dock and lost his balance after hitting the edge.

The lad treaded water until his companion, Pat Calnan was able to extend a fishing rod and pull him to the dock.

17 Members Of Fire Dept. Resign in Body

NORLETON, Ont. (CP)—The 17 members of this village's volunteer fire department have tendered their resignations, effective Dec. 31, in protest at plan to amalgamate the three police village of Norleton, Schomberg and King City—by 1967 to form a King township ward system.

King township council has approved a by-law calling for a ward system throughout the township and the three police villages, and is awaiting approval from the Ontario Municipal board. Hearings begin at King City Oct. 22.

The Norleton firemen handed in their resignations 10 days ago, saying they had no desire to act under a ward system. Schomberg's 14 volunteers tendered their resignations previously and King City's firemen have also protested against the plan.

Pierre Trudeau Seeking Seat In Mount Royal

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre-Trudeau, political writer and professor who joined the Liberal party earlier in September as one of three prestigious names for the party's list of candidates in the Nov. 1 election, has decided to seek the Liberal nomination in Montreal Mount Royal.

It is also the former riding of House Speaker Alan Macnaughton, who announced his retirement from the Commons chair and from politics last week.

Charles Taylor, NDP candidate in Montreal Mount Royal, said Sunday night he is "astonished" that Mr. Trudeau plans to make a bid for nomination as Liberal party candidate in the same riding for the federal election.

Mr. Taylor is also a university professor and a political writer.

"It is ironic to think that two short years ago Pierre Trudeau supported my candidacy strongly against the same Liberal party in the name of which he now wishes to oppose it," he said in a statement.

"I welcome the chance to challenge him to explain what has changed in this liberal party since then that he led him to give up the fight and change sides," said Mr. Taylor.

FORCES 'CORRUPT'

"It shows clearly the degree to which the six corrupt forces have control over the Quebec federal Liberal party that the federal leadership are forced to resort to this in order to introduce Trudeau into Parliament," he said.

"It was apparently impossible to find a nomination for him in any of the 60 French speaking ridings of this province, so that he has to be parachuted into Mount Royal, a riding with which he has had no connection whatever, and which has always been represented by an English-speaking politician."

Jean Marchand, one of the three resrcuits and a labor leader, will seek the Liberal nomination in Quebec West, while a constituency for the third member of the group, columnist Gerard Pelletier, has not yet been found.

VISITS GYPSIES

POMEZIA, Italy (AP)—Pope Paul clasped his hands in time to lively mandolins and guitars as he spent nearly three hours of his 68th birthday Sunday on an unprecedented visit to a huge tent-and-trailer camp of European Gypsies. He celebrated mass for the Gypsies and greeted them as "perpetual pilgrims, voluntary exiles, wanderers without rest."

District Tomato Crop Hard Hit by Frost

Last night's heavy ground frost with temperatures in some low lying areas dropping to 28 degrees has cut short this year's tomato crop with some estimates putting the loss as high as 90 per cent of the crop still remaining in the field.

Temperatures in the Bay of Quinte area dropped to a record low for this time of year and readings of almost as low being predicted again for tonight.

Some growers supplying tomatoes to the J. Sprague and Sons canning plant at Mountain View reported today that up to 90 per cent of the tomatoes still in the field were frozen.

The factory estimate was that possibly slightly more than 50 per cent of the tomato crop has been harvested.

HEAVY GROUND FROST

At Belleville the official temperature during the night was 31 degrees but at Trenton Air Station the thermometer dropped to a low of 28.

At Mountain View there was a heavy ground frost with ice forming on the grass at an early hour this morning. And at Wellington farmers reported the mercury dropped to a low of 20 degrees.

But the air was from the north and the tempering effect of nearby Lake Ontario was of little or no benefit.

The Mountain View and Hull's Island areas were said badly hit by the frost.

In contrast one farmer on the south shore of the Bay of Quinte at Massassaga said there appeared to be little frost damage in the immediate area.

VOTES TAKEN IN

One tomato grower, George Flowers, had hundreds of bushels picked today for delivery to the factory but with the prospect of last night's frost, had the foresight to get them under cover in the barn and drive-shed.

In the city the frost spelt finish for the summer's work of more than a few flower lovers.

Late blossoming flowers were hit hard by the frost, it was stated.

SWIM CLASSES

Now, there is no excuse for 4 and 5 year old Johnny or Susie to feel sad when their older brother or sister leave for the YMCA to learn to swim. The reason is that Johnny and Susie have their own special classes with their mothers at the "Y".

This course will help the children overcome a fear of water and encourage them to float, plus the added advantage and probably the most important one to teach the children basic water safety rules.

It's a ten-lesson course twice a week for five weeks every Monday and Thursday afternoons from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Four and five year old boys and girls must be 45 inches in height and a parent must accompany his or her child into the water. It starts October 18th and ends November 18th with a film and presentation of awards.

Mrs. Nancy Jackson, a recent newcomer to Belleville from Toronto, Manitoba and Ireland teaches the classes. In the Brandon YMCA the Tiny Tot swim classes were under her supervision. She holds the Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's Certificate and will be a welcome addition to the aquatic staff of the Belleville Family YMCA.

Do register early for these classes by telephone or a visit to the "Y".

Frost Critical Of Disrespect For Empire

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — The lack of respect shown by some young persons towards the British flag was criticized and bitterly criticized by former Ontario premier Leslie Frost Sunday.

Referring to the gradual loosening of ties between Canada and the Commonwealth, Mr. Frost said: "It grieves me to see our citizens let such time-honored traditions die so easily."

He was addressing 75 veterans of the 109th Battalion holding a reunion in this community 20 miles northwest of Peterborough.

Mr. Frost said he deplores the number of young people he meets who tend to laugh off the British Empire and do not understand when he tries to tell them of its glories.

Its flag, the Union Jack, represents justice, peace and good will, he said.

Why Should You Consult a Physician?

Because you know a physician has to spend so many years at a medical school and internship in a hospital that he has learned about diseases and their treatment that you could not know. Because, when everyone but a physician advises what pill to take, they usually do not treat the cause of the trouble but only try to stop the pain or discomfort.

Similar symptoms are often present in differing medical problems, and physician, aided by new diagnostic techniques, X-rays, urinalysis, etc. can find out what is causing your trouble and prescribe the one particular medicine he decides is best for you. That is why, it is wise to go to a physician before a possible serious disease can develop.

Your doctor can phone us when you need a medicine. Pick up your prescription if shopping nearby, or we will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people entrust us with their prescriptions. May we dispense yours?

Planned Parenthood Centre Operating in Corpus Christi

By RONALD THOMPSON

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) Clutching orange identification cards, several mothers wait patiently and quietly in an office.

Methodically, the receptionist checks each woman's card, then hands her a package of 20 small pills. If the woman has $1.50, she gives it to the receptionist. If she hasn't, she gets the package anyway.

This is a planned parenthood centre. For these women, more children means still greater poverty for their families. The average applicant is 26, has five living children, a third - grade education and a family income of $33 a week.

These women pick up their birth control pills each month. The card is their prescription.

CAN'T AFFORD MORE

Most of the 2,400 patients at the centre just don't want or can't afford more babies. Some are under a doctor's orders not to become pregnant again.

The U.S. government established in February its first birth control project with a modest grant of $8,500 for four one-day-a-week neighborhood clinics. It has not been in operation long enough to fully test its effectiveness.

But the private, non - profit, planned parenthood centre, which administers the federal project, has been in existence six years, producing some startling statistics:

1. The number of live births recorded by the city's charity clinic has declined to 1,627 in 1964 from 2,159 in 1961, a drop of 24 per cent in births to indigent parents.

2. The number of post-abortion treatments at hospitals dropped to 220 from 374 during the same period and a steady decline continues.

3. The number of obstetrical cases is slightly more than half the rate of 1963, the year prior to the widespread use of oral contraceptives—the pills.

Corpus Christi, a city of about 220,000 on the Gulf of Mexico coastline, has a large population of Latin American descent —almost 40 per cent. One church official said 60 per cent of its residents are Roman Catholic.

COMPRESE MOST PATIENTS

Of the patients enrolled in the program, 86 per cent are Latin American, 10 per cent are Negroes and four per cent are Anglo-Americans.

Mrs. Tony Abarca, executive director of the program, including the federal project, cites ease after ease of children being born to large families who can't afford them.

A 35-year-old woman came to the centre recently. She had 18 living children.

"Neither she nor her husband had ever heard of any method of contraception and when she came in, she was pregnant again with her 19th child."

The centre does not advocate total birth control, but family planning. "If they want more children, we help them plan them," Mrs. Abarca said.

Record Lows for Sept. Registered Sunday Night

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TORONTO (CP)—Frost was reported in many Ontario centres early this morning as the first sign of winter swept across the province, setting low temperature marks and leaving residents shivering after an earlier heat wave.

The temperatures started to dip Saturday, but clear skies and a high of 65 were recorded in Toronto. The cold snap, caused by a high pressure area in the Lakehead region and a low, east of Hudson's Bay, moved into the province about mid-morning Sunday.

Temperatures continued to fall Sunday afternoon and by evening, the thermometer read 40 degrees in most Southern Ontario centres. Record lows for the month of September were registered late Sunday night and early Monday morning.

All the records were in the mid-30s. London temperatures dropped to a chilly 36, breaking the previous record of 38 degrees set Sept. 20, 1939.

Toronto International airport recorded a 35-degree reading, three degrees lower than the previous record set Sept. 26, 1947. Thermometers in Toronto fell to 39 degrees, equaling a record set Sept. 30, 1932.

The weather office also reported six record lows for Sept. 27.

Hamilton was the warmest of the minimum areas with a reading of 35 degrees, breaking the previous record of 36 set in 1947. Kitchener reported the coldest of the record lows with 30 degrees, four points less than the previous record in 1939.

Other records were reported in Sudbury with a reading of 36, Timmins, 21, Muskoka, 24, and Wiarton, Ont., 31.

Weather office officials said the cold snap is expected to continue through tonight and Tuesday with forecast temperatures in the low 50s, dropping to the 30s during the night.

Skies will be clear in most areas today, but clouds will move into Ontario tonight and rain is forecast for Tuesday.

10 Aquanauts Taken From Ocean Floor

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP)—Astronaut Scott Carpenter and nine fellow aquanauts rose 205 feet from Sealab 2 Sunday, so smoothly that part way through ascent Carpenter asked whether it had started.

Carpenter had completed 29 days and 14 hours in the ocean-bottom laboratory — approximately twice as long, a U.S. Navy spokesman said, as anyone else has lived under water.

His associates in team No. 2 had been below 51 days, as had team No. 1 before them.

A third team of 10 men will complete the navy's 45-day experiment in underwater living and working in the 12-by 58-foot steel capsule.

Carpenter and his teammates were hoisted in a personnel-transfer capsule to the deck of the staging vessel Berkone 1,000 yards off the California coast.

On deck the transfer capsule was mated to a decompression chamber in which the aquanauts will remain until approximately 3:45 p.m. today. Pressure inside the chamber will be gradually reduced to that of sea level.

CHANCES 'REMOTE'

He said he has been urged to seek nomination as a Progressive Conservative candidate somewhere in Quebec.

Sailor Taken To Hospital, Car Turns Over

BRIGHTON — One man was injured when a car went out of control at 8:30 p.m. Sunday on Highway 401 west of the Little Lake underpass.

Donald Hugh Richmond, 21, of H.M.C.S., Hochelaga in Montreal was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital suffering from contusions to his left leg. He was later removed to the RCAF base hospital.

The injured man was a passenger in a car driven by Wayne Jordison, 18, also of H.M.C.S., Hochelaga. The car went out of control and rolled over several times, ending up in the ditch.

Damage to the car, owned by the driver's father, Alfred Henry Jordison of Ancaster, was set at $1,300.

Heavy Damage To Two Cars In Collision

BRIGHTON — A two-car accident on No. 30 Highway near the 401 underpass Saturday at 2.20 p.m., resulted in heavy damage to one car and moderate damage to the other.

A car, driven by Donald Allan Mitchell, 36, of Tonawanda, N.Y., collided with a car driven by Francesco Difelice, 28, of Toronto.

Damage to the Difelice car was $1,200 and damage to the Mitchell car was set at $300.

Two Held for Attempted Car Theft, Taking Cameras

TRENTON — Two young men, Bradley White, 20, of Peterborough and Ronald Hein, 18, of Frankford are in custody at Hastings county jail charged with attempted car theft and theft of $1600 worth of camera equipment at Trenton Saturday night.

The men will appear in Trenton Magistrate's Court on Tuesday. The camera, equipment has been recovered.

About 11.30 Saturday night Frankford free lance photographer Ed. Strome parked his car outside the Queenway Motel and returning about midnight found the vehicle broken into and two high priced cameras, lenses, tape recorder and camera accessories missing.

About the same time two young employees at the nearby Redwood Motel happened to glance out and saw two men attempting to start their manager's car parked on the motel parking lot.

DETAINED MEN

The motel employees, Lynn Brooks of Carrying Place and Paul Newell of Belleville, called for help and detained the men who were later taken into custody by Trenton police.

An hour-and-a-half later Constable Brian Westfall of the Trenton police found Mr. Strome's camera equipment hidden in the bushes on Water Street a short distance from where it had been taken.

Plain clothes officer Sidney Vickers of the Trenton police investigated. The two men taken into custody were charged with theft of the camera equipment after comparison of fingerprints was made by an identification officer from Belleville.

Election "Shadow Boxing"

Still in its early stages, the election campaign has yet to move out of low gear. Candidates are being nominated and the electorate awaits elaboration of the parties' views on the various issues.

At last week's South Hastings Convention in Belleville, former member Lee Grills was elected Conservative candidate to oppose the Liberal.

Former Trade Minister George Hees, who will oppose Liberal Pauline Jewett in Northumberland, was the keynote speaker at the convention. Mr. Hees made it plain he was not satisfied with the government's economic policies, inferring that this would be a main plank in his own campaign.

As we have noted, though, the election has yet to warm up and the electorate has not yet heard a broad delineation of the several issues. As The Globe and Mail noted recently: "Although such major domestic matters as unemployment, the Canada Pension Plan and the war on poverty are not likely to inspire much election heat, there should be plenty of bread-and-butter issues to debate. The Conservatives and the Socialists will continue to promise old-age pensions of $100 a month payable at 65. And Mr. Diefenbaker believes, with some justice, that he will be able to make hay with his program to aid Eastern agriculture."

At the time of writing, however, The Globe felt there would be no one big issue, or two, as there was, say, in 1957 or 1963. "There is no Vision now and no Pipeline Debate to recall. The economy is in good shape (at least as far as the non-economists are concerned)." And, of course, Mr. Hees to the contrary.

"Even the Flag Debate seems long ago to most Canadians," said The Globe, adding, "only the facts remain the same, and they are all too familiar."

In short, what the electorate perceives is no/clear image of what the election is all about, but rather what The Kitchener-Waterloo Record has described as "political shadow boxing." The newspaper said this tactic "is obviously the way a good many political figures want to fight the election. They may get away with it unless the voters make plain they demand forthright discussion of the real issues."

This has been the burden of several editorials on the election campaign thus far. The public wants a clear presentation of the facts and of the issues, but at this early stage the man-in-the-street simply has not yet got the message from the candidates.

Toronto Discovery

It is difficult to think of Toronto in terms other than those relating to one of the fastest-growing cities in North America. There is the new City Hall for example, and what could be more modern than this very modern brainchild of a Finnish architect?

The city's reputation as a business and financial centre; its freeways, stores and restaurants all contribute to the image of a city in the modern North American tradition.

But Toronto's roots go back far beyond the bounds of the present age to prehistoric times, more than to the Indians and certainly long before any white man set foot on this continent.

And yet, how strange it is that the physical evidence of these early times is often no more than a few feet under the ground we tread. The latest discovery of this nature is a fossil bed located just north of Steeles Avenue and about a mile east of Highway 27 leading north from Toronto to Barrie.

Containing plant fossils believed to be some 50,000 years old, the area was actually uncovered three years ago when workmen were excavating a cut through a Canadian National railway line. At that time it was revealed only to a small group of scientists to keep the site free of curious people.

Exploration of the area following the discovery showed relics of the last ice age when giant glaciers scraped across the land. Among the artifacts found was a mammoth tooth estimated to be 50,000 years old. According to Dr. Paul Karrow of the University of Waterloo, from the grass growing on top to the last layer at the foot is the geological history of the past 100,000 years.

The site was made public only last week when it was inspected by geologists, botanists and zoologists from Europe and North and South America.

We are witnessing the development of a new, larger, third class in our society whose instincts are the instincts of a human jungle. These are people facing life without hope that it means anything more than a precarious existence, for without education there are no steps for them to climb out of the gloom.—Fairfax M. Cone, trustee of the University of Chicago.

The highly fashionable and the absolutely vulgar are but two faces of the common coin of humanity.—H. G. Wells.

To Your Good Health
Five Years of Psychiatric Treatment Quite Unusual

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been seeing a psychiatrist for five years. I never realized that treatment took that long.

When I ask the doctor if he thinks I will get well, he says, "I don't know." This is quite discouraging, but I don't want to give up. Perhaps you can enlighten me.

I am a grandmother. — Mrs. M. S.

* * *

Your letter doesn't give me very much to go on, but two or three important points may be of some enlightenment, either to you or to others.

First, such extended psychiatric treatment is not typical. A great deal of good accomplished by psychiatry is the result of rather brief periods of treatment.

Second, much depends on the nature of the emotional illness or disturbance. Just as with physical problems, some emotional ailments clear up rather readily, while others take diabetes, pernicious anemia or cancer as examples) never are cured but require continued treatment to keep patients as active and comfortable as possible for the rest of their lives.

Third, a patient's will to recover is important, whether the illness is physical or emotional, although it is usually more important in the latter. A psychiatrist can't just make a patient well. What he can do is open doors through which the patient can pass if the desire is there.

Without knowing something about your particular problem, I can't guess whether this last point applies to you. It may not. Your condition may be such that you need constant emotional support from your psychiatrist.

* * *

Remember that in psychiatric treatment a complete cure is a will-o-the wisp as a rule because emotional illness severe enough to require great care is rather bound to leave some scars, just as a physical wound of any severity may be successfully repaired and yet leave permanent scars.

Don't expect a psychiatrist to provide you with a whole new personality, but rather to help you sufficiently so your problem no longer prevents you from functioning in life.

Patients who have had a severe stroke or a terribly shattered leg or hip don't expect to play tennis or be ballet dancers. They may always limp, but it is better to walk with a limp than not to walk at all.

In psychiatry the real triumph often is that the patient, even with an emotional "limp," is able to "walk."

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes bleomrate uterus? My tubes and ovaries are normal. —Mrs. S.

This is the result of faulty development, a defect of nature.

As the fetus (unborn child) is developing, ordinarily two ducts fuse together to form one uterus and birth canal. Through some quirk, they may not fuse correctly. Several possibilities result: A double uterus, two vaginal tracts, and other variants.

This has nothing to do with tubes and ovaries, which can be entirely normal. Pregnancy is possible with this defect.

Note to Mrs. McC: Piles and hemorrhoids are the same thing. Don't be so frightened by surgery. There will be a none painful days after the operation, but getting rid of the trouble is worth the discomfort.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 27, 1965 . . .

General William Howe of the British forces occupied Philadelphia 188 years ago today—in 1777—instead of advancing northward to join Gen. Burgoyne's army. As a result the northern British column had to surrender at Saratoga. However the rebel American army, deprived of Philadelphia, had to winter at Valley Forge, where the hardships made easier an attempt to remove George Washington from the American command. Five months later France recognized and began aiding the rebels and Washington's starved army began the drive for victory and independence.

1829 — Mount Ararat was first climbed by Johann Jacob von Parrot.

1910 — 3,000 were killed by the biggest typhoon in modern Japanese history.

Uranium Has Fair Prospects

Montreal Gazette

Prime Minister Pearson has announced that the negotiations to sell large quantities of uranium to France have ended in failure.

In the short-run, the loss of this sale is a misfortune. The Canadian uranium industry has been in the doldrums for several years, involving considerable hardship for some communities. It is particularly unfortunate, from Prime Minister Pearson's point of view, that his constituency is especially affected, and that he had to make the announcement when the election campaign was in progress.

In the long-run, however, the future is bright for the uranium industry. At the 5 years pass there will be a growing demand for this mineral, of which Canada holds some 35 per cent of the Western world's known resources. Canada will inevitably benefit as more and more countries need uranium for peaceful purposes, such as electric power production.

It is unfortunate that the uranium deal with France has fallen through. But this was not unexpected, and it should not hurt the long-range prospects for Canadian uranium.

Strictly Personal
Capitalism Working To Kill Self

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

History is filled with awesome ironies — each one trend seems to spring out of its opposite. And, as yet, we are nowhere near reconciling the opposites in our own age.

The United States, for example, is the model of modern capitalism. It is also the progenitor of industrialism and technology. One out of every four scientific inventions and medical discoveries in our time has been American.

Yet the cold, implacable fact seems to be that the more technological progress we make, the less capitalistic we are forced to become. This may be the towering irony of the 20th century.

Marx predicted (wrongly) that capitalism would dig its own grave by increasing poverty and oppressing the masses. Exactly the opposite has happened: the masses have never been better off, in wealth, in health, in public and private services.

This affluence has been the fruit of our technological and industrial system. The production is expanding, urban areas are growing, automation will make many forms of labor obsolete, our broadening educational system is giving new aspirations to millions.

At the same time, the problems generated by these benefits are so vast, complex and inter-related that we are compelled more and more to rely upon the government to administer and regulate them.

All institutions are becoming larger and more centralized, by the sheer added weight of size and numbers. Our major social problems are interlocking — medical care, traffic congestion, water supply, air pollution, poverty and welfare programs, education and employment.

These are some aspects of the enormous genie that capitalism has let out of the bottle and no longer seems able to control. It is not primarily a political matter, but a demographic one: more people, living longer, expecting more, crowded together, outgrowing facilities as fast as they are provided.

Neither the traditional conservatives nor the traditional liberals can cope adequately with these problems, because both are still using an outmoded political framework. We can neither return to 19th century laissez-faire capitalism, nor can we accept the crude socialism of the Marxist doctrinaires. Both dogmas are increasingly irrelevant to the 20th century.

We need a profound and widespread rethinking of our total situation, in the light of the atomic bomb, the population explosion, the shattering diminution of time and space in the modern world.

And all we hear are outworn slogans from Moscow to Washington and back.

Unity Theme Haunts Election Trail

—The Globe and Mail—

As they launch themselves into the 1965 election campaign, both Conservatives and Liberals are showing a marked tendency to oversimplify the issues which confronted the Canadian people during the 1962 election.

The Conservatives are anxious to put about the notion that the main issue was whether or not Canada should accept nuclear arms, and that it was on this issue only that the Conservatives themselves divided. This would be handy for them, because the nuclear issue is ended; and if that was all they fought about, their present reconciliations would be more convincing.

The Liberals are willing to agree that the chief 1964 issue was disunity in the Conservative party, but not only on the nuclear issue. To concentrate on Conservative disunity is a useful cover for their own disunity.

Both parties are leaving out a few facts. Although the nuclear issue precipitated the 1963 election, it shortly ceased to be of importance in any platform debate, not of the New Democratic Party. The Conservatives were divided on much more than nuclear arms; they split because Prime Minister John Diefenbaker insisted on one-man government, because between the 1962 and 1963 elections he had failed to do much governing of any kind, and because some of them thought they could dump him.

But disunity was not confined to the Conservative Party, as The Globe and Mail commented at the time. The Liberals, not only believers for left and right, and some had no philosophy except cynical political opportunism.

These seeds of division have produced spectacular fruit, as we have seen in early translated, on the heels of patronage charges, to the Senate. Former Liberal Senator Bertrand Pertois to Yvon Dupuis left for an appointment with a court about disbursement charges. Mr. Guy Rouleau, parliamentary secretary to the Prime Minister, resigned after Mr. Justice Frederic Dorion criticized his behavior in the Rivard affair. Mr. Edmond Asselin decided not to stand for the Liberals after a number of people found his land dealings with the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal unacceptable.

Then there have been, of course, the three recent departures from Mr. Kelly's motive was clear; he preferred hockey. But those expressed by Mr. Maurice Bricker, the York-Scarboro and Speaker Allan Macnaughton are less convincing, and one can suspect they are dissatisfied with the Liberal Group.

Which party was it that wished to dwell on disunity?

Certainly, however Conservatives serve the country, however they may serve their own political purposes, by trying to paint a false picture of 1963. Today grows out of yesterday. What, then, were the real issues in 1963?

The state of the economy was the principal one, and the Liberal Government had done about it. The exchange crisis of 1962 had been temporarily alleviated by temporary measures; a natural upturn in the business cycle had begun. But the international balance of payments remained seriously in deficit, the budget was shaped by the deficit climate and no new budget had been brought down, which was another issue; no permanent measures had been taken to improve the exchange position. International business lacked confidence in Canada, unemployment continued serious.

Another important issue was Canada-United States relations and U.S. involvement in the Canadian election (an involvement he denied but later boasted of) by some U.S. Government officials as the decisive factor in the Diefenbaker defeat.

What has changed?

The Canadian economy is now running ahead so strongly that Prime Minister Lester Pearson believes it in danger of overheating. Mr. Pearson and Finance Minister Walter Gordon have altered relations with the United States but it is a moot question if they have improved them. The Canadian business community is at least as scared of Mr. Gordon in 1965 as it was of Mr. Diefenbaker in 1963, and the international business community has its doubts too. Our international balance of payments is still dangerously in deficit. Nobody has proved, though, that Mr. Diefenbaker has put aside indecision for decision.

The thing only remains certainly with us. The campaign trail of '65 is as littered with political giveaway promises as that of '63.

Work Is What the Kids Need

—Vulcan (Alta.) Advocate—

Today's teen-agers complain a lot about having to say "no" and "no place to go." Well, Judge Philip B. Gilliam of Denver's Juvenile Court has a suggestion for them:

"Get over-age, go home!"

Gilliam, who in 1963 was voted "outstanding juvenile court judge" and who has handled over 10,000 juvenile delinquency cases, has been giving high school graduates in Colorado and Wyoming some pointed advice lately. He said:

"Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teen-ager: 'What can we do? Where can we go?'

"The answer is, go home!

"Hang the storm windows. Paint the woodwork. Rake the leaves. Mow the lawn. Shovel the walk. Wash the car. Learn to cook. Scrub some floors. Repair the sink. Build a boat. Get a job.

"Help the minister, priest or rabbi, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick. Assist the poor. Study your lessons. Read a book—even one through—and not too tired —read a book.

Judge Gilliam, who is 56 and father of "today's children are not allowed to work at odd jobs such as I had when I was a kid. Most of them get too much, too soon. The ones who don't have enough work to do don't get a chance at decent jobs."

But this is no excuse for the teen-ager to say that he has "nothing to do," he adds. Gilliams tells teen-agers:

"You owe nobody—not even your entertainment. Your village does not owe you recreation facilities. The world does not owe you a living.

"But you owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and your talents so that no one will have to go hungry, or sick, or lonely again.

In plain simple words, grow up. Quit being a cry-baby. Get out of your dream world and do a hard, hardening job of wishbone, and start acting like a man or lady."

Gilliam notes that teen-agers who keep begging for "benefits" are old enough to take on the "responsibilities."

If they're mature enough to demand privileges, he says, they're mature enough to accept some of the responsibilities their parents have been carrying for years.

Most teen-agers, Gilliam adds, are good prospective citizens. "Three per cent of these children get into trouble, 97 per cent don't," he points out.

Divorce Code Under Fire

—Vancouver Province—

News that the Anglican Church is considering revising its laws on divorce under which it refuses to remarry divorced persons, once more underlines the need for a new discussion of divorce in Canada.

At present adultery is the only ground for divorce in this country, with exception of some provinces in which provincial legislation has been somewhat wider grounds for dissolving the marriage bonds.

Year after year the question of widening Canadian divorce laws is raised in Parliament and just as regularly ducked by members of all parties. Only a few intelligent and determined MPs to carry on crusade for recognition of the fact the divorce code is hopelessly unrealistic and out of date.

These MPs argue that present laws force many unhappy Canadians to live under intolerable conditions created by spouses who are cruel, drunken, insane or who have deserted. This makes a mockery of marriage and focuses on those involved to conspire to make false charges of adultery in order to get free to indulge in adulterous relationships to obtain their freedom.

The present law brings the courts themselves into disrepute and puts the judges in a false position. By no stretch of the imagination does it preserve marriage or prevent divorce. It only makes hypocrites of many unions or forces the parties involved to perjure themselves to circumvent the law.

How much longer must Canada preserve this pitiful pretence that our divorce laws are shielding the sanctity of the home and preserving marriage? When will we have a government courageous and honest enough to face reality and scrap our hypocritical and outdated divorce statutes?

Construction and Automobile Industry Glowing With Wealth

By KEN SMITH
CP Business Editor

Two short - term economic indicators, construction and the automobile industry, are glowing with health.

The total dollar value of construction contracts awarded in the first eight months of this year is a record $3,482,790,000, a 21.4-per-cent increase over the similar 1964 period when the previous record was set, the statistical bulletin of the Southam Building Guide reports.

All five construction categories and three of the five geographical regions showed total increases from 1964, the bulletin says.

A major factor in the increases has been the gain in so-called big jobs—construction contracts worth $1,000,000 or more. So far this year they total $1,636,700,000, up 30.1 per cent from 1964's $1,363,300,000.

The bulletin gives this breakdown on contracts by class, with 1964 figure in brackets:

Residential $973,536,700 ($804,381,900); business $762,819,700 ($457,641,300); institutional $618,805,900 ($485,026,900); industrial $440,841,300); institutional $618,805,900 ($485,026,900); industrial $440,841,300); institutional $618,805,900 ($485,026,900); industrial $440,841

Newspaper Strike Affects Lives of New Yorkers

By RALEIGH ALLSBROOK

NEW YORK (AP) — A film star flies from Europe to publicize a new picture and finds most newspapers closed . . . models advertise in store windows . . . a mayor campaign hampered . . . blind newspaper vendors begin closing their stands . . . a rent moratorium.

These are some of the happenings in the largest U.S. city as a result of its 11-day-long newspaper strike.

Although the tieup has not lasted long enough to make a serious dent in the city's economy, its effects are widespread.

Funeral homes are hard-pressed to inform the public of deaths. Employment agencies can't advertise jobs.

"Hundreds of people haven't been able to get work because of the situation," one agency official said. "It's very bad, both for us and the job applicants."

Two of the candidates in the mayoral campaign, Democrat Abraham D. Beame and Republican J. Lindsay, made plain of difficulty in getting their views over to voters.

Radio and television broadcasters have stepped up their news output and some columnists formerly carried in the papers now are read on the air.

USE SUBURBAN PAPERS

Big national advertisers, searching for alternate means of getting their products across have stepped up advertising in suburban newspapers.

Department stores, a major victim of the strike, used the newspaper strike, report losses in some cases, none in others.

Stern's, a large department store, is employing models to work in the store windows and list special sales items on large blackboards. Customers also receive handbills when they enter the store.

Box office receipts at the legitimate theatres are holding up.

Hard hit, however, are the 300 blind workers who operate newsstands throughout the city. Many have been forced to close down.

Haym Topol, an Israeli film star, flew here from Europe to help publicize his new picture, Salish, made in Israel.

"He cancelled at least $150,000 in engagements to come here," a representative said. "We planned a big splash in the papers. Then when he got here, he found only one paper in operation."

Florists report they also are feeling the effects. People don't read about deaths and so flowers aren't sent to funerals.

TRADING HASN'T DROPPED

Stock market trading hasn't suffered. Brokers are distributing market information by leaflets at stations and through telephone recordings. Two business newspapers, The Wall Street Journal and The Journal of Commerce, are publishing.

One landlord who operates 320 middle income apartment dwellings in the metropolitan New York area has declared a rent moratorium for newspaper personnel and others directly affected by the dispute.

Samuel Z. Lefrak, the landlord, did the same in the 114-day strike in 1962-63. He said all of the tenants he assisted later repaid their obligations.

The New York Post has jumped its press run to 750,000, nearly double its normal circulation. The Herald Tribune, which resumed publishing today, had planned to increase its regular weekday circulation of 307,000, but said wholesale distributors can called orders for extra newspapers.

Time and Newsweek, two news magazines, have sharply stepped up newsstand supplies in the New York area.

A spokesman for The Wall Street Journal said its press run has jumped by about 130,000. The newspaper normally prints 300,000 copies for the entire eastern seaboard.

Several new tabloid-size papers also have appeared on newsstands since the tie-up began.

Solution Is Seen

sickbed. So is West Germany, which has contributed $100,000,000 a year without getting much in return, since it has no farm exports to speak of.

Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's government has endorsed Speak's proposal. It is apparently ready, now that the West German election is over, for the necessary bargaining about its future contribution.

Erhard's spokesman said the treaty setting up the Common Market provides for meetings of the foreign ministers without the commission's presence, although usually the commission takes an important part.

STRESS POINT

The spokesman emphasized that Erhard's government wants to stick close to the treaty. This insistence apparently will not prevent its joining a "provisional agreement" to nullify one important provision—if it has not already done so.

This is the clause providing that from Jan. 1, 1966, most important matters are to be settled in the council by a majority vote. It would eliminate the veto that all members now enjoy. It would allow France, West Germany or any other member to be out-voted. De Gaulle objects strongly. The West Germans don't like it much either.

As matters stand now some officials believe that the French and West German governments already have a quiet agreement not to allow one member to be out-voted. More light on this would be shed at a foreign ministers' conference.

TRAINEES ARRIVE

CENTRALIA, Ont. (CP) — Thirty there Tanzanian and Malaysian air force trainees have arrived at the Centralia RCAF station, near London, Ont. The trainees—pilots and technical officers — will be trained by the RCAF under arrangements made recently by the Canadian government and the governments of Tanzania and Malaysia.

The sport coupe has a dramatic new roofline which distinguishes the Grand Parisienne from the rest of the Pontiac line. Grande Parisienne has a luxurious interior, with wood-trimmed instrument panel and steering wheel, and Strato-bucket seats in the sport coupe. New grilles, bumpers, hoods and fenders mark the style change for all Pontiacs and from the roofline back they are completely redesigned. Among new mechanical achievements is a fully-synchronized manual transmission which allows a shift into low without stopping. A new three-speed automatic transmission is also available. The line also introduces new engines and an increased power range.

Labor Party

might have rifled the left-wingers, brought a round of applause from the delegates gathered in Blackpool to debate issues as foreign policy, the national economic plan and the touchy immigration curbs which have aroused strong opposition within the party's own ranks.

Nevertheless the mood of the conference in its opening session suggested Prime Minister Wilson will be able to ride out left-wing criticism and carry the conference with relative ease.

For example, the national executive, on the eve of the conference, reached agreement on a number of policy positions which coincided with Wilson's own views.

On Viet Nam, the executive called for an end to U.S. bombing in North Viet Nam but also backed on North Viet Nam to halt its aid to The Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

This had damaged the Wilson denounce the U.S. bombing policy but Wilson has resisted. It appeared his position would be upheld by the party when it votes Tuesday.

But the government's decision to restrict non-white immigration may be more difficult to uphold. A number of resolutions from various delegations condemned the policy as a surrender to the conservative viewpoint.

This annual conference meets with the party in office for the first time in 14 years. But after almost a year of political power, some sections among the 1,000 voting delegates are expressing more disgruntlement than delight.

Sunday afternoon, some early arrivals, chiefly leaders of technicians and white-collar unions, staged a protest meeting "to alert the labor movement of the damaging consequences of the government's proposals to fetter the unions" by its wage-control policy. There was also an anti-nuclear demonstration.

On the left, traditionally the most vocal section, there is public grumbling that Prime Minister Wilson's regime has been too conservative in foreign affairs, defence, economics and social welfare.

Resolutions on the agenda condemn the government for its full support of the United States in Viet Nam, for shelving plans to nationalize steel, for keeping nuclear weapons, restricting immigration and lagging on social welfare.

Condemning Economic Affairs Minister George Brown's plan to restrain wages and prices is the big Transport and General Workers Union, of which Brown and Technology Minister Frank Cousins are members.

The prices and incomes policy, approved narrowly earlier this month by the Trades Union Congress, is expected to win approval here despite formidable opposition.

Party leaders will give formal defences of the government's foreign affairs and economic policies in debates Wednesday and Thursday.

But opposition to government proposals to curb immigration from Commonwealth countries is 8,500 a year from about 14,000 last year is rallying among substantial cross-section of delegates. Twenty - six emergency resolutions criticizing immigration policy have been entered by constituency parties.

The leadership's main weapon against all critics within the party is the general awareness that too much dissension could imperil Labor's tenuous, two-vote hold on parliamentary power.

SUSPECT ARSON

HAMILTON (CP) — Police suspect arson in eight fires which drove residents from their apartment building early Sunday. "There is no doubt it's arson," said District Fire Chief Guy Porter. "The fire is similar to 12 others in the town during the summer."

when Indian troops opened fire with artillery, tanks, recoilless rifles and small arms near a small canal separating the two sides southwest of the city.

"As a result of this action, the local Pakistani commander claims to have suffered a number of casualties in killed, wounded and missing," Theet said.

FIGHT IN KASHMIR

Heavy fighting was also reported between "freedom fighters" in Kashmir, who say they were not bound by the truce, and Indian troops.

Both nations agreed last week to heed a Security Council call for a ceasefire in their undeclared, 22 - day - old war over ownership of divided Kashmir. The truce went into effect a dawn Thursday.

It was to be followed by withdrawal of both sides to positions they held before the fighting broke out Aug. 5. Thant said India had ignored a request Saturday to pull back its forces and Pakistan had refused to do so until India agreed.

India said it has 5 to 6 thousand square miles of Pakistani territory and lost 250 square miles during the fighting.

Sketchy reports reaching New Delhi from the front indicated local commanders were trying to grab advantageous positions before large numbers of UN observers arrive to patrol the ceasefire line.

Famed 'It' Girl, Clara Bow, Dies In Culver City

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Clara Bow, famed "It" girl of silent movie fame, died early today in her secluded home in suburban Culver City.

Relatives in Nevada said Miss Bow died of an apparent heart attack, but added they were not certain of the cause of death.

Miss Bow, 60, flaming-haired star of dozens of early-day movies, had lived in virtual seclusion in the Los Angeles area since her separation from cowboy actor Rex Bell, more than a decade ago.

To a generation of moviegoers in the 1920s, Miss Bow was the incandescent symbol of the flapper, of emancipated woman, of "It"—sex appeal.

Miss Bow's brief but flamboyant career was attended by a notoriety in marked contrast to the seclusion to which she retired in later years.

After a career that included such films as Rough House Rosie, Get Your Man, Red Hair, The Fleet's In, The Wild Party, Three Week Ends, Saturday Night Kid, True to the Navy, Her Wedding Night, and No Limited, she married Bell, her "swell fella," Dec. 4, 1931.

SAFE
UNQUESTIONABLY! OIL HEAT
Fuel oil is non-explosive.
You could actually extinguish a lighted match in it with complete safety.
And this is only one of the reassuring advantages of oil heating.

Non-explosive heating oil burns only when atomized and ignited inside the sealed combustion chamber of your furnace. You have no worries about safety, or about interruptions in your fuel supply. Safely stored within your home you have your own oil supply, automatically maintained by the oil dealer of your choice, who gives you personalized, no-cost service. All modern fuels are safe, of course, if handled with proper care. Oil, however, is safe under all conditions.

Clean—extraordinarily! Dark streaks above vents and radiators occur with all systems—oil, gas, electricity—but not because of the heating fuel. The cause is dust and grime entering the house and circulating in heated air.

Less cost—continuously! Depending on where you live, you can save $50 or more every year on fuel bills by choosing oil instead of gas—and save much, much more by choosing oil instead of electricity.

A home with safe, clean, dependable oil heat is a more valuable home. Insist on oil heat when you buy or build.

Americans' Massive Ignorance Of Canada Indicated by Study

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Americans display an "appalling ignorance about Canada" which should be attacked next year in a special campaign, says a study prepared by 11 Republican members of the House of Representatives.

Make 1966 "the year of a new awareness of Canada," says the report, listing 26 recommendations. They include a larger role for the International Joint Commission, established in 1909 to deal with boundary-water problems; more independence for Canadian subsidiaries of American firms; more student and other exchanges; closer examination of freer trade and a continental approach to water resources.

Group spokesman Stanley R. Tupper of Maine says the report, commissioned last June, is an effort to "put some meat on the bones" of the study requested last year by Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson.

That report made public in June was by Arnold Heeney, twice Canada's ambassador here and now head of the joint commission's Canadian section, and Livingstone Merchant, twice U.S. ambassador to Canada.

It received some critical reviews in Canada on grounds it suggested that Canada keep quiet when it differs with United States foreign policy.

REPUBLICANS OBJECT

The Republican white paper, quoting the offending section which suggests Canada "avoid so far as possible public disagreements especially on critical issues," objects to this view.

Says the report, lauding Canada's influence for peace at the United Nations and its prolonged efforts for world disarmament: "Surely the history of the post-war years has demonstrated that a Canadian foreign policy independent on many issues from U.S. leadership has proven an invaluable source of strength to the very causes to which U.S. foreign policy is dedicated."

It deals extensively with proposals for broadening the role of the International Joint Commission and chides President Johnson for having left the U.S. chairmanship vacant for more than a year.

Lake Michigan should be brought under the jurisdiction of the commission, as the other four Great Lakes are, and the IJC should be authorized to consider and make recommendations on continental development of energy and water, as well as technical aspects of Canada-U.S. foreign policy issues.

Some other main recommendations:

Preparation by the U.S. commerce department of suggested operating rules for American business in Canada; measures to let Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. firms participate in Canadian trade without violating the American trading with the Enemy Act.

No limit on Canadian immigration from Canada, as is now contained in a bill before Congress.

With improvement in the U.S. balance of payments position, serious consideration to raising and eventually removing the duty-free limit on goods brought back from Canada by American visitors.

High Priests of Finance Gather in Washington to Discuss Money and Credit

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The high priests of international finance are gathered here for a week's discussions on the chain-grain system of money and credit evolved since the Second World War.

Canada, as one of the top 10 sources of monetary reserves and international credit in the world outside the Communist bloc, plays a major role.

The main event is the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund, something of an afterthought when the World Bank was created in 1946, but now a much more publicized organization.

Finance Minister Gordon and Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada head the Canadian delegation to the annual meetings of both organizations, which coincide.

But no expects major decisions to be made this week.

The debate has concerned the adequacy of the supply of money and credit available for expanding trade and other international transactions. It has been complicated by some political manoeuvring.

Henry Fowler, U.S. treasury secretary, announced this summer the United States favors a world conference on the supply of money and credit.

KEEP OTHERS OUT

Generally Europeans are inclined to favor keeping negotiations within the group of 10 rather than bringing in all 102 members of the International Monetary Fund.

The group of 10 will be continuing its studies before and after this week's formal sessions. The 10 are Canada, the United States, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Sweden and Japan.

The monetary fund operates as a source of reserve credit for countries in trouble.

The American dollar and the British pound have been main sources of international money and credit but with the suggestion that more supplies must be available, a sort of international monetary unit backed by various sound national currencies is being discussed. Canada favors reform.

The World Bank dispenses loans to under-developed countries—$10,000,000,000 so far.

Total subscriptions to the World Bank are $23,400,000,000. Canada's share is $810,000,000 of which $81,000,000 has been paid in. This is the sixth largest of any of the 102 members.

Canadian firms have won orders worth more than $170,000,000 through World Bank loans, and there are 85 Canadians working for the bank out of a total staff of 1,104. The senior man is Morton Mendels of Montreal, now bank secretary.

Ann Landers
Hour a Night Limit For Phone Talk-fest

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband just handed me your column which carried the heading: "Sexless Wife Needs A Doctor and A Prescription." He said, "Here, read this. It fits you to a T."

I agree with you, Ann — marriage without sex is neither normal nor happy, but there's always more to it than appears on the surface.

My husband is too busy, too important and too indifferent to take any responsibility for his children, the house or me. I am mother and father, housekeeper, cook, chauffeur, laundress, gardener, nurse, sewer inspector, furnace and TV repairman.

ANN LANDERS

I need two operations. I have severe headaches. I'm going through the menopause. I'm on the verge of a nervous breakdown. If you say a woman in my condition should be a jolly playmate to a man who shows no interest in being a husband or a father I'll eat this newspaper. — SEXLESS WIFE FROM SCRANTON.

DEAR WIFE: I'm not going to say anything except that I hope you will make an appointment with a physician at once and then do as he tells you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I suppose you will say we got ourselves into this, and you are right, but we need help and are counting on you to give it to us.

Our 16-year-old daughter is an attractive, peppy, popular girl. In fact, she's too popular. She discovered the telephone at age 14. After that it became virtually impossible for anyone to get our line. Out of frustration we gave her a telephone of her own for Christmas.

Almost immediately her grades began to slide. Her last report card was the worst one she has ever brought home. She almost flunked two subjects.

Every night this week she has been on the phone till almost midnight. The telephone has become such an important part of her life we are afraid to take it away from her. You once wrote "A telephone is more than communication, it is an emotional outlet." Please tell us how to handle this. — FRANTIC PARENTS.

DEAR FRANTIC: Your daughter is obviously trying for permanent possession of the Bell Trophy. You'd better set up some controls before she leaves the real world completely.

No teen-ager should be permitted to yak endlessly even if the phone is her own. Tell her the limit is one hour on school nights and two hours on weekends. She can spend all her time with the opposite party, or she can talk to 12 different people. Let her know that if she breaks the rules you'll yank the phone.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and his sister were orphaned early and raised by an aunt and uncle who have a great deal of money. Both of us were married at 18 and both of us lucky to have landed that rich one." Now I almost wish I had landed a poor one.

My aunt and uncle use their money as a club. They let my husband and his sister know that if they fall out of favor it could be mighty costly "in a few years." When uncle told us how to vote in the last game close to telling him what he could do with his money and his candidate.

When I see my husband butter up his uncle it makes me lose respect for him. Yet I find myself carefully choosing words for fear I will alienate them and perhaps spoil things for my husband. Please tell me how to deal with the situation. — RELUCTANT SYCOPHANT.

DEAR SYC: Why don't you behave as if these people were often broke? You'll then end up with your self-respect, if nothing else.

* * *

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect from Marriage," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Court Psychologist Says Too Much Emphasis Being Placed on Sex Education

By MARGARET SCHERF

CHICAGO (AP) — Too much emphasis on sex education and insufficient training in other aspects of life are making American girls unfit for marriage, says a court psychologist whose job is saving marriages.

"They're brought up to think all they need is their female-ness, which often turns out to be helplessness, hesitancy and indecisiveness," Dr. I. A. Burch, director of the divorce conciliation service for Illinois circuit court, said in an interview.

Burch counsels couples seeking divorces whose marriages the court thinks might be saved with psychologist help.

Many divorces, he said, can be blamed on wives who have "been brought up to feel they have the right to expect a man to guarantee them an easy life simply because they're female."

How do they get this notion?

"Too much stress on sex education and not enough stress on personal education," said Burch.

CAN'T MEET CHALLENGE

"All the emphasis is on their being sexual partners," he said. "They aren't encouraged to develop themselves any other way. They aren't taught to take care of themselves, to accept responsibility, to meet challenges instead of resorting to selling their femaleness."

The obsessive concern with sex education, he said, gives girls a bizarre outlook.

"They believe that sex is love. This is absurd. An obvious condition of life is that one be deserving of it. And this comes from self-realization in other areas than sex."

Burch's remedy:

"Stop stressing sex education and start stressing personal education, the development of inner resources, the discovery of self from which love for others is born."

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE VERNON LaBRASH

LaBrash — Went

Joan Anne West and Wayne Vernon LaBrash were married recently in St. James' Anglican Church, Orillia, when the Rev. Ross C. Crighton officiated. Mr. Gerald Death was organist and accompanied the soloist, Miss Sondra Starsmeare.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. West, Orillia, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George LaBrash of Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of peau de soie with Empire waistline and A-line skirt. The back of the skirt was highlighted with a flowing train, while the front of the dress featured appliqued flowers. An elbow-length veil of tulle with scalloped edging flowed from a peau de soie rose with flower insert. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses, Shasta daisies and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Karen Went, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Erie Snoddon and Miss Dianne Went, were gowned alike in street-length dresses of mint green peau de sole featuring the Empire line and A-line skirts. Miss Janice Went as junior bridesmaid wore a gold peau de soie dress with bow trim on the Empire waistline. The attendants carried bouquets of yellow and bronze mums. Their headdresses were peau de soie roses with short veils to match the color of their dresses.

Mr. Ken LaBrash of Kingston attended his brother, while Mr. Raymond LaBrash, another brother from Bramales and Mr. Jim Stewart of Belleville were the ushers.

For the reception the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a dress and matching jacket of French blue ribbon brocade with mink stole, brown accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother also greeted the guests wearing a mink color jacket dress of brocade with brown and white feather hat and a corsage of yellow Sweetheart roses.

For a honeymoon trip to Montreal and the Maritimes the bride wore a two-piece suit of aqua wool with matching hat, black patent accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

The couple will live at 4200 Riverside Drive, Windsor.

Sister Advises Nuns To Stop Hiding Behind Their Habits

TORONTO (CP)—Nuns must stop hiding behind their habits and become more individualistic if they are to play their role properly in the 20th century, a nun from Buffalo, N.Y., said Saturday.

Sister Mary Paula, dean of student affairs of Rosary Hill College in Buffalo, was addressing 100 nuns representing 30 orders from Canada and the United States. They were in Toronto for the weekend to take a hard look at their religious vocation.

"In being deferential, lay people are protecting the nun as a child," Sister Mary Paula said.

"In not disagreeing with her, they are assuming she is so on a new pedestal, offer a ride unperfect she cannot possibly to church to someone without be offended. They are often other means of transportation, convinced that she is too naive volunteer to baby sit for some-in the ways of everyday life one to enable them to attend and too timid to take care of evening services.

CREATES BLOCK

Sister Mary Paula said the feeling that the nun's life is oppressively formal and restrictive has created a psychological block in the minds of young girls, discouraging them from entering religious orders.

"Of course we cannot all become rugged individualists or we should have chaos in our convents. But we must be individuals within the lines of our conventions."

Mr. George Macdonald Parke regional director of the Theresians in Toronto, told the assembly she felt the psychological block is caused by the color of their habit.

"Black and white is depressing. I would like to see all the sisters of the world dressed in blue and white with a red heart."

Iris Stotesbury, president, opened the September meeting of St. Columba's Presbyterian Women. Nancy Burke conducted the devotional period.

Community work as a Christian contribution was the subject under discussion. Marna Devolin asked each member to complete a questionnaire regarding little deeds of kindness which can be done at home by good neighbors and good Christians. Examples were: call on a new neighbor, offer a ride to church to someone without volunteer to baby sit for someone to enable them to attend evening services.

Vivian Butterill and June Dunsmore reported on the Christmas cake project and urged all to obtain orders for cakes before the next meeting.

Mary Lou Willis and Dorothy Kidd will convene the rummage sale to be held later this month.

The treasurer's report showed the strawberry fair was a financial success.

June Dunsmore and Iris Stotesbury will convene the refreshment committee for the evening anniversary service on October 17.

The group will request a visit from Miss Hilda Hermanson during world missions weekend, October 23 and 24. Margaret Taylor and Marna Devolin offered to open their homes for coffee parties, so all can attend and meet the missionaries.

It was decided to send a letter of thanks to Mr. James Dallas, who is building the cupboards in the church kitchen. Mr. Dallas is donating a great deal of time and effort to this project.

Some Dating Good Marriage Preparation

DEAR DORIS: Is it abnormal to be 20 years old and not date? My two girl friends and I are 20 and we have never dated, simply because we don't want to.

Of course everyone thinks it's quite odd. We want a career first. We do want to be married eventually, however. — NO DATES.

THANK YOU.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR NO DATES: Are the grapes a little sour? It does seem a bit odd for you to choose to separate yourselves from the boys. And it is bad planning!

Unless your career was to be in a convent you and your ambitious pals should be equipping yourselves to select a husband later by dating now. Besides, the selection narrows alarmingly once you are in your twenties.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: We will be overseas for a three year term, and I would like your help in planning a suitable wardrobe for travel, as well as while overseas. — SOLDIER'S WIFE.

* * *

DEAR WIFE: If you are going to Europe, take a raincoat! I say that feelingly. Include also a tailored suit, a top coat, two tailored blouses, two dressy blouses, afternoon dresses, at least one formal, a sweater and skirt. For hose wear, dark cotton or sheers, slacks or slims — whatever you enjoy wearing around the house. I'm sending you my leaflet "Dressing and Tipping on a Cruise". (Available to readers for 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Resolve right now to make the most of your stay on foreign soil. Start right in to learn the language and get the children talking it. Learn the traditions, see the historical and cultural sights and treasures.

Make friends of the nationals wherever you are and come back with your horizons tremendously broadened.

* * *

Note to G.G.: Variations of the poem "Grammar In Rhyme" have been coming to me from several directions; I even have one from Bermuda. I am sending it on to you; and my thanks go to Mrs. R.A.L., J.K., A.T., Bill T., Hilda and Jane and others unsigned, for taking the trouble to write out and send in this quaint old 20-line rhyme.

* * *

(Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris can put you on the way to more Successful Living.)

FOOD IS FUN

Dear Susanna: Because my mother and father both work, and because I'm the eldest of seven children, I get the impression that some people think they should feel sorry for me. Well, they're wasting their time, because I love everything just the way it is. My mother understands how much I enjoy experimenting in the kitchen and working with food, so she lets me know that my efforts are greatly appreciated and makes sure that my brothers and sisters look after most of the other household duties. This leaves me time to study and help with the cooking too. With us all cooperating this way the work gets done quite well and we have plenty of time on weekends and holidays to enjoy picnics and outings together. I guess because everyone has to contribute, we get a bigger kick out of our free time together as a family.

As you sent me some super craft ideas for our guide group, I really started out to send you a few of my own special ideas for beginner-type cooks like me.

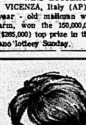
The main trouble with frozen cookie mixes is that no matter how carefully you time them, they often get too brown on the bottom before you realize it and turn out hard and crumbly. (They are so soft while cooking it's hard to lift them up for an inspection). To get around this I use a large, shallow, oblong, glass casserole dish and when I think they are nearly done I just hold up the pan with my oven mitts and see how dark they are underneath.

We often eat in stages, and when I wish to warm up cold Italian-style spaghetti that has become dry and stuck together in a great ball, I just pour on fresh boiling water and heat it for a minute then re-drain. The best cooks in the world may not agree but it turns out to be delicious every time.

* * *

For those who come in late, one of the best ways to keep an individual plate of dinner hot yet fresh and moist is to use the old steamer idea. Put a lid on the plate of dinner (a deep-rounded lid that won't touch the food) and place the plate over a pot of water simmering at low heat.

* * *



Finally for other teenagers who like to wear charm bracelets but have trouble fastening them on their wrists because the weight of the charms tend to make them slip off, keep a roll of clear sticky tape handy and tape the one side of the bracelet to your wrist while you fasten it — you will only need a short strip so it doesn't hurt when you pull it off — and it does save time and wear on the nerves.

It's been fun writing to you and I'll drop a note again sometime. — Margot.

Terrific idea for the nerves of adult bracelet-fasteners, too! — SUSANNA

CRISPY SWEET GHERKINS

Our pickle makers will be happy with this Sweet Gherkins recipe. I am outlining today, for the result is crisp little gherkins that match anything our commercial pickle packers produce.

The whole routine covers four days but each daily step is simple and satisfying. I left the big bowl containing the little cucumbers at the back of my kitchen counter, handy to carry out each step as the time arrived. As you perform each step, tick it off, so you will not repeat or skip a step.

Dinner Menu

by Mary
Moore

Boiled Veal Tongues with Herb Gravy; Delicate Mashed Turnip; Crumbed Sliced Eggplant; Relish Tray: Pickled Crabapples, Celery, Cucumber-kins; Foamy September Applesauce; Brownies; Tea.

CRISP SWEET GHERKINS (5 pints):

3 quarts (12 cups) small cucumbers — 1¼ to 2" long, freshly picked, ¼ cup coarsed salt, 4 cups granulated sugar, 3 cups spirit vinegar, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 teaspoon whole mixed pickling spices, 4 1" pieces stick cinnamon, ½ teaspoon fennel (optional), ¾ teaspoon turmeric, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

(Note: Do not use old cucumbers. Be sure they are freshly gathered.)

First Day: In the morning wash cucumbers in running water and scrub. Drain well. Trim stem ends may be left on if desired. Drain. Place in large porcelain or enamel container or crock and cover with boiling water. In the afternoon (6 or 8 hours later) drain. Cover with fresh boiling water.

Second Day: In the morning drain. Cover with fresh boiling water. In the afternoon drain. Add salt and cover with fresh boiling water.

Third Day: In the morning drain. Prick cucumbers with table fork. Make a syrup of 1½ cups sugar and 1¼ cups vinegar, adding turmeric and spices (set tied in bag). Heat to boiling. Pour over cucumbers. (They will be only partially covered.) In the afternoon drain syrup into saucepan, add 1 cup sugar and 1 cup vinegar and heat to boiling and pour over pickles.

Fourth Day: In the morning drain syrup into saucepan, add 1 cup sugar, and ¼ cup vinegar to the syrup, heat to boiling and pour over pickles. In the afternoon drain syrup into saucepan, add remaining last ½ cup sugar and vanilla to syrup, heat to boiling. Pack pickles into clean, hot pint jars and cover with boiling syrup to within ¼" of top of jars. Seal almost tight. Process in boiling water, having level of water come to within ½" of lids, and process 5 minutes at boiling point. (Note: In Alberta, where altitude is high these should be processed 10 minutes.) Control processing time as soon as water returns to boil. Carefully remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Stand jars upright, well apart to cool on wire rack.

If desired, these gherkins may be served at once, but improve with standing. Highly recommended.

Shower Honors Bride-to-Be

FRANKFORD — A miscellaneous shower was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Rabel in honor of a September bride, Miss Judy Whitmore.

The recreation room was gaily decorated with a shower umbrella hanging from the ceiling and blue and white streamers cascading from the centre. Gifts were piled high beneath the umbrella.

Games were enjoyed during the evening, Mrs. Connie Wallace was first winner and Mrs. C. Reid was second. Mrs. Preston Chase gave two readings. Mrs. Roy Osterhout reminisced about Judy's school years, Mrs. A. Kaiser, Mrs. Rabel and Vlasta performed a skit.

The bride's book was completed and presented to Judy, who was overwhelmed by some of the snapshots her mother had developed.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

CAMPBELLFORD ASSOC.

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Association of Scouts and Cubs held their Going Up ceremony on Wednesday evening in the gymnasium of the high school.

In Campbellford there are three packs of Cubs and two patrols of Scouts involving approximately 100 boys. Each pack and troop is self-supporting, making their money with the mothers' assistance through bake sales and other features such as paper collection.

In the Going Up ceremony, 18 Cubs moved up to Scouts, filing in between Scouts standing in a circle. Immediately another pack of Cubs was organized and the boys were welcomed by Scout Leader William Sequire, who had just said goodbye to the Going Up Pack.

There are more than eight million boys in over 70 countries of the world, who proudly wear the uniform of the Cubs, Scouts and Adventurers. The highest award that can be given is that of Queen's Scout.

A Wolf Cub is the junior member of the Scout family. He eventually becomes sufficiently trained and of proper age to become a Scout.

Campbellford Scouts and Cubs enjoy camping, canoe trips, wiener roasts, hikes and anything involving living with nature.

Scout leaders are in some cases fathers who in their busy schedule of work still find time to assume responsibility for Scout leadership. There are at present 11 Scout leaders for the Scout program in Campbellford. Campbellford Rotary Club is the sponsor.

That the Campbellford Association is in a successful state speaks well for the Scout leaders.

Many small towns have found it impossible to carry on and their groups have been disbanded. This has happened in some areas adjacent to Campbellford.

Melrose

MELROSE — On Tuesday evening, Rev. Mr. Ambery of Redneresville, assisted by the United Church minister from Stirling, conducted a study on the New Curriculum at Melrose United Church. A number from Shannonville attended the meeting, making a class of over 20 in attendance.

Mrs. Jack Weese and daughter of Toronto have spent two weeks with relatives in Melrose.

CUB REGISTRATION

The regular cub meeting was held on Wednesday evening. Registration for next year are to be made by the end of October, as the Cub year is from November 1, 1965 to November 1, 1966. Cub leader, Roque Sager, is looking forward to continued interest and support in his endeavors to carry on this work with young boys.

HOLDS DANCE FOR BRIDE, GROOM

A community gathering was held in the township hall on Friday evening to honor the newly married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jarrell (nee Carolyn Fox). The McAvoy Orchestra supplied the music for dancing. At the midnight hour the young couple was called to the platform by Reeve Charles Long and an address was read by Mrs. Jack McLaren. A gift of money was presented on behalf of their friends and neighbors by Newton Demille. The recipients graciously expressed their thanks, after which refreshments were served. Dancing continued for a short time after lunch.

TORONTO (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party charged Sunday that the Liberals are attempting to influence news coverage of the federal election campaign by putting what it termed improper pressure on television broadcasters.

At a press conference, Dalton Camp, national president of the Progressive Conservative Association, and campaign chairman Edwin Goodman, said in a statement that the Liberal party, "by inducement, blandishment and using its power of office," seeks to dominate local television news across Canada with cabinet ministers' campaign speeches. Co-operating TV stations would show film clips of ministers, taken in a local area, in outside viewing areas.

Copies of a letter purporting to set forth the arrangements were distributed. The letter was said to be from Geoff Scott, executive assistant to Kenneth D. Soble, president of CHCH-TV Hamilton, to E. Finlay MacDonald, president and general manager fo CJCH-TV Halifax.

PROMISED CREDIT

The free service was said to have been arranged by Mr. Soble and a Toronto film company, Pallette Productions. Mr. MacDonald's station was promised "the credit it deserves" for co-operating.

The service was for Liberal ministers only but, Mr. Goodman said, Mr. Soble apparently had decided that there was something improper in the arrangement and had offered to provide a service for processing film clips of prominent Conservatives.

Mr. Camp said the letter was shown to him by Mr. MacDonald, a national vice-president of the Progressive Conservative party.

The Cramp - Goodman statement said the Liberal party about Sept. 17 or 18 requested television stations "to become involved" in the free-service arrangement. It said the Liberals used the services of CHCH-TV to co-ordinate and Pallette Productions to process the film clips that "were to dominate the news."

It said the Soble letter to Mr. MacDonald was dated Sept. 20, It was clear "from the tone of this letter" that the Liberals "had offered future benefits to obtain this important service."

SAYS TELEPHONED

Mr. Soble said in Hamilton Sunday night he telephoned Mr. Goodman last Tuesday and asked if the Progressive Conservatives wanted to take part in a service whereby film clips of prominent party members would be relayed to different sections of the country. He said he received no indication that the PCs were interested. He said he also discussed the service with officials of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Soble said he did not know what Mr. Scott meant by the word "credit" in his letter to Mr. MacDonald. It might have meant "credit for a job well done."

He said the Liberal party pays the television station for the service and any interpretation that credit meant government patronage "is completely utterly incorrect."

Ina Fredericton, Mr. MacDonald, attending the annual meeting of the Atlantic Association of Broadcasters, said "I don't know who pays the expenses of Pallette Productions.

"But in conversation with their manager, Don MacMillan Sept. 24—and I have an affidavit to this effect—I was informed that this national news service was strictly intended for the promotion of Liberal cabinet ministers. Indeed, the project bears the code name "Fedmin" which I take means federal minister."

TURNS TO STAGE

Chamber of Commerce Chief Says Federal Govt. Spending Is Aimed at Political Results

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has been paying more attention recently to the political result of its spending than it has to the real economic needs of the country, A. J. Little, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said today.

He told the opening session of the 20th annual conference of the Chamber that the government seems to have substantially ignored the question of establishing priorities on its spending — a point that was strongly urged by the Chamber at its meeting last year in Winnipeg.

"We have been particularly concerned about education and training which, it seems to us, should have the greatest attention," Mr. Little said.

"With the tremendous number of young people coming into the work force and with the nature of jobs changing so quickly, we think that more education and more on-the-job training and retraining is going to be necessary to keep a reasonable level of employment.

"We think efforts in this direction should take high priority over universal welfare schemes which are not designed to benefit the indigent and the needy people, but are designed to cover all the people of the country whether they need it or not and whether they like it or not."

REACTION "ABSURD"

Mr. Little who criticized as an "unfair absurdity" the government's reaction to the Chamber's criticisms of the Canada Pension Plan, due to come into effect next Jan. 1.

He said the Chamber's suggestions "were misconstrued and once again, not only representatives of the public but, indeed, representatives of the government made it appear as though the Canadian Chamber of Commerce was opposed to welfare for the Canadian people."

Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

"It is clearly the policy of the Chamber that no person in this country should go unfed or unclothed or without work. While it is a responsibility in which industry must share nevertheless it is a prime obligation of the government to make sure that such people are properly looked after.

"At the same time, it is our belief that people should be put in a position where they are able to look after themselves."

Mr. Little also placed before the 800 delegates four areas where he said more attention by business is needed:

—Labor - management relations, where it is "economic absurdity to sustain over a long period the costly disruptive and unhappy strikes that we have seen over the last 12 months."

—Adoption of a national and not provincial viewpoint by business. "We must make sure that in our zeal to promote trade and industry we do not permit our provincial government to adopt policies or legislation which could have the effect of setting one province against another to a point where inter - provincial commerce is restricted."

—Promotion of national unity. A breakup of confederation would be a tragedy and "would set both parts of our country back economically for many years to come."

—Attention to national, and not just regional, problems. "As businessmen we all have a duty as well as a right to formulate and express our own views and opinions. Indeed, if we do not do so we are not assuming our proper share of responsibility for keeping Canada prosperous."

Mr. Little implied some criticism of the limited free-trade auto agreement between Canada and the United States on grounds it could turn Canadian subsidiaries of the car firms into branch-plant operations under the continent-wide production scheme the plan envisages.

He noted, however, the plan will "bring great over-all benefit to the country," although great care was needed to ensure it did not harm parts of the economy.

D. L. Morrell, the chamber's general manager, told delegates there is every indication the Canadian economy will continue to grow well into 1966, but warned against inflationary pressures that now are visible.

India May Explode Nuclear Bomb in Year

By PETER JACKSON

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—India is likely to explode a nuclear device in perhaps a year's time, competent observers here believe, although official policy at present is that the country will not make atomic weapons.

An atomic energy department spokesman has described reports of plans for a nuclear explosion as "speculation."

Official policy for the time being remains that nuclear energy will be used for peaceful purposes.

Experts have long acknowledged India's nuclear capability and Dr. Homo J. Bhabha, head of the Atomic Energy Commission, has estimated that India could produce a bomb in about a year if a decision were made to go ahead.

Discussion has centred for some time on a "peaceful pop" which might be connected with something like excavations for irrigation.

This would demonstrate to the world India's capability not to involve reversal of policy on not making weapons.

PRODUCES PLUTONIUM

India is producing plutonium at a plant near Bombay and is estimated to have a stockpile already of about 10 kilograms which could be increased at about 10 kilograms a year.

Under India's agreement with Canada, which set up the reactor, this plutonium can only be used for peaceful purposes.

But India is building a new reactor at Kalpekkam, near Madlas, which will also produce Plutonium. This one will not have restrictions on it.

It is estimated that about five kilograms is required for nuclear explosion.

China's atomic test sparked strong demands in India that nuclear weapons be produced. Last week 86 members of Parliament petitioned Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri in a letter that it has become vital to make them now following conflict with Pakistan and the ceasing of U.S. and British arms supplies to India.

BURGLAR HAD REASON

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two men held up a savings and loan association office in this city Friday and police said one of them told a teller he was "helping President Johnson fight the war on poverty." The two fled on foot with an undetermine amount of cash.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

HODGE-PODGE

The CAHA has revoked suspensions on Wiener Brown, Floyd Crawford and Flori Goegan as of September 2 this year. The boys were suspended by the Ottawa District Hockey League . . . The baseball-minded professor called spelling goofs of a student "Strike One," "Strike Two." Came a voice from the back of the class, "Make him pitch to you, Sir!" . . . Four European hockey teams will play games in Canada during the upcoming season, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and Finland. . . . There's the story of the football coach who was plunged into a coal mine to recruit a big miner for tackle. The miner goofed when he wrote seven-plus-seven was fifteen. The coach screamed, "You shoulda overlooked that one. He only missed it by three."

Jay Dolan 3rd, one of the bright young golf stars on the U.S. tour recently joined the "under 80" group at Boyiston, Mass. The former Massachusetts open champion turned off 13 birdies on the 6,828 yard, par 72 course and his first five holes, all birdies, went 2-4-2-3-3.

George Knudson is one of two Canadian golfers to be featured in the forthcoming Shell's "Wonderful World of Golf" series starting January 9th. Marlene Stewart Streit is the other. . . . You can heap the praise too high at times. There's the case of the college student who explained the football team, the basketball squad, finished tops in his class and voted the "most likely to succeed" by his classmates. One year he failed to show for graduation. The coach asked why and was told the boy was dead. "What did he die of?" some one asked. "Self-esteem" was the answer.

Trenton City Hotel softball team fan was told that Point Anne Cementers would present this agent with a few blocks of cement if the Pointers won the title, he cracked, "I'll double that. They'll match your head" . . . "And," he added, "if the City Hotel offers you a half-ton of peanuts, take 'em. They'll match your mentality." . . . Nice fella. . . . Garry Alkenbrack, star man at Kingston General Hospital, who undergoes surgery today, writes that, he not Mushmouth, called the turn in the 3rd and 7th Finals . . . That's right, Garry, you called the Black Hawks and New York Yankees last year.

They say a ball has never been hit over the centre-field wall of Yankee Stadium. Don't bet on it. Yogi Berra once bet a hundred bucks he could do it. When the greenbacks were down, Yogi waked to deep centre field with a fungo bat and blasted one high over the obstruction.

Belleville Minor Hockey Association officials were pleased with the 70-man turnout the other night. A number of people volunteered for coaching positions and conveners. . . . More are needed. . . . Referees, too.

The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron will eight enrol in the piloting course which gets underway at BCI, October 4th. Anyone desirous of joining can register at Moira Secondary School between 7:30 and 9 p.m. and at BCI Tuesday, same time. Twelve have registered in the seamanship course.

The old Brooklyn Dodgers were a hard-living, hard-playing club crew who never made going to church a habit. And they paid for it. They had a "Brooklyn Against the World" celebration in Dodgertown in August 1946 and the insurrection was pronounced by the Rev. John McCormick. He prayed the Dodgers would win the pennant and that Providence would send him world series tickets. At that time the Dodgers had been in first place since May, but two weeks after the "World" celebration, they slipped into second place and finished the season there.

When brook, rainbow, brown and lake trout seasons close on October 4th, with the exception of south Renfrew County where the lake trout season closes on October 10th, you may still enjoy angling for small-mouth and large-mouth bass and maskinonge until November 30th, and northern pike and walleye (yellow pickerel) until March 31st.

Twins Wrap Up First A. L. Pennant

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

The phone jangled in Minnesota Twins' dressing room under District of Columbia Stadium.

"Get that, I'm busy," yelled a champagne-soaked Sam Mele.

"It's the vice-president," said an aide.

So Mele went to the phone and accepted congratulations from Hubert Humphrey after the Twins had clinched their first American League pennant by edging Washington Senators 2-1 Sunday for their 90th victory of the season.

"By gosh, it's great, Sac," said Humphrey, a former senator from Minnesota. "You've done a great job. Give my best wishes to all the players. I couldn't be happier."

Neither could the Twins. Ironically, they wrapped up the pennant in Washington, the city they left after the 1960 season, shortstop making a scramble for Most Valuable Player honors, was the key as the Twins put it out of reach of Baltimore Orioles, their last challengers.

Versailles tripled in the sixth inning and promptly scored on a passed ball by catcher Jim Zimmer. Then, in the eighth with the score tied 1-1, Frank Quilici doubled, took third on a wild pitch by Pete Richert and scored on Versailles' long fly.

TALKS ABOUT SERIES

Some 15 minutes later, Mele was being sprayed with champagne while talking about the World Series.

"I don't care who we face, we're ready for them," he said. "We've got pitching for them. We've got the ball club for them."

Then he ticked off his first three pitchers for the series—Jim Grant, who became a 20-game winner Saturday, Camilo Pascual and Jim Kaat, who pitched the pennant-clincher.

Kaat, bringing his record to 17-12, surrendered a run in the third inning on singles by Ken McMullen and Frank Howard and his own error, then shut the door the rest of the way.

At Baltimore, the Twins' score was posted on the scoreboard, letting the Orioles know they had been eliminated. But they rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning and edged California Angels 2-1 for their seventh straight victory.

Elsewhere in the AL, Chicago White Sox defeated New York Yankees 5-3, Kansas City Athletics edged Boston Red Sox 2-1 and Cleveland and Detroit split, the Tigers winning 2-0 and losing to the Indians 7-1.

WON DOUBLE VICTORIES

The Twins and Orioles both won double victories Saturday, Minnesota defeating Washington 5-0 and 4-3 while Baltimore downed the Angels 2-1 and 2-0. The White Sox took two from the Yankees 3-1 and 2-0, Detroit whipped Cleveland 4-1 and Boston tripped the Athletics 5-2.

Defeats Brooklin 11-3

West Coasters Win Mann Cup

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C (CP)—New Westminster, in a best-of-seven series, defeated Brooklin Merchants 11-3 Saturday night to claim the Mann Cup and the Canadian senior lacrosse championship.

New Westminster took the best-of-seven series by winning the last three games—duplicating Vancouver's feat in the 1964 Mann Cup series with Brooklin. Both Vancouver and New Westminster are members of B.C.'s Inter-City Lacrosse League.

Rookie coach Doug McRory of New Westminster said the victory came from "a brilliant comeback effort with a solid team performance."

Coach McRory said Brooklin appeared "just too tired to win."

Brooklin stars Bobby Allen and Larry Ferguson were so tired in the final game "they couldn't pass a shot on goal," McRory said. Neither player scored a point.

USED 18 PLAYERS

"I can't understand it. They dressed 16 players but used only 10 in the last two games," McRory added.

New Westminster goalie Les Norman came up with a spectacular performance in the last game, stopping 25 of 28 shots. He was later named by Jack Kelly Award as outstanding player of the series.

New Westminster got speedy offensive performances by defencemen Wayne Stuttle, Norman and Ed McDonald. The durable duo led the B.C. club with two goals each.

Brooklin was limited to a one-man show as Elmer Trandscored two goals. The third Brooklin goal came from Grant Heffernan.

New Westminster jumped to a 2-1 first quarter lead, then wrapped it up in the second for a 7-2 lead at the half and led 10-4 after the third quarter.

Grand-Slammer Won It

Pointers Whip Hotelmen

Perry Ellis grand-slam home run in the sixth innings broke a close fight and gave Point Anne a 5-1 victory over City Hotel. The Pointers now top the Commercial League finals 2-1.

The fourth game is slated for Point Anne Tuesday starting six p.m.

The teams were tied at one-all going into the sixth with Dave Feeney of the Hotelmen and Ron Maracle locked in another pitching battle.

Ellis was inserted as a pinch-hitter with the bases loaded and came through with his sacks-cleaning clout.

Both pitchers went the route with Maracle giving up but four hits, whiffing three and walking six. Feeney was touched for eight clouts while striking out three and walking five.

The Pointers grabbed a 1-0 lead in the opening frame with the Hotelmen coming back to knot the count in the second.

From then until the game-breaking sixth it was a nip-and-tuck struggle. Point Anne played errorless ball with the Hotellers committing three bobbles.

The City left eight runners stranded failing to come through with clutch clouting. The winners left three aboard the bags.

Ellis, naturally was the hero of the piece for the Pointers with his pinch grand slammer. Horwood came through with a double and single. Ron Maracle helped his own cause with a pair of singles. G. Maher and a double with E. Maher and Akey contributing singles.

Jim Hall Shatters Grand Prix Record

—MacLaren Second—

By JOHN TRACY

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—Pro-ponents of the automatic transmission for sports-racing cars got a boost Saturday when Jim Hall of Midland, Texas, won the 250-mile Canadian Grand Prix with a record-shattering performance.

The seconds behind the leader on the 32rd lap of the 100-lap race, the 30 - year - old Texan overtook New Zealander Bruce McLaren on the 82rd lap and led him across the finish line by one-fifth of a second.

There was little difference between the cars except for Hall's automatic transmission.

McLaren, seven in world ranking last year, designs and builds his own racing cars. His car Saturday was powered with an Olds engine. Hall, who also builds the Chaparrals, which brought him the 1964 U.S. road-racing championship and the 1965 Grand Prix at Sebring, Fla., had a big Chev engine in his car and the only automatic in the race.

The Texan's elapsed time was two hours, 27 minutes, 25 seconds, an average speed of 101.7 miles an hour and better the old record mark of 100.2 set in a Ferrari a year ago by Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico City. Canadian Grand Prix winner in 1963 and 1964.

Hall also set a lap record over the 2.5-mile road circuit of one minute, 24.9 seconds, an average speed of 104 m.p.h., clipping 12 seconds off the mark he set a year ago.

He won the Pepsi-Cola Trophy, cash award of $2,000 for his win and $200 for fastest and record lap times.

Rodriguez' big, red Ferrari finished third, five laps behind the leaders. Charlie Hayes of Rockville, Md., was fourth in McLaren-Chev and David Piper of London in a Ferrari was fifth.

Top Canadian was John Cordts of North Bay, who finished 12th in a Corvette.

Outcome of the race, in doubt up to the last few seconds, brought the 21,000 paid fans to their feet. The six - foot - two Texan, who crashed his Chaparral here a year ago and broke an arm, is the most popular driver to come to this track 40 miles east of Toronto.

Seventeen of the 28-car field finished the race. Two drivers, Herb Swan of Cleveland, Ohio, and Augie Pabst of Milwaukee, Wis., were disqualified and fined $30,000, go up in balls of fire although neither was seriously hurt.

Rangers' Goalie Problems

KINGSTON (CP)—Coach Red Sullivan's goaltending problems were still unsolved after New York Rangers of the National Hockey League played an intersquad game here Saturday night.

Sullivan's problems are goaltenders—too many of them.

Four netminders, including former Toronto Maple Leafs Cesare Maniago and Don Simmons, shared duties during the contest which saw the whites defeat the blues 5-3.

Maniago allowed the three goals scored by the blues—two by Jim Johnson and one by Vic Hadfield. Simmons, who alternated with Maniago, had a perfect record.

Rookie goaltender Gilles Villemure was beaten three times and Ed Giacomin once.

"I can't fault any of the goaltenders," Sullivan said after the game.

Rod Gilbert did not dress for the game, but skated briefly Saturday after saying he was back injury checked in New York.

"He skated well," Sullivan said. "I think he'll be all right."

Brewer Wins At Seattle

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—Gay Brewer tapped home a three-inch putt Sunday to defeat Doug Sanders on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff for first money of $6,000 in the $20,000 Seattle open golf tournament.

The two veteran professionals finished in a tie at 279, nine under par for the 72-hole event over the 6,709-yard Inglewood Country Club course.

Charles Coody finished with 282 and tied for third with Don Massengale.

Jack Nicklaus, top money winner of the year, was well back at 285 after finishing with a two-under-par 70.

Cheesemen Win 'B' Title

Black Diamond exploded for seven runs in the first innings with Belvederes scoring once. The winners held an 8-1 lead going into the fourth.

Then the Hotelites had their eruption. They pushed six runs across the plate to come within striking distance.

The Cheesemen surged back with two runs in the fifth and two more in the sixth to tuck away the victory.

Sonny Holoway went the route for the Cheesemen striking up eight hits, walking seven and whiffing six. King started for Belvedere and was relieved in the sixth by Hughes. They walked four and struck out six.

Cruikshank led the winners hit parade with two doubles and a single. Hughes and Jones hit doubles with Francis, Clapp and Holoway collecting singles.

Drysdale Tosses 5-Hitter

Dodgers, Giants All Even In Flag Drive

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Joan Marichal can't win. Don Drysdale can't do anything else. So San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers go into the final week of the National League season all even.

While Milwaukee Braves, were handing Marichal his third straight loss Sunday, 3-2, Drysdale won his fourth in a row and pitched the Dodgers to their ninth consecutive victory, 1-0 over St. Louis Cardinals.

Drysdale fired a five-hitter as the Cardinals and made a first-inning run—produced on Maury Wills' base-running and Jim Gilliam's single—stand up. The Giants, who zoomed to the top with a 14-game winning string, have dropped five of nine since—with Marichal losing three of them.

Both clubs have seven games left—all at home—before the regular season closes next Sunday. The Giants open a three-game set against St. Louis today, then conclude with a four-game series against the third-place Cincinnati Reds. Los Angeles starts a three-game series against Cincinnati tonight, then plays four against Milwaukee.

TRAIL BY THREE

In other action Houston Astros kept Cincinnati three games behind, trimming the Reds 5-0 behind Don Wilson's three-run homer in the last of the ninth; Pittsburgh Pirates overcame Chicago Cubs 5-3 on run-scoring doubles by Willie Stargell and Jim Pagliaroni in the 10th inning; and Tony Gonzales' double in the 10th gave Philadelphia Phillies a 5-4 victory over New York Mets.

In Saturday's games the Giants downed Milwaukee 7-5, the Dodgers blanked St. Louis 2-0, Cincinnati shaded Houston 10-9, the Cubs whipped the Pirates 6-3 and the Mets and Phillies split two 4-1 decisions.

Wills led off the Dodgers' first against Ray Sadecki with a bone single. When the St. Louis lefthander attempted a pickoff, Wills stole second, and continued to third when Bill White's throw to second was wild. Gilliam's single scored him with the game's only run.

Drysdale did not walk a man and allowed only three runners as far as second.

Singles by Frank Bolling in the second and Mack Jones in the third drove in Milwaukee's runs against Marichal, then Ole Miss Ever homered in the sixth.

Ottawa Crushes Eskimos

Argos Nip Bombers In Upset Of Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A distinct lack of eastern hospitality was encountered by two visiting Western Football Conference clubs during the week-end.

Edmonton Eskimos called at Ottawa Saturday and were dismantled 40-1 by the Rough Riders—a result that might have been foreseen since the Esks are tail-enders in the WFC while the Riders are tied with Hamilton Tiger-Cats for the lead in the east.

But then Toronto Argonauts, normally the most charming hosts in Canadian Football, forgot their manners Sunday as they hung a 26-22 defeat on the unsuspecting Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

That one had to be the upset of the year. The Bombers are first - place contenders in the West, only two points behind Calgary Stampeders, who whipped B.C. Lions 21-7 Saturday night. The Argos not only hadn't won in eight starts, they hadn't come within a touchdown of winning in nearly a month.

The loss sent Winnipeg hobbling with an even break from a two-game eastern swing as a result of a 14-6 victory over Montreal Alouettes Friday night. The Eskimos will try to pick up the pieces Tuesday night when they visit Hamilton Tiger-Cats at 8 p.m. EDT in a game to be televised by the CTV.

Quarterback Randy Kerbow, filling in for the injured Bill Redell, had a miserable afternoon as Ottawa the Riders lined up behind his ground attack for a net loss of 19 yards and intercepted five of the 26 passes thrown by Kerbow and backup man Don Getty.

Kerbow completed four of his 11 passes for 34 yards while Getty, playing his first game since he came out of a two-year retirement when Redell was hurt, hit on four of nine for 37 yards when he took over in the last 10 minutes.

Edmonton's total offence of 32 yards compared with the Ottawa totals of 157 yards on the ground and 296 in the air as Russ Jackson, reserve quarterback Bill Cline and halfback Don Gilbert completed 11 of their 18 attempts.

The Edmonton defence had its best day since stalling Ottawa four times inside the 10-yard line, but three of the drives resulted in field goals by Moe Racine, who also booted four converts and a single to take Getty past the 100 point mark for the season on a safety touch.

The Argonauts, who had hit rock bottom a week earlier in a 33-0 loss to Hamilton, suddenly came to life against the Bombers, who had won both their previous interlocking games.

After spotting Winnipeg an early touchdown, they moved ahead 17-7 at the half, dropped Winnipeg 27-17 at the end of the third quarter and pulled it out with a converted touchdown shortly after they changed ends.

Quarterback Pete Liske, operating behind improving blocking, completed 10 of his 20 passes including two touchdown tosses to Pat Brunan and scored the third touchdown himself on a three - yard keeper play.

Jackie Parker kicked all three converts and the other points were added on singles by Dave Mann, Jackie Simpson and John Clunas, the last two on unsuccessful field-goal attempts.

Dick Thornton, replacing injured quarterback Kenny Ploen, threw to Ken Nielsen for the first Winnipeg touchdown and scored the other two himself on short runs. All three were converted by Norm Winton and Ed Ulmer kicked a long single for the Bombers' final point.

Shack's Suspension Lifted

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs lifted a suspension on left winger Eddie Shack Sunday after he agreed to sign a 1965-66 contract to play with Rochester, the Leafs' farm team in the American Hockey League.

The rambunctious Shack was suspended by Leaf coach Punch Imlach for refusing to play for Rochester in a game against the parent National Hockey League team Saturday night. Leafs won 5-1 in the game played at Peterborough, where the team is in training.

"Shack's back in our good graces, and he'll practise with the Rochester team today," Imlach announced late Sunday night. "I'm glad to see him signed and straightened out."

There were bitter words between the two men about the suspension before Shack apparently had a change of heart and went to see Imlach.

AS A DRAWF

Shack had charged that the Leafs were using him as box-office draw for the 10 league games the Americans must play in Toronto this season because their rink will be taken up with a bowling tournament.

Shack's unorthodox style of helter-skelter play has won him a large coterie of fans in Maple Leaf Gardens, even when his goal production was down. Imlach said Shack was demoted to Rochester because he scored only five goals last season.

Shack claimed that Imlach could have traded him to Detroit or Boston but didn't. Imlach denied it. "I couldn't get what I wanted for him in a couple of deals, so it's evident what other people think of him."

Imlach suspended Bob Pulford last fall in a contract dispute, but they came to terms within 24 hours.

SCORES A GOAL

Pulford scored one goal Saturday, as Leafs played their first exhibition of the season before 3,677 fans.

Leafs completed a minor league deal Sunday, sending Springfield Indians, defenceman Larry Johnston and left-winger Bill Smith for goalie Bruce Gamble. Gamble was suspended for 18 months last season for refusing to play under Eddie Shore, owner of the AHL club.

Meanwhile in Detroit, coach Sid Abel of the Red Wings announced the signing of veteran Alex Delvecchio for the new season. Abel said Delvecchio gets a substantial increase in salary and his contract carries bonus clauses.

In Kingston Saturday night, New York Rangers staged an Intra - squad game, with the Whites defeating the Blues 5-3.

Rifles Bow To Charleston

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Rifles, who might have come out of the weekend with a first-place tie in the Continental League's Eastern division, ran into their toughest opposition of the campaign and took a 21-0 shellacking instead.

Losers of only one of their previous six games, a close 21-16 defeat at the hands of Philadelphia Bulldogs, the Rifles were thoroughly outclassed Saturday night by the unbeaten Charleston Rockets, runaway leaders of the Western Division.

A victory would have enabled the Rifles to catch the Bulldogs, who lost their first game Sunday when Norfolk Neptunes downed them 42-35. Instead Norfolk moved within a game of Toronto with a 4-3 record.

In other games Sunday, Wheeling Ironmen defeated Hartford Charter Oaks 34-14 for their first victory of the season, Providence Indians tripped Fort Wayne 14-8 and Richmond whipped Newark Bears 34-22.

Kingston Aces Open Training On Friday

Secretary - manager Harold Langbeer of the Kingston Aces senior hockey club has announced that the team's training camp opens in the Community Memorial Centre, Kingston on Friday, October 1st.

Cardinals Defeat Browns

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

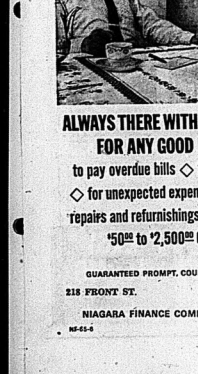
Charley Johnson, who won't be a doctor until next June, did some fancy operating on Cleveland Browns and now its up to Blanton Collier to revive the patient.

Johnson is the St. Louis quarterback who is completing work on his PhD in chemical engineering while he tries to pilot the Cardinals to the top of the National Football League's Eastern Division.

Sunday, he pitched six touchdown passes—one short of the NFL single game record—as the Cardinals rolled over Collier's Browns 49-12. The coach of the NFL champions was puzzled by his team's showing.

Elsewhere in the NFL, last-minute heroics predominated.

New York Giants nipped Philadelphia Eagles 16-14 on Andy Stynchula's field goal in the last 11 seconds. Green Bay Packers topped Baltimore Colts 20 - 17 on Zeke Bratkowski's scoring pass with less than three minutes remaining. RAMS RINGE BEARS



Los Angeles Rams scored three touchdowns in the last period, the final came in the last 30 seconds, beating Chicago Bears 30-28. Detroit Lions shaded Minnesota Vikings 23-20 as Milt Plum beat the clock for the winning TD. San Francisco 49ers whacked Pittsburgh Steelers 27-17 and Dallas Cowboys downed Washington Redskins 27-7.

In the American Football League, Buffalo Bills defeated New York Jets 33-21, Oakland Raiders topped Houston Oilers 21-17 and San Diego Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs played to a 20-20 tie.

Pete Gogolak—kicked four field goals and Jack Kemp connected on 22 of 37 passes for 292 yards as Buffalo topped the Jets. New York's $400,000 rookie quarterback, Joe Namath, started his first game for the Jets and completed 19 of 40 passes for 282 yards and two touchdowns.

Stampeders Whip Lions 21-7

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last year Bobby Colombis Lions won the Canadian professional football championship and looked unbeatable.

This year they are fourth in the five-team Western Football Conference. One of their outstanding players is on the sidelines, another is hurt and they played in Calgary during the weekend under conditions that a coach described as "surreal." They may have to play another tonight under similar conditions.

The Lions were trounced 21-7 by the Stampeders in Calgary Saturday night.

Tonight there may be more snow and cold for their contest in Regina against Saskatchewan Roughriders. The Lions, not used to those conditions in balmy Vancouver, have gained only one point in nine games. But they are only two points away from one of the three playoff berths and still have seven games to go in their 16-game regular schedule.

In other weekend games, both interlocking contests in Eastern Canada, Toronto Argonauts scored their first win in nine league starts by defeating Winnipeg Blue Bombers 34-22 and Ottawa Rough Riders whomped Edmonton Eskimos 40-1.

Halfback Willie Fleming didn't play for the Lions in Calgary and is not dressing tonight because of an injury. Tom Brown, the most valuable lineman in Canada last year, is out but will play.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys says Nat Dye will be back in action tonight as defensive tackle after being out of action with back trouble since the second game of the season.

Ed Roemter, a versatile import acquired from Hamilton, will move in at linebacker for rookie Wally Dempsey.

Bill Gray will be back at halfback after missing one game with a scratched eyeball.

At Calgary Larry Robinson's nine points and three touchdowns put the Stampeders in sole possession of first place, put Robinson and the WFC's leading punt scoring race and enabled him to gain the title as Calgary's all-time high scorer with 343.

The points from a touchdown, two converts and a single put Robinson one point ahead of Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan to the individual scoring

Minor Baseball

City championship baseball returned to Parkdale on Saturday with both Peewee and Bantam final games being staged.

In the bantam game at 12:00 p.m., the Parkdale Ratepayers defeated the Jaycees 9-7 to take their series 3-0 and win the A and P Trophy. In a peewee thriller, Gary Sine's Shell edged IBEW 4-3 to tie their peewee final series 1-1.

Local fans were given an extra taste of baseball ON the ground when the OBA semi-final game between Bowmanville and Perth was played at Parkdale. The game had won a game, hence the neutral diamond. Bowmanville won the game 10-6 and thus entered the Ontario finals.

BANTAM FINAL

Parkdale Ratepayers left no doubt that they were worthy champions when they defeated the Jaycees 9-7 to sweep their best-of-five series in three straight games. Jaycees put up their strongest game of the series but a determined Parkdale team hung on. Jaycees led 3-2 after as inning and 7-6 after four innings but a strong relief chore by Ted Shaw stopped them at that. Parkdale added one in the sixth to tie it and added the winners in the sixth.

Jim Wood with strong relief pitching was the standout for Parkdale chore. They gave up nine hits, struck out 12 and walked five. Eddie Christopher, Jr. did the catching. Joe Lunadon pitched well in working the distance for Jaycees, gave up 10 hits, struck out eight and walked five. Ron Gary was his catcher.

Hitters, Parkdale: Ted Shaw, double, two singles, Jim Wood, double, Gordon Allen, Garry Burnette, Barry Burnette, Dick Fobert, Ed Christopher, singles each.

Hitters, Jaycees: Peter Middleton, Steve Moore, Brett Chapman, Ron Gary, David Cass, Jack Short, single each.

PEEWEE FINALS

Sine's Shell peewees overcame an early lead by IBEW to tie their peewee final series at 1-1 and take a real pitcher's battle at Parkdale on Saturday afternoon. Terry Meagher, Bob Lee and Ron Drennan while Mario Venetti had a double and Dean Sine a single account for the IBEW hits.

Terry Meagher buried the IBEW attack after walking his mates played errorless ball. He claimed seven on third strikes and Bob Lee and Gary Edwards was his battery mate. Moe Thompson and Jeff Mason formed the IBEW battery. Thompson gave up just three hits, struck out four and walked five.

The two teams continue the action next Saturday with a big doubleheader to determine a city championship.

Telephone Hour in New Time Slot Was Delight

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

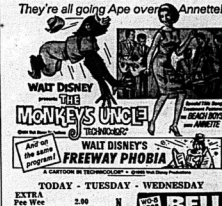
NEW YORK (AP)—Somebody at NBC had a fine idea in shifting the good, long - playing Telephone Hour to an early Sunday evening time.

The low-key program, specializing in familiar music and big-name soloists, never fitted well into its former late Tuesday evening spot.

But it seemed just the right kind of program for that period on Sunday. In its season premiere, the biweekly program took off with an hour of Jerome Kern music. It was a delight to ear and eye, particularly the eye that saw it in color. The sets were inspired—as so much design seems to be today—by the colorful, architectural paintings of Mondrian.

Soloists Ella Fitzgerald, Roberta Peters, Earl Wrightson, Nancy Dussault and John Davidson handled the composer's music with enthusiasm and verve—as did hostess Ginger Rogers.

Federal Communications Chairman E. William Henry must have found plenty of audience agreement when, in a speech partly televised last week, he rapped the networks about summer viewing fare of "re-runs and replets."



His complaints were hardly novel, nor was his suggestion that summer be used as a time to experiment and develop new programs. Historically, he is wrong, few summer experiments have made winter schedules—not even Andy Williams' well-received CBS variety show several seasons back or Vic Damone's The Lively Ones on NBC.

The industry answer to chairman-Henry will be, as usual, that the cost of programs is so high that the summer re-runs are needed to move a series from the red to the black.

Minnesota Defied Injuries--And Won

By LEW FERGUSON

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Minnesota Twins overcame injuries, feuds and their own cumbersome attack to win the 1965 American League pennant.

All of Minnesota's tribulations faced to drive the Twins onward.

After jockeying with Chicago White Sox and Detroit Tigers for the league lead in April and May, the Twins grubbed first place May 30 and held it until June 28 when Cleveland Indians charged to the top for six days.

Minnesota regained the top rung on July 4, however, and never was dislodged.

The injury list frequently made the training room resemble a sick bay.

NEEDED SURGERY

Camilo Pascual, counted upon to anchor a pitching staff neither deep nor overly impressive, was sidelined with torn muscles in his right armpit which required surgery. He didn't win a game for three months.

Harmon Killebrew, the major leagues' top home-run jitterer over the last six years, was out seven weeks with a dislocated elbow.

Bob Allison, Earl Battey, Tony Oliva, Jimmie Hall and Rich Rollins all were out w/h injuries for up to 10 days.

Pitchers Jim Kaat and Jim (Mudcat) Grant were hampered by hangfalls and rookie Dave Boswell was felled 30 days by mononucleosis.

Manager Sam Mele had to squelch a one-man mutiny when star shortstop Zoilo Versalles challenged his authority in spring training. Mele slapped him with a $300 fine.

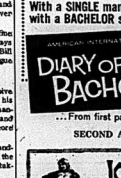
Mele broke down a $600 fine and was suspended five days for a run-in with umpire Bill Valentine in front of league president Joe Cronin.

DRAMATIC CHANCE

If Mele was more aggressive and self-assured than ever in his 4½-year term as Twins' manager, the club's brashness and change of style was even more dramatic.

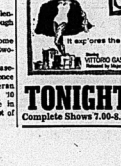
The Twins used the hit-and-run, daring some of the best arms in the league by taking extra bases.

Versatile set a club stolen-base record and had 26 through Sept. 21.



The Twins, who hit 221 home runs in 1964, didn't hit two-thirds as many in '65.

They won with daring base-running, a much tighter defence and a bolt pen led by veteran Al Worthington, who won 16 games and saved 13 more in swinging 39 appearances out of his 37-year-old arm.



Perhaps the biggest single difference in the new Twins was aggressiveness.

Satchel 1-Hits Sox In Three

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Leroy (Satchel) Paige flouted father time Saturday night by shutting out Boston Red Sox on only one hit over the three innings he pitched for Kansas City Athletics.

The amazing veteran of almost 60 years of baseball came back to the mound after a 12-year absence and throttled all the Sox hitters except Carl Yastrzemski, who got a scratch 380 feet off the left field fence for a double.

The Negro right - hander's home - town audience cheered him on as he befuddled eager Sox hitters with his famous hesitation pitch and a surprisingly live fastball.

Satchel, aged 60, was replaced by Diego Segui, the Athletics went on to lose the game 5-2.

KEY WAS YOUTH

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Athletic Union's 50-kilometre walk here Sunday indicated that youth is the key to success in marathon walking. Karl Heinz Merschenz, 28, Toronto, youngest of the nine competitors, won the championship in four hours, 56 minutes and 18 seconds.

Surtees Said Improving

TORONTO (CP)—John Surtees, last year's world champion racing driver who was seriously injured in a practice lap for the Canadian Grand Prix, is "off the critical list and continuing to improve," hospital officials said Sunday.

"We are satisfied with his condition at the moment," they added.

The 31-year-old Briton was injured in his Lola T70 Friday after it lost a wheel and crashed on the track at Mosport Park, 40 miles east of here.

He suffered two fractures and a dislocation of the hips, fractures to the horizontal segments of bone vertebrae in the lower back, kidney and other internal injuries.

Dr. Paul F. McGoey, surgeon-in-chief of Scarboro General Hospital, said Sunday that head injuries were not so serious as he feared and Surtees has regained his memory up to the moment he entered the turn where the accident occured.

He may have suffered slight concussion but there is no evidence of external skull injury or brain damage, Dr. McGoey said.

Family Counselling

First of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies of the United Appeal, explaining the function of the agencies and their reasons—for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

* * *

The Family Counselling Service of Belleville and Hastings County is one of two new agencies on the United Appeal this year. The other is the March of Dimes.

Vincent G. Castellano, B.A., M.S.W., is in charge of the new counselling service, situated in the offices of the Children's Aid Society on West Moira Street.

"We are following the example of many communities of comparable size in Ontario. I definitely feel there is a real need for our service in this community, a need that is brought about by the vast changes in our way of life. There are more new people coming into the community. These new people have problems in adjusting, which often result in problems in their marital relationships.

"There are simply more people — more children and more elderly people," couples are marrying younger, more mothers are working now.

"All these things often result in family problems and require some place where they can be talked out before they cause permanent damage to a marriage.

"Our services are in three areas of family problems: one, husbands and wives whose marital discord is disrupting family life; two, parents and children who are mutually unhappy in their relationship with each other; and three, adolescents who are having difficulties in school."

NEED STRESSED

During the summer of 1964, a survey of Belleville's social service resources was conducted under the auspices of the Canadian Welfare Council. Their report published in November, stressed the need for some form of marriage counselling service in the community.

"Almost daily," said Bernard W. Hurley, chairman of the service, "members of the various professions coming into contact with people in trouble have felt the inadequacy of the resources available within the local community, and, in certain instances, have had no alternative but to direct their clients to other cities for help."

Mr. Castellano continues: "We have been received very well. A new case has come into the office almost every day since we started September 7. Most of these people tell us they wish we had been here a long time ago.

"People come to us in various ways, either directly by themselves or when referred by a family doctor, a lawyer, a minister, or any one who knows their problem.

"Our service is offered to everyone, regardless of race or religion or anything else."

The service, in its first year of operation, will be financed by a special grant from the city of Belleville of $5,000, plus certain bequest funds, also totalling $5,000. The Children's Aid Society provided office space, clerical services and so on. However, the agency requires $2,000 from the United Appeal to balance its operating budget for 1966. In the future, its service will be maintained entirely by community support through the United Appeal and it will operate independent of any other local group or organization.

KEPT IN SECRET

Mr. Castellano cited, as typical problems handled by his agent, "if a woman calls us on the phone, obviously greatly depressed from a family problem, and she doesn't know where to start telling us about her problem, we make an appointment with her.

"And of course, anthing that anyone tells this agency is kept in strict confidence. With the knowledge that her confidence will not be broken, she will tell us her problem and feel much better by having done so. That is the first step, the recognition of the problem and the knowledge that someone is interested in helping out.

"In another case, a woman who has been married 10 years may suddenly feel the relationship between herself and her husband has grown cold. He may be spending more and more time away from home and may be less interested than ever in the children.

"She will begin to wonder why. What has she done wrong? In a case like this, we would probably involve the husband as well. They would interview ed separately and then jointly to see what the problem really is. Even from the very first interview we can see a beginning. They have started to reassess themselves. This is the beginning of the solution. Things will not change automatically right now, but they can now face the future with more assurance than before."

TALK WITH CHILDREN

"A teenager having trouble with his parents may phone us or be referred from school", Mr. Castellano said. "He could feel free to discuss his problems here, knowing that he would be treated with respect and not punished for thinking the way he does.

"It is in services such as this that parents often for the first time really talk with their children rather than to them."

The Family Counselling Service is available to anybody who requires it, simply by calling the office. It is a worthy organization, asking for your support, and what's more, deserving of your support.

Diefenbaker To Cut Swath Through Que.

By STEWART MacLEOD

MONTREAL (CP) — His campaign in full swing, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker took to the rails today to cut a 15-station swath through Quebec after telling a St. John's, Nfld., audience he will stage the fight of his life for "the average Canadian."

Declaring himself an "average Canadian", Mr. Diefenbaker said: "I want to do something for them." Today he was seeking out to meet them on station platforms from Amqui to Montreal.

Saturday night he told his St. John's audience the government is whittling away at the monarchy, the Canadian constitution and the morality of the nation and unless "you and I, the people" rally together by Nov. 8 it will be too late to stop it.

"There are not going to be any second chances. The election will decide these things for many years to come."

Selecting Newfoundland—Britain's first colony—as the stage for his first campaign attack on the people had fled flag, the 70-year-old leader induced a wave of applause with his defence of British traditions.

"We stood alone," he said, standing before a huge Union Jack in a downtown hall filled by some 700 persons.

"I have no apology to offer for the action the Conservative party took on that question—let that be clear."

WAVE UNION JACKS

A few hours earlier, Mr. Diefenbaker was met at St. John's airport by about 300 persons, many of them carrying Union Jacks. The cavalcade of cars carrying the party into the city were plastered with Union Jacks and loudspeakers blared out British army marches.

Mr. Diefenbaked attacked the government for the alleged erosion of British traditions and institutions after the provincial party leader, James Greene, introduced him as the man who led the "magnificent effort" on behalf of the Union Jack.

"I said from the beginning," said Mr. Diefenbaker, "that the new flag represented the beginning of steps by this government that will lead ultimately to other steps being taken."

A few weeks after the flag was proclaimed in 1965, the Young Liberals of Ontario had voted for the abolition of the monarchy.

"This Conservative party and I stand here. It has always stood—for the maintenance of the monarchy and the preservation of those traditions for Canada."

Mr. Diefenbaker also picked up John's a city with a relatively high cost of living, to attack the government on rising prices.

"Have you ever known such a high cost of living? More and more dollars are being poured into credit while down and down goes the value of the dollar and up and up goes the cost of living.

PAY MORE TAXES

"And the government has raised your taxes." He said matters would get worse next Jan. 1. "You will each pay 1.5 per cent more taxes to pay for this. Your employers will pay the same.

"We're getting to the point where there is no incentive for Canadians."

The Conservative leader, speaking in the hall where he officially launched his 1957 campaign, said the issues are far more serious this time.

"What about Rivard and what about our friend Hal Banks?"

"Ah," he said, "it would be laughable if it wasn't so serious." Never had so much public odium been shown for a man as the government has shown for Rivard, "a thug, a racketeer, a destroyer of the souls of men and women.

"The prime minister says let's don't talk about that—smear and scuttlebutt.

"This, wouldn't have taken place had we been in office."

Apart from the flag issue, Mr. Diefenbaker got his biggest reception for his pledge to increase old-age pensions to $100 from $75 a month, which would be financed from the Canada Pension Plan fund.

He also repeated his promises of more federal aid to higher education and the abolition of the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials. A consumers loan act would be established to give urban dwellers the same protection that the Farm Improvement Loans Act gives farmers.

Socred Leader Calls for Clean Politics

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit party, told a group of businessmen Saturday night that some politicians are going to play up corruption as the main issue in the Nov. 8 election campaign.

But men in public life are no more dishonest than five or 10 years ago, he said in this community, 30 miles east of Oshawa.

Mr. Thompson said a speed-up in communications had merely put corruption more in evidence.

"Politicians can no longer hide what they are doing from the public."

In a speech that was mainly of a religious nature, with the inevitable political asides, he called for the election of Parliament of men above reproach, regardless of their political affiliation.

One of the great weaknesses of democracy in Canada is that "we don't make Christianity relevant in our daily living," he said.

Lots of people seem to think that Bell is a foreign-owned company.
What's foreign about Mrs. Reed of Oshawa?
Bell is owned — by far the biggest part of it, anyway — by people like Margaret Reed.
When we counted up recently, there were some 208,000 Bell shareholders. Over 203,000 of them were Canadian residents. And altogether, they held 93.6% of the total shares.
That's how it has been for a good many years now. So if some people think Bell is foreign-owned — well, they'd better not let Mrs. Reed, or any of those 203,000 other Canadians hear them say so.

Russia Plans Many Changes In Economy

By SIDNEY WEILAND

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Sweeping changes aimed at strengthening Russia's economy in an attempt to catch up with the United States were announced Monday by Premier Kosygin.

He said the planned reforms resulted from centralized planning and would buttress the position of communism "in the economic competition between the two different states."

An entire planning network set up by ousted Premier Khrushchev is to be dismantled and capitalist-style profit motives introduced under a blueprint for "economic rejuvenation."

The changes were presented to top members of the Soviet Communist party at a central committee meeting. They were expected by observers as possibly the most far - reaching economic measure since the Bolshevik revolution of 1917.

For the first time since then, Russian factories will face competition among themselves.

Details of Kosygin's address to the 175-man committee were released in a summary by the Soviet news agency Tass.

ADMITS ERRORS

Kosygin said there have been "errors of planning in the recent past" that resulted in a "lag" in agricultural output, inflation, behind the development of heavy industry.

Existing forms of management planning and incentives in the Soviet Union are outmoded, he said.

Kosygin declared that natural income, industrial output and labor productivity all have lagged recently.

The first steps in the economic-reform will be the dissolution of Khrushchev's elaborate network of regional economic councils, the Supreme National Economic Council and the Moscow-based State Committee National Economy.

Kosygin said that instead of working to meet production quotas ordered by planners, Soviet factories now will work on a profit basis.

He said this will safeguard them from "unnecessary control and will allow" them to adopt the most economic decisions with proper regard to concrete conditions of production."

Under the new system factories will be put on a cost accounting system in some ways similar to that in Western factories.

Under the new program a fac-

Bilingual Schools Endorsed

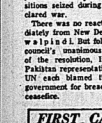
TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Chamber of Commerce took a big step Monday toward developing its support of bilingualism, recommending resolutions stronger than anything the national body has ever acted on before.

The national policy committee approved suggestions that French and English be taught in all levels of primary and secondary schools and that federal deputy ministers be bilingual.

The proposals go Wednesday before all 800 delegates at the chamber's annual conference, for consideration before they become official policy. Spokesmen for the chamber said approval is almost certain.

The resolution says more bilingualism "would contribute greatly towards improving communications between the two main language groups, towards wider mutual understanding and, hence, towards strengthening national unity."

Bilingualism is not needed by all citizens, but there is a need for both language groups in political, civil service, business and academic leaders."



On the civil service, it suggests that if deputy ministers are not bilingual assistants who are should be hired until the broader aim can be achieved.

And in areas of the country where there are substantial numbers of both language groups, any civil service posting should require a good working knowledge of both French and English where there are close connections with the public.

ST. JAMES OBJECTS

Some objections to the civil service recommendation were raised by the St. James, Man., chamber on grounds it was too stringent, but that chamber ambassador, it agrees wholeheartedly with the idea of bilingualism.

Harry J. Fast, left, Rideau Area manager of the CNR, proudly inspects a Red Feather flag which he has just received from Mayor Jack Ellis, centre, and United Appeal President Gerald Cunningham, right. The flag was symbolic of the achievement of CNR employees last year in setting the record for donations in the industrial section of the United Appeal canvass.

Flares Dropping, Flag Rising Appeal Off to Flying Start

Ignition . . . hydraulics . . . oil pressures . . . parallel . . . starter . . . number one engine clear . . . number two engine clear . . . turning . . . stand by . . . and off went the RCAF Transport Command Hercules into the air to signal the take off of the 1965 Belleville United Appeal Campaign.

The airplane circled the city, shooting out green and yellow signal cartridge flares at six second intervals, signalling the start of the campaign.

CJBQ's Dave Sovereign communicated by remote radio equipment from United Appeal Hercules to Red Feather Control at the CNR station.

Ft. Lt. Grey Pearson piloted the Hercules, assisted by Fl. Lt. Gord Mitchell as Radio Officer and Cpl. Joe Ireland, flare operator.

On the ground, Mayor Jack Ellis spoke through the remote control system to the airplane.

After festivities with the Hercules were completed, Mayor Ellis addressed the gathering on the ground at Red Feather Control.

"The one gift that does so much for so many people is one way we can show our appreciation for the work of the many people who do so much for Belleville through these 16 United Appeal agencies".

In these words, Mayor Ellis pictured the annual call for United Appeal donations as a welcome opportunity for Belleville citizens to show their appreciation.

The ceremony was held at the CNR station because last year CNR employees set the record for giving amongst companies covered by the industrial section of the campaign.

Before a CJBQ microphone, Mayor Ellis and Gerald Cunningham, president of the United Appeal both this year and last, presented a Red Feather flag to Rideau Area manager Harry J. Fast.

Mr. Cunningham voiced his appreciation of the backing given the United Appeal last year by organized labor in general and the CNR employees in particular.

Mr. Fast, in accepting the flag, expressed his pride in last year's achievement, and his hope and belief that the mark would be matched this year. He then hoisted the Red Feather flag on the pole on which the CNR safety flag normally flies. It will remain there for the duration of the campaign.

After the brief opening ceremony, workers in the Appeal gathered in a club car provided by the CNR to make final plans.

Viet Nam Battle Toll High

SAIGON (AP)—Hundreds of South Vietnamese rangers and Viet Cong guerrillas were killing late today in the Phu Cu pass area 295 miles northeast of Saigon, a U.S. military spokesman reported.

The Viet Cong suffered heavy losses last week in the area.

A South Vietnamese army ranger unit reported that it was engaged with a large Viet Cong element, possibly one or two battalions.

About 600 men are in a government ranger battalion and 500 to 600 in a Viet Cong battalion.

Since the Phu Cu action last week, 280 Viet Cong bodies have been counted by U.S. officers, and both South Vietnamese and U.S. military men think the number killed exceeded 700.

High South Vietnamese military authorities at the scene said Sunday that the Viet Cong dead were from the 18th Regiment of the North Vietnamese army's 325th Division. U.S. advisers agreed.

UNIT DISAPPEARED

Intelligence reports some time ago said the 325th had entered the central highlands of South Viet Nam, but there were later reports that it had dropped from sight.

The government losses in the action last week were described as moderate.

A U.S. spokesman reported the death of three Americans in the crash of a chartered plane Monday about 25 miles west of Saigon. He said seven South Vietnamese policemen passengers in the wreckage were killed during the night by Viet Cong small arms fire.

Volcano Erupts, 2,000 Filipinos Trapped On Isle

By GEORGE McARTHUR

MANILA (AP) — The Taal volcano, dormant for 50 years, erupted early today with an earth-shattering roar and pulsated throughout the day with blasts every five minutes.

The 12.5-square-mile island around the volcano was more than half covered with lava, ash and steaming mud. The fate of its 2,000 inhabitants was unknown 15 hours after the initial blast sent flames and smoke towering 15,000 feet in the air.

The Philippine constabulary said it had not been able to establish contact with the island — a scenic beauty spot in the middle of a lake on the tip of Luzon, 40 miles south of Manila.

A handful of refugees from the island were known to have made it to safety across the lake. Others were reported to have drowned in boats that capsized as they frantically tried to flee. Still others may be alive on that section of the Island which appeared from the air to be relatively untouched.

However, a plane which managed to fly low over the island late today reported no signs of life.

Between 4,000 and 7,000 refugees were being cared for in camps set up along Tagaytay ridge, high above the island lake, but most of these were the farm areas surrounding the lake.

By late afternoon the periodic blasts from the volcano appeared to be subsiding. However, authorities said it was still far too dangerous to send boats from the outer shores of lake Taal to determine the fate of the islanders.

The volcano is a tourist attraction 40 miles north of Manila — a volcanic island surrounded by a 200 - foot - deep mountain lake that is itself of volcanic origin. It was across this lake that the refugees fled to the shores five to 10 miles away.

The volcano had been making ominous noises for some time and those living on its slopes had been fearful. Reports from the scene said they began fleeing the island during the night when their dogs began to bark, cats to cry and pigs to squeal.

The last eruption, in 1911, left 1,335 persons dead, virtually unaware. According to local estimates, 1,235 persons died, although the exact figure never was known.

The eruption today came at 2:30 a.m. and was seen by a passing airliner which flashed word to Manila. By dawn rescue and relief measures were under way.

The eruption set off a towering electrical storm which spectators described as terrifying. Ash and lava rained for miles around.

Thousands watching from the outer shores of Lake Taal were covered in mud.

Throughout the morning the volcano kept up its violence. About 12 hours after the initial blast, it appeared to be settling down to an earth-shaken rule every five minutes or so.

Wilson Threatens New Vote

By GEOFFREY WHITEHEAD

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson today bluntly warned the Conservative and Liberal parties that he will call a new general election if his year-old Labor administration finds it cannot govern effectively in Parliament.

In a major speech at his party's annual conference here, he rejected any idea of a formal or unofficial agreement with the three parties of members of Parliament hold a near balance of power position in the House of Commons.

Wilson declared his party was ready to stay in office despite its slender three-vote overall majority.

He defended its record in its first year in office, and forecast more popular legislation in the months ahead.

Wilson, dealing with domestic issues, vigorously defended the government's decision to impose new curbs on Commonwealth immigration—in a bid to prevent a revolt on this issue when the conference debates it Wednesday.

NEW DELHI (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Bruce Macdonald of Canada arrived here by plane today from Cyprus to begin the task of helping bring peace between Pakistan and India.

Macdonald, commander of the new United Nations India-Pakistan observer mission, said his first visit will be to sit down and learn all about the situation."

There was no indication that India and Pakistan, who fought a 22-day undeclared war over Kashmir, had heeded the latest appeal of the UN Security Council ordering them to honor their ceasefire agreements and call back their troops to the positions they occupied Aug. 5.

The Security Council made the appeal in a unanimous resolution at an emergency session in New York late Monday night.

Macdonald, 48 - year - old native of Edmonton, said: reporter he did not know how long he will stay in New Delhi, before visiting the ceasefire line.

Vatican Council Is in Deep Trouble Over Document on World Problems

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council's document on modern world problems was reported today "in deep trouble."

Council sources said most of the 2,200 bishops at the Roman Catholic assembly fear there is not enough time left in this fourth and final council session to make the document truly satisfying.

It was widely felt that the document, after more rewriting and revision, would be promulgated as a decree before the council ends, probably in December.

"This is what has so many of the fathers worried," said one source. "There has been so much publicity and pressure they feel they've got to come up with a document of some kind, and they're afraid it won't be very good."

This is the first council document in church history to deal exclusively with problems outside the church. It ranges in scope from marriage and family planning to the Christian role in politics and the church's attitude on conscientious objectors and nuclear war.

One specialist assigned to the commission responsible for the document speculated that at least 1,000 changes will have to be made in the text as a result of amendments suggested by the bishops.

UN Council Makes Urgent Demand India and Pakistan Honor Ceasefire

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN Security Council issued an urgent demand Monday night for India and Pakistan to honor the ceasefire both agreed to and pull their forces, back from positions seized during the undeclared war.

There was no reaction immediately from New Delhi or Rawalpindi. But following the council's unanimous approval of the resolution, Indian and Pakistan representatives at the UN each blamed the other's government for breaches in the ceasefire.

Since the truce agreement last Wednesday, major clashes have been reported at two points along the ceasfire line. No withdrawal of forces has been reported on either side, and a member of the Indian cabinet said India should maintain defence measures for its defence.

The Security Council's new ceasefire demand was introduced by U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, the country's president for September. The resolution expressed "grave concern that the ceasefire agreed to unconditionally by the governments of India and Pakistan is not holding."

The Indian delegate said the resolution should be directed at Pakistan alone, insisting it was to blame for ceasefire violations.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Z. A. Bhutto countered that Indian forces had breached the ceasefire repeatedly.

Bhutto conferred earlier Monday with State Secretary Dean Rusk and appealed for U.S. support on a permanent settlement of the Kashmir dispute that led to the shooting war.

Bhutto told reporters that, if the council achieves a lasting ceasefire and withdrawal agreement, Pakistan will give sufficient time for it to be carried out.

But he warned that his government's threat to withdraw from the United Nations still stands if a permanent settlement is not reached on Kashmir within a reasonable time.

U.S. officials said Rusk reminded Bhutto that the U.S. intends to work through the Security Council on the ceasefire and the over-all India-Pakistan dispute.

Welfare Council Requests Nursing Homes Under Govt.

TORONTO (CP)—A 30-member Welfare Council committee recommended Monday that all Ontario nursing homes be provincially licensed and placed under one government agency, preferably the health department.

"Mrs. R. W. Hopper submitted this and other recommendations in report to Provincial Minister Matthew Dymond and Welfare Minister Louis Cecile. The committee found in a 18-month study that only 54 per cent of drugs, medical supplies and dental care of residents, fire safety rules and a uniform scale of licensing fees.

Demand for nursing home care will continue to increase, the committee's report added.

Licensing of nursing homes now is in the hands of municipalities with only some granting licenses.

Medical health officers in Ontario who helped in the study complained nursing homes lacked recreational facilities, physiotherapists and occupational therapists.

In other recommendations, the committee said nursing home legislation should set standards of care, including minimum ratio of nursing personnel and staff members to residents; provide for uniform records, reports and handling interest nurses.

Half Crown Good Luck Piece Is Treasured After Two Wars

A silver half crown, picked up by his brother back in 1915 and since carried as a good luck piece through two world wars, is a valued keepsake for a Belleville resident, Kenneth Smith, 85 Wright Ave. Silver half crowns have long since been called in by the British government, with an unknown number still in the hands of coin collectors.

When in circulation, the silver half crown, slightly larger than the Canadian half dollar, was worth about 62 cents, but like other scarce coins they are now worth much more than their face value.

NOT FOR SALE

But Mr. Smith says his silver half crown is not for sale, "I wouldn't part with it for any price," he said.

The now cherished half crown first came into the Smith family during the early days of World War I when Mr. Smith's brother Eugene, of London, Ont., picked it up when he went overseas.

When he returned home after the war Eugene gave the coin to his Belleville brothers.

Since then the coin has been on two overseas pilgrimages, to France and the Low-Lands and on one visit to Scotland and was also carried by Mr. Smith's brother-in-law Ernie Holway, as a good luck piece during World War II.

City Firemen Had Busy Day, Minor Alarms

City firemen had a busy day yesterday with no less than a half dozen calls sending the fire reels rolling. All turned out to be minor alarms, although in one instance a serious blaze could have resulted if discovery of the fire had been a few minutes later.

This was at the home of William Fraser, 31 Emily Street, where fire got started by partition of a stairwell.

Other runs were for an overheated electric motor at the Riverside Grocery; a troublesome furnace control spilled gasoline at Gary Sine's service station; an overheated space heater and a grass fire which set fire to a pile of poles.

Jean Marchand Will Run in Quebec West

QUEBEC (CP) — Jean Marchand, former labor leader, was chosen unanimously Monday night to contest Quebec West constituency for the Liberals in the Nov. 8 federal elections.

The unanimous vote followed the withdrawal of Jean - Paul Nolin, mayor of Quebec West and Liberal candidate in the riding in the 1963 elections. Mayor Nolin said he was withdrawing his name to maintain party unity.

Mr. Marchand's address to the convention was based on criticism of Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

"If John Diefenbaker sees National unity as the crushing of the provinces by the central government and as the adoption of English as the country's only official language—Quebec excepted—he can have that national unity, but over our dead bodies."

Pearson Denies Charges Made By Caouette

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson Monday denied as "wildly inaccurate" a report that the government would conscript Canadians to fight in Viet Nam if the Liberals win the Nov. 8 general election.

Mr. Pearson was commenting on CBC radio, newscasts heard Sunday night in Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia and Monday morning of those provinces and Manitoba.

The Sunday commentary said Creditiste Leader Real Caouette told a political rally at Val d'Or, Que., the Liberals need a majority government to enact compulsory military service for 100,000 Canadians to serve in Viet Nam.

Monday, the CBC broadcast the tape-recorded voice of Mr. Caouette saying the country "definitely will be . . . faced with the point of conscription by the Liberal party sending people from Canada to Viet Nam" in event of a Liberal election victory.

CALLS REMARK 'ABSURD'

Mr. Pearson said Mr. Caouette's remarks was "one of the most absurd suggestions that has been made in the campaign so far."

Canada is serving on the International Control Commission in Viet Nam and, with other United Nations members, hopes to expand economic aid.

"That is the extent of our involvement in this unhappy situation," said Mr. Pearson. "There is not a word of truth in any reference to military aid."

On Sept. 22, Pierre - Andre Boutin, Creditiste member of parliament for Dore ster, said in an interview at Frampton, Que., that 'Mr. Pearson has failed in his election because Canada soon will be asked to send "as quickly as possible more than 100,000 soldiers" to Viet Nam.

Unity Cannot Be Bought With Handouts

- - Starr

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian unity cannot be bought with handouts or special favors, Michael Starr, former minister of labor, said Monday night.

Mr. Starr, Progressive Conservative member of the last Parliament for Ontario riding, said unity can be achieved by providing equal opportunity for all citizens and "treating everyone alike.

He spoke to about 200 delegates who chose Ralph Brown, 56, a real estate dealer, as Conservative candidate in Hamilton South for the Nov. 8 federal election.

Wooing Industries Is No Task For Those Easily Discouraged

How does a city or town gain new industry?

Or how does it find likely industrial prospects?

According to Belleville Industrial Commissioner Ernest Kneisel, this facet of a commissioner's job is extremely important and is one which must be tackled with imagination, organization and perseverence.

And you are never sure of even a very promising prospect until you have him signed on the dotted line.

For instance in the Belleville Commission earlier this year was in contact with the Budd Company auto body plant officials and there were hopes that the firm might locate in this city.

But because of rail transport requirements and to be closer to auto manufacturing companies the firm decided to locate in Western Ontario.

In another instance the Belleville commission had high hopes of a fabric-based plant building their Canadian subsidiary here.

But another Ontario centre was chosen for the plant site—because of personal reasons.

In the last as he may, Mr. Kneisel and members of the Belleville Industrial Commission are far from discouraged.

ENQUIRIES GROW

In fact they have been greatly encouraged by the turn of events in the local industrial scene during which there have been more enquiries than in the previous 12 month period.

Mr. Kneisel says he has received a second inquiry from one manufacturing firm which is located here could expect to employ up to 600 persons within four years.

"This firm is definitely interested in Belleville," Mr. Kneisel said.

Another firm showing interest in Belleville would hire 50 persons the first year and build up to about 300 employees. This firm is expected to make a decision in four months.

MORE ON SCENE

"The essence is that things are looking up, we are getting more actual prospects on the scene rather than enquiries by letter."

And the enquiries are coming from all types of industry, not only from larger ones which might hire several hundred workers.

Enquiries from widely diversified industry is all to the good as records show there is always more likelihood of a centre acquiring smaller industry. For instance in the event one unit of the manufacturing plants employ fewer than 100 persons while 90 per cent employ less than 50 workers.

In fact Mr. Kneisel feels Belleville is a light industry town. He says this allows for gradual growth and avoids the sudden influx of hundreds of additional workers should a large industry move in.

WANT GRADUAL GROWTH

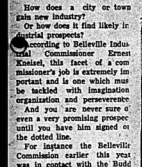
"We need reasonable growth in Belleville, not something which might overload the city with demand for new services, schools, etc."

Mr. Kneisel feels this is the commission's mandate from city council.

Where do leads for industrial prospects come from?



They come mainly from banks, the railways and from the Ontario Department of Economics and Development. The co-operation for local industry is also very important.

Mr. Kneisel feels Belleville has the co-operation of local industrial firms which have been very helpful in supplying information regarding the availability of workers, wages scales and other data.

When Mr. Kneisel took over as Industrial Commissioner about 18 months ago, the decision was to embark on an extensive advertising campaign to sell Belleville as an industrial town.

TURN TO BROCHURES

This, however, did not result in the hoped response and the INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER Ernest Kneisel points to Belleville's new industrial park area in the city's northeast which the commission has high hopes of filling. More enquiries from potential industry have been received in the past three months than in the previous year, it is stated.

advertising has been redirected to smaller trade magazines with greater emphasis on direct mailing of brochures to selected types of industry.

Whatever has been responsible there has been a big upsurge in the number of enquiries and this is the basis for the Commission's enthusiasm.

It should be noted that some of the enquiries materialize into new industry for Belleville.

Retarded Adults May Be Sheltered in New Home

TRENTON — Mrs. Doris Webb, chairman of the current drive for funds for work with the retarded in this area, reported today the door-to-door canvass had realized $1,551.38 to date with ten areas yet to be heard from.

Bart Boers, the president of the Trenton - Brighton and District Association for Retarded Children is canvasing the business area of the town himself and reports good response.

Letters have been sent out to various industries in town, and these will be followed up by personal contacts later, if the response does not live up to expectations.

The area association plans to use the monies collected this year to make a start on providing a hostel for retarded adults, where they would be taught trades which would equip them to at least partially support themselves.

WOULD ACQUIRE HOUSE

Mr. Boer's idea is to acquire a fairly large farm house with a bit of land around it, (preferably in an area close to the school for the retarded, on Highway Two, west of Trenton), where retarded adults could work in a garden, growing vegetables and fruits for their own table. Farm animals could be acquired and dairy skills taught. Women (residents of the hostel would be over 18) could be taught household skills.

Some of the residents . . . those who were incapable of handling jobs in sheltered workshops or factories . . . would be kept in the home permanently, perhaps.

Many of the children who started school for the first time in a basement room at St. Peter's school in 1959, have gone beyond the age where they can attend school, (18). With no other facilities available, they are now "vegetating" at home . . . frustrated . . . and a heartbreak to their parents, who feel they are "going nowhere."

Trenton has been forward looking in its attitude towards the retarded in the area. This is due, in no small measure, to the outstanding efforts of such people as Mr. Boers and Mrs. K. J. "Bobbie" Reid. Mrs. Reid, the mother of a retarded child herself, "pushed" the acquisition of the retarded children in the area, from the formation of the Trenton association in September, 1959. (The association received its charter in the spring of 1960).

When the (free) basement room at St. Peter's became too small, the Board of Education of the day made available a room in North Trenton school.

Then, almost single-handed, Mr. Boers began a campaign for a school. The cost was estimated at around $35,000, and many of the association members felt it would be too great a burden to take on. However, Mr. Boers prevailed, and it was decided to go ahead with plans, on a shoe-string and a prayer. Land for the school was donated by Harry Lafferty. Interested citizens, too numerous to mention, donated work and materials. The school was built.

CHILDREN HIS LIFE

Jay Wauters, principal and sole teacher (with volunteers from the association assisting) has gone with the children from the one room at St. Peter's to the new school. The children are his very life. From time to time he has taken some of the older children by bus to Toronto—to the zoo —on picnics—to hockey games —bowling. If ever a man was dedicated, and loved by his charges, it is Jay Wauters.

Duck Hunter Accidentally Shot in Thigh

TRENTON — A 23-year-old duck hunter was undergoing surgery today at Trenton Memorial Hospital for a self-inflicted rear thigh wound.

Carman Gray, of 20 McCaul Street, was in a punt on Welker's Bay near Consecon, when the accident occurred.

He was taken ashore by a local man, Fred Yardley, who heard the shot and saw Gray was in difficulties.

Selling Charge Is Dismissed By Magistrate

TRENTON — In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, a charge of selling liquor brought by the Crown against Cecil Belnap of 193 Marmora Street was dismissed by Magistrate Philip Baker when the Crown failed to produce conclusive evidence that Mr. Belnap had sold the two bottles of wine offered in evidence.

A Crown witness, Ernest Anderson of 96 Murray Street, Trenton, told the court he had purchased the liquor from a man on the street who had the bottles in a knapsack over his shoulder.

Magistrate Baker, who asked the witness to remove chewing gum from his mouth before testifying, said, "I have never heard such fabrication in my life before from a witness on the stand."

Presbyterian Ministers Meet at Depot

TRENTON — On Sept. 21, a meeting of the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada met at No. 6 Repair Depot. The 18 ministers and elders from the area bounded on the east by Gananoque and on the west by Trenton were the guests of Flight Lieutenant W. J. Graham, Protestant Chaplain at the RD. Among the ministers present was Rev Douglas Wilson of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Trenton.

Rev. John Brush of Kingston, moderator of the presbytery led the discussions.

W/C R. J. Hemsley, Acting Commanding Officer of the depot, briefed the group on the role of the depot in the RCAF.

It was decided that a special missionary weekend would be held for the eastern end of the Presbytery on Oct. 29 to Oct. 31. A similar weekend for the western end of the presbytery, which will include Trenton and Bellleville, will be held earlier in October.

bus.

Trenton, Brighton, Consecon, Carrying Place, Wellington and other centres are served.

In the summertime, last year, the children attended summer playground in Hanna Park and loved it. Some of them are sent away to special summer camps, geared to their special needs.

Trenton has been lauded in national and provincial publications for its far-seeing attitude towards the problem of the retarded child. Now, the association is seeking to take another giant step forward and do something about the very real problem of the "forgotten" member of society in our midst—the retarded adult—for whom society has made very little, if any, provision.

BOUND FOR OVERSEAS DUTY — Forces briefed today listened attentively to instructions and warnings about conditions they can expect to experience in new role they've been assigned.

Peace-keeping Force for Duty In India Briefed at Station

TRENTON — RCAF men from "east and west" with a few hours to get ready to go "overseas" were told to get their passports in shape and where to tell dependents to send their mail.

Nearly half of the service people briefed this morning reside in the local area. Some 45 officers and other ranks, especially selected for active participation in Canada's contribution to peace keeping in the India-Pakistan dispute list Trenton as their home address.

Since Friday, the personnel selected for duty in Pakistan have been immunized, and otherwise prepared for their scheduled departure from Trenton for Rawalpindi, India, at 7.30 a.m. Wednesday aboard a Yukon aircraft.

Today they were told they could take 150 pounds of luggage with them; that they can buy cigarettes and other supplies at Marville, France, at the end of the first leg of their long flight. They were told to get Canadian money changed to American dollars in small denominations. "Canadian dollars are practically useless where you are going."

One thing the briefing officer could not tell them was what the special U.N. daily allowance would be but the first group already there is getting $15 a day from which they pay board and lodging.

FIRST AID KIT ISSUED

The medical officer advised them that each would be issued a first aid kit which contained among other things snake bite remedy and anti-malaria pills. He warned them not to drink any water unless "guaranteed" pure by the authorities. He also warned them not to swim in rivers, although in undue stood there were swimming pools in the area.

Among other advice the M.O. offered was a warning not to eat any food outside military camp. He tended to discourage association with "girls". Most local girls are unattractive and those that are attractive are "locked up," the medical officer pointed out.

The advice from Station padre F/L R. Glofchesaki (RC) called on the airmen to conduct themselves as Christians and Canadian gentlemen, "Live morally in accordance with your U.N. responsibilities," he asked them. "God bless you all" were his parting words.

Air Commodore R. J. Lane the A.O.C. of Air Transport Command in his remarks told the men they were all " hand picked." He said he himself would be flying to India to be there on October 16 to look into any special problems.

Some 75 sets of coveralls have to be put on the aircraft since many of the men found their kits lacking them.

CAPABILITY DEMONSTRATED

The quick reaction capability of the RCAF's Air Transport Command is being demonstrated this week by its rapid response to a United Nations call for an Air Transport Unit in the India/Pakistan area.

Air Transport Command Headquarters in Trenton received a warning order last Thursday directing the formation of a new nine aircraft air transport unit to operate out of Rawalpindi, Pakistan for the purpose of airlifting United Nations observer teams in India and Pakistan.

The formation is to be called 117 Air Transport Unit and will consist of 95 personnel, three Caribou and six Otter aircraft.

By Friday, personnel and aircraft were selected and movement orders were issued.

On Saturday, a three-man advance party, which included the commander of the new unit, W/C R.T. Heaslip, left Trenton for Rawalpindi in Pakistan to make preparations to receive his unit. At the same time, two Caribou aircraft departed Trenton for Rawalpindi and are scheduled to arrive there next Sunday. They will be available for operations immediately.

In the meantime, the Otter aircraft are being painted in United Nations colors and dismantled for air shipment in RCAF Hercules transport aircraft. The first of these Otter-laden Hercules aircraft are scheduled to leave Trenton Sunday. The Otter aircraft will be operational two days after its arrival.

Servicemen from the Quinte district assigned to duty in India are:

No Foul Play In Death of Farm Laborer

TRENTON — A farm laborer was found dead today in the house where he lived alone at R.R. 1, Trenton.

Police said they suspected no foul play in the death of 64-year-old Stanley Typhair. He had complained of being ill yesterday while picking apples on the nearby farm of Gordon Flynn.

The body was found this morning by a neighbor, and an autopsy was scheduled to determine cause of death.

India and the Commonwealth

The British Commonwealth has withstood many pressures as a loose federation of nations of many racial backgrounds. It has survived the transition of former colonies in Africa and Asia from the status of dependencies to that of independent nations. It took in its stride the withdrawal of South Africa, although at the time many felt that this was the beginning of the end for this unique and far-flung federation of countries.

Five years or so have passed since South Africa, in the wake of the riots at Sharpeville and increasing criticism of its apartheid policy, declared itself a republic. But despite the measure of solidarity that has bound Britain and the other members together since that fateful time there was always in the background the feeling that further cracks would appear in the Commonwealth structure and widen into irreparable breaks.

Such a crisis is at hand as India ponders its future. A report from New Delhi at the weekend said a number of parliament put forward a motion that India should quit the Commonwealth and members cheered when he advocated nationalization of all British assets.

Ghagwat Jha Azad, a member of the ruling Congress party, said in the House of the People (lower house): "This artificial link must go. Circumstances have proved beyond doubt that they (the British) are hostile to us."

Azad denounced British prime minister Wilson for not denouncing Pakistan as the aggressor in the recent conflict with India. Yet he (Wilson) "denounced India as an aggressor when Indian troops crossed the West Pakistan border in self-defence on September 6."

Here is a situation that is full of irony. Events have turned full circle, for it was the Labor Government of Clement Attlee that set in motion in 1948 the negotiations for India's independence, which came only after much bloodshed and the creation of the Moslem state of Pakistan within the bounds of the sub-continent.

Could it be that the Labor government of 1965 is about to preside over another schism paving the way for the final and irrevocable dissolution of the Commonwealth as we know it?

And what of Pakistan, once so closely allied by ties of friendship with Britain and the United States, but lately finding itself more in league with communist China? Will President Ayub Khan also lead his country out of the Commonwealth aegis?

Strange indeed are the patterns of history. If India and Pakistan leave the Commonwealth they will leave themselves open to further encroachment by China. And what reason to fear the vacuum which will result if India and Pakistan sever their ties with the West.

Canada's UN Role

Once again Canada is stepping into the breach in fulfilment of its responsibilities toward the United Nations. More than 1,000 Canadian military personnel are being sent to the Pakistan-India border to help enforce the ceasefire in that region.

The team is headed by Maj.-Gen. Bruce MacDonald, an armor specialist.

At nearby Trenton the airlift is already under way. Always prepared for this sort of thing, Transport Command of the RCAF swung quickly into action with the news that personnel were required to enforce the ceasefire. In all 13 planes, including Yukon and Hercules transports, as well as 6 Otter reconnaissance aircraft, are involved in the operation which is scheduled for completion October 13.

Enforcing a ceasefire can be a difficult task, and the fact that a fairly large team is being sent to join representatives of other nations already in the border region is indicative of its urgency as well as the hazards involved.

A Pakistani officer was quoted as saying that UN observers were being accorded free movement between the lines, "but we cannot guarantee their safety in this situation."

The UN, however, has shown it means business by sending a large team to enforce the ceasefire. It will be up to India and Pakistan to co-operate.

From the point of view of the Canadian and other UN observers we hope their role will help bring about a peaceful solution to the Indo-Pakistan dispute. We all join in wishing them a pleasant journey and a safe return.

It suppose most people aspire to be members of the liberals. If all issues in what was involved, there would be less enthusiasm, for the intellectual not only knows more, but suffers more, than the average member of our society . . . The mind, as it develops, becomes more analytical and often more critical of what appear to be stupidity, nonsensical priorities, and injustices in the social order . . . As one's perspective broadens one is exposed to feelings of elation and despair that exalte many people in our day. —Dr. Murray Ross of York University.

General Charles Townshend and his British army occupied Kut-el-Amara after a walled city controlling the Tigris River south of Baghdad, 30 years ago today. In 1915—and rested before advancing on the capital of Turkish Mesopotamia. Five months later they were beck at Kut, this time pursued by the Turks. Townshend surrendered with 10,000 men after a siege of five months. A second attempt with the same objective began in late 1916 and improved successful with in three months because of careful preparation and phaneing.

1924 — The first air circumnavigation of the world was completed by a pair of Army Air Service machines.

First World War

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940— Hans Fritzsche of Chatham, Ont., was arrested in Romania and accused of planning sabotage; six German aircraft were lost in raids over Britain and seven RAF machines in raids over Germany; three Canadians in the RAF and one in the British army were decorated for gallantry.

Afro-Asian Bloc No Longer United

Montreal Gazette

It was once thought the underdeveloped countries of Asia and Africa would be natural allies in world politics. That belief was so strong that, until a few years ago, the term "Afro-Asian bloc" was heard as often as the term "Communist bloc."

But recent events have shown that today it would be just as accurate to describe these countries as natural enemies as to think of them as natural allies.

India, Pakistan, China, Indonesia, Viet Nam and Malaysia are all underdeveloped lands. They embrace most of Asia, and much of the world's population. Far from working together, as was once expected, they are quarrelling or fighting among themselves.

It is evident that the idealistic view of the underdeveloped lands as a new, beneficient, moralistic force in the world, which was so prevalent in the 1950's, has been turned upside-down, by the events of the 1960's.

What has gone wrong? The existence of an Afro-Asian bloc was more than just a phantom in the 1950's. It actually existed. Where so many Westerners went wrong was in failing to see that this bloc was the product of interests which its members had in common in the 1950's, but which were likely to prove only temporary.

Those interests in common consisted of the search for independence. After the Second World War, all leading groups in Asia, and later in Africa, were agreed that the European empires must be ended. All were agreed that the Moslem must become independent. Each was in favor of independence for all. On this question, there was a real Afro-Asian unity.

This unity lasted for a while in the period following independence because it took time for the new governments to realize, deep down, that they had finally won their struggle against the West. A form of neo-colonialism continued for a time.

But this is now gone. Asia is today in the post-independence period, emotionally as well as theoretically. This has given the new countries opportunity and inclination to think of other things, especially of their own national interests. These governments have now passed into a period where they are neither better nor worse — although for the moment more unstable — than governments in the developed world.

Having won their independence, the countries of Asia and Africa can now indulge the luxury of national rivalries. They can seek to expand. India and Pakistan can fight over Kashmir. Viet Nam and South Viet Nam can fight it out with each other. Indonesia can seek to build an empire of its own.

Africa has not yet gone to the Asian extreme, although attempts at federation have already have failed. But it obtained its independence more recently. As governments in Africa grow stronger, national rivalries will probably become more intense there also.

The dissolution of the Afro-Asian bloc into quarrelling national states would be worrying under any conditions. But it is especially worrying in this technological age which has given nuclear weapons into the grasp of any government prepared to pay the price of building them.

Atomic technology is no longer a secret. China has already broken the Western and Russian monopoly in nuclear weapons. A number of other undeveloped countries have nuclear research establishments, supplied to them by the West. Who will be next to follow the Chinese example?

India has the facilities. Its government is under heavy pressure to use them. This week 89 Indian Parliamentarians, including both general secretaries of the ruling Congress Party, sent a letter to Prime Minister Shastri asking that atomic weapons be built. The argument given was that India could not rely on receiving help from others in case of crisis.

It is also possible that competing Asian alliances will arise. China and Indonesia formed an "axis" following Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations. Pakistan has threatened to leave the U.N. if the Kashmir problem is not solved, and could find its way to an alliance with China and Indonesia.

It is certain that the rest of this decade at least, there is not going to be any "Afro-Asian bloc." On the contrary, the underdeveloped countries are going to be competing and struggling with each other.

Hard-sell Leaders Make Casual Campaigns Archaic

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — . . . Notes from the campaign trail . . .

So now they've been going, hard, for four weeks to the very day.

And how are they doing, competitively, this fourth face-to-face time, as travelling political salesmen?

Well, you and just short of 11 million other voters have the chance in another six-weeks-less-a-day to decide that.

Meanwhile, let's watch Prime Minister Pearson, the old smoothie of diplomacy, and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker, the highly older curmudgeon of the Commons, at work.

There is more than just the tint of the carnival backer or medicine-show pitch - man in them both.

On the road, their bailyhoo acts as lead-in to the auditorium stage of a collegiate, the steps of the town hall or a platform just forward of the big-fella's barbecue pit. And like the stand out front of the carnival tent, they are all short for sound to get over the political performers' voices from going utterly and unintelligibly hoarse.

FASHION TRENDS

Odd, isn't it, the changing fads in campaigning from election to election.

All during the Mackenzie King years, except for the wartime conscription crisis, and its always-to-be-remembered Grey Owl's hydrofoil, the campaigner was in relatively low key, perhaps because the Liberals had such a seemingly unbreakable stranglehold on the national vote.

It was to last 22 years, nine of them with the gentle, courteous "Uncle Louie" St. Laurent as Prime Minister keeping campaigning on the quiet side until Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker stormed along in 1957.

Even then, with Dief making his first arouse-and-beware, save-money-here-can-you-take pitch, the mannerly St. Laurent played it sort of hush-hush, secure in his private lobby on the comforting theme of how-good-can-things-get.

At that time "Uncle Louie's" casual, off hand shrug and his matter-of-fact attitude seemed to say, "Charlie's trying to be excited about — you never had it so good."

The kindly old Prime Minister's arched eyebrow and slow-smiling peer over his rimless specs seemed to say, "Isn't he cute, he bewilderment, what all the shouting was about.

Then, the eyes blazing and his accusing right forefinger pointing in stiff indignation, told him and those they lost, for the Liberals it was the last campaign of the soft-sell.

Later St. Pearson took over, and for all his smooth diplomacy and charm of personality, he seemed to be in the respectively hard professional at heart, attempting blustery with the slick public relations operators from Toronto's own world of Madison Avenue.

And there, suddenly, Mike was matching Dief in the hard-sell, or trying to.

NOW A-GO-GO

At first it wasn't exactly a match and by the time Diefenbaker almost put him out of business before he was well started.

But in the seven years since, things have changed and for the last two elections it is a been a must-to-win minority stand-off.

Nothing is casual. Nothing quiet. Nothing easy.

Lullabies are long out of fashion.

Now both Dief and Mike are the eyes of their own furious self-generated hurricanes.

Both have become adept at doing any number of things all at the same time.

They can answer two phone calls, scan the day's headlines, lead through the mail, sign correspondence, direct the setting up of radio and TV facilities, chat with reporters, instruct their secretaries, wolf down a sandwich and shake hands with that ever-coming queue of taypayers and voters.

This kind of thing can get pretty frantic and band on all 11 million including the Prime Minister and the Conservative Leader, although they don't often show it.

It drives secretaries and campaign janitresses into a frenzy. It is a much publicized pressure and breathless confusion about it all.

But the two old campaigners can stand this, they can stand about anything.

The most tough scene does it make that the two men who are to be the nation's leaders, the "Chief" and the "Leader of the Chief, should be running themselves ragged in the third to four years that could end in a minority stalemate?

"And when you are on this subject Gentlemen, don't forget to mention the five mile stretch from L'Amable into Dorset and Gravenhurst work has already been done to eliminate the two worst hills on the road between Bancroft and Belleville, is it any wonder then that business is being diverted to Peterborough, Lindsay and our County Town and considerable business must be done there, that is about time then that we had a decent highway opened up to the County seat of business."

Injections Can Prevent Histamine Headaches

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: A specialist told me I have a Horton's-type headache, but didn't explain the cause or how to prevent it. He said to ask my family doctor, but I don't have one. — Mrs. T. B.

Horton's syndrome is a severe headache, usually occurring at night. The pain, behind the eye, is due to a sudden release of histamine in the body. Although histamine is a naturally-occurring substance, too strong a surge of it causes discomfort. This condition is more often called a histamine headache.

Desensitizing the patient to histamine is usually beneficial in much the same way hay fever sufferers are desensitized to pollens, or persons with other allergies are desensitized.

Very small injections of histamine are given and the dosage gradually increased as greater tolerance is attained.

As you can understand, this has to be done with close attention to the amount that is being given. If too much, the histamine breaks through your gradually built-up tolerance and then you have to start the desensitization all over again.

Obviously, since you don't have a physician, now is the time for you to get one because this is not a type of treatment you can do for yourself.

When you have chosen a doctor, see that he get a report from the specialist who diagnosed your case as Horton's headache.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Are tomatoes, or tomatoes cooked in other dishes, good or bad for the kidneys with a history? Also please send me the booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed." I enclose the necessary 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope. — B.

Cooked tomatoes, or tomato juice are all right but avoid raw ones.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a son, 9 years old and he has a bowel movement in bed every night. I have done everything to no avail. The doctor says I described something with psyllium, but it didn't help. Can you send me something to do? — Mrs. L. M. E.

The psyllium seed (which is a very useful medication to make bowel action easier) was a fair enough idea — assuming that your son was having difficulty in a daytime movement.

Bed-wetting at night usually is not in getting his bowels to move. The trouble is in getting him to get up at the right time.

Discuss this with your doctor. There may even be something else at the evening meal that is a laxative for him.

There may also be some conflict involved here. I doubt that either you or your boy has any idea why you have this condition. But it is my opinion that the problem has become a battle ground. You are fighting each other.

You say you've "done everything," which probably means you have punished him vigorously. And he resents it, and deep in his subconscious mind, he isn't going to let you win the punishment. Am I guessing right?

My advice is to try kindness, to use an approach along the lines of this: "Look, you and I don't enjoy this. Neither do I. You may have a few mistakes left in you, but if you have to go to the bathroom at night, get up and go! Pretty soon this battle will be over. It's up to you."

The foregoing advice won't work unless you feel that way, if you really want to help the boy. Deep inside, he's trying as hard to prove that he "can't help it" as you are trying to prove that he'd "better help it or else."

All of Us Are Really Astronauts

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

While in the country this summer, we watched, like most other American families, the week-long space orbiting of our astronauts. We marvelled, we applauded, we sighed in relief as they came down safely.

"I wonder what it would be like to be on a space ship," mused my 10-year-old boy. "You're on one," I told him. "And you have been all your life."

The earth itself is a very small space ship, by astronomical standards. It is only 8,000 miles in diameter, which makes it just a tiny speck in our galaxy. And our galaxy is only one of millions.

Yet this tiny speck has sustained billions of human passengers for more than two million years as it has orbited around the solar system. It shows no signs of running down for millions of years more, and all it needs is fuel and sun to see to keep it going and to regenerate life "on board."

If we could implant in our children, at an early age, this concept of a global space ship, they might possibly be a more prepared in attitude and action, to treat one another as a crew members should, when they grow up.

It may be too late — psychologically speaking — for most adults to adopt this approach. We see the world in a narrow sublunary terms: in terms of racial divisions and nation states, of ancient rivalries and provincial fears, of six-light compartments separating one person from another from another.

But to see the world as the astronauts saw it — this fragile yet sturdy sphere revolving in the immensity of space, carrying its millions of passengers locked together for a lifetime — is the only way to make it viable in the future. When two men can circle the globe in less time than it takes us to mow a good-sized lawn, then anything less than a global viewpoint is hopelessly inadequate.

Nature has provided us with a magnificently self-renewing space ship, containing everything it needs for perpetual flight, for nourishment, for coal and sneered, even a week's flight would have been imperiled.

Everybody is an involuntary crew member on Earth I. The compartments we create are artificial and destructive. Until now, however, we only had the power to injure other members of the crew. Today we can "eat" the whole ship and everybody on it.

The only hope is to think of ourselves as astronauts.

Fish, Wildlife Work Related To Rotary Club

The fish and wildlife branch of the Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed is responsible for an area of some 8,700 square miles containing 114 inland lakes and almost 200 streams and creeks.

These areas of water range from the relatively unproductive lakes of the pre-Cambrian Shield to highly fertile areas to the south. The northern lakes nevertheless support some species of trout, although some have been spoiled by the introduction of such warm water species as bass and pike.

Belleville Rotarians heard these and other facts of the work of the Lands and Forests staff yesterday from Peter Littkeman of the fish and wildlife branch.

Mr. Littkeman said in the Tweed district there were 380 lakes containing brook trout and these were stocked bi-annually. Another 120 stretches of water contained lake trout.

A native of Danzig in Poland, Mr. Littkeman spoke of the work of reclamation, control of pollution, replenishment of fish stock, supervision of angling activities and the like.

The decision of Belleville and neighboring clubs to support the establishment of the International Student Centre at Queen's University in Kingston will cost an average of about $30 per head among the 10 clubs and 500 members involved, Freeman Burrows told the club.

The centre will cost an estimated $100,000. Queen's is donating $40,000 and Kingston Rotary is raising $45,000, leaving $15,000 to be raised by the other clubs.

President Ernest Burnham presided.

According to Hoy

By

Claire Hoy

Name of the Game

What's in a name?

Somebody said, "A name is a name is a name is a name . . ."

But when you've got a name like mine for instance, a name often becomes more than a name. It becomes a joke.

I remember when I was 10 years old and an ardent Toronto Maple Leaf fan. (Haven't changed a bit.) A certain company offered autographed pictures of the Leaf stars for just 25 cents and two bar tops. So, I saved my pennies for two weeks, and pestered everyone in the neighborhood until I collected the bar tops.

I was so excited by the prospect of having an autographed picture of Turk Broda that by the time the package came in the mail, I was completely beside myself.

But the line between exceeding joy and devastating heartbreak is often very thin. I think I cried for about three full days when I opened my package and what should I find? . . . A sweet little Maple Leaf brooch, addressed to Miss Claire Hoy.

It was always that way. All through my school days, whenever I went into the next grade or had a new teacher, it was standard for teacher to call the roll and say "Miss Hoy," when my turn came. Sometimes it would be two or three days before the teacher ever knew the difference, because before my voice changed, who could tell?

Of course, later on, when the call went out for Miss Hoy I used to reach down to the very depths of my throat and growl a frog-like "Present." The expression on teacher's face was satisfaction enough for me.

One time I signed up to play minor hockey, and they phoned my mother and said that girls were not allowed in the league. I almost didn't get to play at all that year because the officials didn't have my name down on the list.

Then in high school, the Canadian High School News sent this Mail Bag around to all the students. The Mail Bag was jammed with bargains for students and was really worth getting. The only problem was that I received the girl's Mail Bag and was offered such exciting items as two pairs for $1.00, lingerie for 29 per cent off and the latest fall skirts at a saving of $3.00.

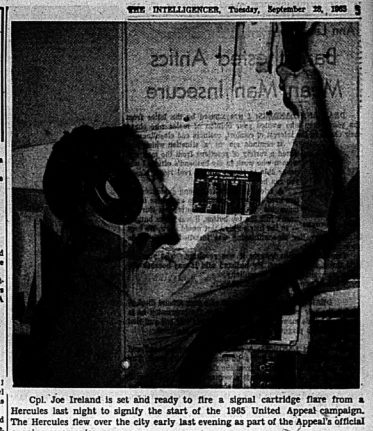
I never really did take advantage of the Mail Bag.

A couple of years ago, during the last Provincial elections, my wife and I lived in the Toronto riding of St. Patrick. The Hon. Kelso Roberts, former Belleville lawyer, was contesting the seat he had held many times for the Conservatives.

The St. Patrick riding included, among other things, China Town, centred mostly on Dundas Street, just east of University Ave. We lived less than three blocks from this centre.

I remember going to the mail box one day to pick up the mail and finding there some electioneering literature from Kelso Roberts. I never was sure exactly what his stand was on the issues of the day because the material was in Chinese.

On at least 10 occasions, while we lived in that area of Toronto, we received mail in Chinese, one letter inviting us to join the Chinese Community Club, another asking us to subscribe to the local Chinese newspaper.



When I met Mr. Roberts on the campaign trail, a few years later after graduating from college, I remember him looking at me when I walked in and saying, "When I saw your name, I expected a Chinese geisha girl."

What a disappointment for him.

Bare-cheeted Antics Mean Man Insecure

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was amused by the letter from the young man who wanted your opinion of males who shave their chests in the interest of comfort, coolness and cleanliness.

ANN LANDERS

It reminds me of a situation which produced a variety of reactions from the men and women who work in my husband's office. I never able to figure out the real story. Maybe you can help.

A friendly, attractive young junior executive used the warm weather as an excuse to remove his necktie and unbutton his shirt. It wasn't just the top button, it was three buttons — so the hair on his chest would show. He kept this up even after air-conditioning was installed, which made no suspicious.

The older women thought it was revolting. The younger girls thought it was sexy. My husband said it was because the fellow was vain about his masculinity.

What do you say? — UNRESOLVED.

DEAR UNRESOLVED: A man who goes around displaying the hair on his chest may give the impression he is proud of his masculinity, but psychiatrists will tell you that he really is plagued with doubts about his maleness.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few years ago my husband and I moved to this city and we do like it here very much. The people made us feel welcome from the first day.

One of my closest friends is a woman who is popular with everyone. Margie is active in church work. All types, ranging from the fanciest people in town to the common, ordinary ones, are crazy about her.

Margie works in the church and is an active part of everything worthwhile that goes on. Heaven knows where she gets the energy. She has a large family and a big house and yard and does all her own work.

Margie has only one fault and it bothers me a lot. She goes downtown bare-foot and with her hair in curlers. Should I tell her or shouldn't I? — JUST DON'T KNOW.

DEAR JUST: The postmark on your envelope was Bristow, Idaho. Cultured pearls from there are the city but I can't believe that bare feet and hair curlers are accepable in the business district of any town.

If I don't know you from a city and town Bristow (like maybe a reservation) tell her gently that she ought to wear shoes and leave the curlers at home when she goes to town. If she ever visits a larger city she knows it and doesn't give a darn, so keep quiet.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You deserve six lashes with a wet hash-mark for your advice to the Army wife whose children have no respect for their dad.

Some children cope with the everlasting uprooting and the absent fathers but most Army brats suffer terribly and develop all sorts of complexes. Our children, ages 10 and 12, learned from the start that him and refuse to take him seriously because he has macaroni where his spine belongs. Had he been a plumber it would have been the same sad story, so don't blame the military, I didn't.

Week of Relaxation At Posh Sanatorium In Dallas Costs $600

By KATHIE DIBBLL

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — They call it the Greenhouse, a posh sanatorium for the hothouse boners of the social set.

For $600 a woman can pay herself a week of relaxation, low - calorie food, exercise, beauty tips and treatment, and still - around pampering at the $2,000,000 resort which has just opened near here.

A two - week stay, recommended for maximum benefits, costs $1,100.

"It's much too reasonable," insisted Mrs. Mollie Oatman, spa manager, at a preview for U.S. women's editors. "Y o u couldn't do it all in a top-flight hotel for the price."

Fluffy air - conditioned, the white brick building's f o c a l point is a courtyard pool with water temperature kept precisely at 97 degrees.

Texas sunlight pours through a two-story glass ceiling onto the white m a r b l e courtyard floors. Private bedrooms, which also accommodate up to 30 guests, rim the courtyard on the third floor and around the balcony.

Baskets of begonias, vines and ferns hang from the ceiling. Palm trees sprout from gigantic pots.

Carpeted corridors off one end of the courtyard lead to exercise rooms, a sauna, herb steam room, hydrotherapy and massage rooms. A sunken dining room looks out on the pool. A library filled with books and card room are located in the front of the building.

LARGE STAFF

Mrs. Culbum, an ebullient housemother type with international experience, directs a staff of 55. The staff includes a Swedish masseuse, French and German facial experts and a dance specialist who heads the exercise corps.

Each day starts with exercise and getting away from it all.

"We've got to counteract the pressure from the big cities," Betty Richardson, salon manager, said.

Once in the Greenhouse, she said, "the women aren't allowed off the grounds."

The depressurization begins early with breakfast in bed — fruit, blue cheese, a slice of melba toast and a posey.

The flowers and three different sets of ethics are used "so they won't get bored with this service and this breakfast," explained Helen Corbitt, food expert and dietitian for the Greenhouse.

Her menus are designed to make the customers shed six pounds a week. Alcohol is absolutely ruled out.

After breakfast, the women don saffron terry cloth robes and blue exercise suits and head for phase one of their daily programs.

They have been stripped of all make-up and fingernail polish.

"As long as there aren't any men around, nobody cares," Mrs. Richardson explained. "They're having nothing but creams and lotions."

The program varies from day to day, Mrs. Richardson said, because "we've already t h e women and get bored with the same schedule."

However, in whatever order, the 30-hour schedule an hour's session with the masseuse, exercises for muscle tone and posture in the pool and in special rooms, facials and hair treatments. Trips to the sauna and bath, lessons on makeup and nail care are interspersed in the daily routine.

After work, the women can meet in the dining room for a low-calorie candlelight dinner. However, group eating is not required.

Susanna's Family Fare

PLUM BEAUTIFUL

During the summer it was fun to know we could indulge our appetite for sunshine in our heart's content because of the low calories count that is as long as one's stomach didn't object! Now, looking longingly at the popularly luscious plums on display we find that for each one we eat we are only using up 25 calories — and for the amount of fine body nutrients provided by a plum, they are more than well worth it.

Also found out (what I've always suspected) that once ripe are picked, that's it! Unlike other fruits they won't ripen any more, or improve in color or quality after harvesting.

Because of this little peculiarity then, it is best to buy them ripened and use as they will be used up quickly. The cheap, fresh-looking grapes in the well-formed bunches with the good rich color, indicate the most flavor and sweetness.

Grape jelly, in turn, is the greatest when made from a mixture of ripe and slightly under-ripe fruit — at least this is what I've heard through the grapevine! — SUSANNA

PICNIC PAC

Dear Susanna: Fridge dodrudging time again and what to do with the frozen food? How do you like this idea? When it is time to wash and defrost the interior of my refrigerator I place the frozen ice pack (one of those dry frozen kind) in my picnic cooler and store the frozen food there until the cleaning chore is completed. — Mrs. C. G. Good

Used Christmas Cards Make Orphans Happy

DEAR DORIS: In your column this evening I found a letter from "A Good Neighbor." It made me stop and think, why should anyone call themselves a good neighbor? She was speaking of giving used Christmas cards to children to send to their little friends.

Do young children really value giving each other cards, from close as many places where very poor children can use them?

Early in the spring I saw a letter from a Korean orphanage asking for cards for children to make scrapbooks and to play with them. I sent a box of Christmas cards. I received on June 30 a picture of these children, some boys from six to 17. Some looked very sad; parts of the letter were, too, for they simply us a lot of real happiness and pleasure, and they will be carefully and lovingly treasured by our children. It will be much appreciated if you kindly print it in our columns.

DORIS CLAGUE

The children in Canada, at least most of them, are fortunate enough to feel. After seeing the orphans at our nearby Home, I felt even they were fortunate compared to the children of Korea. So if you had the address of "A Good Neighbor" I am sure the children in our neighborhood would sacrifice their cards for these children of Korea. — VOLUNTEER WORKER.

DEAR VOLUNTEER: I agree. But we start impulses of generosity with friendliness right around home. Then, when we can, and do, branch out. Your letter will light a candle, I'm sure. And if Good Neighbor, or anyone else, writes in, I'll give her the address of your Korean friends.

P.S.: Good Neighbor was not being smug. I gave her that pen name.

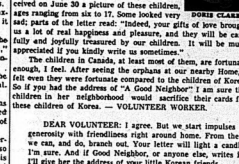
* * *

DEAR DORIS: I would like to get contact lenses, but I really don't know much about them. Some of my friends say they are terrible; that the lenses will sometimes slip behind your eyeballs and it is very difficult to get them out. Some say your eyes will swell up and you will need a drastic correction when you

Do you have to take out an insurance policy when you get them? I would certainly appreciate any information you could give me. — FOUR EYES.

DEAR FOUR EYES: Contact lenses take some getting used to; but long-time users declare they are worth all the trouble.

I guess the question is: How much do you need them? How did you get? Why do you want them?



If you are young, ordinary glasses may seem to you to mar your appearance. The contacts make you see well without being noticeable. They are a drastic correction which you just can't get with ordinary specs, in order to see to do your work, you'll bless them all your life.

If you are older, less patient, and don't really need contacts, there is less hope that you'll go through what it takes to handle and put up with them.

As with other things, you may insure them against loss if you've a mind to. Talk to your eye specialist about your own particular situation. That's what he's there for.

SALMON CASSEROLE FOR SIX

A casserole that is as pretty as a picture in my treat for you today. Whenever I mention the word casserole readers prick up their ears. This one calls for spinach and salmon but the pretty part is a ring of hard-cooked egg slices arranged in a border around the edge just before it is carried to the table. Select a baking dish that will accommodate the ingredients nearly to the brim without overflowing, for when the hard-cooked egg slices are finally applied they should be flush with the edge.

SALMON FLORENTINE
(Serves 6)

1 one-lb. can salmon, pink or red, 1 lb. spinach, cooked and drained, shake of pepper, shake of nutmeg, 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons chopped mild onion, ¼ clove garlic, chopped, 3 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups salmon liquid and milk, 2/3 cup fine cracker crumbs, ¼ cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese, 3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced, fresh parsley or watercress.

Drain salmon and reserve liquid. Flake salmon with a fork. Cook the spinach in the water which clings to the leaves after washing until wilted but still bright green. Drain well through colander or sieve. Chop coarsely, season with pepper and nutmeg, and spread over bottom of shallow buttered casserole or baking dish. Gently saute the onion and garlic in the butter until soaked with butter but not browned. Blend in flour and salt, then stir in salmon liquid and milk mixture until thick. Remove from heat and stir in salmon. Pour evenly over spinach in casserole. Mix together the fine crumbs and cheese and spread evenly over top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 30 to 35 minutes. Be sure this is not near the top of oven for it is easy to scorch the cheese on top too much. As soon as it is taken from the oven arrange the hard-cooked egg slices, overlapping, in a uniform ring around edge. At centre place a little nosegay of parsley or watercress sprigs and serve at once.

Note:—The liquid on canned salmon has a high vitamin A content, almost as good as cod liver oil. Do not pour it down the sink. Incorporate it into the salmon dish you are making as I have done in the above.

Many Voters Are Undecided Says Douglas

By BEN WARD

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said Monday night a poll still to be published shows that 40 per cent of Canadians have 'not yet decided how to vote in the Nov. 8 federal election.

He did not identify the poll but said it reports that the percentage of undecided voters has risen three points in recent weeks.

Mr. Douglas described these voters as those "who have become fed up, disappointed, disillusioned and even disgusted with the lack of leadership in Ottawa."

He spoke to 725 persons at a nomination meeting that selected John Harney, 34, an English professor at Guelph University, as the party's candidate in Wellington South.

Mr. Douglas said that if 60 per cent of those who still are undecided swing to the NDP this party will form the next government.

His reference to the 40-per-cent figure for the undecided vote is the highest for this group that has been cited by a party leader in the campaign.

ATTACKS AGREEMENT

Mr. Douglas renewed his attack on the Canada-U.S. auto agreement, saying that it amounts to a $50,000,000 raid on the public treasury by the big auto companies.

The government had no right to make such an agreement without first consulting Parliament and insisting on lower car prices in return for the $50,000,000 tariff rebate involved, he said.

Prime Minister Pearson had said he wanted a majority government to put through essential legislation and had mentioned "trade deals."

Did this mean more "secret deals" like the ones made with the steel, electrical and aluminum industries? Mr. Douglas asked.

He said the Liberals in 1963 had promised to establish the Canada Development Corporation designed to buy Canada back from U.S. control.

But when Finance Minister Gordon first proposed the corporation in Parliament the "dissenters from Bay Street" and Jessie James Street" forced him to back out and devise a watered - down proposal that was unveiled in the 1966 budget.

Today, the NDP leader flies to Sault Ste. Marie to begin a three-day swing through wintry Northern Ontario.

He flew East Sunday night from balmy British Columbia, spent eight hours in Toronto Monday filming outdoor television commercials in a chilly north wind, then drove 90 miles for an evening appearance here.

Diefenbaker Starts Major Quebec Drive

By STEWART MacLEOD

MONTREAL (CP) — With a 14-hour day of whistle-stopping behind him, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker set himself a 16-hour schedule today for his first major campaigning in Quebec since the election was announced.

Taking off from Montreal, he was to drive 75 miles to St. Adolphe, another 35 miles to Harrington, 60 miles to Lachute for an evening rally, then 75 miles to Ottawa.

"I never felt better in my life," he said Monday night after he had shaken the last of some 600 hands for the day. "It's been a long day though."

His day started at Campbellton, N.B., where he jumped off the private railway car that had carried him from Halifax overnight, and began shaking every hand within reach. He was to do this more than a dozen times before his train pulled into Montreal.

"Bonjour, bonjour," said the 70-year-old leader. "Nom?"

And every time a name was pronounced, Mr. Diefenbaker pronounced it back. Several times he spelled them out.

"Ah, bon voyage," he said in reference to his trip to Halifax and St. John's, Nfld. "A wonderful trip; better than 37 and 38."

WIFE LENDS A HAND

His wife, Madame Diefenbaker," said his wife, who also shook most of the hands on the platform.

The crowds were lighter than in previous campaigns, although they gradually built up as the train got closer to Montreal. More than 150 were out at Levis, across the river from Quebec City, and there were 100 at St. Hyacinthe.

The smallest turnout was at Rimouski, where Gerard Ouellette, a one-time Social Credit MP, who joined the Conservatives during the last Parliament, came down the platform with seven others. Several more came along before the train left.

Mr. Diefenbaker made no speeches during the day, and he had no press conferences. "I just want to meet as many people as possible."

Station platforms were flecked with snow in many places. Occasionally, Mr. Diefenbaker signed autographs and at Rivere-du-Loup he signed his name on a cast which covered a woman's broken wrist.

He plunged into French on several occasions and often ended by joining in the laughter.

McGEE TO RUN

Buick Riviera has been completely restyled for 1966, as illustrated in this sport coupe, and it is a larger car in every way. The wheelbase is longer at 119 inches, with wider tread, and both the hood and the front fenders are longer. Sharp slanting of the windshield increases the low-car effect and improves visibility. Riviera is offered this year as a six-passenger car without a console. Instruments are grouped on the panel directly in front of the driver. Riviera restyling highlights a year in which all Buicks have styling refinements. LeSabre and Wildcat models have redesigned front and rear with sharply defined lines and angularly rakish windshields. There are 16 models in the five series, including Electra 225 Custom.

Horticulturalists Plan To Make Canada Beautiful In Her Centennial Year

PICTON (Staff) — Plan now to help make Canada more beautiful for Centennial Year", was the challenge thrown to one hundred members of Horticultural Societies of district 2 who gathered in Picton for their annual meeting on Saturday. Guest speaker was Russell Gomme, secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association.

The visitors not only enjoyed the meeting in the Curling Club, but viewing the exhibits at the County Fair which included a large section featuring the County H. S. flower show, and a magnificent display of dahlias by Jack Laundry.

"Planning to make Canada more beautiful for her 100th birthday is of prime importance", said Russell Gomme, secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association, guest speaker. He suggested that projects might include planting in public places such as around municipal buildings. He stressed the need of tags to identify trees and shrubs, not only those newly planted but for those already existent.

The Farmstead Improvement Competition offers an opportunity for rural people to play a role in commemorating the Centennial, Mr. Gomme noted. "Cities may go in for art centres and such, and while worthy, none have greater or more lasting benefits than horticultural work such as tree planting and parks."

Mr. Gomme suggested that one improvement might be the removal of dead elms. Centennial celebrations will mean thousands of visitors and participation in the Farmstead Improvement competition, which closes October 1, will help beautify the whole countryside, Mr. Gomme noted.

The Association's Centennial year tree — the Royalty Crab — will go on sale in 1967 and it is hoped they will be planted in all public places. This is an entirely new tree and will be available only in Centennial Year. "They are gifts to be given Canada on her birthday, not planted now", Mr. Gomme declared.

The trillium is Ontario's provincial flower and Mr. Gomme urged greater emphasis be placed on these by planting in beds around schools and elsewhere, with suitable markers which are available.

Devote the winter months to planning Centennial projects, Mr. Gomme urged.

After voicing appreciation, Mrs. J. S. Shepardson presented Mr. Gomme with a Prince Edward cheese.

RE-ELECTED DIRECTOR

Similar stress on beautification was made by District Director Phil Dodds of Picton, who was unanimously re-elected to that office on motion of C. A. S. Smith and Enos David of Belleville society. Re-elected association director was Mrs. J. S. Shepherdson, Kingston, while Mrs. J. McHarg, Kilgston, was returned as secretary.

Societies in Brockville, Gananoque, Kingston, Collins Bay, Napanee, Prince Edward, Belleville and Stirling presented reports which revealed much public planting, educational programs, junior activities, flower shows, bus trips, demonstrations, clean-up and painting and tree planting campaigns.

Several members of Brighton Society were guests and other Horticultural members came from various points to see the flower show, which received very high praise and offered many ideas for other flower shows. Especially admired was Jack Laundry's magnificent display of dahlias.

C. A. Smith of Belleville, told of the Trillium award by their society, these markers recognizing outstanding lawns and gardens.

A guest, Dr. Charles McWilliams, member of Prescott H.S., was given a hearty welcome. He is a brother of William McWilliams, superintendent of P.E.C. Home.

Prince Edward Society was host at a morning coffee break and a light luncheon at noon, with members of Picton W.I. serving. Prince Edward Curling Club kindly gave the H.S. the use of their lovely lounge and facilities and this was fully appreciated by the 100 members present and the local society.

The meeting was briefer than usual to permit visit to Fair exhibits and hours later saw the guests—most attending their first Fair here—still enthusing over the variety, quality and beauty of these exhibits.

Canada's Loyalty to UN Appears to Bend Position In Seating of Red China

By BORIS BISKEW

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Canada's loyalty to the United Nations appears to bend her position slightly in favor of the eventual seating of Communist China in the world organization.

Canada, because of close relations with the United States, has continued to vote in the past with the Americans against the seating of Communist China and is expected to follow the same pattern when the question comes up for a vote during the current 20th session of the General Assembly.

But the Canadian government while still officially opposing UN membership for Peking, is showing signs that it is directing more attention toward favoring the admission of China into the world organization.

Canada has told the assembly that she is in agreement with UN Secretary General U Thant's suggestion that for the sake of world peace all nations should participate in the United Nations.

HOPES FOR PROGRESS

Commenting on Thant's statement that military conflicts in Asia have underscored his view that all countries, including Communist China, should be represented in the UN, External Affairs Minister Martin said upon arrival here to attend the opening of the assembly that he did not wish to state "a specific policy" at the time.

However, outlining Canada's foreign policy a few days later in an address before the assembly, Martin, without specifically mentioning China, said:

"I hope that as events in Asia unfold it may prove possible, in the interests of this organization and of mankind, to make progress toward what the secretary-general . . . has described as 'the imperative need for the United Nations to achieve universality of membership as soon as possible'."

At the same time Canada's official stand is that her position on the admission of China has not changed but that some progress might take place provided the Chinese indicated willingness to help end the fighting in Viet Nam and generally work towards the resolution of tensions in such places as along the Indian-Chinese border.

EXTREMELY CAREFUL

Canada is extremely careful in commenting on the question of Chinese admission to the UN, especially in view of the violent attack on Chinese policy by Arthur Goldberg, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Goldberg expressed strong opposition to the seating of the Peking government and predicted the attempt will again be turned down when the issues comes up for a vote, possibly in late November.

Canada had backed the U.S. in opposing Chinese admission the last time the question was raised in the assembly in 1963 when 37 nations opposed the motion, 41 voted in favor of Peking and 12 abstained.

During this session at least, when the Chinese question is again up for a vote, Canada's loyalty to the UN will likely give way to her friendship with the United States, whose leaders would be more than ruffled should Canada take an independent course on the matter.

New Evidence Being Probed in Minister's Case

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial police are investigating new evidence in the case of Russell Horsburgh, the former United Church minister who was convicted in Chatham last year of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Insp. A. T. Eady of the OPP criminal investigations bureau spent four days in Chatham last week and reported back to the department Monday.

The inspector was following up affidavits given in the last few months by a youth and a girl who were witnesses at the trial.

Mr. Horsburgh, 45, former minister of Chatham's Park St. United Church, was convicted on five of eight counts of contributing to juvenile delinquency and sentenced to one year in jail.

Several members of a church youth group testified at the trial that they had sexual relations with the knowledge and encouragement of the minister.

Mr. Horsburgh, appealing the convictions, is free on $2,500 bail.

Last week, the United Church of Canada gave the minister $5,000 toward his living expenses while awaiting the outcome of the appeal. He now is living in Toronto.

OPTIONS EXTENDED

Options on about 1,200 acres of land in the Talbotville, Ont., area near St. Thomas have been extended for another 30 days, it was announced Monday. On July 15, the London Free Press said the Ford Motor Company of Detroit was behind the optioning and had plans to build an extensive plant on the site.

EXPORTS UP

Canada's commodity exports in July, valued at $790,000,000 were up three-tenths of one per cent from $788,000,000 in July, 1964, the bureau of statistics reported today. The bureau said exports to the United States and the United Kingdom were both higher than last year but sales of goods to all other countries as a group, including the rest of the Commonwealth, were down.

RECOGNIZES CULTURE

It's good business to do business differently with Quebec, the president of Lever Brothers Ltd. said in Vancouver Monday. "I believe that the time has come when English-speaking businessmen should speak up about the importance of recognizing that French Canadians have a separate and distinct culture of their own," said J. C. Lockwood.

Ontario Version of Canadian Wheat Board to Be Set Up

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario version of the Canadian wheat board may market the grain in the province, farmers have been told.

The Ontario Wheat Producers Marketing Board is considering adopting part of the marketing system of the federal board, Kenneth Standing of Chatham, board secretary manager, said Monday.

He told the Ontario board's annual meeting it has studied Canadian wheat board operations and their advantages to producers in looking after crop carryovers, controlling prices, and giving growers the highest returns.

The Ontario board buys surplus winter wheat and exports it on behalf of the province's 27,000 growers. A levy on all wheat sold finances the operation.

Earlier, growers were told that Ontario wheat producers, faced with the threat of overproduction, must absorb the cost of surplus wheat themselves.

Board Chairman R. T. Bolton of Seaforth, Ont., said: "At present price levels, apparently we are producing a product for which only limited markets exist."

GREATER LAST YEAR

He said the problem was greater in 1964 when by this time 18,200,000 bushels of wheat had been produced. This year farmers report only a 13,100,000-bushel crop so far.

He said the board, by guaranteeing a minimum price to the producer "is becoming increasingly more valuable to the producers during the years when it handles the greatest volume of wheat." This year the minimum is $1.65.

In 1964 of a record 13,000,000 bushels marketed, the board handled 4,900,000.

It was necessary for the board to increase its stabilization levy from nine to 15 cents a bushel and still the stabilization fund was $18,220 short after all handling costs had been paid.

ANSWERS COMPLAINTS

Mr. Standing said some producers had been complaining about the 15-cent deduction and a rebate.

He said:

"The benefits of the board are greatest to producers in the years when the rebates are the smallest. The complete use of all the 15-cent levy money this year is a grim warning that there are not enough safeguards in the program."

Both Mr. Bolton and Mr. Standing outlined some of the problems faced by the board in marketing the growers' product: Increased production, increased marketing and less domestic use, a limited domestic market and an undependable export market. . .

"We must provide for sufficient money to cover purchases first of all," Mr. Bolton said.

Guardian Takes Canada Apart In Supplement

LONDON (CP)—The Guardian, in a 10-page supplement on Canada, suggests more immigrants should enter Canada by its arctic doorstep to realize the immensity of the country and its opportunities.

"The impact is dulled if you enter more cozily along the airport corridors of Toronto and Montreal, with immigration men smiling under the piped music," says writer Clyde Sanger who undertook a month's tour of Canada to prepare the Guardian survey, published today.

He found the provinces are looking more to the North for their resources and hydro power and the prospects both inviting and exciting. But with prosperity and easy living in "Southern Canada" the job of recruiting manpower for the North has become more difficult.

In Quebec, he found talk of separatism usually accompanied by government leaders' comments that the "real separatists" were in British Columbia, a province that does more trade with California than with the rest of Canada.

The Guardian offers British readers these general observations about Canada:

There are no Sunday newspapers; the "magnificent" Ontario road system results from good gravel left by glaciers; Toronto is much gayer, thanks in part to the new city hall and the influx of Italian immigrants; with the exception of those in Saskatchewan, few Canadian women are interested in politics; some long-distance bus stop lavatories are the world's worst.

(The daily Victoria Colonist publishes a Sunday edition and two weeklies publish on Sunday in Quebec province, Montreal Dimanche-Matin and Chicoutimi-Progres-Dimanche.)

Escape Hardware Found In Lemay's Mattress After Guard Is Charged

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A jail duty sheriff, and Harold D. Algar, 27, jail guard who allegedly set up Lemay's jailbreak, the sheriff said.

Mixon, Algar and possibly others were to share in a $35,000 to $50,000 fund set up by Lemay to make his escape, the sheriff said.

Mixon and Algar have been charged with aiding Lemay's escape and Mixon faces an additional charge of bribing Algar as a police officer, the sheriff said.

Buchana claimed that Mixon and Lemay's attractive wife planned the escape "from the outside", and that Algar was "the inside man."

The stocky, five foot eight Lemay was arrested in May aboard a yacht in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. His picture, distributed by the RCMP, had been seen on the Early Bird satellite television program.

Lemay is accused of leading a gang that looted a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. The exact value of the haul was not established because some box-holders were reluctant to talk about their losses.

If you're a man after a moose come hunting season, keep your powder dry—and your appetite high.

The Roman-snouted buglers of the northlands' forest fleets are said to be plentiful.

An official treatise from the office of the Hon. Kelso Roberts, minister, Ontario Lands and Forests, advises, "prospects for moose hunting this year are excellent."

The boys of the L and F who roam in the wild blue yonder over the wilds of moose range up there somewhere this side of the Arctic snows report "moose is abundant."

If that fickle fink, the weatherman who sent the rains deluging the northern moose district last year, co-operates, there is no reason why hunters should not come home with large modicum of success.

Last year the greater majority of the Durante-schnozzled longhorns thumbed their snouts at hunters who shivered and nearly froze under a blanket of cold wet weather that drove them to the warmth and comfort of cabin, resort and whatnot—and a lot of them home empty-handed.

This helped reduce the total calculated bill of moose from 13,574 in 1963 to 11,818 last year. Closure of the season south of the French and Mattawa was another contributing factor.

This area of Southern Ontario was closed due to apparent declines in moose numbers. It seems the old bulls, the young bucks and their harems don't like to become too closely associated with two-legged rifle, cannon and howitzer-toting humans and look off for far northern areas where they could roam, graze and procreate at their leisure.

You'd think Ole Man Moose and his heirs were horning in on the family allowance by the number of births they record in a season.

Aerial surveys over the northern spots revealed the moosian nurseries were filled to overflowing. Forest maternity wards displayed larger quotas than ever before with the result the moose season for Southern Ontario has again been established to run concurrently with the deer season in the area from November 8 to 20.

And don't forget the moose season in the Tweed Forest district, north of Number 7 Highway during the regular deer season is open to residents of Ontario only. Licences are $10 and available only from Department of Lands and Forests offices.

"Times have changed," a veteran hunter told me the other day. "Nowadays the average deer hunter won't wander too far from the comfort of a well-appointed cabin, cottage or a hunting lodge. He'll wait on a runway and all that and if a buck or doe happens along he'll take a shot at it."

"Moose hunters are a hardier breed. They don't set up house with a sign attached "Hunters' Convention, 1965," put up signs on trees "Visiting Moose Welcome" or go hide behind a big rock and chirp a man-made mating call."

Some of them, however, are loathe to move very far from roads and waterways and extensive areas of excellent moose country remain virtually untouched.

Most of them forget that getting back in the wilder northern areas with a four-wheel drive vehicle or crossing one portage will eliminate most competition from other hunters.

It's all right if you are blessed with loads of that lettuce that keep banks green. You can get yourself a motorized snow toboggan or a ski-equipped aircraft and you can reach the otherwise inaccessible areas after freeze-up. It's as easy as that.

To encourage hunters to take more moose in these remote areas the Department has extended the season from January 3 to January 8 over a major portion of northern Ontario.

Every effort is being made to open up as much territory to moose hunters as possible and lumber companies for the most part have been co-operative in allowing travel on their roads.

There it is. The moose are there for the taking. They're more plentiful than ever. If somebody can slip the weather man a good-behavior Mickey Finn you should bring home a mule-nose or kin with a minimum of effort and a maximum of hunting fun.

Giants, Dodgers Race Neck-And-Neck

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Members of the supporting cast are beginning to make their presence felt in the National League pennant race.

Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale sat in the dugout as Los Angeles Monday night while Johnny Podres, a Dodger hero 10 years ago but virtually a forgotten man today, did the pitching. With Willie Mays a bit hitter, providing the power, he defeated Cincinnati Reds 6-1.

It was the same story at San Francisco, where catcher Tom Haller, whose average is .251 and Warren Spahn, 44, the retiree from New York Mets, were prominent in the Giants' 8-4 conquest of St. Louis Cardinals.

The results left the Dodgers and Giants tied for the lead, both with six games remaining, while the third-place Reds fell four games back. Cincinnati also has six games left, two at Los Angeles and the other four at San Francisco.

Davis, a potential super-star who has never lived up to his buildup in five years with the Dodgers, drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Podres, 33, a southpaw who won two games in the 1955 World Series, limited Cincinnati to six days, was the winning pitcher against the Reds.

Haller, beginning to find his batting eye after a slow start, brought in five runs with two homers and a single, while Spahn, who had to leave in the fifth inning as the Cards batted back from a 7-1 deficit.

Both Clubs got help from their bullpen, Ron Perranoski hailing behind Larry Jackson's four-hit pitching as Billy Williams singled home the only run and Houston drew even with the losing run on a wild pitch in the 10th inning to nip Milwaukee Braves 4-3. The Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates were idle.

In the only American League game, Baltimore Orioles ran their winning streak to eight, clipping Kansas City Athletics 6-4 on Curt Blefary's two-run triple in the eighth inning.

The Reds collected 11 hits and two walks off Podres and Perranoski but clutch pitching and three double plays killed their opportunities. Davis homered in the first and singles by Leo Johnson and Jim Lefebvre drove in two more runs in the third to drive out Sammy Ellis, Cincinnati's 21-game winner. Maury Wills stole two bases.

Two throwing errors by Jo-Jo Javier gave the Giants two unearned runs in the third inning and Willie McCovey's double knocked in two more in the fourth to back up Haller's heroics.

The Astros got their winning run against Milwaukee without a hit. Joe Morgan walked and stole second, Jim Wynn also walked, both advanced on a passed ball and Morgan came home on Dan Osinski's wild pitch.

Williams singled home Don Landrum in the eighth to break up a duel between the Cubs' Larry Jackson and Jim Bunning of Philadelphia, who struck out 11 and allowed six hits.

Kansas City ran wild for six stolen bases against the Orioles, including the 30th and 31st of the year by Bert Campaneris.

Defeat Sasky Riders

Kapp Sparks Lions To 26-14 Win

REGINA (CP)—Quarterback Joe Kapp produced his best display of the season Monday night to spearhead British Columbia Lions to a 26-14 victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders as the Lions tied their victims for third place in the Western Football Conference.

Kapp completed 21 of 30 passes for 280 yards and directed a robust ground attack that gained 136 yards. His favorite aerial target was Peter Kempf, who held eight of nine passes aimed his way and led the scoring parade with 12 points.

Kempf, normally a placement specialist, started at flanker because regular Ronnie Morris was nursing knee injuries.

Kapp took a pass from Kapp for one touchdown and added a field goal, three converts and a single to tie Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan for the WFC scoring lead with 32 points. Larry Robinson of Calgary is third, one point behind.

Bill Munsey and Bob Swift added touchdowns and defensive back Neal Beaumont kicked a single to complete the scoring for the Lions, who led 3-0 after the first quarter, 17-7 at halftime and 18-1 after three quarters.

Six of a ratchewan's touchdowns were scored by fullback George Reed and flanker Hugh Campbell. Abendschan converted both.

The game was watched by 12,587 fans.

STAMPS LEAD LEAGUE

The victory put the Lions deadlocked with Saskatchewan with 11 points. The league-leading Calgary Stampeders have 14 and Winnipeg Blue Bombers 12. The Lions have played one game less than Saskatchewan.

Beaumont made 5 pass interception early in the fourth quarter to safeguard the Lions' margin after Saskatchewan had moved within four points. He leaped high to steal the ball from Martin Pahl and broke to the R ough rider momentum after quarterback Ron Lancaster had a downfield march.

B.C. coach Dave Skrien said it was the best game the Lions have played since they won the Grey Cup against Hamilton last season.

Saskatchewan, which has lost its last four games at home, riddled the B.C. defence for 288 yards passing on 20 completions in 31 attempts by Lancaster and Jeff Nicholson and Hal Ledyard. Led by George Reed, the offence managed 89 yards on the ground.

Each club had 24 first downs.

End Mack Burton hauled in five passes for 69 yards and Pat Claridge nabbed three of three for 47 yards to support Kempf ably in the pass-receiving department for B.C.

Campbell gained 100 yards, all on pass receptions, for Saskatchewan. Reed, leading ground - gainer in the WFC, picked up 73 yards rushing and 13 passing.

Both clubs apparently escaped serious injury.

Hull Leaves Hawks' Camp In Huff

Sons Barred

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Up to now, fellows named Hull have always been welcome in Chicago Black Hawks' dressing room.

The normal complement is two—Bobby and Dennis. For a short time last Saturday the core was up to four.

BOBBY HULL

It started last Friday when coach Billy Reay told the Hawks that friends and relatives would not be allowed into Chicago Stadium during drills.

Today Dennis is the only Hull in sight. With the start of the season less than a month away, Bobby is sitting at home in Addison, Ill., while his team-mates skate themselves into shape in Chicago.

The next day Bobby showed up with his two sons, Blake, 5, and Bobby, 4, and Reay told him the youngsters were barred. All three left.

"I told him if my boys weren't welcome I didn't want to be there either," the NHL shooting leader told reporters Monday. "That's the last I heard from the Hawks."

General manager Tommy Ivan said Monday it was a straight disciplinary problem.

'BOBBY NOT EXEMPT'

"This is strictly a disagreement over club policy regarding dressing-room procedure," he explained. "We have a lot of hockey players in camp and the rules have to be the same for Bobby as for anyone else. The leader Hull has not signed his contract and is reported to be asking for $100,000. But both Hull and Ivan said salary had nothing to do with the present dispute.

"But this is something else," said Hull "I've always taken my kids to practice. I want them to skate. In Chicago they don't have skating facilities as we have in Canada. I see nothing wrong with bringing them out to do a little skating."

Hull said he plans to take up the matter with club owner Jim Norris when Norris returns from Florida.

Conditions were more peaceful at other NHL training camps. Boston Bruins were interested to their new general manager, Hap Emms, as they opened their camp Monday at London, Ont., with 30 players bidding for jobs.

Montreal Canadiens announced the signing of four of last year's Stanley Cup champions—goaltender Gump Worsley, centre Ralph Backstrom, and left-wingers John Ferguson and Gilles Tremblay. The Habs, drilling jointly with Cleveland Barons of the American League, held their first intra-squad scrimmages Monday.

Centre Ed Joyal acquired from Detroit Red Wings in an off - season trade, signed his contract with Toronto Maple Leafs while New York Rangers signed goaltender Cesare Maniago and forwards John McKenzie and Bill Hickey.

Marichal Will Pitch For Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Juan Marichal, pitching ace of San Francisco Giants, has been pitching since last Wednesday despite a pulled groin muscle but he will take his regular turn Thursday and Sunday for the National League baseball club.

Marichal, loser of three straight, said it was the first time in his life he had lost three in a row.

How They're Hitting

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP)—With Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates leading baseball's National League by 10 points and Tony Oliva of Minnesota Twins heading the American by six, the majors are likely to have the first repeat batting champions since 1952.

Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals and Ferris Fain of Philadelphia Athletics, in 1951 and 1952, were the last players to put back-to-back titles together at the same time.

With only one week remaining in the regular 1965 campaign, Clemente is hitting .333. Hank Aaron of Milwaukee Braves is at .323. The Pirates' outfielder lost two points last week, collecting six hits in 20 tries. Aaron slipped three points with a 7-for-27 performance.

Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs jumped to third place with a six-point gain to .317. He had 10 hits in 20 times at bat last week. Willie Mays of San Francisco Giants dropped one point to fourth at .306, a loss of four points on a 4-for-19 showing.

Oliva increased his average four points to .321. He had eight hits in 18 attempts. Yastrzemski remained second with the same .315 mark he had a week ago.

Brooks Robinson of Baltimore Orioles is third at .304 followed by Fred Whitfield of Cleveland Indians at .300.

The figures include Sunday's games.

Norm Cash of Detroit Tigers closed in on Tony Conigliaro of Boston, the AL pacesetter in home runs. Cash slammed three last week, giving him 30. Conigliaro's one homer lifted his total to 31. Rocky Colavito of Baltimore Orioles added 10 lead in runs batted in with 104, an increase of two.

Mays walloped one homer, boosting his NL leading aggregate to 50. Deron Johnson, third baseman for Cincinnati Reds, is the RBI leader with 125. He drove in one run last week.

Clemente, 30-year-old Puerto Rican, won the National League crown last season with a .339 average. Oliva, 25-year-old Cuban, led the AL as a rookie with a .323 mark in 1964.

Open Training

Bruins Plan Many Changes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The atmosphere was business - like when Boston Bruins settled into their National Hockey League training camp at Treasure Island Gardens here Monday.

And dominant in the no-nonsense proceedings was Leighton (Hap) Emms, new general manager of the club, puffing a cigar from a centre-ice aisle overlooking his charges.

Nine attending the camp played for Emms' teams at Barrie and Niagara Falls—Ron Stewart, Ron Schock, Ed Westfall, Gary Dornhoefer, Don Awrey, Gilles Marcotte, goalie Bernie Parent, Wayne Maxner and Barry Ashbee.

"The players all know Mr. Emms," said coach Milt Schmidt.

"They know he means business. There'll be no tomfoolery on this club. Mr. Emms is tough . . . and he's fair. Nobody could ask for more than that.

"I've never felt better about our chances," Schmidt said. "We're getting to the stage where we have a few more weapons. Now is the time we're going to have to do it. We're going to surprise a lot of people and I only hope some of the other teams feel they have to up put their sweaters on to beat us. . . they're in for a surprise."

Schmidt indicated several changes are due if the Bruins hope to shake off a six-year slump in the basement of the NHL.

A three-way battle for goaltender is assured with acquisition of Gerry Cheevers via draft from Toronto Maple Leafs. Bernie Parent, rookie goalie with Memorial Cup Cannifton exploded for five runs in the fifth after Centreville had tied the score at two all in the fourth. They scored a clinching pair in the seventh.

Art Leeman went the route for the visitors whiffing 8 and walking six. Bill Hill toiled for the winners striking out four and walking one. He gave up nine hits, Leeman yielding ten.

B. Weese hit three singles for Centreville; and MacDonald two. Keith Weese tripled with Barton, Leeman and Dunn getting singles.

Gerry Brennan exploded with two triples and a single for the winners. Ron Urch had a triple and single with Don Forsythe, Ted Abrams, Bill Hill, Harry Cole and Gerry Hill connecting for singles.

Will "Bolster" Defence

Ti-Cats Sign Als' Castoff

HAMILTON (CP) — Presumably working on the principle that you can't have too much of a good thing, coach Ralph Sazio will have a new man in his offensive lineup when Hamilton Tiger-Cats play Edmonton Eskimos tonight.

The newcomer is Jim Reynolds, an Eastern Football Conference all-star linebacker with Montreal two years ago who was recently released by the Alouettes.

Reynolds, known as Lucky Jim because of his knack of being in the right place at the right time, bolsters the stingiest defence in Canadian football. The Tiger - Cats have yielded only 65 points in eight starts, an average of barely a touchdown a game.

Reynolds, an offensive end before he turned professional six years ago, may also figure in Hamilton's season-long search to find a reliable pass-catcher to replace Hal Patterson. Jerry McDougall, normally a halfback, and Stan Crisson will be the starting ends with Reynolds in reserve.

The Tiger-Cats, bidding to break their first-place tie with Ottawa Rough Riders, will start Dave Fleming, a new offensive halfback, in place of Johnny Counts. Fleming was a late cut from Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

Angelo Mosca, the big defensive tackle who missed Hamilton's last game with an internal ailment, will be dressed but may see little action.

The last - place Eskimos, whose bid for a playoff berth in the Western Conference was blunted by their 40-1 trouncing at Ottawa last Sunday, badly need a victory. With three victories in 10 starts, they are five points behind British Columbia Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders as a result of the Lions' 26-14 win over the Riders Monday night.

Edmonton coach Neill Armstrong, who had little to enthuse about in the Ottawa game, may give Don Getty a larger share of quarterback duty. The veteran ended a two-year retirement last week and moved the club effectively in the last quarter when he replaced starter Randy Kerbow.

Eastern Scoring Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Who's going to catch Bernie Faloney's passes?
That was the big question when Montreal Alouettes acquired the veteran quarterback from Hamilton Tiger-Cats for the 1965 Eastern Football Conference season.
Well, how about Terry Evanshen, said Annette Chuck Jim Trimble.
Evanshen?
He's a 21-year-old rookie, a five-foot-ten, 180-pounder who gained a reputation last season as an exciting runner with Portland in the minor league Atlantic Coast Conference.
To top it all, Terry is a Canadian, a product of Montreal's McGee High School, who also had seasoning with Utah State University.
After nine games, Evanshen is the EFC's top pass receiver with 23 catches for 361 yards. The last Alouettes game Evanshen with a formidable lead in the pass receiving department with seven receptions.Montreal-Larry Ferguson and Pat Brosnan.

TIES FOR SECOND
Brosnan came from far behind, on his performance in Toronto's 42-23 victory Saturday over Winnipeg Blue Bombers last week, to tie his teammate for second place with Ferguson. Both have 17 catches, but Brosnan's gain in 230 yards to Ferguson's 177.
The EFC's scoring lead changed hands during the week as place-kicker Moe Racine enjoyed a big afternoon in Ottawa Rough Riders' 40-1 rout of Edmonton Eskimos. The big tackle kicked three field goals, a convert and a single during the total to 49 points, seven more than Don Sutherin of the Idle Hamilton Tiger-Cats.
Garney Henley of the Titans stayed in front of the punt-receiving race, one ahead of Rick Black of Ottawa and Ed Learn of Montreal. Only 12 yards separate them in total returns but Henley's 9.0 yard average is considerably superior. The Titans' return chief is Hamilton: O-Ottawa; M-Montreal; T-Toronto):

Children's Aid Society

Second of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies of the United Appeal, explaining the function of the agencies and their reasons for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

The Children's Aid Society offers protection and prevention services 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"In this city, we work in the area of protecting children from neglect and preventing the neglect of children," said Bruce Kerr, local director.

"They are not one and the same functions. For example, if a duty worker got a call at 2 a.m. that four children were left in an apartment alone, he would go to the home and perhaps remove them to the shelter for care. This is immediate action and is under the area of protecting children from neglect.

"Then, prevention would come into it. We would interview the parents and try to take what action we could to assure there is no recurrence of the problem.

"We also give assistance to unmarried mothers. Does she have a place to live? Does she have clothes to wear? When does she plan to have the baby? What plans has she for care of the baby when it is born? Is she going to keep the baby or give it to us for adoption?

"All these questions, and many more, have to be answered to assure the best possible care for the mother and the child."

Mr. Kerr pointed out that only a small percent of the Society's budget comes from the United Appeal. Most of it comes from government assistance.

APPEAL AID VITAL

However, he hastened to say, "If we did not have the money from the United Appeal, we would have to curtail some of our activities.

"The area where our United Appeal grant is spent involves a professional social worker working with a group of say 20 families.

"In this group," he continued, "there may be 100 children. The worker's job is to assist families in any way possible, such as budgeting and day to day problems, so the children can stay at home with their parents where they should be.

"We do not want children to become wards of the Children's Aid, if avoidable. And what remains a ward for many years is usually so mixed up emotionally he is an object of pity.

"However, if a child comes to us, say at two years old, and is adopted by a family, he has every chance of becoming a good citizen, the same as in a normal family situation.

SAVES MONEY

"And far apart from the human side of the story, there is the financial side. It costs us $1000 a year to keep a child. Now if the worker can make family life possible for the 100 children being dealt with, and they do not become wards of the Children's Aid, then you can see how much money is being saved.

"We of course are more interested in the child's welfare than in whether or not it costs us money, but it does cost money and the people have to pay for it through their taxes."

The social worker, working in the area where the United Appeal allocation is spent, said, "Under the Bill of Human Rights, as proposed by the United Nations, it is understood that people have equal rights.

"Unfortunately, people are not born equal. Not all people have the luck to be born in a family where parents get along well and can give their children love and understanding.

"If the parents' own needs are being met, and the father is able to provide sufficient income to rent or buy a pleasant home and provide food and clothing, the children in turn usually grow up to be mature adults.

"This father, who was able in his youth to benefit from all the education offered to him, has a job which gives personal satisfaction and also gives him the means to provide for his family.

WHAT ABOUT UNLUCKY?

"What happens if the father has not been so lucky?" the social worker said. "There is much talk about children staying in school and getting all the education they can absorb. Unfortunately, for a certain percentage of the population, this 'all the education they can absorb' is very limited, because of limited intellectual, or, it could be, because of other reasons, such as the necessity of helping out at home to augment the family income or help mother with the children. Young people dropping out of school do not all do so because of lack of interest. Some of them are simply unable to benefit any further.

"It is little wonder that so many men caught in this position feel very little motivation to work hard, because the chance for promotion to better jobs is small because they lack the qualifications.

"When these unfortunate people marry and have a family, the hardship may not be too great if mother is a good housekeeper and the family is small. They probably learn to make ends meet. But not all mothers have been so fortunate to have had mothers who were good housekeepers, teaching their daughters in turn.

"Buying groceries on a very limited budget, meeting hydro bills and heat bills, paying rent and buying clothing and still having some money left over for necessary recreation is by no means a small task. It is even more difficult when these families keep on expanding."

FRUSTRATING PROBLEM

"For a father of a large family, no matter how good his intentions were at the beginning and regardless of how nice a woman he marries, it must be very frustrating to see that he cannot cope adequately with all the demands of a growing family.

"Children from such a family have to go to school inadequately dressed and fed, and they have to compete with other children who are better off.

"What about play? A child has to learn how to play, and for that he requires some toys. But toys are an item which you will not find in these families because of the small budget."

The speaker said that often parents really suffer from all their frustration and from their own inadequacy, which is not their fault, and take to drinking.

"Drinking offers them temporary relief from their frustrations, but it only adds to their problems. Not only does it take money away from their already tight budget, but it also creates hazardous situations in their jobs.

"It is a vicious circle for them. Nobody wants to live that way, but for many long-ly, struggling people, caught in impossible situations, it is often the only way open.

MUST BREAK CIRCLE

"In order for the parents to regain their place in the community and to help their children to a fuller life, it is necessary to break that vicious circle. This is where we come into the picture.

"By bringing one new thing into the family circle, we often see that the family gains a feeling of self-worth and self-respect.

"An understanding and patient loss or landlord, or anyone who really cares, can help to break the vicious circle. These people need somebody who cares, not somebody who judges. Helping parents help themselves and regain their self-respect is the first step."

Your United Appeal dollars are playing a vital role in the rehabilitation of some of our less fortunate citizens.

"They're not worth much individually, but as a team they're ideal."

"I'm making french toast. Why?"

Canada's Gross National Output Over 50 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated today the pace of the Canadian economy reached an annual rate of $50,948,000,000 during the second quarter of this year.

Actual product of the whole economy for April, May and June was $12,566,000,000, surpassed only by the third quarter of last year in the current four-year expansion.

It marks the first time that the annual rate of Gross National Product—the total dollar value of all end-product goods and services produced in the country—has topped the $50,000,000,000 mark.

DBS reported today that record grain harvest prospects in the prairies, continued business expansion, and strong consumer buying contributed to the increase.

The figure for April, May and June was more than six per cent greater than during the final quarter of 1964 and two per cent greater than the bureau's revised estimate of gross national product in the first quarter of 1965.

But the bureau said that about half the increase in the second quarter resulted from price increases. Just over half the increase was a gain in real terms, exclusive of inflation, GNP CLIMBS

To take account of the less-than-one-per-cent drop in money, the bureau estimated that in terms of 1957 dollars the gross national product went from $41,678,000,000 in the first quarter of the current value. It said today it has revised this estimate upwards to $50,040,000,000 because of the big grain harvest expected this year.

This revision meant that the first - quarter gross national product rate was over the four per cent greater than in the final three months of 1964. Partly as a result of this revision, the second-quarter increase to $50,948,000,000 represented a gain of just under two per cent.

"Although the increase in the second quarter was slightly less than in the preceding period, for each of the past three quarters the Canadian economy has experienced a sustained growth in final domestic demand with consumer and capital expenditures in only two other quarters of the current expansion," DBS said today.

The current expansionary period has run through 17 three-month quarters, or five years and three months.

Consumer spending was the predominant upward thrust in April, May and June this year, DBS reported. Other impetus came from the already large industrial program of plant expansion and from high rates of spending by all governments.

"At the same time the rate of accumulation of business inventories, although remaining high, declined, thereby restraining the upward tendency in economic activity rather than reinforcing it as in the preceding period."

Auto Costs Will Be Cut -- Gordon

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The proposed auto-parts exchange agreement with the United States is bound to have a "reducing influence" on Canadian costs, Finance Minister Gordon said Tuesday.

But he declined to speculate on when Canadian prices to consumers might go down.

"The prices gap should narrow," Gordon said in facing detailed questions about just when, or when he thinks Canada's higher price levels should vanish through integrated car production for North America.

"Everything remaining the same, there is no doubt in my mind that prices should come down."

But who could forecast the pattern of labor or commodity costs, he said. Hence, he was reluctant to "make a simple clear statement that this (agreement) will decrease retail prices."

The agreement, signed Jan. 16 by Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson, abolishes tariffs for makers of cars and original parts but not for consumers.

NOT OPTIMISTIC

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and Canadian Motors here and in Canada have not been optimistic about price cuts for Canadians who pay an average 17 per cent more. Such price cuts are possible, critics say, because of $30,000,000 a year less cost in tariffs.

Gordon said he thinks this gap is "one of the best investments Canada ever made."

The purpose from Canada's standpoint was to retain the Canadian slice of the North American auto market to six per cent from four and the increase in production worth $250,000,000 —to be realized by Canadian auto makers by 1968 over and above natural growth—was a "pretty big step in the right direction" for trimming the Canadian balance-of-payments deficit.

Gordon's views were a curtain-raiser to full U.S. senate debate on the issue, hotly opposed by some senators in committee study. A debate of several days is forecast, indicating more criticism.

Gordon said "if the Canadian prices level holds steady rather than going up, I'd say the agreement has been pretty beneficial."

PLAN FAST

OTTAWA (CP)—Twenty-one university students will take part in a four-day fast on Parliament Hill during the Thanksgiving weekend. The students, from the three universities here, will go without food to launch an appeal as part of the Freedom from hunger campaign of the United Nations.

Viet Cong Massing In North

SAIGON (CP)—The military government of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky was threatened today with student demonstrations in Saigon over alleged religious discrimination amid reports that a major Viet Cong buildup was under way in South Viet Nam's Binh Dinh province, 285 miles northeast of Saigon.

U.S. spokesman announced today that South Vietnamese forces and U.S. planes beat off an attack by one of the biggest Viet Cong concentrations in several months, possibly more than 2,000 guerrillas.

The spokesman said no further fighting was reported today in the area 42 miles northwest of Qui Nhon.

The government force of two battalions suffered moderate losses and many Viet Cong were believed to have been killed by the U.S. air strikes, the spokesman said, but no body count was made.

The action took place in the area of Phu Cu Pass, where the Viet Cong suffered heavy losses in a battle last week.

Two Communist battalions launched a two-pronged attack Tuesday against the South Vietnamese troops from the east and west, while two other battalions struck from the southwest.

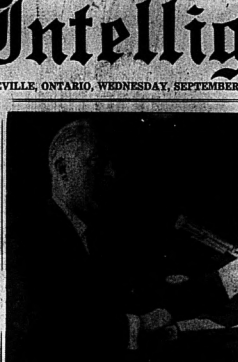
START BUILDUP

U.S. intelligence sources said the Viet Cong have begun a buildup in Binh Dinh province, where Qui Nhon is located. Top South Vietnamese military leaders said earlier in the week they believed that North Vietnamese troops are operating in the province.

In other developments, North Viet Nam hinted that summary executions of terrorists captured by the Viet Cong in the future and the brother of Premier Ngo Dinh Nhu was sentenced to five years' solitary confinement for extortion.

The premier Ky refused to receive a delegation of students, and the students said they would demonstrate outside his office if permission was not granted.

It was the first time since Ky came to power in a coup three months ago that demonstrations were threatened against him.



The students had asked to see Ky to present him with a petition. Informed sources said the document listed a number of complaints against the government.

Issue of National Unity Harped on by Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Leaders and followers dealt with the issue of national unity from platforms on the election hustings across the country Tuesday.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker, making a one-day blitz of Argenteuil - Deux - Montagnes riding in Western Quebec said his purpose is to unite Canada's two founding races in a single Canadianism.

He also charged the Liberal government with trying thought control on Canadians through a system of exchanging film clips on Liberal cabinet ministers' speeches among television stations.

On the unity issue, two Liberal spokesmen — Postmaster-General Tremblay and John Turner, Parliamentary secretary to Northern Affairs Minister Laing — said Mr. Diefenbaker is a divisive force on the national scene.

In Quebec, Mr. Tremblay said Mr. Diefenbaker tried to set English- against French-Canadian. The Liberal party was a bulwark against enemies who would divide Canada.

Mr. Turner said in Vancouver: "To vote for the return of Diefenbaker is to have a common government, cabinet crisis, anti - Americanism and a coalition course to national disunity—like the wave of separatism which was known the first time Diefenbaker."

Meanwhile, New Democratic Leader Douglas said in Sault Ste. Marie on a Northern Ontario swing that a government of his party would set responsible economic plans for Canada. Helped by management, labor, farm and consumer representatives, realistic guidelines would be laid down for production, prices and wages.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson, campaigning in Guelph, told a press conference that Quebec's problems must be solved by Quebecers. They couldn't be solved by a federal government.

With the Nov. 8 election still more than five weeks away, Prime Minister Pearson remained desk-bound in the capital. He speaks today in Toronto.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette is in his Rouyn, Que., home until Friday. Mr. Diefenbaker returns to Ottawa today until a Friday night rally at Toronto's Varsity Arena. Mr. Thompson heads back to his Red Deer, Alta., constituency and Mr. Douglas appears in Timmins and Kirkland Lake, continuing his Northern Ontario campaign.

Lucien Pineau, Creditiste MP for Quebec West in the last Parliament, told a Monday night election rally that the objective of his party is to hold the balance of power in Parliament to have the French fact respected in Ottawa."

At Brandon, Man., Veterans Minister Teillet said returns of a Progressive Conservative government would mean stagnation for Canada.

In Sydney, N.S., Labor Minister MacEachen said the Liberal government wants a majority mandate in the election "to secure" the gains of the past 2½ years of minority government. A majority was needed to help create new jobs and alleviate unemployment which now was at its lowest ebb in eight years.

Volcano Toll May Be 1,500

TAGAYTAY, Philippines (AP)—The first rescue workers reached the blackened shores of the Taal volcano today and reported "a wide expanse of death and destruction."

There was no immediate casualty estimate from the first party to land on the 12-square-mile island in Lake Taal where the volcano erupted at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday. But officials feared a heavy toll among the island's 2,000 inhabitants and in villages along the lakeshore five to 10 miles from the island.

(Reuters correspondent Michael Marabut reported from Manila that no clear picture of the toll has yet emerged. He said unofficial estimates of the dead ranged from a few hundred to 1,500.)

The party on the island reported the 984-foot volcano had subsided to occasional rumbles and belches of smoke. But the actual military commander ordered the evacuation of all persons from low areas around Lake Taal as a precaution against another eruption and an accompanying tidal wave.

FOUND 184 BODIES

The Red Cross reported 184 bodies recovered on the mainland, 164 of them in the lakeside town of Agoncillo. Many were killed by the great chunks of rock the volcano hurled through the air. Some were enveloped in hot ash and mud and died of burns. The Red Cross said many appeared to have died from fear and shock.

The rescue group on the island reported thigh-deep volcanic mud, with two villages completely submerged in debris. The party said half the island appeared covered with the volcanic ash and that fires still burned in hours or more after the first eruption.

Survivors who escaped across the lake during the eruption told of a rain of boulders that capsized their fishing boats in which the island's farm families fled.

Frogmen began a search for bodies in the lake, parts of it 600 feet deep.

Police said they believed at least 27 drowned when a boat sank in the evacuation.

The Red Cross reported 55,000 persons huddled in evacuation camps or along the roadside. Most had fled from homes around the lake.

Today's Chuckle

A spokesman for the Indian foreign office said that withdrawal of armed personnel should include an estimated 3,000 guerrillas which the Indians claim Pakistan trained, equipped and sent into the Indian sector of Kashmir for subversion and sabotage.

Pakistan has denied the Indian claim, contending that the guerrillas were those operations touched off the war are Kashmiri nationalists fighting for freedom from Indian control.

(Reuters news agency quoted an authoritative Indian source as saying Tuesday night that India would keep its forces on the ceasefire line in West Pakistan despite the United Nations call for them both sides honor the conditions of the ceasefire, which called for all troops to be pulled back to the positions of Aug. 5.

(The source estimated that 5,000 guerrillas invaded the Indian-held part of Kashmir last August and 3,000 still remain. The source said the infiltrators were hiding in forest areas but that the U.N. field positions and barracks were being supplied by air drops.

Outlook Is Black For Enforcement Of Ceasefire Pact

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP) — The outlook for the India-Pakistan ceasefire remained bleak today as both sides made new demands and neither showed any signs of withdrawing from positions seized during their undeclared war.

UN Meet Considers Kashmir

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Repercussions from the Indian-Pakistan border clashes continued to dominate the United Nations today as External Affairs Minister Sardar S. Singh of India headed for New York to attend the General Assembly.

Singh, scheduled to arrive this afternoon, was expected to reply to Pakistan's charges that India is responsible for the conflict in Kashmir because of her refusal to allow a plebiscite in the Himalayan state.

Pakistan Foreign Minister Z. A. Bhutto told the 117-member General Assembly Tuesday the UN should force India to accept a UN force in Kashmir while peace negotiations are under way.

He proposed that both Indian and Pakistani forces withdraw from Kashmir and be replaced by a UN force of Africa, Asian and Latin-American contingents pending a plebiscite.

Indian Prime Minister Shastri, however, rejected earlier any role for a UN force and Indian spokesmen oppose a plebiscite. India does not object to the presence of UN observers.

Shastri Makes Clear UN Force Can't Be Congo-type

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Shastri of India has made it clear the United Nations won't be allowed to put a Congo, Cyprus or Kashmir type force along the India-Pakistan frontier.

UN observers are one thing, he has said. Naturally, the UN can't go where it isn't wanted.

Consequently, it is difficult for Canadian officers serving with the UN observer mission on the India-Pakistan border can be any more effective than the ineffective UN observer mission in Kashmir has been for the last 17 years.

The Kashmir mission has been walked over by both India and Pakistan. India set it up in 1949, say some authorities. It has so little authority that it has not even been able to apportion blame for any of the hundreds of shooting incidents or even make public its reports, which are for Indian and Pakistani eyes only.

However, the Canadian government regards a UN presence on the India-Pakistan border, no matter how small and ineffective, as better than nothing at all. That is why it acted quickly to send observers and to provide the entire air wing for the observation team.

The bigger the UN presence in a trouble spot, the more effective it seems to be.

UN forces of 5,000 men and more have kept peace in Cyprus and on the Egyptian-Israeli frontier, for example. But they failed in such places as Laos, Yemen, Palestine and Kashmir have been able to exercise little or no restraint on the opposing sides.

The Kashmir mission numbered only 40 before the recent 22-day war. The new mission outside Kashmir numbers about 70—and the ceasefire line now is twice as long.

Meanwhile, on the surface at least, the Indian government is showing no apprehension that India will change its policy and forbid visiting military observers.

Canada supplied India with a nuclear research reactor in 1956 and made many other unconditional undertaking to use it for peaceful purposes only. Canadian inspectors were carried out, as established in the agreement between the two countries, to make sure the reactor is not put to military use.

During his visit here in June, Mr. Shastri reiterated publicly Indian policy.

Though the Indian leader is under heavy pressure from his own Congress party to change his policy because of the threat from China, there is no intention in Ottawa at this time of suspending India or the 1956 agreement or asking Mr. Shastri whether his promise still holds.

Former Canadian Dies in Vietnam

SAIGON (CP) — Lt.-Col. Peter Dewhurst, 42, a former Canadian who was serving with the U.S. Army, was killed in action in Vietnam, the U.S. Army announced today.

Col. Dewhurst, who was born in Montreal, was killed Sept. 19 when his helicopter was shot down by Viet Cong guerrillas.

He was a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., and served with the Canadian Army in Korea.

He was awarded the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star and the Air Medal.

Delays While Drugs Are Tested Can Be as Costly as Quick Use

VINELAND, Ont. (CP) — Keeping a drug off the market for extensive clinical testing could cost more lives than releasing it without precise knowledge of all its possible side effects, a drug company physician said Tuesday.

Dr. J. Fyfe MacDonald, associate medical director of Schering Corp., Ltd., of Pointe Claire, Que., was speaking at the annual meeting of the Ontario chapter of the College of General Practice of Canada.

He said that no law or regulation can eliminate the element of risk involved in administering a chemical agent because the effects may depend not only on the drug but also on the disease being treated, the reaction of the individual patient and the length of time the drug is given.

Dr. E. Maxwell Lockie of Buffalo, N.Y., said indocin, a new drug soon to be available to Canadian physicians, promises to be useful in treating certain kinds of arthritis.

It has already proved useful in treating inflammation of the spine, particularly of the hips, and rheumatoid spondylitis, which attacks the joints. But it has a limited value in treating of rheumatoid arthritis.

Dr. Lockie said indocin is often effective against bursitis and gout. Normally the only side effects are a mild form of headache, but it should not be given to persons with peptic ulcers as it can cause recurrence.

Another new drug, allopurinol, which is still under investigation, prevents formation of uric acid by the body and can help to destroy stones of uric acid crystals.

It is effective in treatment of gout, breaking up the tissue-shaped uric acid crystals which form in the blood of gout patients and cause their pain. Colchicine and butazoladine are also effective treatment for acute gout attacks, Dr. Lockie said.

Seek to Force CBC Writers To Join Union

TORONTO (CP)—The Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists (Ind.) will cancel agreements with the CBC Oct. 1.

In a statement Tuesday ACTRA said its 3,000 performers and writers have been informed that after Oct. 1 they may work only on CBC productions which are written by persons qualified by ACTRA.

An association spokesman explained that most Canadian free-lance performers are members or pay work-permit fees, but ACTRA has been less successful in organizing writers.

The association is attempting by its action against the CBC to force writers either to join ACTRA or obtain the $30 work permits, the spokesman said.

In special cases, such as membership in another union, writers would be granted a waiver permit which would allow them to work for the corporation without paying.

Cecil Smith, information director of the CBC, said the corporation feels that the ACTRA demands would impose an element of control over the CBC's right to determine program content.

Walking Eagle Predicts Much Cold and Snow

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — White man's prosperity is causing cold weather, says Walkin' Eagle, an aged Indian chief who lives a simple life in the Rocky Mountain foothills.

In town to make his annual winter weather prediction Chief Walking Eagle said the Great Manitou is angry about the riches of the white man.

"The white man is getting too big and rich. Manitou does not like this and he gave bad weather."

The outlook for winter Much snow and cold weather with one big, though short lived, blizzard and numerous small ones.

But the chief said the winter will not be as bad as last year's, which was one of the worst in Alberta, and there will be an early spring.

The chief's winter forecasts for the last five years have been fairly accurate. This prompted him to ask for payment last year as a forecaster.

Gordon McInroy New Head of Quinte Chapter

The Quinte Chaper of the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada, taking in South Hastings and the county of Prince Edward, held its first meeting of the fall season last night.

The dinner meeting, held at Sun Valley Motor Inn, saw president R. J. "Bob" Lucy step down as club head, handing the office gavel over to Gordon McInroy, supervisor of the city public works department.

Approximately 100 local industrial management personnel and about 20 guests, including several city department heads, attended the meeting which featured Dr. A. E. Berry, general manager of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, as the guest speaker.

The meeting also saw the club bid farewell to "Di" Diamantides, executive secretary of the club for the past 11 years, who is leaving the city to accept a foreign post with the YMCA and for the next three years will be in his native Greece.

The October meeting of the Quinte Chapter members will take the form of a visit to the Lake Ontario Cement Company plant at Picton.

Domestic Sewage, Industrial Wastes Must Be Controlled

- - Dr. A. E. Berry

The dangers of allowing Canada's water supplies to become contaminated with domestic sewage and industrial wastes which can turn streams into "biological deserts" was stressed to Belleville last night by Dr. A. E. Berry, general manager of the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Speaking to the first autumn meeting of the Quinte Chapter of the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada, Dr. Berry said that the key to Canada's future was in the continued availability of an adequate supply of clean water.

"We need to recognize our sanitary conscience," Dr. Berry said. "The trouble is that we are too prone to dump our wastes into rivers and dump refuse along our roadways."

Outlining what the OWRC had accomplished by financing municipal sewage treatment plants in many centres across Ontario, Dr. Berry said it was not enough to let government bodies take all the responsibility in the fight against pollution.

ALL MUST PLAY PART

"There must also be a personal awareness of the danger," he said. "It is a personal, municipal and industrial responsibility. All must play a part."

Dr. Berry said the water management problem was growing in significance all over the world. As population increased and industrialization goes forward conservation of natural resources was becoming increasingly important.

He said that water was our most valuable natural resource and must be used wisely. Availability of water was the key to industrialization and a high standard of living was impossible without industrialization.

Adequate supplies of water and its distribution and protection of water against pollution were the two big problems, Dr. Berry said.

In contrast to many other parts of the world with low rainfall, the normal 35-inch rainfall in Ontario was sufficient. "But rain runs off and does not stay where it was needed.

HELP BUILD PLANTS

As an example Dr. Berry said that the 24-hour flow of water down the St. Lawrence River was sufficient to supply Ontario's needs for an entire year.

Since the Ontario Water Resources commission was set up in 1956, the Ontario government had spent more than 150 million dollars in assisting municipalities to construct sewage treatment plants and now a mammoth pipeline system to supply water to the London area from the Great Lakes was underway.

WASTES ON INCREASE

But industrial wastes were on the increase and much research was still needed to learn how to prevent new chemical wastes from polluting water supplies.

Dr. Berry said industry was doing its part in the fight to control pollution. And example of this was the 150 million dollars spent by detergent firms merely for the sake of eliminating foaming conditions on sewage plants caused by the phosphates in the currently advertised "hard" detergents.

Noting that it was a personal and municipal responsibility to control pollution the speaker said that we must look after our own wastes and be prepared to pay the cost. And the cost actually was not so great as wastes could be controlled by treatment plants costing only the equivalent of a gallon of gas per family per week.

"We need an aroused public opinion, and more research to learn how to control new industrial wastes", he concluded.

CAN DESTROY ALGAE

In a brief question and answer period Dr. Berry said the policy of industrial water reclamation was well worthwhile in many instances.

And greater Belleville residents, he said that promising experiments were underway toward introduction of a disinfectant which would destroy algae before it grows to any size.

Its growth stimulated by phosphates from detergents and land fertilizers, algae is troublesome only when it drifts into bays and decomposes.

Then it smells terrible and in the case of Belleville's water supply is to some extent responsible for the disagreeable taste which domestic water users complain about.

Belleville Mayor J. R. Ellis welcomed Dr. Berry to the city. In doing so he assurred the officials that steps toward construction of a secondary treatment plant for city sewage were now underway.

Woman Hurt In Accident

A Belleville woman was taken to hospital after a car was struck by a transport truck at Catherine and Everett Streets intersection.

Mrs. Mary Halsey, 3 Wilkins Street, suffered shock and possible back injuries in the mishap. Police said the car driven by Mrs. Halsey's husband, Arthur, was struck by the truck, owned by a Toronto transport company and driven by Levern Brenneman, of Kitchener, when the truck drove through the intersection.

Castro to Let Cubans Join U.S. Relatives

By MICHAEL ARKUS

HAVANA (Reuters) — Premier Fidel Castro said Tuesday night Cubans with relatives in the United States will soon be allowed to be permitted to do so.

Castro, addressing a mass rally here, also said he would clarify within the next few days the mysterious disappearance of top Cuban revolutionary leader Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

At another point in his wide ranging speech, the premier delivered a flaying attack on the state-run urban reform organization, describing it as "a heap of garbage sustained by incompetent, scandalously inefficient."

Castro told the rally that Cubans who want to rejoin relatives in the U.S. could do so and should apply to the interior ministry, which would supply boats if it had any.

He said immigration has been making much propaganda about clandestine boat departures involving drownings and hardships.

The Cuban leader said he was prepared to put a port aside for these departures.

Castro said he would speak about Guevara at a ceremony establishing the central committee of the Cuban unified socialist revolutionary party.

He added he would read a document from Guevara explaining his absence during the last few months.

The Argentine-born Guevara has not been seen in public for six months. Many rumors have circulated, some saying he is organizing revolutions in other Latin American countries and others that he is ill or working on a special task within Cuba.

Air Transport Unit Leaves For Pakistan

TRENTON, Ont. (CP)—The 112th Air Transport unit, a nine-aircraft formation mobilized Thursday to operate out of Rawalpindi, capital of Pakistan, left here this morning on an 18-hour flight to the area.

Departure of the unit, controlled operationally by the United Nations, was two hours late today due to heavy fob which packed in the three Hercules Transports and six Otter utility aircraft.

The hand-picked crew of 95 men will join the UN India-Pakistan team to help keep the peace in the Kashmir area.

A three-man advance party—including Wing Cmdr. R. T. Hensley of Oshawa, in charge of the new unit—left for Rawalpindi last Saturday.

Two Remanded In Custody on Theft Charges

TRENTON — On the evening of Sept. 13, Frank Lott of 13 Ramsay Street, Trenton, took a heart pill and laid down to sleep for a while, as is his nightly custom.

That night, while he slept, his unlocked home was entered and a mantel radio, an electric tea kettle, a steam iron, an electric toaster, six plats of Carlings Red Cap Ale and $6.72 were removed from the premises.

In Trenton court yesterday, Miss Yvonne Brayshaw, 25, and Ronald Davis, 22, of the same Sherbourne Street address in Toronto, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft in connection with the incident. They were remanded in custody for one week while their records are searched.

All of the stolen articles, with the exception of the ale and the cash were recovered by Toronto Metro police at the Sherbourne Street apartment.

"Was the $6.72 taken from the pants Mr. Lott was wearing?" Magistrate T. Y. Wills wanted to know. He was assured by Plainclothesman Jack Vickers that such was not the case.

REMANDED IN CUSTODY

Francis Edward Hewton, 40, of Peterborough, charged in Trenton court yesterday with car theft, pleaded guilty to driving a 1955 car off the Wessel Motors' Used Car lot on the evening of Sept. 16. The court was told that the keys had been in the ignition.

Hewton, who had been released from Trenton Memorial Hospital on the morning of Sept. 16, was apprehended on Highway 7 by Constable Mc Master. Hewton was said to have been "quite upset" when brought to Trenton police station.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills called for a pre-sentence report and remanded Hewton in custody for one week.

THREW GLASS ON ROAD

Brian R. Charboneau, 18, of R.R. No. 6, Trenton, pleaded guilty in Trenton court yesterday to throwing glass from his car onto the highway, on the evening of Sept. 12. The glass in question was a Pepsi-Cola bottle, and the investigating officer said the glass was strewn in a ten foot square area on the street.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills fined the youth $20, and said he hoped this would teach him a lesson.

"It has, Your Honor," said the accused.

"Broken glass could cause trouble to another car or cut the fingers of anyone picking it up," the magistrate observed.

Rotarians Tour Smithfield Farm

TRENTON — Blair Heeney, of the Federal Department of Agriculture at Smithfield, was this week's guest speaker at the Trenton Rotary Club. Following his address, on work at the experimental farm at Smithfield, Mr. Heeney took the Rotarians on a tour of the farm.

Of special interest to the club members was a new process of "puffing" apples a process of dehydration which is fairly new in Canada.

Next Tuesday, 20 food editors from daily and weekly papers across the province will visit the experimental farm, and the "puffed" apple process will be highlighted.

Last week at the Rotary Club, the first formal meeting of the season, saw Shawn Mayor, the Irish representative for tourism in Canada, showing a film of his native land.

Stomach Ulcer Rupture Cause Of Man's Death

TRENTON — Corporal John McKendry of the Provincial Police detachment at Brighton, said today that a postmortem examination performed at the Trenton Memorial Hospital yesterday on the body of 47-year-old Stanley Typhair of R.R. 1, Trenton, indicated that the man bled to death following the rupture of a stomach ulcer.

Mr. Typhair's body was found around 7.30 a.m. yesterday by his employer, Gordon Flynn. Mr. Typhair had been picking apples on the Flynn farm on Monday and had complained of feeling ill and had left work early. Worried about Mr. Typhair's condition, Mr. Flynn decided to check early yesterday, and notified police as soon as he found the body.

Slippery streets during last night's rainstorm were responsible for an accident on Dundas Street East.

A car driven by Mrs. Eva Stewart, 26, of R.R. 2, Trenton, went into a spin on the highway and slammed backwards into a telephone pole, shearing off the pole. Total damaged was estimated to be in the neighborhood of $250. Mrs. Stewart was not injured.

52 ENROLLED

Jerry Goldberg, Immediate past president of the Trenton Junior Chamber of Commerce, said today 52 independent businessmen had enrolled in a ten weeks' course of accounting, which is being sponsored by the Jaycees in co-operation with the Ontario Department of Education.

No Pleas Entered on Two Charges

TRENTON — In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, a charge of attempted car theft, brought earlier this week against Ronald Helm, 18, of Frankford, and Bradley White, 20, of Peterborough, was reduced by the Crown to "unlawfully taking and attempting to operate a station wagon, without the owner's consent," and the men, who did plead, were remanded on bail until Oct. 12. A charge of theft of camera equipment, brought by Trenton police against the men early Sunday morning, was not advanced formally in court yesterday.

The charges were laid by police after two men were apprehended in the Red Lion Motel parking lot, in a station wagon, owned by the manager, James Walmsley, and after free-lance photographer Ed Strome of Frankford, reported $1,600 worth of camera equipment, and other articles missing from his car, which he had parked in the parking lot of the Queenway Hotel. The equipment was found later by police, thrown in bushes on Water Street.

SAID NO EXCUSE

An RCAF man from the Trenton station, Jacques Merengere, who attempted to justify a police chase along Highway Two on the night of Aug. 22, by saying he thought the cruiser following him was a private cag with a driver who was "trying to act smart," was told by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Trenton court yesterday that this was no excuse for his action and was fined $75 for the offence. Merengere will also pay a fine of $50 for failing to produce proof of insurance.

Sgt. Gordon Steenburg told the court he had failed to catch up to the accused, (the cruiser was doing 70 m.p.h), because Merengere had kept "swerving" his car across the highway.

Defence lawyer Gregory Butler had only Merengere's plea of failing to realize he was being followed by a police car to offer.

Sgt. Steenburg said that while he had not had an outside dome light on his vehicle, he had the inside dome light on and had been in uniform.

Terrorism in Aden

Tension is increasing in the British protectorate of Aden. In a move to halt a growing terrorist campaign in the territory Britain has suspended the Arab state's Constitution and replaced the Chief Minister, the Council of Ministers and the Legislative Council under the sole authority of the British High Commissioner, Sir Richard Turnbull.

Further security measures were put into effect after a rooftop gun battle between British troops and Arab terrorists.

The pattern emerging in Aden is the same as that which plagued Britain during the Palestin terrorist campaign prior to the establishment of the state of Israel, and similar to the subsequent eruption in Cyprus, not to mention French Algeria.

Recently the police chief and a high British official were shot dead by terrorists in Aden.

How much more bloodshed will there be, we wonder, in this hot desert region bordering the Red Sea before some sort of settlement is reached? While the protectorate has a measure of self-government, it is clear from the existence of a rebel organization "for liberation of the Occupied South," set up to fight for independence for Aden and other states in the South Arabian Federation, that there is a strong movement to end British influence in that region.

Britain of course has vital oil interests there. Hence the strong measures being taken to counter terrorism.

Conscription Bogey

The Peterborough Examiner says the award for the silliest remark of the election campaign must, on present standing, go to Pierre Andre Boutin, Conservative member of the last parliament for Dorchester.

Mr. Boudin said the election was called so that Mr. Pearson could impose conscription and send 100,000 troops to Vietnam. To do this the liberals would need an absolute majority.

Said The Examiner: "This has all the appearances of a desperation attempt to raise the old French-Canadian bogey of conscription. Apart from a brief conflict of interpretation between Prime Minister Pearson and Paul Martin, the External Affairs Minister, about what aid Canada is prepared to give the Americans in Vietnam, there has been no suggestion of any Canadian involvement."

The figure of 100,000 troops represents more men than the Americans have now based in Vietnam, one reason alone why Mr. Boutin's claim is an extravagant one, from every point of view.

Winter Bares Its Breath

The sound and aspect of early winter bit deeply into the fall scene on Sunday. As the temperature of the people scurried homewards, but to a hardy few the bitter wind that whipped the leaves across the landscape was an invitation to the outdoors.

Some even played golf, although all save one had fled the course by late afternoon. The fellow who stayed tells us he played 16 holes, and as darkness fell the wind dropped and it was actually a little warmer.

Alone in the course he was rewarded with some unusual sights. In the penetrating air the autumn colors seemed to deepen before his eyes, the wind played among the trees and a wet drizzle made the sound that one makes as it trickles through the branches and into the undergrowth.

There was another sound—the migrating call of the Canada Geese. There, overhead, was one of the great sights of the North American scene, a flight of some 50 of these beautiful birds in familiar V formation with their leader front. They passed swiftly and their track southward was evidence enough of the sharp turn the weather had taken.

At dusk there were other phenomena of nature to be observed. On the horizon over toward Trenton the sun went down in a fiery red glow and the trees were now black silhouettes in the early night, while incredibly, at the same time a massive rainbow rose into the sky over Belleville.

Here was the beauty and poignancy of late September and the evidence, unchanging and orderly, of the seasons. In an uncertain world the seasons, with but slight variations upon their several themes, can always be guaranteed to behave just like themselves.

When I speak the truth, backed by facts, this hurts the most sensitive part of the Indian —his personal pride. It is not worthwhile disliking me. I know that the Indian braves of the future should not go off the reservation; I know that probably the Roman Catholics and Protestants will be hostile to my ideas; but all these fears and many others are groundless. We must set high goals for all of our people and study and work . . . I want our people to lead all Indians of Canada back to the position of proud prestige.—Kahn-Tineta Horn, Mohawk Indian and Montreal fashion model, in The Montreal Star.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 29th, 1945

Relaxation of travel restrictions following V-Day has released a flood of tourists to the extent that the Ontario Tourists and Travel Bureau is preparing an equal of the peak year in 1938 when 2,800,000 motor tourists visited the province. Provincial Director of the Bureau said today.

Resorts throughout the province are crowded, many visitors being turned away through lack of accommodation. Resort owners are in a quandry due to lack of sufficient help and difficulty in obtaining supplies.

Surveys by the Provincial Bureau indicate an increase in the number of Canadian tourists, one owner reporting his business "70 percent Canadian" as compared with "80 percent American" before the war.

30 YEARS AGO

September 30th, 1935

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hagerman entertained a large group of friends on Sunday at their home on the Trent Road, in honor of Mrs. Hagerman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rogers, on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary. Mr. Rodgers has passed his 90th birthday and Mrs. Rodgers has passed 86 years. They were both born in Rawdon township in the vicinity of Sifting. Mr. Rodgers is a son of Robert Rodgers and his wife was Janet Brown, who came to Canada from Ireland and settled on a farm near Stirling. Mrs. Rodgers was born a short distance from her husband's home, her parents being William Craig, who came from Nottingh am, England, and his wife, Jane Gordon, who came from Aberdeen, Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers were married in St. John's Anglican Church in Stirling by the Rev. D. Grout the late H. F. Byers, who was then as rector of the church a few years ago, and a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers, was present at the anniversary celebration.

40 YEARS AGO

September 29th, 1925

It is interesting to note in connection with the recent induction of the Rev. R. G. Stewart, of Nepean, Ottawa, as moderator of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, that his grandfather settled in Belleville 80 years ago when they came to Canada from the North of Ireland. They attended St. Andrew's Church, which at that time was known as the South Presbyterian Church.

Mr. George N. Simmons, Highland Avenue, will leave to spend some time in Western Canada, to look after his wheat crop interests there.

Mr. Porte Marshall, son of Dr. O. A. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall, has left to resume his studies in medicine at Toronto University.

50 YEARS AGO

September 29, 1915

The members of the Y.M.C.A. Knitting Circle will be "At Home" on the afternoon of September 30th at the home of Mrs. D. V. Sinclair, William street, northeast corner of Victoria Avenue, from 3:30 o'clock to six o'clock. Silver collection will be taken for patriotic and Red Cross work.

Mr. R. H. Ketcheson has left to visit the Panama Exposition.

Mayor Panter has received word that the meeting here of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners has been postponed from October 5 to a date to be announced later.

Mr. E. M. McCoy, William St. has left on resume his studies at Queen's University.

Political Myth

Toronto Star

We overheard three women discussing the coming election. "All politicians are c r o o k s, that's one sure thing," said one and the other two nodded wisely in agreement.

This is a popular cynicism kept alive by people who do not personally know any politicians We know one MP who has sacrificed as poor as any of his constituents by giving away most of his salary to those in need. We know another, less exceptional, who exhausted his small fortune financing his campaign, and would not touch any gift that he thought might be a bid for favours.

The truth is that the great majority of politicians would be more stout or slim according to financial crookedness than the public upright of their constituents would.

Intellectual honesty is another matter; a great many politicians are capable of uttering deliberate half-truths, and of saying things they don't really believe. The most prolific source of intellectual dishonesty in politicians is their desire to say what they think the voters want to hear.

Majority House Desirable

Financial Post

This is Canada's fifth election in eight years. Whatever Canadians think about the need for it, they should bear in mind that its prime cause was their own desertion of the two-party system.

Four parties (or is it five?) are again in the field; but everyone knows that the next government will be formed by Liberals or Tories. The way to avoid a sixth election in 10 years is to give one or the other a clear majority in the new parliament.

There are able citizens and brilliant orators in the NDP; but their golden promises must be read in the gospel of Utopians who do not expect to be asked to practise what they preach.

Social Credit's reason for existence in national politics is unclear; the party name is a purely fanciful label, like the name Welsh rarebit for a dish of cheese. Its successful local politics of Alberta and B.C. local politicians there don't even discuss Social Credit since banking and currency are outside their orbit.

But these matters are very much Ottawa's business. So a party aiming at federal power, and calling itself Social Credit, is presumably committed to Social Credit doctrine. Robert Thompson, blameless though he may sound, is indeed committed to the daft, disastrous and totally discredited economics of C. H. Douglas; in short, funny money.

Thus a vote for the NDP or Social Credit is a vote for an unsound economic proposition. For more important, since neither will win the election, a vote for either is but a spoiled or another spasm of minority government.

It is useless now to argue that minority government worked tolerably well from 1963 to 1965 inclusive. The point is that the patchwork House of Commons supplied an excellent excuse for that appeal for a mandate.

Another patchwork House would serve the same purpose. The choice for those who want stability and a holiday from election turmoil, is between a majority for L. B. Pearson's team and a majority for John Diefenbaker's team.

Shingles Limits Self But Can Be Very Painful

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Repeated inquiries from readers concern shingles — a painful sort of name for a disease which can cause so much pain. It is easier to say the technical name. It is from Greek words, herpes meaning to creep, and zoster meaning to girdle.

Shingles is a virus infection which attacks a special type of nerve cell, usually one in a region located at the nerve root. With the nerve thus attacked, the virus travels there, and can "feel like a burn."

The virus is markedly similar to that of chicken pox, and a person exposed to chicken pox may get shingles. It is rare but not unknown for a person to have both. It is more frequent for someone to develop chicken pox from exposure to shingles.

Contrary to common opinion, shingles is not only a disease of old age. It can occur at any time beyond the first few months of infancy (when a baby's natural immunity protects). It is most frequent between the ages of 40 and 60, and tapers off after that. But people 24 years of age have it, often with greater discomfort.

As the virus first attacks the nerve, there is pain related to the area served by the nerve, variable but often quite severe. Then 24 hours or more five days later, vesicles (blisters) appear in the area. These form a crust, usually in about 10 days and by the end of two or three weeks (this varies a good deal), the crusts fall, leaving a brownish discoloration of the skin, which fades slowly.

The "girdle part of the name arises from the fact that the nerve chest cell group most often affected, but limited to one portion of it, not going all the way around. However, it can strike elsewhere: Arm, thigh, scalp, neck, all even in the mouth, including the most dangerous.

Pain, however, a self-limited disease, running its course in time, but it takes such a long time in some cases. At least the patient usually is then immune to further attacks.

The harm is primarily confined to the pain which can be very severe, and to persistent acute rest. Therefore essential medical care is to control the pain with aspirin or from stronger when that will suffice, to shortterm use of narcotics, when nothing else will relieve pain.

One study of treatments, ranging from X-ray through injections of different types, steroid drugs and antibiotics, disclosed that at least 13 methods have been relatively fruitless, and that duration of the disease averaged out to the same time for any method. The only valid conclusion is that no successful treatment (other than pain relief) is available.

Attempts are being made to find a vaccine, building on features passed through the experimental stage, much less is available for use.

The disheartening thing about shingles is that the pain can persist for a very long time after vesicles and crust have disappeared. Older people suffer longer, sometimes for a year or more, and there is little to offer them except medication for the pain.

When shingles strikes the chest region, the pain often alarms a patient, who fears it is heart trouble. The type and localized nature of the pain, however permit ready differentiation.

Dear Dr. Molner: I recently had that birth control pill can cause unborn children to be deformed. Is this true? — Mrs. R. H.

No, this has not been proved.

* * *

Personal note to Mrs. J.R.: Your "shakes" that vanish after you eat may well be nerves, as you suspect. Is your letter, but I think it would be well worthwhile to investigate as to whether hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) might be involved, too. A combination of causes, such as hypoglycemia and nervousness, should also be considered.

Shingles can be a painful disease! To receive a copy of my booklet, "The Facts About Shingles," write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sunday Tribune, Box 1270, Grand Dunde, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Who Will Distribute Spare Parts?

At a conference last year, on the subject "The Environment of Change," Francis Bello, one of the editors of Scientific American, remarked that "the greatest impact of science on society will occur when disease and aging have been controlled so that the human life span has been lifted."

One of the most incontinuous paradoxes of our time is that just as we are becoming gravely concerned about the population explosion, medical science is finding new ways to keep more people alive longer.

On the one hand, we are conquering old diseases and lowering the infant mortality rate drastically on the other, we are beginning to realize that even a two percent annual increase in world population per year will leave us with standing room only by the 21st century.

But the problem of space is only one of many raised by recent medical advances. Bello asks us to consider the ethical problems that will be posed "when it becomes possible, by means of organ transplantation and use of artificial organs, to keep a person alive indefinitely."

Progress in this area, the conference was told, is now so rapid "that organ replacement, on a routine basis, may be possible within the next 10 or 15 years. Even an artificial heart is not out of the question for our children's time.

"Will there be enough organs to go around?" asks Bello. "And who will be in charge of their distribution? Can anyone doubt that full government participation will be needed to guarantee approximately equal medical care for all members of society? Without equality, the disparity in care received by rich and poor — already wide enough — could become scandalous."

This is one of the most dramatic examples of what I meant in Monday's column, when I observed that the acceleration of science and technology that has been largely made possible by capital-ism may turn out to undermine the system more effectively than any of the Marxian formulas.

The world of the future, as it seems to be shaping up today, will fit into none of the rigid ideologies of the past, from Adam Smith to Karl Marx, both lived, and thought, in economies of scarcity; in the new economy of abundance, we must learn to utilize our ideas as basically as we have changed our machines and our modes of living.

Inuvik Has New Road Link

Ottawa Journal

Almost unnoticed by the south, a winter road is being constructed to parallel the full length of the Mackenzie River, all the way to Inuvik. Last winter it was halway, at Norman Wells; next winter it should reach Inuvik on the Mackenzie Delta.

News of the road was given to the Canadian Transportation Research Forum in Quebec City by Mr. E. R. Welch of the Northern Affairs and National Resources Division.

It is significant development in the north where high transport costs are a limiting factor in development. It is also significant evidence that the Canadian ability to make-do and come to terms with the cold north has not been lost.

The Mackenzie River road does not mean for a moment that an automobile tourist can explore another 1,000 miles of Canadian territory. A winter road has use of lakes as well as rivers, travelling over the ice, and such roads vary in quality, in the words of Mr. Welch, "from those which can accommodate only a single cat train creeping along at three or four miles per hour to those permitting the use of highway tractor trailers travelling at nearly highway speeds."

"Construction" in winter road terms means providing a track through treed, or rocky land between lakes and rivers, and leveling and making safe as possible the crossings of rivers where the ice may be uncertain, or setting up stopping places with accommodation for rest for men and crew for overnight stops.

Some winter roads have become almost permanent in that they are annually rebuilt each winter, the building methods depending on intended use. Let Mr. Welch continue:

"Some of the better winter roads of the Great Slave Lake region are built by pulling an ordinary farm harrow and some heavy packing equipment back and forth along the right of way with a half-track "bombardier" vehicle. Maintenance is usually confined to plowing with plows. If a road of this type has been properly located in the first place so that most of it lies over the ice of frozen lakes, real difficulty in maintenance will not be encountered, because of drifting at portages."

When southern all - season roads can cost hundreds of thousands of dollars a mile in difficult country, the skill of the northerners in turning extreme cold to their advantage and creating seasonal roads to move supplies economically is quite remarkable. It i surprising that no little is heard of it.

Military Would Help Form Band

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have read Mr. Crawford's letter regarding bands with great interest. Should it be that his friends wish, we would be delighted to discuss the formation of a regimental band. Unfortunately because of poor turn out and lack of interest, our own band was dissolved a year ago. Since all Militia personnel are entitled to pay locally, the idea of having such a sizeable fund would be available for band purposes. There are resplendent uniforms in storage, and instruments are provided by the military. The Armoury provides an excellent location for practice, and in most cases the military grants free transportation for performances out of town. As personnel qualify by examination they can increase their pay and funds by either obtaining higher trade classification.

In return for this, the military require that the band play the various type of music — military music! All bandsmen are expected to qualify first in such basic military fundamentals as drill, as essential for all bandsmen. They are expected to attend (if qualify), to be able to march and to be available for important parades and exercises. They must also learn to be proficient in First Aid since their job in actual warfare is to be stretcher bearers, including the unit medical officer.

There is a place for a band in Belleville, and we would be most pleased to assist provided these conditions can be met.

K. R. Kokesh Lt.

Sherbrooke Record

On Sunday, So were politics generally. . .

Perhaps this is due to the fact that when the constituency pie-nics dropped into oblivion with the outbreak of World War I, the male suffrage was the rule in Canada.

The picnic was a family affair with wives and children cordially welcomed.

But at the far end of the field was a special attraction for the male members of the gathering — a farm wagon replete with kegs of draught beer, several demijohns of whiskey blanc and many nickel cigars.

While the women and children were provided with discreet entertainment, on the grandstand the male members of the audience were regaled with speeches on the evils of the opposing party, the merits of defending the horse barns — speeches which increased in violence as the kegs ran dry and demijohns emptied.

Probably the pronouncement of the politicians, of high and low rank, did little to produce clear thinking on the part of the audience, but they surely created a fraternal spirit.

Some would advocate the rowdiness of the earlier gatherings but the informal county rally might just serve the means of bringing the ordinary voter back into the political picture — which has been too much dominated by the professionals in recent years.

REPORTERS GO HAIRY

BRUSSELS (AP)—The whole editorial staff of a newspaper, the Belgian socialist daily newspaper, was reported to have vowed not to shave so long as the ruling coalition government was in power. But a staff member denied this ideological reason saying, "When we saw a beautifully - bearded man pass through our offices . . . we all decided to compete for the nicest beard."

Bridge Club Members to Elect Officers

The members of the Belleville Bridge Club will gather at Columbus Hall this evening to elect their officers for the year and lay plans for the forthcoming season. At the present time there are nineteen teams ready to play and it is expected that the same number of teams as last year, 22, will face the barrier.

The business meeting of the club is generally of short duration. The nominating committee have the slate of officers prepared and it is only a matter of ratifying their choices. At the conclusion of the meeting the members enjoy an evening of bridge followed by refreshments and a gab fest. In this way the new members are welcomed and the older members renew friendships made over many years.

Prompt action of Frankford and Batawa mutual aid firemen stopped this fire from spreading to an adjoining apartment and store next to Gerald Fox's combined Shell service station and garage in Frankford. The garage was completely gutted by the fire yesterday, believed to have started from the spark of a garage assistant's shoe. At the height of the fire, flames and smoke rose to 100 feet in the air.

Fluke Sparks $20,000 Fire at Frankford

FRANKFORD — Flying sparks from the heel of a garage assistant's shoe were believed to have ignited seeping gasoline fumes resulting in a fire that completely gutted a garage owned by Gerald Fox at Frankford yesterday afternoon.

Barry Goodman, 18, alone at the time, said, he was tightening a bolt at the rear of a jeep when suddenly he slipped and sparks flew under the vehicle causing an explosion. Force of the explosion blew him back onto the floor causing minor burns and shock, he said.

Flaming fumes quickly spread and destroyed three vehicles in the garage as well as equipment and the garage section. An adjoining apartment and store were saved by prompt action of Frankford and Batawa mutual aid firemen. Smoke damage to the apartment occupied by Lyle Williams, away at the time, was estimated at $500.

Gerald Fox, owner of the combined Shell service station and garage, on South Trent St., said that the contents and building were partly insured. He was away at the start of the fire driving a school bus.

U.S. Treasury Relations Good Gordon Asserts

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian relations with the United States treasury are excellent—"much better than they used to be"—Finance Minister Gordon said Tuesday.

There is no problem caused by the fact that Canada's foreign exchange reserves are about $100,000,000 higher than the limit undertaken by Canada in return for special exemptions on borrowing in the U.S., he said.

There also is a seasonal factor involved, but the small bulge is a slight percentage of the fund total of about $2,500,000,000, and the U.S. treasury fully understands the situation, Gordon told a press conference.

Canada's recent big wheat sale to the Soviet Union is the main factor behind an increase in Canada's holdings of gold and U.S. dollars. Canada undertook to keep those holdings at or under the June, 1963, level in return for a partial exemption on money borrowed in the U.S. on stock and bond issues.

Gordon spoke to reporters after addressing the joint annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

National Bishops' Parleys To Get Unusual Authority

From AP-Reuter

VATICAN CITY (CP) — The Vatican ecumenical council before final voting today on a document giving national bishops' conferences an unprecedented degree of authority and relaxation of Vatican control.

The document, on the pastoral office of bishops, puts into action the concept of collegial sharing of power by the bishops and the Pope. That concept was expressed in a document on the nature of the church approved and promulgated by the council fathers and Pope Paul last year.

The earlier document states that the bishops and the Pope share power in the government of the church.

The document on specific powers of the bishop, when finally approved and promulgated, will make it possible for national bishops' conferences to act as deliberative bodies with juridical powers of their own.

MATTER OF ACTION

This means, for example, that for the first time the bishops will be able to take action on church issues in their country without first asking permission from Rome. Decisions of the conference could be made binding on all bishops in their country.

That aspect of the document disturbs some bishops who are reluctant to surrender any of the independence they now enjoy in their dioceses. There seemed no doubt, however, that the majority of the 2,200 bishops at the council would approve the document.

The document also contains a section proposing a synod of bishops to work with the Pope. Pope Paul anticipated final approval of the proposal by announcing at the start of this fourth and final council session Sept. 14 that he was setting up such a synod.

Two Trenton Planes Join In Search

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — A Dakota and an Albatross from the RCAF station at Trenton, Ont., joined two private helicopters Tuesday in an air search for two RCAF men and a civilian employee, missing from the RCAF radar station here since Saturday.

An official at the Trenton station's search and rescue headquarters said that the search had been discontinued at darkness but would be resumed at dawn today.

The men were identified as J. F. G. Lemoine, 40, and R. A. Cardin, an RCAF officials said Lac J. A. R. Longpre, 24, Lac all three men were single.

They set out Saturday in a 23 - foot, motor - powered canoe on a hunting expedition on the Moosonee River, which runs into the southern tip of James Bay about 12 miles north of here.

Need Majority Government Argues Temple

Robert Temple, M.P., stressed the need for a majority government yesterday at the regular weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville.

"The primary reason for this election," he said, "is that today there are major issues and problems facing Canada and that in dealing with them the Federal Government can do the best possible job only if it has the support of a Parliamentary majority, based on the confidence of Canadians in all parts of the country.

"For this purpose, we are asking for a clear mandate so that our country can have the leadership and strength in Ottawa needed to get on with the basic tasks: maintaining our economic expansion; improving social security; providing equal opportunity for all Canadians; in short, get on with the essential job of building a new Canada.

"It is my intention to campaign for re-election, not only on the job we are doing, but, even more, on the job we can do; to campaign as a member of a party ready and able—if it is given a mandate—to meet the challenges, confront the problems, make the most of the opportunities that confront the new Canada.

GROWING LAND

"The new Canada is a growing and prosperous land with more jobs, more machinery, higher living standards, greater security, better opportunities than ever before.

"Two years of Liberal Government have brought more than half a million new jobs. The unemployment rate is the lowest in eight years; under three per cent.

"New industries are being created. Merchandise exports have reached new heights. So have farm production and income. Pay cheques are bigger than ever before, while the income tax has been reduced.

"In the area of Social Security, our greatest achievement to date has been the Canada Pension Plan.

"We also raised the Old Age Pension to $75 with the starting age to be lowered to 65 by 1970, and with benefits to be raised in future if the cost of living rises.

MUCH TO BE DONE

"These are all things that have been done. But there are equally important things that remain to be done. And for this we need a majority mandate from the people.

"As part of our general commitment to expansion, new programs are being prepared to assure not only that this growth will continue but that its benefits will be spread among all Canadians and that the dangers of inflationary pressures and rising costs that are a part of any great expansion, are contained.

"Our objective is to have full Medicare in operation on Canada's 100th birthday, July 1st, 1967. We will also be putting forward proposals — to be worked out with the universities and the provinces — for further Federal assistance to education.

"We must also mount a massive training program for people who are unemployed or threatened by unemployment.

"In all these — and in many other matters — there must be Federal-Provincial co-operation.

"We have — and will continue to have — problems of unity and Federalism but we and our differences in perspective. They are serious. They must be discussed, understood and removed. But they should not be distorted or exaggerated for partisan or for any other purpose.

"The new Canada has problems. But, even more, it has opportunities and the ability to seize those opportunities. Above all, it has human resources as high in quality as any nation ever had.

"Canada has accomplished much; it will accomplish much more, with a Government for all Canada; dedicated to the proposition that our diversity is enriching; but that our unity is essential, as we work toward common goals for our future."

In other Kiwanis business, Friedel Lutsteti, vice-president of the club for the past year, has been elected as new president.

Tuberculosis Assoc. Favors Health Unit

The management committee of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association recently held its first regular monthly meeting for the coming year with a good representation of members in attendance and the president, Mr. C. W. Fraser, acting as chairman. This was an excellent meeting, but rather lengthy due to the many reports to be given covering activities during the summer months.

The chairman of social and rehabilitation, Mrs. Maureen Bridge, reported on a busy schedule and told of assistance given to patients and their families and visits that had been made to Ongwanada Sanitorium in Kingston. Some of the needy cases were discussed and suggestions and decisions made.

The secretary reported on health education supplies that had been distributed during the summer months, and also reported that the case finding program of students in Grades 9 and 12 throughout the County had been set up through the co-operation of the principals, and the testing and reading will take place during the week of September 27th. Approximately 1,800 students will be tested this year. This testing will be done by Dr. J. B. McSherry, medical advisor to the Association and a follow-up will be carried out on the patients and families of the positive re-actors by Mrs. Bruce White, as was done in the past year. The mobile X-ray unit from Ongwanada Sanitorium will be going through the county on October 21st to do the X-raying of the positive reactors. The schools in Belleville are under the jurisdiction of the Health Department and will be done at a later date.

SERVICE AT FAIRS

This same mobile X-ray unit from Kingston was used by the Association to give free x-ray service to the public at some of the fall fairs in the county, where it was convenient for arrangements to be made. This unit appeared for two days at Madoc Fall Fair, also at the Shannonville Fair, and will be appearing at the Tweed Fair on October 2nd. This was on an experimental basis, and it was decided by the members that if the response of the public to this kind of service warrants it, this will be repeated another year on a larger scale.

The discussion on follow ups of abnormalities brought to light through these free x-rays led to a discussion on the need of a Health Unit in Hastings County. It was the hope of those present that Dr. Raymond's recent talk to the members of the Joint council meeting would lead to the early establishment of a Health Unit in Hastings County. The members of the association were much in agreement with Dr. Dymond's remarks and felt that the formation of a Health Unit would be most beneficial to the health in general of the citizens of Hastings County.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

SIDNEY JUNIOR FARMERS

The first fall meeting of Sidney Junior Farmers was held recently in the form of a combined hayride, corn and weiner roast at the farm of Francis Frost.

The evening's activities were enjoyed by approximately 20 members, including some guests from the Rawdon and Madoc clubs.

Medical Soc. W.A. Hears of S. A. Camp

The first fall meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward Medical Society took place last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. S. Morphy.

The president, Mrs. A. Rota, extended a welcome to newcomers, Mrs. E. Manderville, Mrs. Gerald Mc. MacLeod.

Letters of appreciation were read by Mrs. N. Reid from the Salvation Army and the Belleville and District School for Retarded Children, for donations received. It was also decided to donate a hospital bed to the Ontario Home for Mentally Retarted Infants, Plainfield.

Mrs. B. Cronk reported on the rehabilitation program of the members of "shut-in" arthritic patients, and submitted several new names to the list.

After a brief discussion, the group decided to stage again "Fantasy in Fashion," as the sole fund-raising project. This will take place early in 1966.

The speaker for the evening, Major Bernard Bernat, leader of the Belleville Salvation Army Corps, was introduced by Mrs. K. Douglas.

Major Bernat's topic, the S.A. camp for under-privileged children, was one of great interest as the auxiliary has sponsored several children to this camp over a period of years. A brief camp history was given, followed by a description of the buildings as they now stand, and a typical day in the life of a young camper. The major stated that the aim of the counsellors is to see that no child feels left out, and the many diversified activities in which all took part proved excellent therapy for children from broken homes. This past summer 477 children, 215 of whom were under-privileged, enjoyed a week's holiday at Robin Lake camp.

Slides were shown of the Salvation Army Centenary celebrations held this summer in London, England, and attended by Major and Mrs. Bernat.

Mrs. B. Cronk thanked the speaker, and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES JOHN LUNDY

Lundy – Dickinson

The marriage of Sherryl Ellen Dickinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Dickinson, of Port Credit, to Charles John Lundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Lundy, Belleville, took place recently in Trinity Anglican Church, Port Credit. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. P. Parson. Mr. W. Wright, organist of the church, provided traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length gown of white silk faille, imported lace outlined the scalloped neckline and sleeves, and accented the waist. A large bow at the back highlighted the fulness of the skirt, which fell into a chapel train. A headdress of ribbon and pearls held her bouffant veil of tulle illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations, Sweetheart roses and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by Miss Donna Jean Thompson, as maid of honor, and by Mrs. Barbara Dickinson, sister-in-law of the bride and Miss Jennie Van Kampen. The attendants were identically styled floor-length gowns of aqua floral chiffon over taffeta and large picture hats of aqua taffeta.

They carried nosegays of white carnations and turquoise baby 'mums. Miss Sarah Jane Davey, three-year-old niece of the bridegroom, was a diminutive flower girl. She wore a floor length dress of aqua taffeta, matching headband and carried a basket of white daisies and turquoise 'mums.

The bridegroom was attended by Gene Peacock of Kingston. Jon Dickinson, brother of the bride and Ted Murphy, of Ottawa, ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Holiday Inn. The bride's mother received the guests in a two-piece gown of champagne silk brocade with matching accessories, toning hat and cymbidia orchid corsage. She was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom who wore a dress and matching coat of cocoa brown brocade, toning accessories and an orchid corsage.

Isolation Said Driving S.A. Women to Drink

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — The routine of housekeeping and the isolation in which housewives live are driving more and more South African white women to drink, reports the South African National Council for Alcoholism.

The council estimates there are about 15,000 white women alcoholics in the country, which has a total white population of about 3,250,000.

The superintendent of a Pretoria clinic for alcoholics, J. A. Pienaar, said alcoholism in general is "much more serious than most people think."

"What is, above all, disturbing is the increase in women alcoholics. About one in five alcoholics is a woman."

He said most women alcoholics are housewives. The majority come from "good" families and their husbands are prominent people such as doctors, professors, magistrates and industrialists.

Susanna's Family Fare

JUST GIVE ME A LINE

Dear Susanna: It may be getting a little late for fishing hints but with this beautiful weather there are still enough avid anglers about in these parts to warrant sending along a couple of suggestions that have worked out so well for us:

If shore dinners are to be the order of the day, take along an aluminum foil cake pan plus a small quantity of chare o a l. When you are ready for lunch, set fire to the charcoal right in the cake pan and roast weiners or anything else you fancy right on the coals. A small amount of sand or water will douse any remaining fire.

Once one of the members of the party lost his car key overboard — what a predicament he was in. Since then I've taken the precaution of fastening my key chain through a cork large enough to float in spite of the weight of the keys. Now, even if they do slip from my pocket it's a simple matter to fish them back out of the lake. — Dottie

What a torrent of unrest and longing your talk of fishing and shore dinners sets up in me, Dottie — you see I'm an all-out avid angler too. In fact I don't even have to catch a mimnow to have a whale of a time! You must admit it's pretty hard to be more dedicated than that.— SUSANNA

FACTS ABOUT FLOWERS

Dear Susann: For any of your readers who have ever tried to arrange short flowers in a tall vase you might suggest loosely crumpling up a suitable quantity of tin foil and placing it in the bottom. It acts as quite a good holder and they really say that a ball of this foil in the water helps cut flowers to stay fresher longer. You know it actually does seem to help.—Mrs. Herron

Sucking cider through a straw for us, is almost as much fun as sucking water through a straw for flowers. Her's how they do it. To make a more impressive arrangement of really short, slim, smooth-stemmed flowers insert each one in a colored plastic straw and place in your favorite container. Add water in the usual way past the top end of the straws so the wee flower can get a real fix. It takes the precaution of water, and stir. — SUSANNA

Washington Society Looks Forward To November and Princess Margaret

By ARIE MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Washington society, sharply restored this year in the supply of foreign visitors, is looking toward November and Princess Margaret.

"We undoubtedly shall make more enemies than friends," sighed a British embassy official conjecturing on just how much social exposure can be squeezed out of Britain's princess and her husband.

The visit to the United States, beginning Nov. 4 at San Francisco, originated with a private invitation from Sharman Douglas, Princess Margaret's good friend for more than a decade. Now semi-official touches are being added for the three-week tour, which will be Margaret's first in the U.S.

Los Angeles, Arizona, Washington and New York are on the itinerary.

But what role President Johnson will play in the visit of several days here is not known. The president has his own technique for such occasions, usually announced at the last moment. But Washington's social set just can't imagine the president not meeting the princess and the Earl of Snowdon, and elder daughter Lynda Baines Johnson has been pondering what swains to take to Princess Margaret parties.

It is that the president has seen many foreign visitors this year.

FOUR VISITS

The number of state visits totals only four so far in 1961 —Japan, South Korea, Upper Volta and Italy. There were 11 in 1960 and 10 in 1964 and the late President Kennedy in fact entertained more foreign visitors in such a two years than President Roosevelt had done in 12 or President Truman in eight.

President Johnson, while believed to rest at the time-consuming protocol involved in state visits, has a crowded in the slow pace of 1965. He has had the Vietnamese war and a huge congressional program to manage. Much of his entertaining has been functional—often on Potomac River boating parties.

There is an impression that visits have been curtailed because Prime Minister Shastri of India and President Ayub Khan of Pakistan were asked to postpone their scheduled visits and it isn't proper to take on other visits until new arrangements have been made.

The state department's protocol division says this is nonsense.

But, anyway, Blair House which is used for state visits and which has recently received an entirely new décor, hasn't had much use.

There has not been a complete drought.

Madame Chiang Kai - shek with a large retinue has been in town as an unofficial visitor who nevertheless has stood a lot of official people and had tea with the president.

Japanese Prince Mikasi, brother of the emperor, had a courtesy reception and Crown Prince Harald of Norway was at September caller.

There has been some speculation that Queen Elizabeth may be considering a visit to Washington next March after a Caribbean visit with Prince Philip —a rumor that the British embassy promptly scotches.

Prince Philip is coming in March for two or three weeks in response to an invitation from Variety Clubs International, comprised entertainment-world folk who work for charity and which the prince has supported. But any hopes that Texas-style hospitality will be showered on the Queen herself are said to have no basis in fact.

FAREWELL DESSERT PARTY

In two months' time three families in our neighborhood have moved. I'll told you about the surprise party we had for Eleanor and Bruce. The next party was more modest — a farewell dessert party for the Plants and Clarks.

Because our fruit is so beautiful and plentiful I decided to feature it and, for good measure, added a bowl of Trifle (see New Zealand Trifle, Sept. 21) and a boardful of cheese and crackers.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Chicken Casserole; Green Lima Beans; Garlic-Buttered Bread; Chilled Compote of Prunes, Peaches and Pears; Date Cookies; Tea.

The fruit stole the show. It was served in a huge wooden bowl on ice. The food editors have seen a lot of colorful array of fruits at their conference at the Waldorf-Asteria. A different display was served to us at Trader Vic's in Vancouver last month. Sparked by their beauty and popularity I decided to copy them for my departing neighbors' party.

The ice is a must and a nuisance. I needed 5 traysful for my big wooden bowl. I put it in a big strong plastic bag and shoved that inside a double shopping bag and pounded it with a mallet. (You can buy chipped ice if you prefer.) To take up surplus space I inverted a round baking dish in the bottom. I covered this with 1 trayful of unbroken ice cubes and covered them with broken ice, not very small. Round it up at the centre to form a mound. Arrange choice ready-to-eat fruit over the ice in an attractive pattern:

1) Food Editors' Conference — cantaloupe and watermelon balls and grapefruit and orange sections and sliced peaches garnished with mint sherbet and mint sprigs.

2) Trader Vic's — arrangement of fruit resembled the spokes of a wheel made of fresh pineapple sticks and long slender crescents of mangoes. A luscious green border comprised huge quartered Chinese gooseberries. Tossed at random were huge B.C. strawberries. Every luscious bite was eaten.

3 Bot I liked mine the best. I copied the spokes of a wheel motif, using slender long crescents of Cassaba melon — 12 of them in a 10" diameter bowl. Between these were 3" long narrow strips of seeded watermelon. In a bowl inside the bowl rim, were arranged quarters of big purple plums and quarters of nectarines and pears (dipped in lemon juice). Above this fruit border were little clusters of seedless green grapes at the base of the watermelon sticks. In centre at top I piled a mass of overlapping peach or apricot halves, like a snowcap on a mountain peak.

NOTE:

This centred yellow fruit could be canned — peaches or apricots or figs, or if you can buy them, mangoes or loquats. I garnished the outside bowl with washed large ivy leaves. Use whatever shiny, harmless leaves you have at hand. This must be served at once, for all items are perishable. It is a conversation piece par excellence for sophisticates.

Japanese Bar Hostesses Are Having Rough Time

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese bar hostesses, who generally seem indifferent to almost everything, have a serious worry—the current business recession in Japan.

As money grows scarce, Japanese companies have been tightening their lavish expense accounts. The relatively junior "salary men," as they are called here, who used to pay for bar bills with careless abandon, now find that they have to pay for their own and their friends' drinks.

This is a sobering thought in city where entertainment, especially in hostess bars, can be staggeringly expensive and airies are comparatively low.

To the dismay of the hostesses, who usually have little trouble in parting a man from his money, the young men have turned to the indoor Tsuribori or angling pools which have sprung up by the hundreds in recent months.

An hour's discussion with a hostess on matters of mutual interest may cost about $10 while an hour's angling costs only some small change.

Moreover, everybody seems agreed that a carp is easier to catch than a hostess and certainly easier to take home.

WOMEN CONTROL CRIME

MONTREAL (CP)—The woman's influence on crime is tremendous, T. W. Hall, director of penitentiary services for Western Canada, said at the International Criminological Congress here. "A mother can drive her son to crime through indifference, lack of love and direction, and a girl can be the reason why a guy runs and steals," he said. "Too often the 'femme fatale' of crime is good old mom or the sweet, stupid wife."

CROOKS ARE LIKE KIDS

MONTREAL (CP) — Criminals are much like children, says Mrs. Jeannette Boissau, director of the women's section of the Montreal jail. Bringing five children was the best training she could have had for her job, she said. "Criminals, like children, are emotional and shortsighted, and lack discipline and self-control."

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Trimming baby's nails can be a chore at times, especially if he's a confirmed fidget-chucher. Two clever-mother suggestions that may prove just right for you:

• You might try snipping them right after a meal, when your wee one's drowsy, his fingers relaxed.

• If baby's a steady sitter, try placing him on your lap in front of a mirror for the manicure. Self-inflicted glory is shocking.

• Vegetable purview with two special points of view. Introducing a variety of vegetables at an early age serves a two-fold purpose. It helps build good eating habits when food acceptances are most easily established. It provides a wide range of vitamins and minerals. Gerber Strained Vegetables are notable for garden-fresh colours and natural-flavour goodness. Like all Gerber Baby Foods, each one is "custom-cooked" according to itd own requirements to help preserve precious nutritive values.

Substitute plan. If your baby should occasionally rebel at a vegetable, why force the issue when you can usually substitute another with similar nutritive values? Mixed Vegetables for Sweet Potatoes or Squash for Green Beans, for example?

Beauty course. Whenever, you give baby his oil or lotion beauty treatment, smooth a few drops for the backs of your hands. Helps keep both hands and cuticles soft.

Smile center. Smiles are usually in store for you when you top off baby's meal-time with a Gerber Strained Custard. Delicately flavoured and delightfully smooth, any one will make a happy ending for a baby meal. Made from wholesome ingredients, they're pleasure personified. Orange, Pineapple, Arrowroot, Vanilla, Banana, Butterscotch, Fruit and Cherry Vanilla make up the tempting list. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

Family Life Is Topic At C.W.L. Conference

On Sunday afternoon, in St. Joseph's Parish Hall, Diocesan officers and members of the Catholic Women's League took an important address given by the Diocesan director Rev. Father W. V. Hamilton of Read, Ontario, Mrs. T. Keilty, Thomasburg, Diocesan president, conducted the meeting. Delegates and members were present from Kingston, Smiths Falls, Trenton, Madoc, Stirling, Marmora, Frankford, Pt. Anne, Read, Tweed, Stoco, Batawa, and the three Belleville parishes. Benediction in St. Joseph's Church preceded the meeting.

The hall was filled to capacity. Greetings were extended by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. A. Carley, pastor of St. Joseph's parish; Mrs. T. Keilty, Diocesan president, and Mrs. D. V. Duminie, president of St. Joseph's parish council.

In his address, Father Hamilton stated that the Catholic Women's League of Canada had promised to lend material support to the Vanier Institute for establishing means to combat dangers to family life. The family is the basis of a good society. He remarked that this is the age of renewal in the church and our thoughts go to the council in Rome. Renewal influences every aspect of the church. This will have a definite influence on plans and work of the Catholic Women's League. To have a practical application, it will be necessary to study and to apply what we learn. He advised members to read and study all documents coming from the meetings to bring work to be done to a practical level. Presidents of each council were advised to attend the Diocesan meetings in order to keep in contact with the plans and reports given during this time which will lead to better understanding and to efficient league endeavor.

Mrs. T. Keilty, president, thanked the speaker and endorsed the idea that the spiritual level must be the true aim of the league. She likened the work to housekeepers and homemakers. "We are all housekeepers, which is essential in our family life, but homemaking is the important word, for it means having good relations with the family and making everyone happy. We should keep the spiritual aspect of our work foremost in mind, and the true aim for all should be to be better Christian women."

FAMILY LIFE is topic

The Diocesan president informed the members that a course on the function and work of the league had been prepared by Mrs. B. E. Burley for St. Michael's Parish. It is now available to any parish due to the generosity of Mrs. Burley, who has revised the course to apply to all parishes. The seminar can be incorporated into a regular league meeting and it will be a valuable source of help to league executives. This may be obtained by applying to Mrs. Herbert Brown, St. Michael's Parish.

The meeting divided into 12-minute group discussions led by the various diocesan conveners. Three sessions were held with the women attending the groups of their choice. In charge of the groups were Diocesan officers as follows: spiritual, Miss Mary Warren; membership and organization, Mrs. Herbert Brown, 1st vice-president; education, Mrs. U. Haughian; magazine, Mrs. Arnold Mangan, 2nd vice-president; social action, Mrs. J. A. Cordick, 3rd vice-president; radio, TV, films, Mrs. J. F. Darlington, recording secretary; press and publicity, Mrs. W. B. Robson, corresponding secretary; report forms, Mrs. J. B. Fisher, Mrs. W. G. Pearson, past president; citizenship and civic action, Mrs. H. B. Slaven (advisory committee.)

A summary, which proved to be interesting and instructive, was given by each convener.

Brief addresses were given by the following parish directors: Rt. Rev. J. A. Carley, (St. Joseph's); Rev. Father Rufus, (Holy Rosary Parish); W. H. Dunphy, (Batawa), and J. F. McGarvey, (Stirling).

Following the meeting refreshments were served by the hospitality committee: Mrs. H. Carr-Brainl, Mrs. W. Lynch, Mrs. T. Clancy and Mrs. H. Park.

Preparations for the meeting were made by St. Joseph's diocesan president and executive of the Parish Council.

Ann Landers
Retarded Child Put Bite on Playmate

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A lovely family moved next door to us last March. Their youngest is a girl whom I will call Jody. She is 12 years old, but has the mentality of a five-year-old.

Our eight-year-old daughter (I will call her Margaret) gets along fairly well with Jody. She understands that her friend is mentally retarded and makes allowances for her. Yesterday Margaret came home in tears. Jody got mad because she couldn't get her doll's clothes on right. She bore down hard and bit Margaret on the arm. The skin was not broken but the teeth marks were there.

ANN LANDERS

Jody has had temper tantrums before but she has never actually hurt our daughter. My husband is very upset. Jody's mother is sick at heart over it. She says it is important that Jody play with normal children and she has begged us not to keep our child away. Will you please give us some advice? We cannot be objective. — PERPLEXED.

* * *

DEAR PERPLEXED: Retarded children present a heart-breaking problem to parents. Those who have normal children should try to understand and help as best they can.

Tell Jody's mother you will co-operate if she will do her part. This means she must promise to supervise the two little girls every moment they are together and separate them at the first sign of trouble.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, please help me think of just the right words to tell a perfectly wonderful woman that she is wearing her dresses about four inches too short.

Etta (who is my husband's sister) is 51 years old. Etta used to wear a size 14 but she has put on about 20 pounds in the last 10 years. She doesn't realize that dresses hike up when they fit snug — especially organdy. The other evening she bent over to shake hands with someone seated on the sofa and everyone could see her garters hooked into the tops of her stockings.

This woman is really a fine person and I'm sure if she knew how unattractive she looks in short skirts she'd lower her hemlines. Please help me to help her. — DEE-GEE.

* * *

DEAR GEE: Since Etta is your husband's sister he ought to give her the word. If he witnessed the sofa performance it would be a perfect point from which to launch the suggestion.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl 15 who is going with a very nice boy. I will call him Alfred. When he met my best friend, Sally, he seemed to take to her right away. The next thing I knew Alfred was asking me to get Sally and her boy friend to double date with us.

Last night was the third time the four of us have gone to the movies together and it was the same old story. He makes sure I walk down the aisle first. Then he follows me and makes sure Sally is next so that he can sit between both of us. Sally's date is on the other end of the foursome.

During the tender scenes in the movies Alfred always has something to say to Sally. He talks to me during the cartoons. I don't mind telling you this makes me plenty mad. Should I pretend not to notice or have it out with him? — EDGED OUT.

* * *

DEAR EDGED: Since Alfred seems interested in Sally, tell him you want to knock off the going steady so he can date her. This is exactly what he wants to do so be gracious about it, Lamb Chop. He's as good as gone.

* * *

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Polio Victim PC Nominee In Parkdale

TORONTO (CP)—A few years ago Felicity Cochrane, 36, was told she might never walk again. But now in a sense she's running.

The 1959 polio victim and mother of three girls has been nominated Progressive Conservative candidate in Toronto Parkdale in the Nov. 8 general election.

Mrs. Cochrane will campaign against Ralph Dye of the New Democratic Party and Dr. Stanley Haidasz, Liberal member in the last Parliament.

Born in London, Mrs. Cochrane now lives in Ottawa but plans to move to Toronto before the election.

She told a party rally Monday night:

"I didn't walk for a year. Then with braces, canes and a lot of determination, here I am."

No newcomer to politics, Mrs. Cochrane was a Young Conservative as a teen-ager in Britain with her parents. Later she thought she would seek nomination in Newfoundland or British Columbia.

"Then Senator (Walks) McCutcheon thought I'd do best in Toronto."

In addition to being a mother, Mrs. Cochrane works as a publicity agent for the federal department of trade and commerce.

Tourist Dating Business In Yugoslavia on Rocks

DUBROVNIK (AP)—The Sea Gull organization of young Yugoslavs, formed to squire pretty foreign tourist women about this Adriatic resort with points for the most success, has gone on the rocks.

Most of the 30 young charter members were sad to see it go. For a time the wearers of the Sea Gull lapel pin had hoped they were going to raise standards in the profitable business of tourist dating.

For one thing, there was the distinctive pin. It helped point out a willing and suave escort to any tourist. And it served as a handy free pass to night clubs and the like.

The rules were stiff, aimed at encouraging high-class patronage.

Sea Gulls were required to: Speak at least two foreign languages, talk smoothly about the history and points of interest of Dubrovnik, have a cultured knowledge of Chopin and Tchaikowsky, be able to quote from Byron and Shakespeare — and know the best time and place to do so.

Of course, good looks were required, and an "art of dancing Nifty dressing also was a requisite—ho cowboy pants or T-shirts in the evening.

COZY BARS

Sea Gulls also had to know where to take their dates—to those cozy restaurants and bars with a romantic atmosphere and soft music.

The directorate of the organization, which laid down the rules, was elected by the Sea Gull members, each of whom had a number of votes depending on his personal point standing. The points were accumulated on the basis of his conquests. Dating a visiting student earned the least points. Married women counted more. Professional women and the like counted most.

How did it all end?

The membership simply broke up. Some of the Sea Gulls complained that a few of their number had made a deal with their Italian cousins — the so-called Beachfront Pappagalli, or Parrots—from across the border.

This deal was considered unfair to the trade. The Italians were supplying the favored few with fancy shirts and other equipment useful in tourist dating and taking a split on profits from gifts that escorted foreign tourist women bestowed upon the Sea Gulls.

Picton TV Expert Opens Store Here

Geoff Eaton, well known television, radio, hi-fi and electronic organ specialist, has announced the official opening of his latest store, the R.C.A. Victor Consumer Products Centre at 344 North Front Street, next to Amodeo's Super Save.

Mr. Eaton has operated a similar store in Picton for many years.

He is one of the few men who can boast that he was in on the ground floor of television when it was first made practical in England. He was in training in London, England, in 1934, and handled some of the first low definition television receivers and later the first of the high definition sets of the type known today.

During the war he was an instructor at an R.A.F. radar school and later a Senior Technician in charge of radar units in England and the Far East.

GEOFF EATON

29 YEARS EXPERIENCE

Since 1934, Mr. Eaton has worked continuously on T.V., radio, hi-fi and general electronics. His ambitions have always been to organize a complete service that would assure the public of good economical T.V. repairs.

He has the answer to his ambitions in his new store. He will sell R.C.A. products, Conn organs, Roberts tape recorders and Fisher equipment. His service department will back all of these well-known products. Only by so doing he will be able to give the warranty and after warranty service that he feels the public deserve.

Geoff Eaton invites the general public to drop into his new store and meet the staff. His staff consists of Victor Eaton, service technician and manager, Ronald Hovings, assistant service technician, Gerald McConnell, aerial erector and workshop assistant, Frank Carter, sales representative at the R.C.A. Victor Centre and Mrs. Maureen Eaton and Mrs. Gwen Eaton, administration.

May Revise Traffic Signs

SASKATOON (CP) — Revised traffic signs using symbols to replace words has been adopted by the Uniform Traffic Control Council of the Canadian Good Roads Association.

The revised signs were described by the council Sunday as a major breakthrough. The council said it hoped the signs will be adopted across Canada.

Gordon Campbell of Ottawa, director of technical services for the association, told the annual meeting a manual of the new signs will be published in January.

Among examples of the replacement of words with symbols, "Bump" would be designated by a black hump on a yellow diamond.

Mr. Campbell predicted the new signs will be in full use within three years.

The association said the symbols are more easily seen and identified than lettered ones. They also would reduce the "clutter" of signs that clog and confuse many city intersections.

The symbols also should solve the problems of French-speaking Canadians travelling outside French-speaking areas.

Editor Says Farmers Should Forget Wheat

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP) — A British bakers trade journal says farmers here should give up growing wheat and devote production capacity to something more useful.

"What always puzzles me is why so much acreage is wasted on growing wheat," writes editor Ronald Sheppard in the current Bakers' Review.

"Most years, unless there has been unusually dry and sunny weather, home wheat is of poor quality so far as breadmaking is concerned. It always has to be blended with hard wheats from overseas."

British farmers expect a record wheat crop this year, but the quality is expected to be low because of a wet summer. Imports of Canadian wheat and flour are expected to be slightly higher than the average 88,000,000 bushels purchased during the last few years.

Acreage devoted to wheat in Britain has risen to more than 2,200,000 from an average of about 2,100,000 during the last decade. Canada's wheat acreage is approaching 30,000,000.

British farms have produced an annual average of slightly more than 100,000,000 bushels of wheat during the last 15 years, compared with the yearly average of about 500,000,000 bushels produced in Canada in the same period. Britain thus gets one-fifth as much production on one-fifteenth of the land.

The average yield per acre in Britain is about three times that of Canada, but most production is devoted to high-yield soft varieties rather than the hard wheat essential for bread.

FEED FLOUR

British flour production takes the equivalent of 136,000,000 bushels of wheat a year—about twice as much as is milled in Canada. Much of this is imported, with a major portion of domestic production going into feed.

Editor Sheppard, understandably mindful of the needs of millers and bakers, suggests that since British wheat farmers contribute relatively little to bread-making their efforts should be diverted elsewhere.

"If the motive (of wheat farming) is to save expenditure on imports, surely valuable land could be used to produce something more suitable for the British climate—meat, for instance."

Civic Action Committee

Third of a series of articles on the 24 participating agencies of the United Appeal, explaining the function of the agencies and their reasons for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

A widowed mother of five children, whose only income was the mothers' allowance, found herself unable to meet the expenses of her trip to Toronto to continue treatment of a cancer condition.

The condition, of course, if not treated, would eventually be fatal, but treatments of this nature are very expensive.

The case was referred to the Civic Action Committee, a well organized group of volunteer members of the Catholic Women's League dedicated to giving assistance to those in need, regardless of race, color or religious faith.

SERVE ALL

"We are a group of volunteers from the Catholic Women's League," said Mrs. Herbert Brown, "but our service is not confined to Catholics. Our concern is not with a person's race or religion, but with a person's need.

"Last year alone we assisted 77 families who were facing problems that for one reason or another they just couldn't handle. We gave these people food, clothing and fuel.

"The Civic Action Committee also helped two cases requiring medical treatment and two cases of new Canadians with their final citizenship papers.

"The committee also fosters a character-building program through a student bursary. Each year a bursary is given to a deserving needy person so that he or she can continue on past Grade XIII.

BUILD CHARACTER

"We feel that character building is very important," Mrs. Brown said, "because after all, if you instill the right attitudes into people and help them with their education, they are not likely to end up as needy individuals and society will benefit from it."

A family of 12 were left homeless two years ago when fire destroyed their little shack. The Civic Action Committee raised $900 for the family, a donation that paid for the foundation of their new home. If it hadn't been for the work of the Committee, the family would still be living in a shack.

"We help anyone who comes and asks for help," Mrs. Brown said. "We get calls all the time for help. Sometimes cases are referred to us from some of the other welfare organizations in the city.

"Citizens who request help are visited by one or two Committee members and, if found deserving, some help is given, be it food vouchers, clothing or medical supplies. Most of the clothing we buy for needy persons is purchased from the Opportunity Shop on the market square."

PROVIDE CLASSES

A young student from a needy family was told by the health nurse at school that he badly needed eye glasses. However, the low income of his parents did not allow for the price of eye glasses, and it appeared the boy would go without, thus, not only damaging his eye sight, but also impeding his chances at school. The situation was revealed to the Civic Action Committee, and it, through the financial help of the United Appeal, bought the boy's glasses.

"Some recipients of city welfare often find themselves without food a day or two before their next welfare payment," said, Mrs. Brown. "In a large number of cases, the Committee has provided food for these people.

"At present, an effort is being made to help the needy families help themselves, through the volunteer workers' sympathetic and encouraging words of advice on budgeting and cooking and other household problems.

Successful Living

Teenagers Must Be Encouraged With Love

DEAR DORIS: I am nearly 14. Neither of my parents really like me and I feel so unwanted most of the time. Neither my brother nor my sister care for me either and it is awful. I have no one I can look to or talk to.

What can I do? It is terrible when you know that you are the only one of the family that has no attention paid to them. — TRULY UNWANTED.

DEAR TRULY: They care about you all right, but they forget to show it.

My message is really to all mothers and fathers of second- and third-borns who are 14:

DORIS CLARK

Waste not another day in going to your own Teen-in-Rebellion and giving him or her a great big hug. Follow up with a friendly conversation. For a few minutes put yourself in his place and give him credit for a brain.

A brain and a personality it is your rare privilege to mould. Until you give encouragement your efforts to correct him will fall on barren soil. Repeat above treatment regularly.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: My husband died after we were married two years. I have no children. Now I am being married again, at 29. This is my fiance's first marriage.

I know the rule is a small wedding, the second time. But the man I am marrying has a lot of relatives and he works in a large company where the other men have had big weddings and they expect to come to his. He is a bachelor.

If we invite friends as well as relative on both sides, it'll be hard to know where to stop. — SECOND TIME A BRIDE.

DEAR SECOND: Anything under 100 guests is a small wedding. Ask him for his list, making it half the total; and keep that total under 100. It's his business whether he asks friends as well as relatives.

You could welcome other friends to an At Home later, if you wish.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have a terrible fear that my father has cancer. His father died of it, and he now has some of the same symptoms. Without mentioning what I am thinking, I have tried to get him to the doctor for a general examination. He just won't go.

It may be that he is afraid of what he may hear. All he says is that he hasn't much faith in doctors and that he's not going to make a fuss over every little thing. — PANICKING.

DEAR PANICKING: Ignorance and fear of facts are the allies of disease. We can't just close our eyes and hope the boogieman will go away.

There are times to overrule a stubborn parent for his own good. This is one of them. Go to your family doctor yourself and describe the whole situation. Then have him notify your dad of a set appointment time — "for a general examination." (Everyone should have a regular check-up.)

Today's medical progress means that many kinds of cancerous growth may be cured or removed and complete health restored, if the trouble is caught early enough. The Canadian Cancer Society spends a great deal of time and money to reach the public with this welcome news.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am a widow in my early fifties. I dress well and look much younger. Financially I have been well taken care of. I met a man about four years ago who wants to marry me very badly.

I have gone out with him quite a bit, but find when we are in a public place he always looks around and finds some woman and looks at her all the time. They exchange glances and smiles and this goes on for the evening. When he notices me watching he quickly looks down.

This is very annoying to me. If the man loves me he wouldn't do this. What does he do when I'm not around?

Sometimes I think he only wants my property through marriage to me. Otherwise he is very nice to me. He is eight years younger than I, but looks much older. — WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: Ogling others is not usually interpreted as a sign of love. I'd say your friend is in love only with himself and your money. He has been a freeloading flirtatious bachelor for too long.

Perhaps he sees you as profitable but "a bit old?" But of course he is still young and desirable — in his own eyes. Keep this wolf from your door.

(When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

Women's Institutes

FOXBORO W.I.

FOXBORO — The September meeting of Foxboro W.I. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Grant, North Front Street, Belleville.

Mrs. Johnston opened the meeting and Mrs. Jamieson gave the treasurer's report.

A letter of thanks from Miss Linda Shinkaruck of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan was read.

A centennial project was discussed, with Mrs. L. Lewis suggesting house numbers for the houses in the village. Mrs. M. Jamieson suggested a sign at each end of the village, telling of the church services available in the village and the hour of each. She suggested including the day, date and hour of the Women's Institute meetings. These suggestions are to be discussed more fully at a future meeting.

This was a historical research meeting, conducted by Miss D. Cook, as convener, on the theme, "Old places have charm." Miss Cook cited the Grant house as an example and gave the history of the house. It was patterned after French chateaux when it was built. Most of the downstairs rooms have marble fireplaces, ornate plaster moldings on the walls and deep baseboards. Miss Cook took the members on a tour of the house and Mrs. Grant commented on the location of the rooms when they moved in 20 years ago. The present dining room is the former butler's pantry and the present kitchen, now modernized, contained a big stove when the Grant's first took possession.

Mrs. Grant served refreshments to the 12 members and one visitor in attendance. She was thanked for her hospitality by Mrs. Johnston.

Wigmaking In Canada New Skill

EDMONTON (CP)—The success of a wig depends more upon the wigmaker's skill than on the quality of hair, says Mrs. E. C. Lawson, chief consultant for Fashion Wigs Ltd. of Edmonton and Calgary.

"You can have the best hair in the world, but if it isn't blended and properly knotted the wig won't be any good."

Different textures must be blended in wigs since hair comes in a variety of thicknesses, she adds. If hair is not knotted properly it will mat and the wig will fail to hold its shape.

Wigmaking in Canada is a relatively new skill and most wigs sold are imported from Europe. Many wigmakers and most of the hair used in Canada also come from Europe.

"North American women just don't take good enough care of their hair. Cocktails, late hours, going bareheaded in the sun, putting it up in rollers — this spoils the hair for wigs."

Wigmakers employed by Fashion Wigs come from England.

LEARN FOR YEARS

"They apprentice for years and learn the trade from the ground up. It's not just a matter of learning to knot hair, they must learn to blend, to select and how to shape and set it."

Some European women are under contract to supply hair to wigmakers. They are required to keep their hair covered in the sun, to maintain a good diet and get sufficient rest.

Despite difficulties finding sufficient supplies of quality hair for wigs, Mrs. Lawson says synthetics cannot replace the real thing.

"Synthetics are hot and heavy and not properly ventilated."

Mrs. Lawson, who wears a wig at all times, also dislikes cheap products made of coarse hair.

"If you pay less than $100 for a wig you probably won't be satisfied with it."

B. and P. Women's Club Holds Regional Meeting

DESERONTO — Napanee Business and Professional Women's Club entertained the clubs of Region 11 on Saturday in the Trinity Church, Napanee, when they gathered for the annual fall regional meeting. Representatives from Belleville, Bancroft, Picton, Trenton and Kingston were present for the all day session.

The theme for the day's activities was "Planning for Progress", beginning in the morning with discussions on leaderships.

After enjoying a buffet luncheon the members re-convened. Honored guests were Mrs. Margaret Ashdown, past provincial president, now National vice-president; Mrs. Dorothy Brown, Belleville, district vice-president, Mrs. Bea Lasher, Kingston, regional advisor, Region 11, and Mrs. Margaret Jones, regional advisor, Region 5.

Mrs. Betty Stimpson, Napanee president welcomed the guests, and Mr. Lorne Smart, mayor, extended a welcome and best wishes to the meeting.

The afternoon session with roughly 60 members present began with president's reports of activities of the previous year. Workshops on leadership training, programming, membership and education were set up, and summaries of findings reported.

The members were reminded of the National Conference in Victoria, B.C., in July, 1966, and the Trenton Club extended an invitation for the 1966 fall regional.

Displays of United Nations material, handicrafts, art, and scrapbooks of the various clubs proved most interesting.

At the evening banquet Mrs. Margaret Ashdown was the guest speaker, introduced by Miss Kaye McFarland. She chose as her topic "The Challenge of Change." She mentioned that the 20th century had ushered in a brand new world, and the knowledge volume had doubled in the last 20 years. The role of women is changing and they must provide the impetus to meet the challenge of today. A good leader knows the way, shows the way, goes the way.

Mrs. Ashdown was thanked by Mrs. Mae Hyland.

Gifts of Gibbard trays were presented to Mrs. Ashdown, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Lasher, and many prizes were given to lucky members during the day.

The banquet hour was further highlighted by singsongs and Mrs. Jean Pratt delighted with a humorous monologue.

The luncheon and banquet were catered to by ladies of Trinity church groups and enjoyed by everyone. Much credit is due Mrs. Mary Hinch capably convened this successful and her regional advisor who ful evenl.

Use of Marks in School Called Unfair to Child

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—The use of marks in school grading system is unfair to the child and can be harmful to his mental health, says a former director of the federal health department's mental health division.

Dr. Charles G. Stogdill, chief of child adjustment services for the Toronto Board of Education, says that in time more and more members of the public will come to appreciate the destructive effects competition in school achievement can have on pupils.

In an outspoken article in the department's publication, Canada's Mental Health, Dr. Stogdill writes:

"The use of marks as a measure of comparison between pupils in a class is of little value—yet is of enormous destructive importance, a point widely recognized by educators.

"Why then do they continue to use them and force competition? The teachers themselves are compelling. Parents expect marks and class standings and passing from grade to grade."

So long as the public demanded this system, the schools were bound to accommodate. But already there is a good deal of support for the use of psychologists, social workers and psychiatrists in school systems.

"Damaging practices . . . will soon no longer be tolerated."

Dr. Stogdill, who was the first chief of the mental health division when it was established in 1945, writes that competition for marks is faulty because the children seldom have an even start.

SOME GIVE UP

"The innate, developmental and experiential differences between children make it unfair to compete. Through failure, or fear of failure in this unfair competition, children become so frustrated and tend to give up, and so never reach anywhere near their potential."

He says even the children who win out often fail in the long run by their emphasis on excelling over others rather than experiencing the inner satisfactions of acquiring knowledge, developing skills and feeling a sense of personal growth and progress.

He says there is grave danger the child will begin to do only as much as is required to pass his subjects or to win his teacher's or parents' approval.

"But when he leaves school and these standards become irrelevant, he is not likely to feel the need for further education or training. However, with this rapidly changing society it is essential that learning continue throughout life."

Dr. Stogdill says parent-teacher communication will do more than anything else to reduce learning difficulties for the school child.

"Neither (parent nor teacher) should feel that he alone has all the answers. More teachers need to recognize that a family's expectations inevitably play an important part in the child's work and behavior at school.

"More parents need to realize how different the school's expectations and program are from what they were when they were young."

Pope Wishes To Visit Poland

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul has told Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski of Warsaw that he would like to visit Poland, Vatican sources said Monday night, "when the opportunity best presents itself."

There has been speculation here the last six months on whether the Roman Catholic pontiff might travel to the Communist-ruled country in 1966 for celebrations marking the 1,000th anniversary of Polish Christianity.

The sources here said the question of opportuneness would hinge on a formal invitation to the pontiff from the Polish government, and on improvement of religious conditions in Poland.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — The Local Union 219 held its annual 15 year banquet at Club Canara. Eligible members were given their pins and dancing was enjoyed for the remainder of the evening.

Master Hugh Sedore had a birthday last week and on Saturday he had a party with his friends helping him to celebrate the event.

Mr. Arthur Colden is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Darren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Yeoss of Roseneath, is staying with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stewart, while his mother is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Little Jamie Sedore has returned home from the hospital, where he underwent surgery recently.

BRIDAL SHOWER

On Monday evening, friends held a shower in the Club House in honor of Miss Patricia Whalen, who is being married early in October. The evening was spent in playing games. Pat was given the seat of honor and presented with many gifts. She thanked everyone for her thoughtfulness and lunch was served.

FRIENDSHIP GROUP MEET

Members of St. John's Friendship Group held their first regular meeting of the fall term on Tuesday afternoon in the Parish Hall. The president, Mrs. Nina Fournier led the opening prayers. Two minutes silence was observed in memory of the late Rev. Everett Smith.

Mrs. Clara Green gave the treasurer's report. A donation to the Hall renovation fund will be made soon.

Plans were made to cater to an early autumn wedding.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Paula Horwood.

VIEWS ARE OWN

WASHINGTON (AP)—A statement by a spokesman said Monday the views by 11 Republican members of the House of Representatives that U.S.-Can. ada policy needed revision are their own, not that of the U.S. Congress generally. The report by 14 House Republicans complained about "appalling ignorance" in the United States concerning relations with Canada.

Latta

LATTA — Several friends, neighbors and relatives met recently at the Plainfield Orange hall where a community shower was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Gibson of Melville. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were presented with a purse of money following the reading of an address by Mr. Bob McKenzie. Bill and Lois expressed their thanks and lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Treverton attended Sunday service at the Mount Hamilton United Church where Rev. E. J. Kersey officiated. Following the service Mr. and Mrs. Treverton were dinner guests at the home of Rev. E. J. Kersey and family.

Miss Ilene Gow is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. Bert Lawrenson and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lawrenson of Rochester, New York, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hall.

Mrs. J. Emerson of Centenary spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Treverton and family.

A shower was held Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Bowers in honor of the newly married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Don Bowers Jr., of Belleville. An address was read on behalf of the community and a presentation was made to Mr. and Mrs. Bowers.

NOTHING BUT EXERCISE FOR MOSCOW WALKERS — Good weather brings Muscovites swarming into the streets of the city. The walkers have plenty of room but nowhere to go. The city is almost bare of modestly-priced and comfortable refreshment facilities. Residents complain that the few good restaurants are too expensive and the rest overcrowded and uncomfortable. The city has only one beer parlor. ? (CP Photo)

Crowds of Muscovites Stroll Along Gorky

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—Every night and every weekend, whenever the weather is the least bit favorable, swarms of Moscow residents pour from their apartments into the streets — and walk.

Visitors to the city are often fascinated and vaguely perplexed by the sight of so many thousands of people apparently going nowhere, yet never stopping.

There's hardly any place to stop. The city is acutely lacking in establishments where a person can sit down in pleasant surroundings and enjoy some refreshment.

The Muscovite who quits his crowded apartment for a reviving stroll in the fresh air just has to keep strolling.

You can walk the entire length of Gorky Street, a long, wide thoroughfare that runs into the Kremlin plaza, without finding more than one or two reasonably attractive cafes.

Most of those available are cheerless short - order places called "stalovaya" — literally, dining rooms—or standup sandwich bars or coffee bars.

SOME OFFER LUXURY

A few restaurants and hotel dining rooms go to the other extreme, offering good food in a leisurely atmosphere but at prices the average person cannot afford to pay.

There's scarcely a place where the Muscovite can go for a cup of coffee and a snack in cosy surroundings — a place where he might take his girl friend.

All facilities are hopelessly overcrowded.

The situation has been criticized in a number of newspaper articles.

"Gorky Street is so dark at night," complained a correspondent in the Communist party newspaper Pravda. He compared it unfavorably with New Sky Prospect in Leningrad which had "many lights and many cafes."

"We have few cafes on Gorky Street. One wants a place to eat and, mainly, to have a rest . . . but they should be built not only on the main streets."

Young people, especially needed more modern, cheap cafes. "We should protect them from the night discomfort of the street."

TAVERNS CLOSED

The situation regarding beer parlors is even sadder than that respecting cafes. As of the beginning of this year, there was only one place in all Moscow where a person could go and quaff a cool one.

Beer bars, as they are called here, ran afoul of Nikita Khrushchev's campaign several years ago to cut down on drunkenness in the Soviet Union.

The problem of drunkenness is still acute, as anyone can see simply by taking a walk at night. But the beer halls remain closed.

A plank in the Communist party program calls for greater investment in public catering establishments. In line with this, new cafeteria-style eating places can be seen in different parts of the city.

There have even been reports that more beer parlors are to be opened.

But at the present rate of visible progress, it will be along time before those crowds on Gorky Street stop walking.

Three Convicted Murderers Will Enter Appeals

OTTAWA (CP)—Appeals by three convicted murderers will be heard by the Supreme Court of Canada during its fall session opening here next Tuesday.

These include Joseph Letourneau, convicted of the 1961 slaying of Charles-Eugene Saillargeon at St. Pierre de Montmagny, Que., and Joseph Dion, found guilty of the death by strangling of 13-year-old Pierre Marquis, also in Quebec province.

Matthew Kerry Smith, 25, of Toronto, is appealing his conviction of capital murder in connection with a bank robbery.

Another criminal case questions the validity of the Ontario Highways Traffic Act dealing with careless driving. The court decided to hear the appeal because its findings would be of value to all provinces having careless - driving sections in their traffic laws.

Allan Mann of Toronto is contesting an Ontario Court of Appeal decision that found him guilty of careless driving under section 60 of the provincial act.

Another appeal deals with the hunting rights of Canada's native peoples.

The hunting case concerns Calvin George of the Kettle Point Indian reserve in Ontario. A member of the Chippewa band, he was charged in September, 1962, with shooting two ducks contrary to the Migratory Birds Convention Act.

Magistrate J. C. Dunlop of Sarnia ruled that the act did not apply to George while he was hunting on the Indian reserve.

Hope Signs Will Deter Toronto Hunters

PICTON (Staff) — At least one Prince Edward Township is taking steps to combat the threat of indiscriminate hunters, usually from outside the county. At a meeting of farmers in Hillier Township Hall Tuesday it was decided to purchase 500 No Trespassing signs and post them up all around the township. About 20 persons attended the meeting a good turnout considering most of them are in the middle of harvesting. The rabbit season about to start, the farmers hope the signs will help deter the hunters from trespassing on their property. Unlawful hunters have become an annual menace in the township, with farmers complaining that they break fences and gates and fire at anything that moves including livestock. Last February a total of some 22 hunters were charged in Magistrate's Court in Picton with petty trespassing, most of these hunters were from the Toronto area.

Work of Guards Outlined to Kiwanis Club

PICTON (Staff) — At the weekly meeting of Picton Kiwanis Club Monday night Lt. Col. G. W. Haynes, Commanding Officer the First Canadian Guards spoke on the role played by the Battalion in the armed forces.

"Emphasis", he said, "is being placed on the new Canadian peace-keeping role. The 1st Battalion Canadian Guards are part of a unit there with in the Canadian Army framework. Basically the Guards units are in support of peacekeeping and needed to carry out commitments with NATO."

They are also in support of the defence of Northern Canada and in fact along with our neighbors to the South also to defend North America. There was a need, stated Lt. Col. Haynes, for infantry battalions on a smaller scale that were well trained for quick movements by air and by sea.

The battalion is also standby unit, on call for U.N. service (providing the Government of Canada agrees). There is still the emergency force in the Gaza strip also—on Cyprus and the 2nd Battalion Canadian Guards are preparing now to replace the present unit there. The first Canadian Guards Battalion is on standby duty as of July this year. This battalion is ready to move out completely in seven days to any world trouble spot. Canadian forces, continued Col. Haynes are now considered experienced in peace keeping duties.

HAVE PUBLIC DUTIES

The Guard's Battalions also have tasks of public duties such as mounting the Guard on Ottawa's Parliament Hill and supplying a guard of honor for visiting foreign dignitaries. They also play a role in aiding civil powers in emergencies, are trained in crowd control, riot control, searches, road blocks etc, all a part of peace keeping operations.

Next spring it is expected the Guards, at least some of them will receive training in specialized categories such as basic survival, training in heavy woods and also mountain training. Some specialized units are now already trained in cold weather fighting, and rescue operations from smashed buildings as well as operation in tropical climates.

Lt. Col. Haynes was introduced to Kiwanian by Past President of Kiwanis Nell Love, and thanked for his interesting and timely address by Kiwanian Donald King. During the course of the meeting Past President Jack Ward presented Lt. Col. Haynes with an honorary membership in the Kiwanis Club of Picton.

No Blame Attached to Crew In Woman's Death Verdict

PICTON (Staff) — An inquest was held recently in Picton to enquire into the death of Mrs. Beatrice Lori Beal, 38, of Trenton, who was killed when her car was struck by a freight train, August 31, on the Mallory cross-road crossing.

The jury report read: "We feel that the engineer took all possible precautions and that no blame or negligence by the train crew is evident. We the jury feel that in view of evidence presented at this inquest that the brush be cut at the southeast and northwest angles of the crossing."

Investigating officer Constable Douglas Goodkey of the Picton provincial police detachment said brush obscured the train approaching from the east at about 110 feet south of the crossing. The car was proceeding north. He also said, when questioned by the coroner, Dr. R. A. Thompson of Wellington, that a small woods also obscures vision when approaching the crossing.

There were some skidmarks for a distance of about 75 feet south of the crossing. There were heavy for the first 33 feet then became lighter. The train caught the car in the centre of the right front door. The convertible top was up.

Asked by Dr. Thompson if he considered it a potentially dangerous crossing, Constable Goodkey said, "yes".

Train engineer Sidney Robinson of Belleville, said he first saw the car south of the crossing 100 feet south of the crossing. Visibility before that, he said, was obscured by a small and some brush. He said he could see there was danger of a crossing accident and applied the brakes. He said the whistle had been sounding from the whistle post, one-quarter of a mile back from the crossing, according to regulations.

Speed of the train was 20 to 25 miles an hour at impact.

What Dr. Thompson describe as an abnormally large quantity of pills was found in the wreckage. A post mortem showed no traces of barbituates in the stomach and only a very minimal quantity of alcohol in the blood—not enough to affect the driver in any way, he said.

Others were Douglas McFaul, Frank Brimley and William Wannamaker, all of Wellington; Ivan Haight, R.R. 2 Bloomfield and Larry Harrington, Bloomfield.

25,000 Attend County Fair In Two Days

PICTON (Staff) — Once again the county fair at Picton is a thing of the past. According to fair officials it was a great success with over 25,000 attending. A record breaking crowd attended the opening evening. Thursday afternoon saw over 3,000 school children representing all of the townships except Ameliasburg, take part in a gigantic parade to the paisade grounds. They heard Warden of Prince Edward County Bernard Hepburn, officially open the fair and also had a few words of welcome from Picton's mayor H. J. McFarland.

Despite the chilly rain which fell at the time the children were most enthusiastic and had a good time participating in the many midway attractions. Cut down from three days to two this year the fair events somewhat swiftly and the two days were jam-packed with entertainment and events. Thursday night saw the Ontario Provincial Police put on a motorcycle precision ride for a crowd of over two thousand in front pf the grandstand. This is the first time this group of 17 rides, the "Golden Helmets" have been performing east of the Toronto area.

Friday evening entertainment by guest artists from Toronto amused a large crowd and Saturday a colorful horse show continued all day. As usual the jumpers and racing horses proved to be very popular. In spite of the chilly weather the fair was generally well attended.

Many fine examples of agricultural produce were on exhibit in the community centre and the curling rink building held a splendid examples of school work from the county schools. Local merchants, as in the past, displayed many fine commercial exhibits in the Crystal Palace. The midway attractions this year offered a greater variety of rides. Members of Picton's Kiwanis Club escorted over 30 underprivileged children through many of the shows and rides.

The fair wrapped up on Saturday night with a show and dance by the Doc Williams group of entertainers.

British Teachers to Ban Homework--Just for Selves

By EDDIE GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — More than 40,000 British school teachers have decided to ban homework—homework for themselves, not their pupils.

Beginning Oct. 4, members of the National Association of Schoolmasters will confine their work to classroom hours, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will correct no math papers in evening hours.

They will take no compositions home with them at night.

They will coach no athletic teams at 4 p.m.

The strike against teachers' homework will last two weeks.

Said Terence Casey, 45, secretary of the association:

"This is a protest against a suggestion by our employers that teaching is practically a part-time occupation.

"All our outside activities will cease at 4 o'clock, and work not completed during the day will be left undone."

The association represents about one in every seven of the country's total number of school teachers. The members are angry over a recent award which increased their pay by an average of $6 to $9 a week.

SUPPLEMENT INCOME

In making the award, there was a suggestion that the teaching profession allows a teacher to earn money in his or her spare time.

The association wants the government to set up a royal commission to examine what the teachers claim are many deficiencies in the country's educational structure.

The National Union of Teachers—the biggest teachers' union—said a royal commission had already examined the education structure. It intimated it would not go along with the no-home-work ban.

The spokesman for the Association of Schoolmasters said:

"We want all the existing educational deficiencies, which have been concealed for too long, properly looked into even if it takes 10 years."

The association is made up solely of men teachers. More than half the members of the rival Union of Teachers are women.

The ministry of education said it was difficult to state an average teacher's pay because of numerous classifications.

A spokesman said it might be about $2,700 a year.

It was the first time since last October that the index had not risen. The index declined from 139.5 in July to 139.4 in August. The bureau attributed the decline to lower food prices and the effect of August clothing sales. The index is based on 1949 prices equalling 100. (CP Newsmap)

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

The Old Lady of the Molra has hit the world headlines again, sportswise.

Ken Carr-Braint owner and coach of the city's Apollo Barbell Club has been appointed coach of Canada's team which will compete in the world weightlifting championships at Teheran, Iran, next month.

KEN CARR-BRAINT
confidence in its coach."

It is a signal honor for the Belleville sportsman. He won the unanimous choice of all the provinces of Canada over Lionel St. Jean of Montreal and Phillipe Dion of Quebec City.

After his appointment the selected five-man team crowded around him voicing their personal satisfaction at the choice.

"This," said Ken, "gave me as much if not more pleasure than the appointment itself. It is nice to know a team has

The coach and team were selected after the completion of the North American weightlifting championships held in Montreal the other day.

The team is headed by the Canadian and British Empire champion, Pierre St. Jean, who won the middleweight title at the Montreal championships. Other members are: Allan Salter, Ottawa, featherweight; Cosford White, heavyweight, of Montreal; Aldo Roy, Oshawa, and lightweight Marcel Bedard of Quebec City.

Carr-Braint and the team fly from Montreal on October 21st for Teheran with a stopover at Paris.

"There is only one fly in the ointment," mused Ken. "I didn't know the country was so broke. We have to wear our own clothes, buy blazers and crests, pay one-third of our passage to and from, and other necessary expenses."

The 18th world and third Asian weightlifting championships start October 25, through November 3rd, and will be held in the Mohammed Reza Shah Hall which has a capacity of 3,500 seats.

The social highlight for the boys will be a dinner given by the mayor of Teheran with His Imperial Highness Prince Gholem Reza Pahlavi in attendance.

The Iranian Weightlifting Federation will defray at its expense the board and lodging (room, breakfast, lunch and dinner) of seven competitors and two officials for ten days.

"At least that's something," said Ken.

Carr-Braint is thoroughly deserving of the honor bestowed upon him. He has come a long way since he originated the Apollo Club and over the years has produced national and British Empire champions. John Lewis and Price Morris went to the top in their respective divisions and the coach has a lot of promising juniors under his wing.

He brought Lewis to the point where he qualified for the Canadian team and the Pan American Games in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and more recently to the Olympics at Tokyo. He has spared neither time and effort to bring his charges to their divisional perfection.

He won the appointment the hard way. For many years he has attended Canadian and North American championships, slowly but surely working his way to the top. Not a few times he missed a national coaching appointment by a vote or two.

"I guess they perhaps felt sorry for me," he said modestly. "In any event representatives of all the provinces gave me their vote. It was the first time such an appointment was unanimous."

In any event it is a great honor for Ken—and his native city. The nation's weightlifting fraternity can rest assured its team is in excellent hands.

Galloping Dodgers Grab Game Lead

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lou Johnson has been battered with baseballs from front and behind. Once in a while though he does some battering of his own.

One of these times of retaliation was Tuesday night when Johnson lined a 12th inning home run that gave Los Angeles Dodgers their 11th straight victory, a 2-1 decision over Cincinnati Reds, and a one-game lead in the furious National League pennant race.

The Dodgers had been tied with San Francisco, but St. Louis Cardinals trounced the Giants 9-1, sending them one game back with their fifth loss in seven games. Third - place Cincinnati fell five back and virtually out of the race. The three teams each have five games remaining.

The Dodgers grabbed the top spot all by themselves for the first time in three weeks when Johnson connected off Joey Jay with one out in the 12th. The homer was his 12th of the season but still left that total three behind his record for being hit by pitches.

That's happened a league-leading 15 times this year, which is just about normal for the 32-year-old outfielder who spent 12 years with 15 minor league teams and three major league teams before he got a break with the Dodgers this season.

He got the break because of a break in Tommy Davis' ankle early in May. But no sooner had he been called up from Spokane Indians of the Pacific Coast League than Johnson was hit in the head by a pitch from Houston's Bob Bruce. That pitch punctured Johnson's batting helmet and put him in the hospital for three days.

Then, in June, New York's Al Jackson put him out of action for 13 days by hitting him on the thumb.

SAW THEM COMING

But Johnson at least had the advantage of seeing those balls before they did the damage. There was the time a few years ago when, as a rookie, he was given the last day of spring training off after hitting .500 for Chicago.

He was sitting with 30 other players watching the Cubs play the Dodgers when Del Rice hit a grounder into the dugout. The ball bounced off the wall and hit Johnson on the back of the head. That one earned him a week's stay in the hospital.

In other National League games, New York Mets edged Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 in 12 innings, Milwaukee Braves whipped Houston Astros 7-1 and Chicago Cubs nipped Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

Los Angeles broke a scoreless deadlock in the seventh when Jeff Torborg singled, and pinch runner Nate Oliver stole second and came home as Maury Wills singled. But the Reds tied it in the eighth on a walk to Tommy Harper, a sacrifice and Vada Pinson's double.

St. Louis' Larry Jaster scattered 10 hits in only his second major league start, shutting out the Giants until Willie Mays hit his 51st homer in the eighth. Jaster also singled across two runs while Bill White lashed four hits, driving in three runs.

Pittsburgh's Tommy Sisk and Roy Face battled New York's Dennis Ribant and Darrell Sutherland through 11½ scoreless innings, but the Mets finally broke through for a run in the last of the 12th on Ron Hunt's two - out, bases - loaded single.

Tony Cloninger stopped Houston on six hits as he won his 26th game against 10 defeats. He also triggered a three-run Milwaukee third inning with a single and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in a four-run sixth inning.

Chicago's Bill Faul pitched a two-hitter and scored the winning run on Glenn Beckert's sacrifice fly after leading off the eighth inning with a double.

Ukraina Clinches Top Spot

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Ukraina clinched first place in the National Soccer League Tuesday night with a 3-0 victory over Toronto Portuguese United.

Ukraina will open the playoffs here Saturday against Windsor Teutonia. Windsor finished fifth in the 12 - team league this season.

Either Toronto Hakoah or Sudbury United will join Windsor and Ukraina in the group. A round-robin semi-final. Hakoah and Sudbury are battling for second place and the club that winds up third will join group A.

The second-place finisher will join Toronto Hungaria, which finished fourth, and either Kitchener - Waterloo Kickers or Toronto Croatia, battling for sixth place, in the B division of four Wednesday night, getting

Streaking Birds Eye Place Spot

By JIM BACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Three things are sure in the American League — Minnesota Twins will finish first, Washington Senators will finish eighth and there is no stumble for the eight other places.

After Wednesday's action, and with five days left in the season, the pennant winning Twins and also-ran Senators have their spots clinched.

Other than Baltimore's streaking Orioles are in second, just 1½ games ahead of Chicago White Sox; two games separate Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians in the fight for fourth; New York's statuesque Yankees have only a one-game edge on California Angels; and Boston Red Sox are just 1½ games ahead of Kansas City's last-place Athletics.

The Orioles made it nine in a row Wednesday night, getting two runs in the fifth inning with a solo hit and trimming Minnesota 4-2.

Danny Cater's 11th-inning homer gave the White Sox a first-game victory over Detroit, 4-3, but the Tigers won the second by the same score with a four-run rally in the eighth capped by Jim Northrop's two-run triple.

Rocky Colavito's three - run homer helped the Indians deal the Yankees their sixth straight loss, 6-3.

SON LIKE FATHER

Joe Coleman Jr., 18, son of a former big league pitcher, made his debut in the majors and pitched Washington to a 6-1 win over Kansas City. The Athletics won the second game of the doubleheader, 8-6.

And the Angels pushed across two runs in the eighth inning on an error and a bases-filled walk, edging the Red Sox 4-3. Baltimore netted the two runs in the fifth that proved decisive against Al Worthington, Minnesota relief ace who had been sidelined for three weeks with a sore right arm. He loaded the bases on two walks and a hit batter, then walked Brooks Robinson and Curt Blefary on eight straight pitches.

Harmon Killebrew, recently returned to the Twins line-up after seven weeks absence due to a dislocated elbow, homered with a man on for Minnesota's two runs—his first homer since July 28.

The White Sox scored three times in the first inning of the opener against Detroit, then were shut out until Cater led off the last of the 11th with his homer. The Tigers won the second with the four-run cluster in the eighth—with Jerry Lumpe's single, Gates Brown's sacrifice fly and Northrup's triple knocking in the runs.

In addition to Colavito's three-run homer, the Indians had timely singles by Leon Wagner and Fred Whitfield in their victory over the Yanks, who are headed for their worst finish in 40 years.

Esks Give Ti-Cats' Tail 9-3 Twist

New Formation

HAMILTON (CP)—Don Getty couldn't start at quarterback for Edmonton Eskimos Tuesday night, so rookie Randy Kerbow engineered them to a 9-3 upset over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League game.

Kerbow was destined for the bench after dispersing himself in Edmonton's 40-1 drubbing by Ottawa Rough Riders Saturday. Getty, lured out of two years' retirement by the Esks last week, was to handle the signal-calling.

But Getty showed up with a sore arm he got by throwing nine passes in the last five minutes of Saturday's setback and Kerbow got a reprieve.

He made the most of it, selling up Edmonton's first point with a long pass and plunging two yards for the game's only touchdown.

Tommy Joe Coffey kicked the single and Kerbow added the touchdown, which Coffey converted, all in the first quarter.

The points came off Edmonton's new 14-formation, which two backs line up directly behind the quarter-back. Two other Western Conference teams, British Columbia Lions and Winnipeg Blue Bombers, use the formation but the Eskimos tried it out for the first time Tuesday night after working on it in two practices.

CANCELS SIDE TRIP

Edmonton coach Neill Armstrong, disgusted with his club after Saturday's sorry effort, cancelled a scheduled sightseeing trip to Niagara Falls Sunday and called a workout. That's when the team first attempted the new formation.

The Eskimos, who trail in the five - team WFC, perfected it enough to baffle Hamilton's vaunted defence through the first quarter. By the time the Ticats adjusted to the unorthodox formation, the damage was done.

Edmonton centre Bill Mitchell added another single on a field goal attempt in the third quarter after Don Sutherin got Hamilton's three points on a field goal in the second quarter.

The loss left the Ticats with 12 points in the Eastern Conference standings, the same as Ottawa, but Hamilton has lost three games to Ottawa's two.

The victory was Edmonton's fourth in 11 games and broke a two-game losing streak.

The key to Edmonton's victory was a stout defence led by linemen Jim Battle and Al Ecuyer and halfback John Abenathy, a recent recruit from New York Jets of th American Football League.

Abenathy was a workhorse all night and knocked down several passes despite playing with a cast on his right hand which protected a broken bone.

TURNED ON SPEED

Kerbow, a substitute for injured quarterback Jim Thomson in Saturday's gam, went all the way against Hamilton. The Edmonton sailed into work will be to utilized the additional room to roll out with him on his speed. He also made excellent use of his backs for running plays.

Hamilton's offence, sporadic at best this season, fared poorly under the direction of quarterback Joe Zuger. Zuger repeatedly threw passes astray when he had the team in scoring position and when he wasn't, errant with his tosses, his receivers missed.

Kerbow connected on six of 13 passes for 98 yards and guided the Esks to 304 total yards on the ground for a total of 17 first downs. Hamilton got 15 first downs on 146 yards rushing and 79 passing as Zuger clicked on six of 16 tosses.

Kerbow also handled Edmonton's punting and outkicked Zuger, averaging 40 yards to 41. Coffey and halfback Butch Pressley led the winners, Pressley gaining 72 yards in 13 carries and Coffey catching four passes for 90 yards.

Dave Fleming, a recruit from Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League, and Stan Grisson were the pick of the Tiger-Cats. Fleming rushed 11 times for 59 yards and Grisson stacked three passes for 43 yards.

Neither offence was able to mount a consistent drive, but Edmonton moved the ball when it had to. Hamilton, on the other hand, bogged down five times in scoring position, the Eskimos stopping the Ticats on third down situations.

Bobby Hull Still Missing

Norris Threatens $1,000 A Day Fine

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reports from the National Hockey League training camps today sound like the agenda for a Canadian Medical Association convention.

Items:

—GoalKeeper Roger Crozier of Detroit Red Wings is on a special diet that outs out ice cream and fatty foods.

—Ron Ellis of Toronto Maple Leafs, who had cartilage fragments removed from a knee in July, reported the joint felt fine after his first scrimmage.

—Goalie Terry Sawchuk of Leafs was sent home to recover from two cracked ribs.

—Ed Lanyon, 26-year-old defenceman with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League last season, became the first serious casualty of Montreal Canadiens' camp with a cracked bone in his right forearm.s

Amazingly enough, Boston Bruin—last-place finishers in the NHL for six seasons—seemed the healthiest of the lot.

After the Bruins went through their workout Tuesday without injury, coach Milt Schmidt credited their good health to isometric exercises. He's convinced that the muscle strengthening exercises are responsible for the lack of groin injuries, of which the Bruins had seven at this stage a year ago.

Only centre Bobby Leiter was missing in body contact drills. He's recovering from an operation on an arm fractured last season.

In Chicago Black Hawks' camp, Golden Boy Bobby Hull became a spoiled boy to owner Jim Norris. Norris indicated that Hull may have financial rather than physical problems, if he doesn't return to camp within a couple of days.

Norris said in Miami that Hull was "taking a spoiled boy's attitude toward training rules." He threatened to fine his star $1,000 a day if he doesn't show up at camp soon, according to a report in the Miami News.

Hull left camp when his two year, three and five year old, were barred from team practices.

CAN'T AFFORD IT

Amid reports that Hull is demanding a $100,000 salary, Norris was quoted as saying: "The economy of the league can't afford that kind of salary. We don't intend to pay him any $100,000."

Hull was reported on a family outing on a friend's boat in Illinois. Neither side in the dispute appeared to be budging.

"There's nothing I can do," said general manager Tommy Ivan. "I've got to back my coach. It's a matter of dressing room procedure and that's all."

The Leafs' Ellis reported on his doubtful knee after his first scrimmage at Peterborough:

"I was ready happy with it. The stops and starts didn't bother me at all."

He scored a goal as his team, the Blues, lost 4-3 to the Whites.

Centre Larry Keenan, a 28-goal scorer for Leafs' Victoria farm club in the Western League last season, was reported out for about two months after having torn cartilage removed from his knee.

The Canadiens had 86 players divided into six teams as their Montreal workouts and coach Toe Blake seemed satisfied with their conditioning and hustle.

Defeat Point Anne 8-4

Hotelmen Square Series

Gerry Genereaux tossed a neat four - hitter at Point Anne last night to give City Hotel a 8-4 victory and square the Commercial Softball League finals at two games each.

The fifth game is slated for Prince Charles School tomorrow night starting at 6 p.m. with the sixth scheduled for Point Anne Sunday starting at 5 p.m.

Last night's tilt was called at the end of the sixth inning on account of darkness.

Ron Maracle was touched for nine clouts but five errors most of them costly didn't help him any. He drove in two Point Anne runs in the third with the only homer of the game.

The ball game was all over at the end of the third as far as Point Anne was concerned. The Hotelmen erupted with a seven - run explosion that sallied the win away. They added another in the sixth.

The Hotelmen kicked the ball around three times but came through in the clutches with some fine fielding efforts.

Bucky Ebbier had two hits in the explosive third for the winners. His opening single, followed by back-to-back Point errors scored one. Hull's hit scored another Then an error, a walk and fielders choice loaded the sacks which Ebbier promptly cleaned with a towering triple Point Anne tied it up going into the disasterous third, added two in that innings and scored their fourth run in the sixth.

Ebbier's twin clouts paced the Hotel attack with Genereaux and Murray connecting for doubles Martin had two singles with Hawkins and Hull coming through with singles

Maracle's hard - hit homer, G. Maher's two singles and Cook's double accounted for the Point Anne hits.

The Teams .

City Hotel - Hawkins, Martin, Hull, Brooks, Moreau, Coolen, Murray, Ebbier, Genereaux.

Point Anne - Whalen, Horwood, G. Maher, Maracle, Ellis, Cook, E. Maher, Rosebush, D. Maher.

Trenton Jrs. Seek Manager

TRENTON — Gordon Webb, the treasurer of the recently formed Junior B Hockey team at Trenton today confirmed that the team's executive had accepted the resignation of Jack Bonn, manager of the team.

Mr. Bonn resigned last week over a dispute regarding his authority as team manager. Mr. Webb said that a new man has not yet been appointed, but Fire Chief Cecil Ellis who had been asked to take over as manager had declined this position but had agreed to sit on the executive.

The Trenton Junior B team will play an exhibition hockey game with the Weese Motors team this Friday night in the Community Gardens.

Sixth Hole Tough One Says Lema

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Tony Lema, winner of the recent World Series of Golf, took a good look at the Canada Cup course Tuesday and warned players from all over the world that the hole is a starter was the long sixth.

The sixth is a 445-yard par 4 with a sharp dogleg to the right. both the green and a brook that bisects the fairway.

Lema was among players from 25 countries who marched over the 7,000 - yard Madrid layout in readiness for the start of the Canada Cup Thursday.

Lema's partner in the United States team is Jack Nicklaus, world's top money winner in any one year.

Aggressiveness Did It
Year Brilliant One For Twins' Manager

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sam Mele is working on the biggest parlay of his life and it looks as if he's going to bring everything home at once.

Minnesota Twins' manager has guided his team into the World Series, the Twins' Corsair is due to give birth to their fifth child about the time the series opens and the Mele family is moving into a new home in Quincy, Mass.

"Bringing the Twins home first may have been the easiest of the three," Mele quipped. ROLLING IN CLOVER

For a manager who just a year ago had a very uncertain future, Mele is rolling in clover.

A near cinch to be named American League manager of the year, Mele can't resist jobbing lightly at former critics with a little "I told you so."

Actually, Mele minimizes his own role in the Twins' surge to their first pennant since moving here from Washington.

He won't admit that he became a more aggressive manager and thus instilled aggressiveness in his club.

"I decided on a more aggressive team," he said. "But I don't think I'm more aggressive. I decided last winter that we would have to do more stealing, more hitting and running and lols and lots more work on fundamentals to eliminate those mistakes we made last year."

BOSS BETTER, TOO

Coach Billy Martin, picked up Mele to be his chief lieutenant on strategy and to build a fire under the twins, and Sam became a darn good manager this year."

"He was more sure of himself, more decisive," Martin added.

Crozier Ready To Play

DETROIT (AP) — Roger Crozier, Detroit Red Wings' goalie, is back to his normal playing weight of 158 pounds, but still is on a special diet, a Red Wings spokesman said Tuesday.

Crozier, who last year earned the Rookie-of-the-Year award and was the only National Hockey League netminder to appear in 70 games, weighed 170 pounds this summer, the spokesman said.

The five - foot - eight Crozier suffered what was called a nervous stomach attack, and his subsequent stay in a hospital brought the weight back to normal. Doctors have cut out "things like ice cream and fatty foods," the spokesman said.

"Crozier's ready to play. He's been participating in all scrimmages."

ABEL EXPERIMENTS

Red Wing manager - coach Sid Abel still is trying out different combinations of the 1965-66 version of his production line.

The big decision is where newcomer Andy Bathgate will fit in.

Bathgate, acquired from Toronto Maple Leafs in an eight-player trade, earned his reputation as a scoring star playing mostly on the right side, but Abel is trying Bathgate on the left.

Veteran Ted Lindsay, who made a brilliant comeback last year after four years of retirement, again is retired officially. But he is working out with the team and he looks extremely good," a spokesman said.

Lindsay will be honored by the club in ceremonies before the Red Wings' home opener Oct. 12 at Olympia Stadium.

WINS AWARD

Miss Greene, who led the national ski team to victories early this year against American and European competition, has been racing since 1959. She is the fourth winner of the award, named in honor of Semmelink who was killed in 1958 while racing in Germany.

HAVANA (AP)—Official figures indicate that one of every four Cubans is a government informant.

The national director of the Committees for the Defence of the Revolution says his organization of neighborhood spies numbers more than 2,000,000. Cuba's population is estimated at slightly more than 7,000,000.

The success of these committees was demonstrated in April, 1961, when, hours after the invasion of the Bay of Pigs, thousands of suspected counter-revolutionaries were rounded up and imprisoned.

Committee members know each resident of each apartment building, block and neighborhood. They know his business, family, friends, working hours, habits, general opinions, attitudes and activities. Any deviation from the normal is investigated and reported.

Russia's New Canadian Wheat Purchase Proves Soviet Agricultural Defects

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia's latest huge wheat purchase from Canada, implying another failure in the domestic harvest, illustrates what a serious drag agriculture is on the Soviet economy.

The chronic ailments of the farm sector contributed to the overthrow of premier Nikita Khrushchev last October and they now are increasing the stresses and strains on the new leadership.

Khrushchev's successors have had little chance to find their feet because of manifold economic difficulties at home and an unsettled international situation dominated by the potentially dangerous problem of Viet Nam.

It is still too early to judge how serious the Soviet crop failure will be. But the fact that Russia bought from Canada as much as 187,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour so early in the season indicates that the outlook for the Russian harvest is disappointing.

Even in the disastrous harvest year of 1963, Soviet state buyers did not line up a major alternative source of supply until early September. That was when a $500,000,000 transaction was concluded with Canada — a little bigger than this year's $400,000,000 deal.

Soviet agriculture recovered somewhat last year from the 1963 debacle, and Khrushchev boasted. Addressing an audience in Kazakhstan, he recalled that "enemies of communism" had proclaimed the virgin lands program a failure.

"You virgin lands people now have stuffed their pullets with your grain," he said triumphantly.

Even with a good harvest, however, Russia still found it necessary to buy $300,000,000 or more worth of wheat on the world market during the 1964 crop year. Much of it came from Canada.

An unknown factor in the present situation is the extent to which Russia has been buying up wheat to put into reserve.

The crop failure of two years ago is believed to have practically depleted Soviet stockpiles. Last year, Khrushchev talked of building up new stockpiles equal to one-half of a full year's requirements.

On the basis of present state-planned procurements, this would mean a reserve of something like 18,000,000 tons. A portion of Soviet purchases on the world market could conceivably be going into such a reserve.

An interesting sidelight of the latest Soviet move into the world market is that it underlines continuing concern by the leadership for the needs and demands of Russian consumers.

There was a time when Russia exported wheat while consumption at home was kept down to practically starvation levels," one observer noted. "That's no longer possible."

Communist party First Secretary Brezhnev and Premier Kosygin are committed to a policy of further improving the living standards of the Soviet people. They have taken a number of steps obviously designed to foster support for their leadership among the masses.

That stance precludes any attempt to cut bread consumption or even to make the masses eat black bread instead of white bread as was often done in the past.

Soviet Justice Now More Lenient But Public Is Not Happy About It

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet justice is becoming more lenient.

The authorities for some years have been experimenting with a less severe approach to offenders. The emphasis is on rehabilitation rather than punishment.

Many Soviet citizens aren't happy about it. They are aroused by the problem of crime and think that stronger steps should be taken to repress it.

"It is a great evil to punish somebody who doesn't commit a crime," wrote 200 employees of a Moscow factory in a letter to the newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva, (Evening Moscow). "But it is a greater evil when a crime remains unpunished."

The letter reflects popular disenchantment with the general policy.

Police, prosecutors and the courts are frequently accused in the press of sluggishness and indecisiveness in dealing with crime. Many Soviet citizens have indicated strongly that they do not care for the soft new look in handling criminals. Giving them suspended sentences or light corrective labor.

REDUCTION NOT PROVED

"Our aim is to minimize juridical repression," V l a d i m i r Terebilov, deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Court, said in an interview.

Authorities claim that crime is actually on the decrease. But they don't publish any statistics to support the contention.

Terebilov said there was a "collective decision by all interested officials" not to publish statistics because some juridical leaders think it might be thought.

Asked to explain, he said that although the general trend is downward, crime rates do sometimes show fluctuations upwards. To publish figures where this occurs would only alarm and agitate the populace.

One often gets the impression that when Soviet officials talk about a falling crime rate, they actually mean that prison sentences are decreasing. This would be in line with the emphasis on rehabilitation.

Where the crime is not a major one and where it's a first offence the convicted person is not sent to prison. In former times he might have been.

FEWER THEFTS

Some months ago Nedelya, weekend magazine of the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, published a report stating that crime was dropping. But the only direct illustration given concerned theft of private property. Down tenfold in the previous 30 years. Other comparisons given referred only to the number of persons imprisoned.

Judging by the clamor for stricter law enforcement, the public doesn't think crime rates are going down.

The outcry has been particularly fierce over such crimes as hooliganism and assault. Complaints are heard that these too often are dealt with by "friendly" courts, a peculiarly Russian institution with the flavor of a town meeting, where neighbors or fellow - workers meet to discuss a man's character.

They impose no punishment; they simply try to show the man where he has gone wrong and point him toward redemption.

There has also been a lot of murmuring about the ease with which some suspected criminals obtain bail.

Habitual criminals also are causing anxiety. There have been demands that convicts be subject to a system of registration following their release from prison.

ACCUSED HAVE RIGHTS

Legal authorities are concerned with providing more legal safeguards for accused persons. This is a change from the old days when individual rights meant nothing.

"Socialist legality demands law and not violate it that citizens obey the law," Terebilov said. "But it also demands that officials observe the law."

However, the recent case of Gerald Brooke, the British lecturer tried for subversive anti-state activity at a Moscow show trial, illustrates that legal safeguards don't necessarily mean the same thing in the Soviet Union as under the British judicial system.

Brooke was arrested April 25 and finally brought to trial three months later. During that time he was twice visited in prison by his wife and twice by the British consul. He was never taken before a judge until the day his trial began, although he probably saw his lawyer.

Announcing the charges two days before the start of the trial, the Soviet government said Brooke had been "caught red-handed" attempting to distribute anti - Soviet pamphlets from a Russian emigre organization in the West.

In the end Brooke was given five years, one year to be spent in prison and the remaining four in a labor colony.

UNNOCENCE PRESUMED

Part of the discussion about socialist legality in the Soviet Union concerns the principle that a suspected person is presumed innocent until proved guilty. Alexander Gorkin, chairman of the Soviet Supreme Court, wrote an article last December upholding the principle.

Terebilov, the deputy chairman, said the principle is not precisely enunciated in Soviet law books.

"There is no such expression in our law books but the contents of five or six articles of the main law of the Soviet Union clearly accept this principle."

He noted that the term does not appear, either, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, though the contents of that declaration support the idea. The Soviet Union is a signatory of the universal declaration.

"Any doubt is interpreted in favor of the defendant," Terebilov said. "The defendant is not obliged to prove his innocence. The prosecutor is obliged to prove guilt. The defendant can remain silent."

MANY PLEAD GUILTY

V. Kaminskaya, doctor of juridical science, wrote in Nedelya early this year that the innocent - until - proved - guilty principle is "a very important principle of justice, and any departure from it is a serious threat to true socialist legality, justice and the rights of Soviet citizens."

Great care is demanded in cases where the defendant pleads guilty, wrote Kaminskaya.

During Stalinist times, guilty pleas were used to sentence persons who committed no crime. To obtain a guilty plea by any means—that was demanded of investigators."

Even today accused persons plead guilty because they feel they cannot establish their innocence and that by doing so they will get a lighter sentence.

Again, people sometimes assume the guilt of their relatives or take upon themselves the crimes of others in return for money or under the threat of blackmail.

"So this question of determining a criminal is not so simple," commented Kaminskaya.

"That is why the law says, 'Pleading guilty by a defendant can be made the basis of conviction only when this confession lives in totality with other testimony in the case.'"

REDS HELD PM

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson and television viewers Tuesday night he once was arrested by Soviet police. "Her taking photographs where I shouldn't," he added: "I talked myself out of the police station with the little Russian I have." He did not say when the incident took place.

SWAPS DENTIST'S DRILL FOR MUSICIAN'S VIBES — Warren Chiasson, is one of few Canadians who have survived on the American jazz scene. Chiasson began studying music at the age of nine after moving to Sydney, N.S. Later he gave up dental studies for a full-time career in music, concentrating on the vibraphone. His big break came after an audition with George Shearing which started his first major U.S. tour. (CP Photo)

Gives Up Dentistry To Be Jazz Musician

By DAVE NICHOLSON

HALIFAX (CP)—At an age when he could be comfortably settled down with a flourishing dentistry practice, Warren Chiasson is trying to make a living in the tough, uncompromising world of jazz in New York City.

Now 31, Chiasson began predental studies at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, N.S., but found the thought of going into dentistry "just to find security really went against the grain."

It hasn't always been comfortable since, but he hasn't regretted the switch. And there was one undeniable dividend—2½ years with George Shearing, one of the big names in jazz.

Born at Cheticamp, N.S., Chiasson moved to Sydney with his family at six and began studying violin at nine. He has played piano and trombone but now spends almost all his time on vibraphone.

There's little enough work for any professional musician in Nova Scotia, less for a jazz musician specializing in the vibes. Like many others, Chiasson found steady work in the regimental band of the Royal Canadian Artillery and played jazz on the side wherever he could.

NO BEATNIK

A turning point came during an extended holiday in the United States. He visited most major cities and came under the influence of Jack Kerouac and other members of the "beat" literary movement in San Francisco.

Although he disclaims being a beatnik, Chiasson says the Kerouac people "fired my imagination, freed my thought."

He returned to Halifax and "worked and worked and worked" on jazz, including some composing. One of his songs led to a New York interview with a record promoter and this in turn led to an audition with Shearing, then forming a new group.

Shearing was enthusiastic although Chiasson had been playing vibes only about 1½ years. The army granted Chiasson his release only a few hours before the deadline and he joined the Shearing group in Boston to start a U.S. tour.

The years with Shearing were "wonderful—years that rounded me out and showed me the totality of music."

He left Shearing in 1961 after making several recordings. Since then he has been playing with some of the best musicians in New York, picking up jazz work when he can get it. His one regret is that he can't make a full living off jazz alone and must turn to commercial work to live.

FEW ARE CANADIANS

Chiasson notes that relatively few Canadians have made names in jazz—pianist Oscar Peterson, trumpeter Maynard Ferguson and Play Bley, a pianist involved in the newest experiments in the musical form, are among them.

But he says this isn't because there is any problem for Canadians. "If anything, it's just the reverse. People in the U.S. don't think of Canadians playing jazz at all and they're interested to meet those who do."

In Halifax for a short engagement, Chiasson said he's still "very much a Canadian, very much a Nova Scotian—these are my roots and I can never forget it."

But it was obvious he was very much a jazz musician, too.

Returning to resume the interview after his group had played Laura, a standard, he was all enthused.

"Did you hear that! Man, we didn't know we were going to do that until the moment we started. It's an arrangement you've never heard before and you'll never hear it again—pure spontaneity. That's not only the heart of jazz, it's the heart of life."

Father Objects To Daughter Being Actress

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lynn Carey, beautiful 18-year-old daughter of Macdonald Carey, is making her movie debut in George Axelrod's Lord Love a Duck — but, if Axelrod were smart, he'd write a script about Lynn.

The brown-eyed honey blonde is becoming an actress over the vehement objections of her actor father. And what has happened since she got the part hasn't diminished his opposition.

"My father wanted me to go to college," says Lynn, eldest of Carey's six children, "but I, with the help of my mother, got him to send me to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York."

In New York, her father set her up in a hotel for women only. Then when he came back to visit, he pulled her out of the hotel and brought her back home.

"My father thought the women who ran the hotel were too masculine and the men students at the academy too feminine. You know how fathers are."

When Lynn returned to her Beverly Hills home, the actress had the Axelrods over for dinner. Lynn's picture was on the plane.

Axelrod, writer, producer and director of the movie, yelled: "That's my 'Sally Grace.'"

Despite Carey's objections, Axelrod put Lynn in the movie as Sally Grace, a promiscuous high school song leader, opposite Roddy McDowall, Tuesday Weld and Lola Albright.

On the first day of shooting, Lynn came home and started telling her mother and father about the part. Unfortunately, her first words were: "I'm pregnant."

Before Lynn could explain further that she meant she was pregnant and unwed in the movie, her mother just about collapsed. Finally, when Lynn did explain, her father commented:

"I don't think that was very funny."

Roles as Amorous Frenchman Resented by Louis Jourdan

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—As actor, only one thing really bothers Louis Jourdan. Being cast as an amorous Frenchman.

"That oo-la-la, conventional, embarrassing character," sighs. "It all goes back to Offenbach and those bubbly operettas.

"I'm proud to be a Frenchman, but I resent the image people have of the stupid, continental charmer. Against that type of role I fight pitilessly."

The Jourdan campaign has been on for quite a while. But with a profile like that, long lashes and an indestructible Gallic swing to every word, what can one do?

"It is impossible to escape the image completely, but one tries and tries and tries to diminish it."

This partly explains why the man from Marseilles is playing a doctor from Vienna in the long - delayed musical, On A Clear Day You Can See Forever which opens Oct. 16.

The rest of the reason is Jourdan's enthusiasm for the $600,000 production. He calls it "divine, marvellous."

"To do a show on Broadway, one must fall absolutely in love with the property. On the stage, one must be able to enjoy doing a role night after night—and it is the performer who is responsible."

GOOD ROLE RARE

About once every five years, he estimates, an actor finds a role including that glow of inner satisfaction. Actually, Jourdan hasn't been on stage since 1953 when he wound up Broadway appearances in The Immoralist and Tonight in Samarkand.

His most notable role since was in the film Gigi—as an amorous Frenchman. He didn't mind that because it was a picture of "true quality." It also brought him together with Alan Jay Lerner, now the author-lyricist of On A Clear Day.

Lerner began work on the current venture about three years ago, in partnership with Richard Rodgers. The pair parted amicably because of sundry complications and Burton (Finlan's Rainbow) Lane took over as composer of the score.

Jourdan was approached by Lerner in 1963 and finally agreed to take the role a year later when he read the completed book while flying to France for a Riviera vacation with his wife and 14-year-old son.

A man of candor, he would just as soon forget the film and TV chores that have been his post-Gigi lot.

"One must function," he observes, meaning one must eat. "This doesn't imply that one doesn't do his best in something even if he knows at the time it isn't good. Afterwards there is no enjoyment."

With Barbara Harris, a Broadway debutante, as his leading lady, Jourdan will be exploring various aspects of psychic phenomena in On A Clear Day. She has the part of a girl with extra-sensory perception, he an analyst who hypnotizes her into the past.

SARAH Advocated For All Light Planes

COMOX, B.C. (CP)—A few weeks ago two men lay injured for 40 hours near the wreckage of their light plane on a rugged, forested mountainside on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

A searching pilot happened to see the setting sun glinting from a piece of wreckage in one of the tall trees hiding the downed craft. Paramedics and a rescue helicopter were dispatched and the men were in hospital three hours later.

At the time RCAF search and rescue officials said the 40-hour ordeal could have been averted if the plane had been carrying a tiny transmitter called SARAH—a search and rescue automatic homing device.

In a recent demonstration the air force put a man down in the same area. An Albatross search and rescue plane was sent out to look for him. As it crossed the island the radio operator began receiving signals from the SARAH transmitter the man carried.

GIVEN DIRECTION

Peering into a cathode scope, the operator saw small green lines shooting from the centre mark as the plane's antenna scanned from side to side. As the signal grew stronger the operator switched the receiver from "search" to "homing" and by comparing the length of lines on the screen could tell the pilot how far and what direction it was to the SARAH transmitter.

As the Albatross flew directly over him the demonstration "victim" fired a flare to indicate his rescuers were right on SARAH's beam.

RCAF searchers say SARAH should be compulsory equipment on all light planes. It was said of the island crash: "We could have flown over that plane 20 or 30 times and never have seen it."

Uncle Miltie Plays Serious Film Role

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Milton Berle, brash, bombastic but beloved, is playing a serious role in The Oscar, so serious he doesn't have one single laugh line.

"And, what's more, the new Uncle Miltie likes it that way.

He has informed the publicity department at Paramount that he won't pose for any gag publicity pictures.

"I'm playing a serious part in the movies for the first time —and I'm being serious all the way," vows Milton.

Milton is so serious that he even let Peter Lawford top him the other day.

Lawford plays a cameo role of a silent film star reduced to being a maitre d' in a restaurant.

A reporter commented the role is reminiscent of Jack Mulhall, the old-time star who later became a mentor of a Sunset Strip restaurant. At this Milton said:

"Back in 1921 when I was a kid star, Jack Mulhall auto graphed a picture for me. It read: 'To Milton Berle, a future star.'"

At this, Lawford quipped: "Too bad it never came true." Milton smiled and said politely: "Funnee. Funnee."

MORE EXPOSURE

Then, as Milton resumed his serious acting, Lawford commented:

"He's really changed for this part. I can remember the time when he would have cut me to shreds with gags for that one."

Milton, who first acted in The Perils of Pauline, is a superb serious actor. He drew an Emmy nomination for his television role of Doyle Against the House.

The public will see much more of Uncle Miltie this year.

Since 1956, when he abdicated as king of television, NBC-TV has been paying Berle $125,000 a year as comedy consultant. The contract runs to 1981.

"But they never consulted me," moans Milton. "So I voluntarily took a cut in salary to get out of my exclusive NBC contract."

In The Oscar, Milton plays the agent of Frankie Fain, the star as played by Stephen Boyd. It's the most sympathetic part in the movie—and a major role.

Acting, Says Cyril Richard, Is Being Someone You Aren't

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Cyril Richard, an ace at elegantly cheeky on-stage behavior, calls it all sheer charm.

"People are always asking me, 'How can you do such things?' "says the jaunty star. "And I answer, 'Because I don't do such things at home.' "

Being someone you aren't, he adds, is acting at its finest—a notion that brings him into headlong collision with adherents of "the method," which relies on inner involvement.

"Nonsense," the blue - eyed veteran retorts. "Over the years, the best performances of tarts have been by girls who don't go in for that sort of thing. And the best drunk scenes are played by those who never touch the stuff.

"I think such things come off so well because it's all makebelieve and an actor dares what he'd never do otherwise."

Having been everything from piratical Captain Hook in Peter Pan to a timorous Roman emperor, the 66-year-old Richard currently is regaling audiences as the frayed personification of old-school tradition in The Roar of the Greasepaint—The Smell of the Crowd. His work in the musical won a nomination for a Broadway Tony award as the season's top performance.

"I always do parts larger than life, outrageous and mad," he explains. "It's true that my theatre character is Quite Camp." Being known by that word adds special cachet at the moment to the whole Richardian existence.

Along with petite items as courreges ladyboots, the frug and pop art, Camp has recently been an item of the Richardians. Richard finds the term's sudden popularity rather ambiguous.

"In my sheltered boyhood—I was raised by the Jesuits—it had a lavender tinge," he says. "Now it describes anything odd, exotic or so outlandishly square as to be 'in' with the stylesetters. Like Tiffany lamps.

"Bernard Shaw was Camp," adds Richard. "When he was most angry, he made you laugh. Or take David Merrick, the producer of the show I'm in. I behaved like a Russian bear while rehearsals were on. Afterwards Merrick congratulated me for the calm way I took all the changes which were made-that's Camp, too."

Easy to Make Movie of 'Oscar', Just Rewrite the Whole Book

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Everybody in town wondered how a Hollywood studio could make a movie out of the best-selling novel The Oscar.

But producer Clarence Greene, director Russell Cruse and Joe Levine-Paramount are doing it—with full cooperation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Here's how:

First of all, the Richard Sale novel was about as devastating a body blow at the movie Oscars as can be imagined. It pictured how a boodum - like actor used blackmail, coercion, sex antics and about a half-dozen other felonies in his quest for the best-actor award.

It was more like a battle for control of the Cosa Nostra than the annual Oscar race.

All the nominees are easily identifiable. There's the boodum who tramples over everybody including his best friends; the homosexual designer; the flag-waving movie he-man; the alcoholic old-time actor and the pillar of the community who really a rogue on the side.

Producer Greene gives the picture what the industry is expecting the movie version.

"We but scrapped much of the book and rewrote it into our own script. All the other nominees are there but only spoken of, not pictured.

"Frankie Fain, the boodum character as played by Steve Boyd, is there guilty as ever but he gets his come-uppance.

"We couldn't do a movie the way the book was written. How could we attack the industry that feeds us?"

James Dean Craze Dying Decade After Fatal Crash

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A screech of car wheels, a crush of metal, and the short, strange life of James Dean was snuffed out on Highway 41.

It was 10 years ago Friday that the brooding, brilliant actor met his death near Paso Robles, Calif., ironically on the greatest post - mortem idolatry in the film world since Rudolph Valentino's passing in 1926.

A year after Dean's death, Warner Brothers still was receiving 8,000 letters each month with requests for photographs and information about the actor. Movie magazines, which featured Dean seldom in his lifetime, poured forth stories about him. Jamey Dean memorial fan clubs were organized throughout the world.

Teen - agers everywhere seemed to identify themselves with the young man whose film roles portrayed him as a youth in rebellion against his parents and other symbols of authority.

NOW IT'S BOGART

A decade later, the Dean craze has all but vanished. A new generation appears more intrigued with the "cool" of the late Humphrey Bogart.

The Dean legend appears to have suffered from malnutrition. Bogart left a legacy of 73 films; James Dean made only three. Two of them, East of Eden and Rebel Without A Cause, have been played and replayed on television. The other, Giant, is seen only in occasional re-release in theaters.

James Dean, 24 when his career ended, was well-suited to be idol of an undisciplined generation. His few close friends described that he could be thoughtful and profound in private. But most of his fellow workers found him unkempt and boorish.

"He seemed to care nothing for his appearance," said one of them. "He would likely show up for a party on his motorcycle with a filthy shirt, greasestained blue jeans and the combed hair. That is, if he showed up at all."

London Zoo Puts Lion In Good Shape

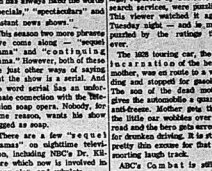
LONDON (AP) — The London Zoo roared out the good news Monday that 26 surplus lion's whiskers have been shipped to Dover Castle to refurbish the lion on the royal coat of arms.

"We have a fairly large animal whisker collection," said a zoo spokesman, "and were glad to help out."

The S.O.L. (Save Our Lion) was sent out by Maj.-Gen. Francis Brian Wykhoore-Smith, deputy constable of ancient Dover Castle. The castle, which includes a Roman lighthouse and the ruins of a Saxon garrison church, has a beautifully carved royal coat of arms above the constable's mantlepiece.

Chief features of the royal arms are a lion and a unicorn.



"I recently noticed that the face of the carved wooden lion was lopsided," said Wykhore-Smith, "and on close inspection discovered that only two of the original whiskers were left, on one side of the lion's face—and none on the other."

Said the general: "A member of staff stuck the whiskers on with glue and we're jolly pleased with the way the old lion's looking."

U.S. Navy Pilots Impressed With Reds' Anti-aircraft Fire

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

ABOARD USS INDEPENDENCE (AP) — Navy aircraft carrier pilots bombing North Viet Nam are impressed with the accuracy of Communist anti-aircraft fire and the mobility of their surface-to-air missile sites, a top U.S. fleet admiral reports.

"So far there's been no slacking off of pilot morale, but we know what we're up against," said Rear-Admiral James R. Reedy, commander of Task Force 77, which controls all air strikes from carriers in the 7th Fleet in the South China Sea.

The admiral said U.S. pilots have learned a few tricks about getting out of the way of the projectiles.

"You do have a chance—you can outmaneuver the missile," Reedy said. "The missile is probably going at 2½ times the speed of sound; a pilot traveling at the speed of sound can get out of the way if he sees the damn thing coming."

Detection against the SAM (Surface - to - Air Missile) has been fairly good, the admiral said. He added: "They need radar to work the missiles and they have to have it in a vacuum too far away. That's how we know the sites are mobile. Our reconnaissance flights get pictures of one missile location, and when we go back, it's not there."

The admiral was interviewed aboard the Independence, flagship of the task force that has been sending night and day bombing strikes into North Viet Nam from several carriers in the 7th Fleet.

Reedy said there was no way of knowing, from present intelligence, whether the SAM sites were operated by Russian, Chinese or North Vietnamese technicians. "It wouldn't be much of a job to teach the North Vietnamese to operate them," he added.

Macdonald Reid, West-born, World's Most Prolific Sculptor

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — "Modest forbids me to boast," said Macdonald Reid, "but I believe I am the most prolific sculptor in the world."

The Winnipeg - born Scot was standing in his basement studio, his shirtsleeves rolled up and his broad, rugged face sparkling with laughter.

He grinned as he added: "And perhaps one day I shall be the world's greatest sculptor."

While the verdict on his greatness will have to wait, there is no doubt he is prolific and widely known.

Leading statesmen of many countries have beaten a path to his door in London's swank Mayfair.

"The reason they came to me is that I have a secret," said the 55-year-old Reid. "I've created an electronic device by which I can complete the head of my subject with a single sitting of less than a fortnight."

Reid's tools, the subject of artistic controversy, consist of a revolving chair, a high-speed camera and a machine that links a projector with a power-driven cutting tool. The subject sits for one minute and the bust can be roughed out in three hours.

ELECTRONIC SCULPTOR — Macdonald Reid puts the finishing touches on a bust in his London studio. The Winnipeg-born sculptor believes he is the most prolific sculptor in the world and will some day be the greatest. His method consists of a revolving chair, a high-speed camera and a machine that links a projector to a power-driven cutting tool. The subject sits for one minute and the bust can be roughed out in three hours. (CP Photo)

Following the tracings of an enlarged film negative, Reid can produce the bust of his subject in just three hours.

"Of course I take more time than that. I put in a great deal of hand work to bring the head to perfection. But you can see the advantages. These busy statesmen or industrial leaders have so little time to spare. Their eyes light up when I tell them all I require of their time is less than one minute."

Reid, whose methods will be demonstrated on a nine-week Canadian tour in October and November, has never had an art lesson in his life.

SAW SECRET DEVICE

The idea came to him when as a wartime army major he saw the RAF using a then-secret photographic device fixed to the wings of a plane to define and measure objects seen on the ground below.

"I saw that it could measure great distances, and then I wondered if it could measure the size and length of my nose. When I found it could, it became the birth of an idea which I did not really follow up until after the war.

"My father did not want me to be an artist. He sent me to school here in England. He wanted me to become a businessman. I went to Cambridge where I met John David Eaton who now is president of T. Eaton Co. in Canada. The company is sponsoring my trip.

"I learned to play the piano and other musical instruments by ear. I entertained a general one night by whirling him around on a piano stool, and taking photos of him. I used these photos to build a head of wire and mud. The resemblance was so close that my colleagues were astonished.

"After the war I travelled the world many times and followed a number of careers. Then I thought of the RAF photo secret. I found I could buy it for £5. I refined the idea, of course, but it was the start."

Reid's first power - driven revolving chair (John Diefenbaker, who sat for him in 1961, thought it resembled an electric chair) was an old dental chair.

As the subject slowly revolves a camera takes a series of movie shots. The negatives are later fed into a projector which throws the film on to a white wooden plate fixed above a cylinder of plaster.

While Reid directs a pointer tracing the outlines of the enlarged, slow-moving negatives, the power cutter below cuts into the slowly turning plaster.

Reid is taking a polished-up version of his equipment to Canada. Part of a British trade exhibition, he will appear in Vancouver starting Oct. 6, Winnipeg Oct. 21, Montreal Nov. 4 and Toronto Nov. 18.

GO BACKSTAGE

LONDON (Reuters) — Princess Margaret and the Earl of Snowdon went backstage to meet members of the Theatre de Nouveau Monde of Montreal, at the National Theatre here Monday night, after watching a performance of the musical Klondyke, staged as part of the Commonwealth Arts Festival.

Acquiring Nuclear Submarine For Canadian Navy Possible

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — It is still possible, but unlikely, that the Royal Canadian Navy will get a nuclear submarine, officials say.

Naturally, the navy would like to get its sea legs into some nuclear subs but so far the cost has ruled out any such program.

The defence department now is buying three conventional submarines from Britain for $11,000,000 each. The first is to be commissioned this month.

The department has announced it will buy another submarine about 1970 to replace HMCS Grilse, a Second World War sub acquired from the U.S. as a training craft on the West Coast.

Officials say it has not yet been decided whether this sub will be nuclear or conventional or where it will be built. But in all likelihood it would be conventional.

In 1957, Conservative Defence Minister George Pearkes ordered a thorough study of the possibility of nuclear propulsion for Canadian warships, particularly submarines.

A team comprising experts from the navy, industry department and Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. made a detailed study and its report is still classified as secret.

CANADA IS CAPABLE

As a result of the facts set out by the survey group, a decision was taken not to build nuclear subs.

There would also have necessarily been heavy reliance on the U.S. for design of both the submarine and the nuclear power plant despite Canada's long experience with nuclear reactors. The first British nuclear submarine was built to a U.S. design and has an American nuclear power plant.

In 1958, Vice-Admiral Harry DeWolf, then chief of naval staff, said the RCN could make effective use of 12 nuclear subs. But this suggestion and others by senior naval officers that the RCN would have to convert eventually to nuclear power have found no favor with the government — primarily because of cost.

Hubby Flees After Giving Wife a Kiss

LONDON (AP) — Mrs. Patricia Brown, a bride of 24 hours, announced today: "My husband is a fool."

The bridegroom, Tony Brown, 24, fled the bonds of matrimony and a prison sentence Monday in one sharp sprint from the Wandsworth Borough Hall.

He had just slipped the ring on Patricia's finger and given his bride a kiss. Then he made for the exit while Patricia called "come back."

Brown had been taken to the ceremony under guard from Wandsworth Jail, where he was serving 4½ years for stealing $3,000 worth of silver and antiques in a store robbery.

The guards gave chase but he vanished in the crowded street.

No Soda in Soda Water Says Writer

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Napoleon Bonaparte liked to smell nice. . . . The French emperor liked to douse himself with eau de cologne and used up to 60 bottles of the scent a month.

How they got started: Jenry Ford was originally a watchmaker. . . . It was while in this line of work that he got some of the ideas he later employed in the assembly-line construction of autos.

How much does it take to be safe? . . . A Columbia University engineering professor says the U.S. strategic forces now have enough stored power to dump the equivalent of six tons of TNT on every person on earth.

Quotable Notables: "Football is a sport that bears the same relation to education that bullfighting does to agriculture."—Elbert Hubbard.

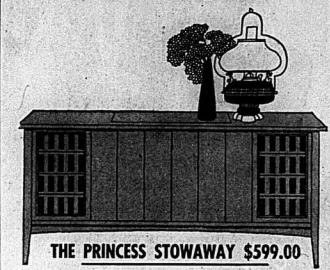
FMd's World: It is estimated that one fifth of U.S. dogs now take vitamins regularly.

Tips to tired housewives: The kids will have more fun blowing soap bubbles if you have them do it on rainy days. . . . The moisture in the air then allows them to blow larger and more durable bubbles.

Worth Remembering: A halo has to fall only a few inches to become a noose.

The typical male adult has 62 pounds of muscle but only about three pounds of brains. . . . This may explain most of mankind's problems.

Oddments: Some snakes, by absorbing the fat in their bodies, have lived for two years without eating. . . . Despite U.S. interest in education, some 22,000,000 Americans over 25 are classed as "functional illiterates." . . . There is no soda in soda water.



It was Carolyn Wells who observed, "We should live and learn; but by the time we've learned, it's too late to live."

Labor Leader Says Business Not Fulfilling Responsibilities

TORONTO (CP) — William Dodge, executive vice - president of the Canadian Labor Congress, Tuesday sharply criticized the role business is playing in community affairs.

He told the 98th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that business is not fulfilling its responsibilities toward the community.

"I suppose many would argue that business is as concerned as anyone about the solution of community problems. No doubt businessmen as citizens are, but businessmen as management seem to resist any solutions which are costly to business."

In the case of air and water pollution, mainly attributable to machines and factories, Mr. Dodge said a far as he could discover business isn't doing too much to fix the situation.

Mr. Dodge also chastised industry for not attempting to provide modern living conditions for the people who work there.

"Slum clearance and urban redevelopment is surely among our most urgent needs. Unhappily, I see very little disposition on the part of the business community to join in this kind of campaign."

Bad Weather Snags Campaign Of NDP Leader

By BEN WARD

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—T. C. Douglas' election campaign in Northern Ontario ran into weather snags Tuesday which forced him to miss one speaking engagement and drive 270 miles over bush road to keep another today.

The New Democratic Party leader's troubles began after a noon luncheon talk here to 100 persons. His flight to Kapuskasing, some 300 miles northeast, where he was to address an evening rally on his party, was cancelled because of fog.

Mr. Douglas decided to drive 220 miles to Sudbury, intending to catch an Air Canada flight to Timmins where he is to make two speech today. However, halfway to Sudbury, he learned in a telephone call that flights to Timmins also had been cancelled because of bad weather.

Undaunted, Mr. Douglas then took off in the car directly for Timmins over a bush road.

Mr. Douglas had had no speaking engagements in Kapuskasing in the last two election campaigns for the same reasons—poor flying weather.

However, about 300 people showed up at the Kapuskasing community centre Tuesday to hear Donald C. MacDonald, Ontario NDP leader, who drove 140 miles to attend the rally when he learned Mr. Douglas would be unable to make it.

WOULD SET GOALS

In his speech at Sault Ste. Marie, Mr. Douglas said his party, if elected, would create a planning body to set realistic goals for the entire economy and lay down guidelines for production, prices and wages.

"Many people get frightened when you talk of planning the economy," he said. "That's ridiculous. We all have to plan our future and a nation should, too."

He said an objective would be to outlaw unjustified price increases by getting both labor and management anti - combines legislation.

Among those present was Erhard Regier, NDP candidate for Algoma West in the Nov. 8 election. Mr. Regier recently won the Burnaby-Coquitlam seat he held in British Columbia for the NDP to make way for Mr. Douglas, who won it in 1962.

Mr. Regier came here in 1953 to run the NDP campaign for the provincial election of that year. He took up permanent residence here two weeks ago.

Mr. Douglas said there probably will be another election. Mr. Regier as an outsider. But "another outsider" had the neighboring riding of Algoma East and yet another was trying to take it from him. Prime Minister Pearson is MP for Algoma East and one of his opponents is Toronto TV announcer Joel Aldred.

"The only issue is whether Erhard Regier is a good man for this riding and for Canada," Mr. Douglas said. "And he certainly is."

Says Liberals Try to Control TV Coverage

BROWNSBURG, Que. (CP)—Conservative Leader Diefenbaker has charged that the government is actively trying to control the thinking of Canadians.

He said Tuesday night that a letter sent to private television station owners concerning the coverage of speeches by cabinet ministers was "one of the most unusual things that has ever happened."

"In all Canadian history," he said, "There has never been a more harassed attempt to control the thinking of Canadians."

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke to about 700 people who sat in a 45-degree auditorium to hear him assail the Liberal government for what he called a lack of concern for the average Canadian.

He said the letter sent out to television stations owners offering use of film clips of Liberal ministers contained this key paragraph:

"The most important thing about the six-week service is that the minister and the people closest to them know what the private broadcasters are doing for them."

ARE ASSISTANTS

Mr. Diefenbaker said that the people close to the cabinet ministers are executive assistants.

"Those are the people close to Ritchie Ontario and Nicholson," Mr. Pearson talked about a new Canada, he said, "the new Canada in which our thinking will be controlled."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he was going to deal with this letter a great deal more in the days ahead.

The 70-year-old party leader Tuesday travelled about 200 miles through the countryside of Argenteuil - deux - Monts, agnes, completing his day with an evening rally in this town four miles from Lachute, Que.

He donned a heavy wool lumberjack before beginning to speak to the heavily - clothed audience which filled one side of the sports arena with several hundred more standing on the concrete floor.

"They go across the country and say I am your enemy," he said.

'WAS I YOUR ENEMY?'

"Was I your enemy when I brought in simultaneous translation to Parliament? Was I your enemy when I recommended to Her Majesty the appointment of the first French-Canadian Governor - General?

"Was I your enemy when I brought in the first bilingual budget?

"Compare that with the present government. What have they done?"

He was interrupted frequently by applause.

VISITS MARKET

What appeared to be his most enjoyable experience occurred when Mr. Diefenbaker spent an hour at the open air market here. He wandered over the grassy fair ground admiring the salesmen of vegetables, old clothes and antiques.

He even ended up buying an old spinning wheel for $25.

He wandered up and down through the clothing stalls and in the midst of a mob of customers and said: "I have never seen anything like this. It's like threshing time in the west."

He went up to a vegetable stall and asked the farmer what type of corn he was selling.

"I don't know anything about corn. All I know is that you are going to be the next prime minister," said the farmer.

Pearson announced the government would set up a $500,000,000 fund to pay for medical training and research.

That evening Mr. Pearson announced that Canada had agreed to provide the nucleus for a new reassettire force between India and Pakistan. This press release was handed out after cabinet in Ottawa by before External Affairs Minister Martin was to announce the same thing before the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

ORBIT SATELLITES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy disclosed Tuesday night it has placed two more navigation satellites in orbit. It said the two 135-pound, octagonal spacecraft are in orbit "to augment the now - operational, all-weather satellite navigation system and to allow for more frequent position fixes by ships at sea."

Pierre Sevigny Says Diefenbaker Misunderstood Quebec's Aspirations

TORONTO (CP)—John Diefenbaker misunderstood Quebec's aspirations although he wanted to be its friend, was suspicious of big business and tended to listen too much to advisers who agreed with him, a former cabinet colleague said Tuesday night.

Pierre Sevigny, who quit the cabinet in 1963 over the nuclear weapons issue, outlined his opinion about Mr. Diefenbaker as prime minister on the Pierre Berton television show.

Mr. Berton was interviewing the former associate defence minister about his forthcoming book, "This Game of Politics." Although he is critical of the party leader in the book, Mr. Sevigny has announced he will campaign for the party in the Nov. 8 election.

SAYS PC'S BLUNDERED

During the interview Mr. Sevigny said:

—The failure to have a French-Canadian second Mr. Diefenbaker's nomination at the 1956 leadership convention was a "ghastly blunder" that could have cost the party its 1957 victory had the Liberals been smart enough to exploit the point.

—French Canada would have been more pleased with Mr. Diefenbaker had either the justice or external affairs portfolios gone to a French-Canadian.

—Mr. Diefenbaker and his colleagues did more for Quebec than had ever been done before, but he never understood that Quebec wanted a master plan and not a piecemeal approach to its problems to bring the English and French nations together for a united Canada.

—The cabinet crisis of 1963, when Mr. Sevigny took over the Minister Hees and defence minister Harkness resigned, could have been avoided if Mr. Diefenbaker and his key lieutenants and the cabinet had had better communications.

Mr. Sevigny said Mr. Diefenbaker was possibly too lonely a man, and it would have been better if persons who sincerely wanted to advise him had been able to reach him.

Mr. Diefenbaker sought opinions but "the frequently did not like too many people who disagreed with him or told him things that he didn't like to hear."

"There were some people who actually surrounded him . . . with flattery and if he had listened possibly less to these people and a little more to those who were more objective and to the realists the end results possibly have been different."

One of his "most serious faults," Mr. Sevigny said, was his holding "almost a resentment" against big business and the financial world,because "it stands to reason that if you get the powerbit of the world behind you, the powerful of this world will influence those under them in your favor."

He said at first traditionally, Conservative big business "always thought a great deal of Mr. Diefenbaker and "most of the time they got exactly what they wanted so they really had no reason to complain."

He said his impression that Mr. Diefenbaker was against them was exploited by the opposition parties and "relationship" so that between the 1962 and 1963 elections business support switched from the Liberals to underscore the "truly excellent work" being done by the Conservative government.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he said, was a forceful personality, easy to listen to but not easy to talk to.

Announcements Cleared by Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—While trains and aircraft have been carrying other party leaders in their search for votes in the Nov. 8 federal election, a mimeograph has been working at full clip in Prime Minister Pearson's office on Parliament Hill.

A sort of campaign-by-press-release has been conducted for the last week, with announcements covering international crises to fishing troubles limiting from Mr. Pearson's office.

According to Liberal strategists the prime minister plans to confine his barnstorming of the country to the final four weeks of the campaign, and prevent his campaign reaching a climax too many days before voting day.

But some public exposure has been thought necessary.

Information say policy announcements by all government departments are being cleared through Mr. Pearson's office. Some are then put out under the prime minister's name.

For examples:

Last Thursday, while Health Minister Judy LaMarsh was opening a conference with provincial health ministers on proposals for a nationwide medical insurance program, Mr.

Chief Jailor At Lindsay Resigns Post

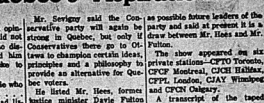
LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—George Eggleton, chief jailor at Victoria County jail since 1955, resigned Tuesday, saying he was dissatisfied with his job.

The resignation came four days after the governor, W. B. Harnick, was dismissed by the county council's jail and property committee. No reason was given.

Mr. Eggleton said he has been unhappy for some time about his duties as an inmate at the jail, but that he had no personal differences with Mr. Harnick.

The jail's eight guards threatened to strike three weeks ago to support their efforts to obtain collective bargaining rights.



The strike was postponed when a settlement was arranged between the council's negotiating team and the jailers.

Mr. Eggleton is about 51 miles northwest of Peterborough.

TO RETIRE?

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Devoir says retirement is imminent for Raymond Eudes, who has represented Montreal Hochelaga in the Commons for 25 consecutive years, and the nomination of Gerard Pelletier as Liberal candidate in the riding appears assured. The newspaper says Mr. Eudes has informed party organizers of his recent decision to abandon active politics.

Business Image Distorted

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's top businessmen were told Wednesday that their image in the eyes of much of the Canadian public consists of "misconceptions, misinformation and plain ignorance."

This was the message given to the closing session of the annual conference of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce—but it was made clear to the 800 assembled delegates the fault lies mainly with business for not projecting its proper role in society.

J. M. Keith of Montreal, newly-elected president of the chamber's executive council and president of Imperial Tobacco Co. Ltd., told delegates the chamber will have to make clear that the real objectives of business are "being for progress and for the people, instead of appearing to be against government, against labor, against much that is considered progressive in our society."

Business has to show that its economic aims are the same as those of all Canadians, even though in the past it has failed in presenting this basic objective in terms that could be understood and accepted by the public, Mr. Keith said.

"Business must be ready to align itself in our society along with other segments such as labor and government, and to provide information about the functions and roles of each and of how co-existence can be most effectively achieved with the maximum benefit for all," he said.

HEARS REPORT

The chamber heard a report drawn up by a private company, on the public's attitude which showed:

—That 23 per cent of the 2,200 persons questioned did not know of any difference between the Canadian and the Russian way of life;

—That people thought business makes a net profit of 19.1 per cent, although recent government statistics show that the profit on the sales dollar was 3.7 per cent;

—That people believe business pays 23 per cent of their profit in taxes although actual rates run 50 to 52 per cent;

—That they believe business has much more power over the government than it should have;

—That business does not really live up as much as it should up to its responsibilities to customers, shareholders, employees or communities.

Chamber officials said the organization has spend $40,000 during the last year on its surveys of public opinion.

Viet Nam War 'Freezes' U.S.-Soviet Relations Says Leonid Brezhnev

From AP-Reuters

MOSCOW (AP) — The war in Viet Nam is freezing Soviet-American relations and the Soviet Union will continue to supply military aid to North Viet Nam, Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev says.

On the domestic front, he told the Russians that because of poor harvests the Soviet Union may have to buy more wheat from the West.

Reviewing Soviet foreign policy before the party central committee Wednesday, the first secretary also held out an olive branch to China.

Brezhnev said the war in Viet Nam "greatly complicates" Soviet relations with the United States and those relations "show a clearly evident tendency toward freezing."

"Normalization of our relations is incompatible with the armed aggression of American imperialism against a fraternal socialist country—Viet Nam," he said.

"The nature of the further development of our relations with the United States depends on whether or not the leaders of this country will show enough common sense to abandon the policy of aggressive attacks."

U.S. officials in Washington found nothing surprising in Brezhnev's speech. For months, they said, they have recognized that there is no prospect for substantial improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations while the two governments are so sharply divided over the Viet Nam war.

Brezhnev again attacked West German "militarism" and said that the Warsaw Pact nations of Communist Eastern Europe would take steps to strengthen their defences. He said there are "no possibilities for establishment of normal relations with West Germany" even though trade continues.

Brezhnev's relations with British, he said, were "substantially hampered" by the Labor government's support of U.S. policy in Viet Nam and for nuclear weapons for West Germany.

Only France among the Western powers was praised by Brezhnev.

"At the present time the prospects of our relations with France are not bad," he said. Brezhnev said this was due to the realistic position of the French government" in attempting to improve relations with the Communist camp.

Brezhnev again insisted that since last October, when Nikita Khrushchev was deposed, Moscow had attempted to restore unity with China but "unfortunately, these were not supported by the leaders of the Communist party of China."

Nevertheless, he said, "we must consistently continue to search for the ways of settling the disagreement and consolidating friendship and co-operation between the Soviet and Chinese peoples, between our parties and countries."

During the section of his speech devoted to the Viet Nam issue, Brezhnev spelled out for the first time the kind of help the North Vietnamese have been getting from Russia.

He said Russia had supplied North Viet Nam with "a considerable amount of weapons and military equipment," and declared that military aid would be continued.

Brezhnev said aiding North Viet Nam was "the duty of the strongest and best - developed socialist power."

India, Pakistan Dig In For Bloody Skirmishing On Intended Truce Line

By Conrad Fink

NEW DELHI (AP) — India and Pakistan were digging in today for what promised to be more bloody skirmishing along the ineffective UN ceasefire line separating their armies.

Diplomats of both nations were publicly adopting uncompromising stands that appeared to leave no prospect of a significant troop withdrawal or long range peace settlement.

And both armies were nervously fencing with each other, sending out patrols, consolidating their positions in several sectors and continuing the bloodshed.

The Indian flag was flying on the eastern bank of the Ichhogil Canal and in the Pakistani town of Burki, which was captured by the Indians before the ceasefire.

In Kashmir, the Indians were extending the civil administration to areas they had captured in Pakistani Kashmir.

The United Nations, which arranged the ceasefire Sept. 23, still did not have enough observers on front to do much good and the chief UN officer, Maj.-Gen. Bruce Macdonald of Canada, was reported to have crossed no man's land in an effort to quiet down the skirmishing.

Gen. Macdonald was said to be proposing that both armies initially withdraw 500 yards from the tense Lahore front, but where their forward units now face each other across the 100-foot wide Ichhogil Canal. He is commander of the newly - created United Nations India - Pakistan Observer Mission.

The newspaper Indian Express reported from Amritsar, an Indian city beyond the Lahore front, that Gen. Macdonald left Wednesday en route to the Pakistani city of Lahore. UN headquarters in New Delhi confirmed Gen. Macdonald planned to cross the front but said he had no word whether he had gone so, or whether he planned to go by jeep or plane.

The Express said Gen. Macdonald was asking both armies to disengage physically because their nearness to each other was considered a major reason for frequent ceasefire violations.

Both sides were charging violations along almost the entire length of the long, tense front that stretches from northern-most Kashmir state southwest until it almost reaches the Arabian Sea coast.

Some of the heaviest fighting was reported in the Great Indian Desert that covers much of India's Rajasthan state and the adjoining Hyderabad area of southern West Pakistan.

Pakistan claimed it had captured five Indian officers, including a lieutenant - colonel commanding a battalion, in one desert clash.

India, however, said its forces had got the upper hand and were winning in a fight that involved desert rangers and camel units.

India claimed it was winning the desert fighting, causing the Pakistanis "grievous losses in men and equipment." A defence ministry spokesman said 27 Pakistanis were killed and 26 captured when their units tried to infiltrate the west Indian state.

Tote That Wood, Mill That Pulp, Turn Out Cars and Yankees Gulp

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada should stick to the economic role of hewing wood and drawing water, three United States senators said in effect Wednesday.

Canada should concentrate on what it does best and car manufacturing is not in that category, suggested senators Albert Gore, Tennessee, Abraham Ribicoff, Connecticut, and Vance Hartke, Indiana. All are Democrats.

They renewed assaults on the agreement between Canada and the United States to abolish tariffs for manufacturers — but not consumers—on most motor vehicles and their original parts.

Their message was that Canadian cars are high-cost ones and that Canada should attack its annual trade deficit of more than $1,000,000,000 with the U.S.) by expanding sales of pulp, paper and other such products.

Hartke challenged Russell Long of Louisiana, the bill's manager, to propose an amendment calling for unrestricted trade between the two countries.

Gore called for "truly free trade, thus increasing Canadian production in such commodities as automobiles, with lower prices for all consumers."

Long said full free trade "would swamp Canada's car industry and the object of the agreement was to get it a larger entry to the U.S. market and preserve the big U.S. share of the Canadian market as well."

Gore moved that the bill be held up until Jan. 10 for further study by the U.S. tariff commission on a number of points.

A vote on that motion and others could come up today. The debate resumes at 11 a.m. EDT.

Gore dismissed arguments that Canada might launch a trade war with the U.S. unless it gets a larger share of the U.S. auto market, saying Canada's economic dependence on the U.S. is "rather similar to the little-tail situation support his opinion.

He also claimed that because of the agreement earnings by Canadian subsidiaries of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler have fallen off sharply, hurting the U.S. balance - of - payments position.

Dividends paid by the three companies last year fell to $14,400,000 compared with between $45,000,000 and $48,000,000 in each of the previous four years, Gore said. That meant higher retention of earnings in Canada.

Lower Canadian auto-making wages and the building of new auto plants in Canada spelled disaster for the U.S., Gore added.

Ribicoff said in his view the trade agreement sold out the interest of the U.S." in dealings with Canada.

He said the agreement with Canada is contrary to efforts for freer trade and Gore said he is prepared to accept "free trade from Hudson Bay to the Gulf of Mexico but I'm not prepared to accept a closed car for a few."

Gore said the big auto makers are getting a free gravy and Ribicoff said he was "shocked" that the U.S. was "subsidizing" the agreement essentially made privately between the Canadian government and the Canadian subsidiaries of the four main auto makers.

Vietnamese Plan 5 Executions U.S. Captives May Pay Price

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government is reportedly planning five more executions Friday despite Viet Cong threats of reprisals against American prisoners.

Those to be executed were convicted of criminal activities in no way related to the Viet Cong. The government warned that Jean Paul would execute hoarders, speculators and war profiteers.

No police source said that of those to be executed Friday three were convicted of murder, rape and robbery, one of murder and rape and another of murder.

Parliament today were enlarging the sandbag execution wall in Saigon's central market place where a firing squad put two young Viet Cong terrorists to death earlier this year.

In retaliation, the Viet Cong executed U.S. Sgt. Harold Bennett June 28.

The Viet Cong announced Monday they had executed another two American servicemen in reprisal for the shooting of three Viet Cong sympathizers the week ago.

Threats of more reprisals against captured Americans came in a letter from North Viet Nam to the International Red Cross in Geneva and in the official Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan.

North Viet Nam told the Red Cross that captured American and South Vietnamese pilots will be tried as war criminals because they had "soldiers with bombed objects marked with the sign of the Red Cross," the state department has denied this.

Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey said the United States "any effort to brand American pilots as war criminals and try them in kangaroo fashion would be a crude screen for rejection" for the execution of Communist terrorists by the South Vietnamese.

U.S. officials to Saigon said 28 American military personnel are missing and many of them are believed to be in Viet Cong hands.

Council Asked to Scrap Text on Birth Control

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council was asked today to scrap its entire text on birth control and let Pope Paul make a final pronouncement on the subject.

The request came from John Cardinal Heenan of Britain, who also asked that the Roman Catholic Church urge childless couples to practice periodic and illegitimate children.

Cardinal Heenan was among 14 prelates who spoke in the council on the marriage and birth control sections of the assembly's schema on modern world problems.

The document speaks of couples having the right to determine the number of children they should have. But there is no mention of contraception.

Clearly alluding to contraception, Cardinal Heenan told the prelates in St. Peter's Basilica:

"Would it not be better to say nothing at all about marriage in this document rather than discuss it while leaving the really big problem without mention?

"If we act in this way, there is surely some danger that the faithful will feel they are being defrauded."

Several non-Catholic critics might even "sneer at us and say the Catholic Church claims to be infallible in technical faith and morals, yet it cannot make up its mind about this question".

"It would be better to leave out this whole chapter and its ologians, ready to make a proclamation on this subject."

Conservatives in the council complain that the document is vague and leaves the way open for the use of contraceptives.

Possibly it does—and possibly on purpose.

If specific and vague as the document might seem to be, a striking fact is that it does not specifically bar the use of contraceptives and suggests marriage involves other basic values than the perpetuation of the human race.

The document, originally described as a broad one without specific direction, has turned out to be different. This is made apparent in an official summary of the still secret text. The summary was made public by the council press office and began debate on the issue.

The summary says that the document "restores the value of those acts which realize the intimate and normal union of the spouses and at the same time are a symbol of their reciprocal giving of one another. . . ."

"The institution of marriage and conjugal love are ordained to the procreation and the education of children," the document says, but it doesn't limit marriage to that end.

This is what many of the conservatives object to. They complain because the document doesn't come out with a flat condemnation of any purpose in marriage but procreation.

Many progressives want the document to go even further in the opposite direction with an explicit stand on the needs of the individuals in marriage for love rather than as a manifestation of their love.

Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal, for example, is happy that the document states that marriage is not "a simple instrument for procreation."

But he told the council Wednesday he regrets that the wording of the document should allow any ambiguity on this score.

In an earlier time there would have been no ambiguity. There would have been—as indeed there have been—specific bars to any change in the traditional church teaching on birth control.

Three Quarters Of UN Delegates Walk Out As Apartheid Defended

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Nearly three-quarters of the members of the United Nations —representing the bulk of humanity—showed their distaste for South Africa's racial policies Wednesday by walking out of the 117-nation General Assembly as their country's foreign minister was given the rostrum.

Among the 30 or so delegations who remained to listen were those of Canada, Britain, France and the United States.

About 85 delegations quietly left their desks.

The walkout took place when Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller stood up to deliver his country's defence of apartheid (racial segregation).

All the delegations from Africa, except South Africa's, left the assembly hall as did the Communist bloc members, some western European delegations, about half of the Latin Americans and all the Asian group except Nationalist China, Thailand and Nepal.

After criticizing the behavior of the delegations who left the assembly, Muller said each country has the inalienable right to live its own separate life."

He deplored the "tendency to ignore the separate identities of different peoples and to expect heterogeneous communities to share a common national consciousness and loyalty."

After winding up his address, Muller was given a sympathetic ovation from sections of the public gallery, with feeble applause from the delegates who had remained seated.

Outside the United Nations headquarters U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk gave a dinner for Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and the two world figures explored possible points of agreement between the two countries.

Gromyko, who will be host to Rusk Friday night, said later that the dinner meeting with the U.S. state secretary had been friendly. Discussions had centred on disarmament, the India-Pakistan conflict and several other world matters of common interest.

Meanwhile, clashes continued between Indian and Pakistani forces as the two countries, who had called a ceasefire Sept. 22 on orders from the Security Council, refused to budge on their decisions not to withdraw to positions held prior to the Aug. 5 outbreak of the latest series of hostilities.

India rejected during the assembly debate Pakistan's proposal for withdrawal of all Indian and Pakistani troops from Kashmir. The idea was "preposterous," said India, because the disputed Himalayan state is an "integral part of India."

Syed Mir Qasim, himself a Moslem from Kashmir and a member of the Indian delegation to the world organization, said India would never agree to Pakistan's proposal for replacement of Indian and Pakistani troops by UN peacekeeping force because India does not want any foreign troops on our soil."

Bishop Dedicates Carillon To Memory of R. Pringle

On Sunday St. Thomas' Church was the setting for a very fitting and beautiful service at which the Right Reverend K. C. Evens, D.D., D.C.L., dedicated the Schulmerich Carillon in the tower and a marble plaque in the church to the memory of the late Robert A. Pringle, Q.C.

At this was a day set aside for Harvest Festival, much of the musical portion of the service, under the direction of the organist, Mr. Donald W. Davenport, was in the nature of a thanksgiving to God for all His many benefits.

At an appropriate time in the service the Lord Bishop, preceded by the Crucifer and the boys' choir, with his chaplain, the Reverend M. P. Walsh, and the rector of the parish, the Venerable A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., L.Th., moved to the west end of the church where he was met by the wardens of the church wardens, Mr. R. T. Morton and Mr. R. W. G. Frost-stone.

Following prayers by the Bishop, Mr. William Pringle, elder son of Robert A. Pringle, unveiled the marble plaque on the west wall of the church and the Bishop made the dedication in these words:

"In the faith of Jesus Christ we bless and dedicate this carillon in loving memory of Robert A. Pringle, Queen's Counsellor, faithful member of this parish and Chancellor of the Diocese of Ontario, in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

After a few words of thanks the bells in the church, the procession returned to the sanctuary during the singing of the memorial hymn.

In speaking of the carillon as a most fitting memorial the Bishop noted that the main purpose of the bells was to call people to the worship of God. He paid tribute to the setting and to Mr. Pringle in these words, "I want you to think today, of 'call' and 'recall,' a call to worship but also a recalling of the great spiritual blessings that God gives us, together with a recollection of those who have lived among us. It is most fitting that on this day of Thanksgiving there is the demand, in this service, of a moment of recollection. What a lovely old church and what a perfect setting it has on its green hill. From its tower those bells will carry their message of call and recall to many in this city where Robert A. Pringle lived and worshipped. He was a faithful member of this parish and, as Chancellor of the Diocese served his church in its highest lay capacity."

Among those attending the service were members of the legal profession, including His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson, Mr. B. W. Hurley, president of the Belleville and District Barristers' Bar Association; Mr. William Argue, Q.C.; Mr. R. E. Barber, Mr. B. McCullins, M.A., D. O'Flynn Sr.; Mr. John D. O'Flynn Jr.; Mr. R. E. Nourse of Picton, and Mr. D. P. Nourse.

Two former mayors of the city under whom Mr. Pringle served as solicitor were present in the persons of Mr. Frank S. Pollwell and Mr. H. J. Allin. Mr. Charles Hilton also attended the service, with his wife and family, to pay tribute to a very close friend.

The full peal of bells rang out as the congregation left the church.

Lesage Promises to 'Go Deep' Into Student Exchange Rejection

EDMONTON (CP) — Quebec Premier Jean Lesage Wednesday promised to "go deep" into the rejection by Laval University students of a proposal for a Western Canada exchange week at the Quebec City campus.

He told a press conference the rejection, perhaps "extremism" in thinking of a group or maybe some basic misunderstanding" did not reflect the Quebec government policy of encouraging exchanges.

Earlier, he told a breakfast of the French-Canadian Association of Edmonton he will inquire into the rejection when he returns to Quebec Oct. 8 after his Western Canada tour.

At the press conference, he again declined "political comment" on a statement by Yukon Conservative Erik Nielsen that Mr. Lesage is a political warlord to whose whims Prime Minister Pearson has bowed.

Mr. Lesage said Mr. Nielsen, Conservative member of the Yukon Territorial Council, "is known" is a nonentity for whom "I have no use . . . Whatever he said, I couldn't care less."

He said he has been bothered by indifference some persons in his western audiences have shown to his viewpoints on biculturalism.

IT'S A CONTRACT

In an address to about 1,000 University of Alberta students, he said Confederation should be looked on as a contract between Canada's founding cultures rather than between a central government and 10 provinces.

The "horizontal" view was permanent. French - speaking Canadians accounted in 1867 for about 30 per cent of the country's population and the percentage still is the same, he said.

The country should be considered as a group of French-speaking majority and English-speaking minority in Quebec and the opposite situation in the other provinces.

"It's from that picture that we have to set first the better mutual knowledge . . . of the two majorities and then establish a dialogue and then to come to a solution" of bicultural problems.

In a question-and-answer period, Mr. Lesage said Quebec has not asked the federal government for any powers to which it is not entitled under the British North America Act.

SHOT HIS BROTHER

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (Reuters)—The 10-year-old son of a policeman testified at an inquest Thursday that he shot his four-year-old brother with his father's pistol after learning how from television. The coroner ruled that the boy was not criminally responsible.

"The annual appeal for funds for work for the blind and the prevention of blindness in Hastings County has begun. Mrs. Harry Rollins, Chairman of this year's campaign for victory Board to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, has announced. "The appeal will continues until the whole county has been covered. In addition to the canvasses in the towns and villages such as Bancroft, Deseronto, Tyndonn, Marmora, Madoc, Tweed, Campbellford, Stirling, Trenton, Tweed and all of the smaller communities, plans are underway to have the rural districts canvassed on a township basis."

Mrs. Rollins stated that the Advisory Board has key members in all of the centres listed above and that these Board members have accepted the responsibility of covering their own areas, including townships in some instances. The Tweed Kinsette Club has been doing an excellent job in covering Elzevir and Hungerford Township. In Trenton the appeal is under the direction Wellington Chairman.

Mrs. Rollins outlined some of the services of the C.N.I.B. which includes visitation by the District Field Secretaries, P. I. Timmins and D. I. McCallum, to discover needs and arrange the needed services. The home teacher gives instruction in Braille, writing and knitting.

This year talking books are now being provided on tapes enclosed in cartridges or cassettes rather than on disc records which become easily scratched or damaged. "This change-over is an expensive process," added Mrs. Rollins, "with an increase in our needs this year."

Other services include the employment training for the new or poorly adjusted blind, a vacation period at the Lake Joseph Adjustment and Holiday Centre, residential care in Quinte at the Lodge and Dr. Kingston, the district home for the blind, etc.

"In fact the C.N.I.B. is a member agency of the United Appeal," advised Mrs. Rollins, "and therefore some funds must put on our own appeals, depending upon the splendid help of so many volunteer canvenors and canvassers and the generous support of the public. The members of the Hastings County Advisory Board are confident of the same support this year."

"It is better to prevent blindness than to provide services for those already blind and hence our very active program in the prevention of blindness," concluded Mrs. Rollins.

New Society Against Sex Is Formed

SHEFFIELD, England (Reuters) — Jane Heaton, a 20-year-old Sheffield University student, has started a society called Maidens Anonymous for girls who are against pre-marital sex.

The society, which so far has 30 members, in an article in a student newspaper, says: "All men are lecherous, egotistical swine and the blond-haired, blue-eyed kinds who gazes into your eyes is not drinking in your beauty . . . or not is the way you think he is."

The society invites members who find themselves in danger of being seduced to telephone one of several numbers —secret except to members—to contact a fellow member "who will attempt to give moral support."

Bridge Club Elects Officers For Season

The oldest continuous member of the Belleville Bridge Club, W. B. "Skit" Vandervoort was the unanimous choice of the membership for president at the annual meeting held at Odessa Hall on Wednesday evening. Others to assist the president will be L. E. McLean, honorary president, Joseph Ellard vice-president, Gerald B. "Jerry" Hyde, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. Wylie, Al McCabe, Mrs. John Tomlison and John Woodcroft as executive members. The slate of officers was brought in by Hester Thrasher Townsend and unanimously adopted by the meeting.

Mr. Vandervoort was a charter member of the Club formed 21 years ago and this year at least 21 teams will play in the league. There is a possibility that two or more teams will enter before the schedule is drawn. Play will commence in the week of October 18th and a mid-season party at which the women will be invited will be held and the executive was given the authority to act the date and make all the arrangements.

At the conclusion of the meeting the boys had a session of their favorite pastime and Henry Jones, Jim Aitken, Jack Lawrence, "Red" Townsend, William Colby, Reg Wainwright and Harry Trepanier were the winners.

Before the evening was concluded the new members of the club were officially welcomed by the president and the older members who have again joined up to play were seasoned back to the fold. A midnight lunch closed a most enjoyable evening.

MORGAN — In loving memory of our oldest son, Everett William, who was drowned on Sept. 30, 1950.

Fifteen years, but sad forgotten
For memories still linger on.
Will we ever forget you?
No!
And see your pleasant smile once more.

Ever remembered by mother and dad, brothers and sister Joyce and Jim. 930-31

MORGAN — In loving memory of a dear brother, Everett William Morgan, who died Sept. 30, 1950.

He left the ones he loved the best,
And went to God to rest.
And in our sad and lonely hearts,
He has a vacant place.
The reason is hidden somewhere,
But only God knows why.
Asleep in God's tempting garden,
Where flowers never die.
Each day when life's cares are ended,
We shall be together again.
Ever remembered by brother Jack, Mary and family. 930-31

MORGAN — In loving memory of a dear brother, Everett William Morgan, who died Sept. 30, 1950.

He left the ones he loved the best,
And went to God to rest.
And in our sad and lonely hearts,

The reason is hidden somewhere,
But only God knows why.
He was taken from this earth,
And someday we'll understand.

Youth Pleads Guilty to Four Charges

A 17-year-old Trenton shoplifter took advantage of a phone call to make a bid for freedom from custody today with four different charges against him in magistrate's court.

Percy Edward Brunton pleaded guilty to theft, escaping custody, assaulting a police officer and wilful damage.

"He was being given his rights in making a phone call, then he takes off and assaults (an officer)" said Crown Attorney John Pringle. "My feelings in this matter are very strong and I feel that a substantial term is called for."

Brunton was arrested in Trenton September 18 when found in possession of gardening gloves and a small bottle of gear oil after employees of a Canadian Tire store pursued him.

At the police station Sergt. Gordon Steenburg released the youth from the cell block to make a phone call. While the sergeant was answering another phone in the front office Brunton made a dash for freedom.

Before he fought Brunton back into the cells, said Sergeant Steenburg, Brunton had repeatedly swung at him, kicked him in the groin, then in the stomach.

"I did slap him several times," confessed the sergeant.

Brunton then vented himself on the cell block and smashed a window.

"That's quite a story," commented Magistrate T. Y. Willsdrfy.

He added he had thought of sending the youth to the county jail.

However, "in view of your age and of course the institution might be more beneficial," he told Brunton.

Brunton was remanded in custody since — the court was told — his father had refused to put up the bail.

Child Has Years to Choose His Profession

TORONTO (CP) — William Lyon Mckenzie King IV hasn't made up his mind yet whether to become a doctor or a politician.

Two W. L. M. Kings—William the fourth's father and grandfather — were doctors. The first W. L. M. King—William's great-great uncle—was Canada's prime minister for 21 years in the period between 1921 and 1948.

As he is only four days old, the latest W. L. M. K. has many years in which to choose his profession.

"This seems like a medical family, so he probably will continue in the same," his mother said in hospital here Tuesday.

"I'll leave that up to him, however," said Mrs. King the former Joan Crutchfield of Shawinigan, Que., whose father, Nelson, played with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League in the 1930s.

The child's father is Dr. W. M. King, great-nephew of the prime minister. His grandfather on the paternal side was Surgeon-Lieut. W. L. M. King, the prime minister's nephew who went down with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix in 1943. His paternal grandmother is also a doctor, Dr. Marjorie King, of Toronto.

Airman Pleads Guilty to Joy-riding

A 20-year-old airman arrested in Belleville driving a stolen car pleaded guilty after he stole a car outside the Trenton RCAF base hospital Saturday night. He confessed to taking an automobile from the same spot September 3rd. It was later found abandoned near the Mcdonald - Cartier Freeway near Brighton.

Cars parked near the hospital, Constable Cliff constable Tom Hulme, usually were left with the keys in the ignition.

Wood also cleared up the mystery of another automobile stolen from a Trenton car dealer June 4 and found wrecked on Highway 2 near Brighton

"The vehicle had rolled over and there was $1,404 damage," said the constable.

"I don't think this is a case for a suspended sentence," commented Crown Attorney John Pringle.

"That's sort of what's on my mind," agreed the magistrate, and called for a pre-sentence character report on the accused.

WANTS BIKE BAN

TORONTO (CP) — Lightweight motorcycles should be banned from major highways where they are unable to maintain the posted speeds, says Fred Ellis, general manager of the Ontario Safety League. Mr. Ellis said in an interview Wednesday that such vehicles are a hazard when operated at speeds slower than the main flow of traffic.

THE NEW LOOK for North Front Street following a summer of traffic disruption is indicated in above picture looking north toward College Hill from the overhead railway bridge. Services and curbs are completed and paving is expected to be done by end of next week.

Asphalt Workers Will Soon Be Busy on North Front St.

After a summer's disruption of traffic as contractors installed new sewers and other services, built new sidewalks and widened the street right-of-way, it's getting near the end of the road for this year's reconstruction on North Front Street.

The new curbs are all constructed and the asphalt layers are ready to go to work.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell stated today that the rebuilt North Front Street roadway from Evans Street at the railway overpass to just beyond Craig Street north of College Hill, is expected to be completely repaved by the end of next week.

Then by the middle of October, it was expected that the new traffic lights at North Front and College would be installed and working.

WILL SEE CHANGE

Motorists will see quite a change in the new traffic lights when they are in place.

Instead of being placed on standards at the right side of the street, the main traffic lights will be suspended from 15-foot arms on concrete poles and will hang directly over the line of approaching traffic for better visibility. Secondary lights on standards will also be placed on the left side of the street.

The overhanging traffic light treatment is also planned for several other main intersections in the city, according to the city engineer.

Benson Gets Nomination In Kingston

KINGSTON (CP) — Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday only a return to the two-party system can provide Canadians with the assurance they won't always have to live under the shadow of an election.

"Our government works best under two parties, one to rule and one to criticize," he said. Debate in the last Parliament was never - ending because small parties representing a small minority were given responsibility "far beyond their intrinsic importance," he said.

Mr. Sharp spoke at a Liberal meeting attended by 400 persons which nominated Revenue Minister E. J. Benson for the third time to contest Kingston riding in the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Benson, who campaigns under the slogan "I'll make no promises but do the best for the country," first won the riding in 1962.

Odd Fellows Honor Member At Kingston

TRENTON — More than 500 members of the I.O.O.F. Lodge from across Ontario met in Kingston this week to honor a member of the Trenton lodge, "Ed" English. Patriarchs conferred upon Mr. English a Degree of Chivalry, which is given only to those members who have themselves given outstanding service to the lodge. Mr. English has seen 20 years' service with the I.O.O.F.

Present at the impressive ceremony were E. D. (Ded) Topping of Trenton, Grand Conductor of the Ontario Grand Lodge; Morley Irwin from Trenton and Wilmont Rose of Frankford and their wives.

Last Sunday, local Odd Fellows, led by Noble Grand Morley Irwin, decorated graves of deceased members in Mount Evergreen cemetery.

For this week, the windows of the Trenton I.O.O.F. hall on Elgin Street, have been decorated. The one display is an Emblematic display, listing the names of deceased members. The other display is of the Good Samaritan, depicting the benevolent work done by the I.O.O.F. and the sister lodge, the Rebekahs.

Members of Trenton IOOF Lodge, No. 113, donate proceeds of euchres held on the last Saturday evening of every month, to a fund for cancer, tuberculosis and polio victims. Local members, as well as members of the Rebekah Lodge, to Queen Lodge donate each year towards sending a district high school student on an educational tour to the United Nations.

Canvassers For Blind Out in Force

TRENTON — Canvassers for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind started a week campaign of door-to-door appeal for funds here today. Mrs. S. O. Graham heads up the canvassers, and overall chairman is Lieutenant Sprague, who is chairman of the local CNIB welfare committee and also sits on the Hastings County CNIB board. Mrs. Paul Hope is handling the canvass in Middleton Park and Bayside.

Mr. Sprague said today there are 18 blind persons in Trenton alone—four of these are children—and between 170 and 180 in Hastings County.

The children are sent away to a special school for the blind in Brantford. Blind adults are sent to Toronto for special training and may also be sent to metro area to work in sheltered workshops.

For those who may remain at home, special necessities or comforts are provided by the local committee. Braille watches and repairs to these, money for medicines, assistance with rent, and in some cases money for food is also provided by the local group.

Mr. Sprague said a person who suddenly becomes blind may lose his or her "sense of purpose" and become very dependent. Field secretaries for the CNIB and local persons interested in the work, visit blind persons and try to bring the person back to normal.

Home teachers instruct women in sewing, leather work and other skills which may be handled by the blind.

The Trenton Lions' Club regularly provides transportation to blind persons in Trenton for twice-monthly visits to the White Cane Club in Belleville, special visits to the hospital and other necessary or recreational trips.

"We hope to raise $3,300 or $3,400 in Trenton to carry on our work," Mr. Sprague said today.

South Trenton Cubs And Scouts Gather

TRENTON — Last week a special evening was held for Cub Pack. Guests were greeted at the doors of North Trenton Sixth Trenton Scouts and 6th School by Mrs. Leather, Cub assistant and her Cub , Pack. The "going-up" ceremony in the auditorium saw three boys move into the Scouts. They were Michael Blande, Larry Will and Andrew De Solaro. Four boys received their Tenderfoot Badges and Necker chiefs from Scoutmaster Al Wall. They were Michael Marsh, Ted Brown, Gary Outingtyke and Craig Wood.

A committee meeting was held following the ceremony. Mr. K. Hicks called the meeting to order. Mr. E. Jones gave the treasurer's report. The Scouts would appreciate some consideration being given to a canoe for next year's camping trip.

A letter of thanks is to be written to the Kiwanis for transporting boys from camp.

The need of assistants for both Scouts and Cubs was stressed.

Four new committee members were elected into the meeting: Mr L. Will, Mr. G. Blande and Mr. and Mrs. G. Brown. Plans for a paper drive were discussed briefly.

Give Contract For Building C of C Office

TRENTON — The contract for the construction of a permanent Chamber of Commerce office on Front St., has been awarded to the James D. Coad Construction Company of Trenton, Mr. Coad hopes to start work on the riverside site donated by the town, next week.

The Chamber executive, headed by president George Kempf, hope to keep the cost of the building under $10,000. Donations of materials for the building have been promised and there is a hope other town merchants may donate materials, and other interested persons, cash, towards the cost of the building.

The building will contain an office for the secretary-manager, Nostrand Sprague, an outer office where tourists may ask for information, a board room where the executive may meet and two washrooms for the convenience of the travelling public. Parking space for the chamber members use and for the tourists has also been provided.

Home for Aged In Town Possibility

TRENTON — At a special meeting of town council tonight, Mr. N. Noble of the Ontario Department of Public Welfare will discuss the possibility of building a home for the aged within the corporation. ## Student Pressures

High school and university students today are under heavy pressure to succeed. The competitiveness of our business order and the complexity of a scientific age contribute to this. And parents often compound the problem, on the one hand by disinterestedness and on the other by over-enthusiasm, thus increasing the normal tension to which young people are subjected.

Over the years this has led an unknown number of young people to the brink of despair and even suicide. An educational system that can achieve such a disastrous end must be suspect in some if not all respects. A social order that places such a high value on achievement — or else—must share the blame.

This is not fanciful talk. It is a situation recognized by those in a position to know—educationists, doctors and the students themselves. For example, Dr. L. W. Downey of the University of British Columbia told a meeting of the Canadian Education Association in Fredericton last week that the pressures of modern education have led to an "appalling increase" in the number of student suicides. He gave no figure but said his statement was based on a confidential study undertaken while he was head of the secondary education department at the University of Alberta.

"We have become overly concerned with the mastery of specific and often unrelated subject matter—at the expense of our avowed intention of fostering creative and critical thought and of developing the fullest the unique potentialities in individuals."

It was revealed at the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Medical Association that suicide is the largest single cause of death among Canadian university students, and that virtually all the students who take their own lives are male.

Dr. D. L. McNeil of Calgary said: "I think the young man is especially subject to the stresses of our modern society. . . . We are put under a strain. There is the demand for success, family pressures, and sometimes a very real economic factor."

Dr. G. E. Wodehouse of Toronto said he thought most students judged themselves, and life too rigidly.

"We criticize our youth for being irresponsible, but they are actually taking themselves and their responsibility too seriously."

And Toronto Globe and Mail columnist Richard J. Needham said on the same theme:

"Only one person can be the first in anything; only a few can get to what is called the top. We can't all be perfect at all points, many of us are imperfect at some of them; many of us are imperfect at all of them."

Noting that the world's great thinkers have always warned against taking oneself and life too seriously, taking "success" too seriously, Mr. Needham said the Canadian students will stop killing themselves (literally or figuratively, as the case may be) when they learn to stop hating themselves, looking down on themselves, driving themselves—and allowing other people to drive them . . .

How do the educationists propose to correct this situation? Well, Dr. Downey gave an interesting clue at the Fredericton meeting. He said that in the school of tomorrow the trend will likely move toward a system of educational inquiry rather than emphasis on achievement, and the "natural inclination of the human to inquire, to know and order his world will be the starting point."

A Thinking Machine

George Philips, general manager of a consulting firm associated with the Illinois Institute of Technology, predicts that a machine will be developed within a couple of decades that will be capable of creative thought.

At the moment the human brain has an edge over the computer by reason of this creative faculty. Computers can only function moreover when fed the necessary information. Hence the need today for computer "programmers."

The machine envisaged by Mr. Philips will have an IQ of 120. Machines will also do the day's work, but man apparently will still be required to use some of the grey matter.

Thus the man, instead of the one who works hardest, probably will be the one who just sits around and thinks, but thinks creatively, allows his mind to range in every aspe.," said Mr. Philips.

Who knows, machines may become so human that they will need to adopt mottos like Honi Soit Qui Mae Y Pense, or Evil To Him Who Evil Thinks.

It was in 1936 when I worked in Calgary, the pay was $20 a week, and getting that much regularly made me one of the aristocracy, what with dust, drought, depression and debt . . . Today, for all the changes and expansion (it's the fastest-growing city in Canada) the basic nature of the place is the same—high and breezy under a big blue sky, air like wine, unlimited vistas, bald hills rising to the spectacular backdrop of the Rockies; friendly, folksy people who feel sorry for us poor slobs living in Toronto.—Globe and Mail columnist Richard J. Needham.

Can the Liberals Stay Put And Forget Fisher's Past?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If the Lakehead's remarkably talented Socialist maverick Douglas Fisher is really through with Parliament and isn't going to have one of those dramatic obviously sour changes of mind and heart that seem so to confront political fashion — what then?

Declining to take him at his word that he'll be devoting himself to private business and family affairs, some of the more political gossips have whispered that after a cooling-off period, he'll be joining the Liberals.

Perhaps later to enter the Cabinet.

Could be.

And the Liberals like mavericks, even the Conservatives — would dearly love to have him, with his well-recorded instinct for Parliamentary know how, particularly his capacity for the devastating attack.

But it isn't going to be easy for them to embrace this bard of a man, who, perhaps more surely than anybody else in the Commons in recent years, knew how to go, with swift, deadly accuracy, for the political enemy's throat.

There'll have to be a lot of pride swallowed. For there's a great deal to be forgotten and forgiven.

Douglas Fisher hurt the Liberals.

He was only doing his Opposition job — possibly better than almost anybody else in the House of the New Democratic or the Conservative ranks — and he deeply damaged the Government.

ONE TWO THREE

He has worked them over many times since the first crack to the Capital as the Giant-Killer who took the long, large measure of Prime Minister C. D. "Trader" Howe.

But the time he gave the Liberals that most turned Ottawa's was little more than a year ago in the hilarious hassle over the documentary "Mr. Pearson."

He revived the old ghost of "arrogance" that did so much in the 1957 election to topple the St. Laurent Government and set Uncle Louie into retirement.

But this last time, he made "arrogance" read the "divine Right to Govern."

It is all there in Hansard, every acid word of it, as he dripped his scorn on the bowed heads of the Liberal Cabinet.

They think they're administrative geniuses — they boast of their know - how, but all they can do is everlastingly flub."

Then he tore this strip off the Liberal Backbench:

"Look at them, just look at them sitting dumbly there waiting the fatigue smashed heads of the Cabinet as they see one Minister after another getting into trouble."

Finally, in laughing contempt, this dismissal of "the incompetent," as he likened the lot of Liberals, Front and Backbench alike:

"They don't like criticism. They simply can't take it. They haven't got the skin for it. When they were in Opposition you couldn't stop them. They were in there knifing, but once in power again, and they want to get back to the good old pre-1957 days, with Blair Fraser (of Maclean's Magazine) parroting all those honey phrases on them as the greatest collection of statesmanlike talent in Canadian history. Haw haw haw."

POOR MIKE!

Then he pitied Mike Pearson.

He was skewering Tom Kent, the Prime Minister's Montreal-year Brain Truster, at the time observing with malevolent delight how he "no little" his shabby mothers the poor Prime Minister."

Douglas Fisher spared few on the Government side of the Commons, and that's what made him a man the Liberals feared perhaps more than any body else, yes, including even Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

Dief overlastingly attacked Fisher only occasionally, but more memorably.

He did his most destructive job on Finance Minister Gordon.

"Poor Walter," they said when he was finished, "he'll never be the same." And it took the Finance Minister two years and two Budgets, this last with a tax cut, to recover.

It was Douglas Fisher, lonesoning it around as usual, who spotted three "strangers," eating daily in the Parliamentary Restaurant where only MPs, Senators and a privileged few get to dine.

To Douglas Fisher, one of the three really wasn't all that much a stranger — they had known each other in college — so they chatted, and out it came.

The stranger was one of the "Bay Street Boys" who worked with Walter Gordon on his first Budget, breaking all the rules, customs and traditions of super secrecy, supposedly up to then, surrounding budgetary preparations.

Yes, Douglas Fisher was a good Parliamentarian, a great man in Opposition. Not every body liked him — but they did give him marks as a skilled political craftsman.

But how much can the Liberals take in scorn, contempt and dislike and still welcome to the ranks the man they so hated and feared.

History Actually Stutters

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: There's no more dangerous combination in the world than a tiger in the tank with a jackass at the wheel.

I'm not sure I think how foolish our language may sound to others — foreigners are baffled by it, I know, for a while as "three years old," for they wonder how we can speak of "three" as being old.

It is a prime fallacy to believe that more money, more or less equally distributed to teachers, will give us a better educational system; these things can help only if we can understand and agree on what constitutes a truly educated person.

What other nations think of as our arrogance is usually just our clumsiness of size; as Toynbee once observed, "America is the place friendly dog is very small room, and every time it wags its tail, it knocks over a chair."

The fact that man alone, of all creatures, is aware that he must die, is enough to make a qualitative difference (and not merely a quantitative one, as the mechanists believe) between us and all the lower forms of animal life.

The peoples who have so much to say to each other while they are courting won't be able to imagine what happened to their inexhaustible fund of dialogue after they have been married a few years.

We may feel that "history repeats itself," but in a way the time it is only stuttering — the war it finishes was begun two years earlier, the revolution it consummates was conceived two despotisms ago.

It is a common fallacy to think that something more difficult is necessarily more meritorious; but a man can speak a year engraving the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin, and all he has in the end is a pinhead.

Fame often contains the seeds of its own downfall, when a man begins living off the capital of his reputation, rather than investing more energy in his character.

A person who is obsessively concerned with being "in the swim" usually defeats himself by his very concern — for nothing is more fatal to popularity than an evident overeagerness to appear popular.

The scientific positivists of today have not yet learned what Thomas Hardy said nearly a century ago: "Anyone who is practically acquainted with scientific circles will be aware that those who refuse to go beyond fact rarely get as far as fact."

All of us years to be regarded more deeply than on surface appearance; even the beautiful eventually become tired of being taken at face value.

To Your Good Health

Child of Three Has Had Eczema Over Two Years

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 3-year-old daughter has had eczema since she was 7 months old. Doctors prescribed a lotion to use several times a day, but she still has the disease. It is on her arms and neck, and sometimes on her ears.

Should I have her take tests to see whether there's a food allergy? Could her being fat have anything to do with the problem. She weighs 37 pounds. My husband is in the army, so the family doesn't always have the same doctor. — Mrs. R. P.

* * *

Eczema, like some other ailments, is a general term that can mean different things. It is a skin disorder — but the problem is to pinpoint the cause.

Except for transient skin irritations, a lotion isn't the answer although it naturally helps to relieve itching while a diagnosis is being sought.

Frequently a food allergy is the cause of eczema in children, so your suggestion of tests is quite intelligent.

However, in contact allergy may be involved — a reaction to something she touches. The fact that the trouble is confined mostly to her arms and neck could be a clue in this direction.

Wool, silk, or other fabrics are known to trigger such a skin sensitivity, as can something in the fabrics, such as dye or sizing or whatever.

Skin tests may give a definite clue as to either type of allergy — food or contact. Consult an allergist.

I doubt if weight would have any important bearing on the eczema. But when a child shows a tendency to pack on pounds, the earlier you start normalizing weight the better. And the easier. Just reducing the amount of fat in her diet, and cutting down a bit on starchy foods, may be sufficient. (What about sweets? Pop, candy, cookies? These aren't necessary for health, but they account for a lot of overweight.)

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: After her first week in college my daughter has come down with mononucleosis. I enclose 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your booklet on the subject.

What are the chances on a relapse? — E. H.

The booklet will set your mind at rest on that question. Very modest medical care plus nourishing diet and adequate rest until she is back to normal are sufficient insurance against a relapse.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: You said that drinking copious liquids helps prevent kidney stones. What liquids? — Mrs. L. M.

Water! Water in any form. Plain water, the water in soup, or in tea, or coffee, or pop. For practical purposes, the only liquid I don't mean is alcohol.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can a chain smoker develop chronic bronchitis? I have been treated four times in two months for the disease. Is there such a thing as bronchitis other than from chain smoking or asthma? — Mrs. D. G.

So you're a chain smoker? Certainly you can develop bronchitis, because the smoke keeps irritating the bronchial tubes. However, a non-smoker can develop bronchitis from other causes — plus some inherent sensitivity or weakness.

If you have bronchitis and the doctor tells you to stop smoking, don't be silly. Follow his advice.

"Tips on How to Stop Smoking," by Dr. Molner, will help you give up the habit. To receive a copy of the booklet, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 188, Dundee, Ill., enclosing with your request 10 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 30, 1965 . . .

A papal bull re-established the Roman Catholic hierarchy of bishops in England 115 years ago today — in 1850 — in the attempt to follow up the reform movement which had abolished many of the civil restrictions on English Catholics. The following year Parliament, which makes popular support, passed an Ecclesiastical Titles Bill, which forbade any Catholic priest or bishop to use a title any British place name. This bill was never enforced and was repealed 20 years later. However it did stay certain high offices, such as that of sovereign, are prohibited in Britain to Catholics.

1799 — Henry IV of England was crowned while Richard II was still alive.

1846 — Ether was first used medically as an anesthetic.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1915 — Lord Derby took charge of British recruiting; it was announced Britain was canalized to date on the Western front totalled 301,262, including 11,779 Canadians.

Clara Bow Was 'It' Girl

Windsor Star

Modern examples of young feminine pulchritude sometimes act as if they created sex appeal. It is as old as Eve, though some women possess it, or show it, more than others — and this has been true down through the ages.

It seems long ago that Clara Bow, dead at 60, exemplified sex appeal. To simplify the situation, she was called the "It" girl. No one ever defined precisely what "It" was that she had which other women hadn't, or which she had in greater measure. This, we suppose, is because sex appeal always has defied exact definition. It differs from woman to woman both in quantity and quality.

Clara Bow's death, recalls something else. We now are in a period of short skirts. But that was true when Clara was in her heyday in the flapper era. And feminine legs look just as they did 40 years ago.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 30th, 1945

Canada has emerged as a producer of fine pork products sending her hogs to market at an improved price, and she means to keep in place the record she won in war on the hog can markets of the world.

Figures tell the story of markets and export. In 1939, Canadian hog producers marketed 3,706,379 hogs, and 187,854,500 pounds of them went overseas in the form of bacon and hams. Last year, the Dominion's marketing reached 6,883,178 hogs and 695,757,400 pounds went to Britain and hungry Europe — the highest production and export in history.

Wartime need was a big factor in this record overseas shipment but agriculture officials say the quality of Canadian Pork Products — a far cry now from the heavily cured bacon of the First War — has improved tremendously and has won a place on the British market.

U.S. Image of Canada Unflattering

Hamilton Spectator

There will be general agreement in this country with a White Paper published by the United States Republican congressmen calling for greater understanding of Canada by Americans.

A feeling persists here that Americans generally are only intermittently aware of Canada's existence or take the country for granted. Occasional ripples on the usually placid surface of goodwill—as when Mr. Pearson criticized U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam in a Philadelphia speech early this year — are apt to create more astonishment than anger among better informed Americans.

What the congressmen hope to do—and it is a laudable intention — is to sharpen the image of Canada in the American mind, to emphasize that it is the U.S.'s staunchest ally and a persistent agent for peace, particularly in the United Nations.

It will not be a simple task. It would be easier if more Americans could be convinced of Canada's existence in terms of a growing nation rather than as a hazy sort of Arctic hinterland. . . .

And it might be made simpler, too, if Canadians were not so touchy.

The Merchant - Heeney report, an attempt by an American and a Canadian diplomat to present a mutual working arrangement for both countries through a non-confidential of the problems of, each, received a mixed reception when it was published last June.

It created much less excitement south of the border, which is perhaps significant.

Now the congressmen want to flush it out. They find the Liberal enemy of many of their fellow countrymen about Canada appalling.

This lies at the root of many a Canadian complaint of American indifference. Canadians find a perverse pleasure in repeating old and corny jokes about tourists from the south arriving in July with fur coats and skis. . . .

These are trivialities. It seldom occurs to Canadians that many Americans are as little informed about their own country beyond the immediate area of their homes.

If there is to be a more potent understanding and sympathy between Canada and the U.S. on the government level, understanding and sympathy must extend far beyond the corridors and offices in Washington.

An image of Canada as something more than a remote northern country must be projected for the American people. This is not a task for Washington, but for Ottawa.

Leisure Time

Ottawa Citizen

A popular conception of leisure is that it is an escape from the drudgery and unrewarding work. It is much more than that.

Leisure means freedom for the individual to play, to rest, to create—or to dream. Modern life has tended to broaden the gap between work and enjoyment. Work is usually regarded as something that should be done as possible, while leisure is too often looked upon as lastness.

Navy League of Canada

Fourth of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies of the United Appeal, explaining the function of the agencies and their reasons for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

Heave ho, Up anchor and git Lower and away!

The Navy League of Canada, Belleville Branch, a member agency of the United Appeal, is teaching boys to be men.

For over 50 years the Navy League of Canada has been carrying out its youth-training movement. Begun as a patriotic movement, Sea Cadet training, under the leadership of public-spirited Canadians, proved so worthwhile that it became and continues nation-wide.

In 1941 the Navy League Sea Cadets became Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, with the Royal Canadian Navy assuming its control as established by an Act of Parliament.

The objective of the Navy League is to develop character, good citizenship and patriotism in the youth of our community through a program of training and instruction in naval subjects.

TWO CADET GROUPS

Through a training program laid down by the Royal Canadian Navy, boys are given the opportunity through either the Navy League Cadets, ages 12-15 or the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, ages 16-18, to learn all phases of seamanship, participate in active sports and are encouraged to develop leadership qualities.

There comes a time in the life of each young male, when he can no longer be accused for certain actions by the old pillage, "Boys will be boys." This is the transition between a boy being a boy and becoming a man.

The Navy League does not want the boy to lose either his sense of humor or his zest for life and adventure, but he must use these things so that he is an active and worthwhile citizen who can take his place in any task or opportunity that presents itself.

Not only does the Navy League maintain in the boy a sense of humor and spirit of adventure, but it also inculcates a preparedness for quick response action where there is a need. Such a need may be in the way of community leadership, welfare work, or the proper administration of one's business. It may also, as has happened twice in this century, be in the call to serve in the defence of freedom and a demand for trained leaders and men.

GIVES HIM SECURITY

Dressed in a uniform, every part of which is not only practical but steeped in tradition and loaded with honor, he learns first of all the value of citizenship and faithfulness to ideals and then on to learn the practical value of a benevolent discipline which gives him a security without reducing the appeal to his need for freedom of thought and action. He develops his perceptions for an immediate response with due regard, not only for his own good but that of others.

The Navy League stands for freedom, security and the Canadian way of life. It supports and assists, on a voluntary basis, all worthwhile specialized youth training program; Navy League scholarships to Sea Cadets and former Sea Cadets upon entering colleges and universities; the welfare of all Canadians who go down to the sea in ships, including the operation of hostels and clubs for sailors; and the Navies and merchant navies of the free world.

The United Appeal Allocation is used entirely for administrative purposes of the local branch, together with the maintenance of the League's building on the waterfront and the boats it uses.

Items such as uniforms, holidays and weekend trips are provided through efforts of Navy League Committees and co-operation of senior officers and adult members of the Branch.

Because of the active participation of Navy League Committees, and Sea Cadet Officers, the Area Office, R.C.S.C., in Toronto, established four one-week and six two-week courses at H.M.C.S. Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, for Quinte Cadets.

In the local branch, there are 30 Navy League Cadets and 40 Sea Cadets and a band is being formed at the present time.

The Navy League is closely linked with the Royal Canadian Navy. Officers are trained by the RCN and inspected annually by RCN officers.

The Belleville Navy League Cadets have received a certificate from the United Nations for their outstanding work in selling pens and raising money for the Canada-Mysore Project, a project aimed at raising money to help underprivileged families in India.

The Navy League also places great stress on the teaching techniques and the responsibility and training of water safety ties involved in water activities.

South African Government Puts Brakes on Spending

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — South Africa's economic "great leap forward" of the last three to four years is being rapidly slowed with the government leading the campaign to put the brakes on hard.

From Premier Hendrik Verwoerd down, leading members of the government have warned South Africans that they should stop living it up and realize they are in for a period of earnest consolidation.

At the same time a number of new "put-the-brake-on" measures, chief of them tighter controls on consumer goods imports, have been put into effect. More are forecast.

None of this belt-tightening is likely to be popular with South Africa's white population. In just over 3,000,000, the great majority of whom are accustomed to a free-spending good life.

"Better Money Than a Lie Ahead — It Will Be Another Christmas," ran a typical front-page headline in the Johannesburg Star.

Verwoerd said: "It is necessary for the government to slow down the present tremendous development. In a somewhat slower rate so that we can progress to a development

Finance Minister Eben Donges issued a similar warning that the country was living beyond its means. He appealed to civil engineers to help put the brake on by postponing or cancelling construction projects.

For the ordinary homeowner, whose cost of living has risen noticeably in the last two years, experts foresee: Higher prices for a wide range of consumer goods.

Houses loans are already difficult to obtain and time-payment plans are likely to be increasingly affected.

Labor Votes To Halt Raises In Wages, Prices

By CARL MOLLINS

BLACKPOOL, England (CP) Prime Minister Wilson's Labor leadership narrowly survived a powerful assault by dissatisfied trade unions and left wing dele- gates as the party conference today finally accepted the government's policy to restrain increases in wages and prices.

A resolution to reject the administration's plan to impose a form of wage and price controls was beaten by a bloc vote of 3,625,000 against 2,540,000. The number of votes against the government, however, was the largest on any issue during the current conference.

The 1,200 delegates cast votes for all the membership of the unions and other groups they represent.

It was an indication of the widespread dislike of the policy within the party's rank and file. Major unions, including the Transport and General Workers and the Amalgamated Engineering Union, combined to fight the government's plan. They were backed by leftists who are angered by the party's drift to the right since the socialists came to power a year ago.

STANDING OVATION

Economics Minister George Brown got a prolonged standing ovation when he assured delegates he would freeze wages.

"This is not a wage freeze," he said. "What I want is the planned and orderly growth of incomes related to a planned and orderly growth of production.

"We have been operating the law of the jungle ourselves," he said in reference to union wage claims, "while condemning it for every other purpose."

The policy would require trade unions and industries to give the government advance notice about claims for price or wage increases. This would enable the government's five - month-old national prices and incomes board to apply restraint through pressure and persuasion.

ATTACKED EARLIER

The policy was attacked earlier this month at separate annual meetings of the Trades Union Congress and the Confederation of British Industries. The unions finally gave half-hearted support by voting to submit proposed wage demands to a TUC committee for inspection, and the confederation decided reluctantly to cooperate with the government.

The big Transport and General Workers Union, which includes Economics Minister Brown and Technology Minister Frank Cousins among its leading members, also was a surprise opponent of the government plan to curtail immigration in a vote Wednesday—a move that gained the union allies in opposition to wage restraint.

Reg Freeson said he and 40 other Labor MPs are "seriously considering" whether to vote against the government's immigration plan in Parliament.

Leftist MP Sydney Silverman said any defection from the government in Parliament on immigration might not cause its defeat because the Conservative opposition is likely to vote for the policy.

Gary Merrill Will Run As Democrat

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Gary Merrill said today he'll run next year for the state House of Representatives, and eventually for governor, in Maine.

"I'm not a dedicated actor; I've always been interested in politics and other things," said Merrill.

"I've moved back to Portland. I've had New York and I don't like it here.

"Maine is my state. When I was married to Bette Davis, we lived there and I went to college there.

Merrill, 47, will run as a Democrat in the traditionally Republican state.

Filipino Volcano Growls as Survivors Receive Aid

MANILA (CP)—The Taal volcano buried steam and lava 2,000 feet into the air today while rescuers tried to determine how many persons died in the volcano's eruption Tuesday, and the first rescue parties to reach the island feared most had been killed. But more and more were turning up in refugee camps.

The new burst of activity from the 4,000 foot volcano—4 miles south of Manila—sent thousands of refugees fleeing from the island in the middle of a lake—heightened fears that it might explode with even greater fury.

New evacuation measures were ordered along the lake surrounding the volcano island 40 miles south of Manila.

But some island residents who fled Tuesday's eruption defied the government and returned to salvage surviving work animals and belongings.

People were shot and stabbed in a panic rush to escape the volcano, police said.

Police reported stories of survivors fighting over boats in the desperate scramble as molten rock and lava poured down to the shores of the island.

One eyewitness told how, under a shower of whitehot rocks and mud, he saw a family of six preparing to launch their boat. Five armed men shot them and piled their own families into the boat, he said.

The Philippines constabulary (state police) estimated about 200 persons may have been killed. About 2,000 Filipinos lived on the volcano's slopes, and the first rescue parties to reach the island found most of them dead.

The Philippines constabulary said looters were ransacking houses abandoned in towns near the volcano.

Rescue workers said they found ashes and volcanic debris 10 feet deep in places and saw no immediate sign of human life. Only rooftops showed in some villages.

An accurate death count seemed unlikely, since many drowned trying to flee and other persons were buried by ash and lava that rescuers said would be impossible to remove.

The constabulary said 22,000 persons were housed in emergency camps.

C of C Survey Shows Business To Be Better in 10 Years Time

TORONTO (CP)—Canadians are optimistic about business conditions and believe they will be even better 10 years from now, a Canadian Chamber of Commerce survey shows.

The survey, conducted among 2,200 Canadians was released today at the chamber's annual meeting.

Insufficient exports, excessive unemployment, automation and poor administration or planning were thought to be the main factors which might cause business conditions to deteriorate.

Increased exports and development of natural resources were cited as the factors most likely to give the economy a shot in the arm.

Asked about profits, the average of the 2,200 persons surveyed thought business made a net profit on sales of 10.5 per cent after taxes. Regionally, estimates varied from a minimum of 13.5 per cent in the Prairies to 20.5 per cent in Ontario.

On the average, it was thought that business should only be making 16.5 per cent PROFIT—2.7 PER CENT

Department of national revenue statistics show that in the year 1962, business paid 40.5 per cent tax on profits.

Those surveyed thought the average tax on profits paid by Canadian business was 23.5 per cent and it was thought it should be slightly less—23 per cent.

Department of national revenue statistics show that in the that 1960, 1961 and 1962 Canadian companies made 2.7 per cent after taxes on gross sales or revenue.

Asked how much control government should have on business, most answered that the government should have a great deal of control of cars for the aged, but little control of wages.

One question on the survey was: Why do many competitive brands often sell for the same price?

More than half the people thought normal competitive forces of the free enterprise system were mainly responsible but more than one third considered the possibility of collusion or deception.

Argyll Chapter Holds Dessert Bridge

On Wednesday afternoon the wooden Indian mascot of the renowned Hasty Pees Regiment looked down upon approximately 150 of Belleville's fair sex who were engaged in the two most popular pastimes — eating and card playing.

The occasion was the annual dessert bridge, sponsored by the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E. of which Mrs. Lennox Willcocks is the current Regent.

Having partaken of the many tasty and eye-appealing desserts which were arranged on a table of white linen centred by yellow and gold French marigolds, the ladies were then regaled with a showing of mink stoles and chapeaux, presented by Woodley Furriers, of Belleville.

The models, all members of the Argyll Chapter, were Mrs. Helena Duffy, Mrs. Joyce Till, Mrs. Pat Sayers, Mrs. Marilyn Bristol, Mrs. Susan Campbell and Mrs. Eileen Evans.

HAT AND FUR FASHIONS

"Big Chief Pokeweza-Much" must have been tempted to whistle as mink stoles of every style and shade, and the most chic hats of the new season were gracefully paraded before the large audience. All the glowing autumn colors in turbans, fezzes, small rollers, large brims and even convertible models were by Mr. John Jr., Anita Pinesnilt, Boutique, Mr. Henri and others. They are exclusive with Woodley's, who carry complimentary bags, gloves, scarves and other accessories. The showing was in charge of Miss Hazel Smith and Mr. Richard Woodley.

Mrs. A. S. McConnell gave a running commentary on the styles presented.

Mrs. Leanne Willcocks, Regent, and Mrs. Jean Cunningham, Vice-Regent, received the guests at the door, and all the members of the chapter were outting in their efforts to assure the complete pleasure of their guests. These efforts assured that the dessert bridge was as great a success as it has been in previous years.

Mrs. Jean Cunningham was in charge of the refreshments.

Mrs. Rogers Riedel provided background piano music during the fashion show.

BRIDGE WINNERS

Bridge winners for the afternoon were: high, Mrs. Alice Hart; second, Mrs. Grace Keelor; low, Mrs. M. Wiggins and chic hats of the new season were by Mrs. Bessie O'Neil.

Mrs. Vera Fairman was the lovely door prize.

Proceeds of the event are used for educational bursaries.

The bride was presented with a gift at a social event held by fellow staff members of the Emergency Department of Belleville General Hospital, and two parties were given in honor of the bridegroom by his fellow officers at RCAF Station Trenton, when he was the recipient of appropriate gifts. The latter party was entertained, following the rehearsal, by Mrs. Gertrude Lynch and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Morey at Mr. and Mrs. Morey's home.

Bengert — Lynch

F/O WILLIAM D. BENGERT AND MRS. BENGERT

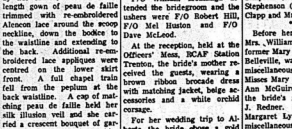
Rev. Father T. J. Boyle officiated at the ceremony in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel that united in marriage Mary Elizabeth Lynch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lynch of Belleville and Flying Officer William Donald Bengert, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bengert of Medicine Hat, Alberta.

The organist, Gary Fitzgibbon, accompanied Ronald Elmy, soloist, in four selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of peau de faille trimmed with re-embroidered Alencon lace around the scoop neckline, down the bodice to the waistline and extending to the back. Additional re-embroidered lace appliques were centred on the lower skirt front. A full chapel train fell from the neckline at the back waistline. A cap of matching peau de faille held her silk illusion veil and she carried a crescent bouquet of gardenias, golden garnets, white feathered carnations and trailing ivy.



Miss Katherine Lynch, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Lynch, sister of the bride, Miss Mary Simpson, cousin of the bride, and Miss Mary Ann McGuire. They were dressed alike in a floor-length gold brocade gown with elbow length sleeves, scoop necklines, fitted bodices and straight skirts gathered in small pleats at the waists. They wore gold brocade bow headpieces with gold veiling and carried cascade bouquets of bronze, butterscotch and yellow mums.

F/O William Mennings attended the bridegroom and the ushers were F/O Robert Hill, F/O Mel Hunton and F/O Dave McLeod.

For her wedding trip to Algonquin Park the bride chose a gold wool dress with matching jacket, brown accessories and an orchid corsage.

On their return, the couple will live at Semmeterre, Quebec.

RENEW AND MAKE DO

Dear Susanna: Would you believe it, I get as much enjoyment from using my imagination to renew and re-arrange items in my home as I do out of acquiring new things.

On the inside of my cupboard door above the area where I roll out my baking, I tacked a little clear plastic envelope (one is easily made out of saran and sticky tape. It is absolutely the handiest holder in the world, when I'm cooking and baking, in which to prop up whatever recipe from my card file I happen to be following. Be sure to first insert a square of cardboard the same size as the envelope to keep it from sagging.

Since my bedspreads always wear across the top first, I now change the things from the bottom to the top, square off and hem the bottom and turn it end for end. This way my spread is reversible when it is only partly worn out and therefore gives almost double wear.

Along the front of my make-up drawer I put three thumb tacks to form a long skinny triangle. This holds my nail file nicely so that I don't have to go hunting for it everytime.

I nailed a metal spice rack onto the inside of my broom closet door. Not only is it a handy container of flavorings and spices but I store medicines there that should be taken at mealtime.

Keep the ideas coming to us Susanna, and we'll keep them resound to you. Best wishes, Mrs. E. Fox

Here at last is that ideal spot for before-and-after-meals! I'm a vitamins, tonics and pepper-uppers. Easily available yet up high and well out of reach of any small types with big ideas about joining the ranks of the pill takers. — SUSANNA

Both couples were asked to take seats of honor and an address was read by Mrs. Arnold Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell read a humorous poem. Presentations were made to both couples.

Bride-to-Be Given Shower

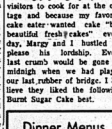
An informal program was opened by Reed, sung by Mrs. Roy DeMille and Mrs. George Wood. A humorous reading was given by Mrs. Milton Shaw and Mrs. George Wood conducted a contest.

Mrs. Keith Bray read a poem composed by Mrs. Betty Workman especially for the bride-to-be.

Kathleen was given a seat of honor and presented with a corsage by Mrs. R. Bray.



The bride-to-be received many lovely gifts for which she gracefully expressed her appreciation.

BURNT SUGAR CAKE A FAVORITE

Last week I gave you a recipe for a four-egg white cocoanut cake that I made in Muskoka.

Because I had such a crowd of hungry young people and visitors to cook for at mealtime and because my favorite cake eater wanted cake "big, beautiful fresh cake" every day, Margy and I hustled to please his lordship. Every last crumb would be gone by midnight when we had played our last rubber of bridge. I believe they liked the following Burnt Sugar Cake best.

THURSDAY

Lamb Stew with Small White Onions and Carrots; Buttered Noodles; Shredded Cabbage and Green Pepper Salad with Mayonnaise; Melon Ball Fruit Cup;; Cupcakes; Coffee.

SUNDAY

Boneless Rolled Ribs of Beef (see Friday); Horseradish Cream; Cauliflower au Gratin; Sliced Zucchini; Tossed Lettuce and Sliced Cucumber Salad with Sour Cream Dressing; Iced Fruit Bowl (see No. 3 Wednesday); Fancy Crackers and Cheeses; Tea.

BURNT SUGAR CAKE

Burnt Sugar Ingredients:

¾ cup granulated sugar, ½ cup hot strong coffee.

Batter: 3 cups sifted cake (or all-purpose) flour, 2½ teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons single-acting baking powder, ¾ cup butter (or margarine), 1¾ cups granulated sugar, 2 eggs — yolks and white separated, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

To Caramelize sugar measure the ¾ cup amount into a heavy frying pan or saucepan and slowly heat, stirring gently until it is melted and a rich gold. Remove from heat. At once, carefully pour in hot coffee. This will sputter and steam so be careful. Return to low heat and stir gently until caramel re-melts and blends with coffee. Let cool to room temperature while you mix the batter. Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Cream together until very light the butter and sugar. Beat in egg yolks, one at a time, with vanilla between additions. Measure out ¾ cup of the burnt sugar syrup and add it to the milk. Add one third of dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with one-third of the milk-caramel mixture, beating well between additions. Continue until all are added. Stir in vanilla. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into batter until smoothly blended. Bake in two 9" layer cake tins (or one 9½ x 8¼ x 2" pan) lined on bottom with wax paper and buttered. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 30 minutes for layers; longer for square cake — nearly 45 minutes. Cool in pan for 2 minutes, then turn out on cake rack to cool, peeling off wax paper.

Frosting: Cream ¼ cup butter, beat in 3 cups sifted icing sugar and about 1/3 cup remaining burnt sugar syrup — enough to make of spreading consistency. Add shake of salt and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Spread between and on top and sides of cake. Sprinkle top with chunky bits of walnuts or pecans. Or spread cream filling between layers: Combine ¼ cup sugar, ¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt. Stir in 1½ cups milk and 2 egg yolks and cook stirring until thick. Cool. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Whitfield — Whitmore

F/O W. R. WHITFIELD AND MRS. WHITFIELD

FRANKFORD — A pretty fall wedding was solemnized recently at the bride's home, 6 Scott Street, Frankford, when Judith Anne Whitmore, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Whitmore of Frankford, and Flying Officer William Ronald Whitfield of Greenwood, Nova Scotia, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitfield of London, Ontario, were united in marriage. Rev. H. M. Beach performed the double-ring ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Miss Sue Anne Wallace of Toronto.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length bridal gown of white peau de soie with Empire waistline and three-quarter length sleeves, enhanced throughout with seed pearls. She wore a shoulder length tulle veil caught up by a headdress of peau de soi with decorative seed pearls and carried a cascade of red roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Vlasta Rabel of Frankford, who wore a floor length gown of green peau de soie with Empire waistline and matching headband and carried a cascade of bronze Shasta daisies.

Groomsman was Lieutenant Larry Mills of Belleville.

The reception was held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, Belleville.

For the wedding trip to the Maritimes, the bride chose a bone colored white wool suit with aqua accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

The couple will reside in Greenwood, Nova Scotia.

Successful Living

Independent Boy Must Be Allowed to Grow

DEAR DORIS: When we married, my husband legally adopted my son from my first marriage, who will be 16 next month. They have always gotten along well, as my husband is of the type that all children seem to take to.

The boy is entering grade XI this term and is taking automotive engineering. He took a part time job at the gas station last year; how all this vacation time he has worked practically full time.

His dad feels he should buy all his own clothes, pay school fees etc, himself, as he is making good money, and is banking some of it as well. It was because he bought an old car to work on, after he started at the gas station, that his dad said if he had "money to waste" on that, he could buy his own clothes, etc.

DORIS CLARE

Now, I feel we could go half on his school supplies, or clothes, but his dad won't hear of it. I guess I'm too soft-hearted, but he is a good boy and has never caused me any worry, and always tries to co-operate with us, but is of a very independent nature. We have always discussed things with him, and he and his dad have agreed on this financial set up, but I seem to feel we are being mean with him as he is only 15, but like all teenagers (bless 'em) tries to act so much older.

I hope you can help me settle my mind on this, Doris. — MIXED UP.

* * *

DEAR MIXED UP: I'm on the side of the boys — father and stepson. If your lad has the money stashing will give him greater incentive than to carry his weight. He wants to grow up. Let him. It would be mean to mollycoddle him now. Full marks to that wise dad!

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I'm 49, and married to my second husband. I have three married children, I am raising his daughter who is 11. We have so many debts it'll take till he draws his old age pension to pay them up.

I have a chance to help in a grocery store but when I'm behind the counter and see people in front of me I freeze. I'm afraid to make change and afraid to make a mistake.

I'd like very much to try but I'm afraid of the public. I need the money so badly while my little girl is in school. Or would you suggest anything else for me to do? — BACKWARD.

* * *

DEAR BACKWARD: The grocer thinks you can do it, doesn't he? It simply isn't that hard. Raising a family is much harder.

Get your best woman friend to help you go through the motions of making change. Practice some addition and subtraction. Laugh over it with her in the privacy of your own kitchen.

It' come easier. Anyone is likely to have little jitters the first time he or she handles other people's money. Get acquainted with the grocery stock and give your customers a smile. They'll soon be sold on you.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:

When a woman changes her name by marriage:—

(1) Is it compulsory (legally) that she also change her name on her savings bank account?

(2) Can she legally open a new account under her maiden name?

After only three weeks of marriage the couple separated. However, because this separation is only by mutual consent, and not by law, I am concerned for the woman. Maybe she should protect her savings by keeping it banked under her maiden name. — PUZZLED.

* * *

DEAR PUZZLED:

(1) No. As long as the name of the account corresponds with that on a cheque, and signatures correspond, the bank will honor such a cheque and such an account. Movie actors often assume other names, and have such accounts.

(2) Yes. But if she were to die suddenly, no provisions of her will could be related to any account in another name than the one she gave by.

You forget that her married name is hers, not his. Dorothy, who is John Smith's wife, is Dorothy Smith, and Dorothy's account is not accessible to John, unless it is a joint account. But since you fear this, why not have her move her account to another bank, where he wouldn't even know of its existence?

* * *

DEAR DORIS: It's my legs. They are the ugliest in my area, and I'm not exaggerating one bit. I remember reading in your column about a girl with bowlegs who did exercises which improved them. Do you think exercise would help me? My knees are really big and I never am at ease in company because all the others, even the boys, have nicer legs than I do.

I'd love to wear shorts and bathing suits but don't dare do this.— PLEASE HELP.

* * *

DEAR PLEASE: One lassie moans over too-bony knees; another because they are crooked, or bowed, or knocking together. Wearing off a little extra fat should be relatively simple. Exercises are in their way to you.

And here's my message to all who are knee-deep in despair: Don't, for goodness' sake, miss out on fun by avoiding bathing suits, shorts, and other sporty attire. Do what you can with exercise and posture practice, then forget it. The popular lean is the one whose main thought is for all the other young hopefuls; not for herself.

* * *

(Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemma. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Mother's Helper

TAKING small children on picnics can be spoiled by slapping insects. Youngsters' skin is so tender they seem to get more than their share of bites! Take along an insect repellent—either rub-on or spray type—for their little arms and legs. We also keep an antiseptic and a tin of bandages in the glove compartment of the car. ## Alouette Club Holds Corn Roast

Last Friday, the French Alouette Club for Belleville and region began its social activities for the fall season with a corn roast.

About 80 members and friends gathered for the occasion at the St. Joseph's Parish Hall in Belleville, which was well decorated for the event. Mr. Leo Boisvert, vice-president, in the absence of the president, Mr. James Hallquist, welcomed the guests.

Mr. Michel Thiffault was in charge of the program as master of ceremonies. First, husking of the corn took place and it was an active and exciting moment. Mrs. Lucille Notting and Mr. Bernard Cote were the lucky ones in finding the red corns on cob thus becoming the queen and king of the evening. After being crowned officially in front of their "subjects" they were offered souvenirs of the event and invited to start the dance.

During that time, corn was roasted and as soon as ready, a contest was conducted as to who could eat more corn on cob blindfolded. The winners were Miss Cecile Cote and Jean-G. Desrosiers of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Levesque of Trenton. They were presented with gifts for their performance.

Dance, plays, music were enjoyed by all and French songs by the Alouette club choir were well received. Miss Diane Cote, Messrs. Ludger Briand, J. A. C. Berube, Claude Huard, Marcel and Bernard Cote provided the music suitable to each occasion.

The door prize went to Mr. Leo Boisvert, who on behalf of the club and its entertainment committee thanked all for their participation in this first event of the season.

Fluid Movement Characterizes Dance Dresses

Evening sees both the short and the long, the soft and the tailored dress making an elegant entrance for fall.

The sari-influenced one-strdder dress appears in short and long versions, in every type of elegant fabric from chiffon and lace to brocade, satin and cloque.

In the same mood are strapless or little-strapped gored evening gowns with asymmetrically draped bodices.

Dismiss me with the classic bofed skirts for long and feminine evening looks, and the slim, shaped and draped long dress in a floaty fabric, such as chiffon has a competitor in the crisply tailored sheath, ankle gown of voile perweight flannel accented by velvet or satin.

The Cinderheure dress dances on its way into autumn with fewer frills but more fluidity than ever. The bows, ruffles and fringe that once characterized this type of dress are giving way to the pure shape of dresses meant to move, in supple fabrics, glowing colors, bias cuts.

Instead of frills, today's dance dresses have such accents as cutouts on long, slim sleeves, or contrasting bands of color extending along the sleeves and down the sides.

Church Groups

VOTA VITA MISSION CIRCLE

Victoria Avenue Baptist Church

A record attendance gave an enthusiastic beginning to the fall program when the president, Mrs. W. Sobie, presided at the September meeting of the Vota Vita Mission Circle. Following a sing-song led by Mrs. A. Gazley, the business session dealt with reports from committees, and the minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. C. Smith.

Members were reminded of the fall rally to be held in Park Street Church, Peterborough, on October 12th, and the Baptist Women's World Day of Prayer on November 1st.

Mrs. G. Woodcock gave a brief account of her experiences at the Big Chief Lodge Retreat.

Mrs. A. Wynne, in news flashes, told of attending a gathering in Calgary this summer where 20 missionaries from foreign fields answered questions and discussed their work. She also gave a report on the newly elected president of the Baptist World Alliance, Rev. Wm. Tolbert, Jr., who is also vice-president of Liberia, pastor of two churches in Liberia, and a leader in many outstanding enterprises.

FIVE PEMBROKE

The program for the evening was under the direction of Mrs. G. Grenke's group. Mrs. A. Reilly's devotional stressed the beauty of the commonplace, and the importance of small tasks. A duet by Mrs. Hagerman-Prayers followed, after which the group rendered a choir selection.

Miss Marjorie Hales presented a most interesting account of the beginnings and progress of a new church in Gibsons, B.C. from a letter sent by former member Mrs. Mace Rigby. Also a tape recording was heard from Rev. and Mrs. T. Morikawa of the Onwegan Indian Reservation. Mrs. Morikawa, the former Nancy Mitchell of Angola, told of the activities of the church, in which Indian hymns are sung in Mohawk on Sunday evenings. Rev. Morikawa told of the Reservation, with 8,000 population on 11 square miles, situated on the banks of the Grand River near Brantford.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Field Naturalists View Films

The September meeting of the Quinte Field Naturalists was held last Monday evening at the Entomological Laboratory, with Miss Florence Fitzgerald presiding.

After the business, Mr. I. Knight reported on the F.O.N. and presented two interesting films. The one, "The Flower and the Hive" was most informative, shows the life of bees and the formation of the honey. The other film "Life in the Deciduous Forest."

These were most enlightening and the evening closed with a social hour, provided by Miss Marion Fisher and her committee.

BUY GRAPES SOON

Grapes should be bought in small quantities because, unlike many other fruits, they do not improve in color or quality after being picked.

What Women Are Doing

Bay of Quinte Squadronettes

Mrs. F. Yealland, Commander

The Bay of Quinte Squadronettes was organized in 1962 as an Associate Group of the Canadian Power Squadrons. To be eligible for membership it is necessary to have successfully completed the Piloting Course of the Canadian Power Squadrons. Piloting the group this year as commander is Mrs. F. Yealland, Crestview Avenue.

The purpose of this group is to promote and assist the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron in it objectives and to establish a high standard of skill in the handling and navigation of boats, and to encourage the study of the science of navigation.

Local Squadronettes have competed in international competitions with American Squadronettes, sometimes successfully, sometimes not, but always in a spirit of good fellowship.

The Bay of Quinte Squadronettes was the first such group to be formed in Canada. It also has to its credit some firsts in achievements. The first woman in Canada to earn the rank of navigator was Mrs. Kay Smith of Belleville. During the past year it was the first group to initiate a series of lectures in the public schools, known as Canadian Juniors Safe Boating Course.

New members are welcome and it is hoped that more women will be encouraged to join their husbands in the, C.P.I.S. lectures commencing at B.C.I. V.S. Monday, October 4.

This is the 27th in a series about women's organizations in Belleville and their activities.

OMA Brief on Working Mothers Called "Sneaky Generalization"

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario Medical Association suggestion that working mothers are bad mothers is "a sneaky generalization," Robert Henry, assistant director of Toronto's Weardendale Treatment Centre for Disturbed Children, said in an interview Wednesday night.

In a brief to the Ontario legislature's select committee on youth Wednesday, the OMA said that neither a day nursery nor a baby-sitter can fill the gap left when a mother works. A lack of "mothering" can lead to serious emotional disturbances in later life.

Mr. Henry said working may release tensions for some mothers, making them better parents than they would be if they stayed home.

"The working mother is here to stay. She didn't cause emotionally disturbed children. They're caused by inadequate parenting of all kinds."

ISN'T JUST MONEY

Mrs. Michael Sabia of St. Catharines, president of the Canadian Federation of University Women, said women work not only because of financial necessity but for fulfillment.

"It (the brief) sounds like a lot of rubbish," she said. "Are the doctor's suggesting that the sole reason for a woman's existence is her biological nature?"

The medical association brief attacked the large number of mothers it said work only to have extra money to spend, and asked the legislature's committee to support the thesis that a child's need for the presence of the mother is such that it should be curtailed only when absolutely necessary.

Maternal care was the most important of all environmental factors affecting a child's emotional health, the OMA said. It was effective when a child was most vulnerable and basic emotional patterns were beingsaid down.

Emotional deficiencies in persons who have difficulty relating to others or society are among the effects of deprivation of proper care by the mother or an adequate substitute, the brief added.

Contraceptive Pill Approved By Drug Act

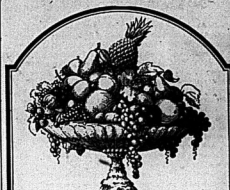
TORONTO (CP)—A new low-dosage oral contraceptive pill will be available in Canada Nov. 1, G. D. Searle and Co. of Canada Ltd. announced Wednesday.



The pill, approved by the food and drug directorate in Ottawa after 10 years of clinical research and worldwide tests involving 4,300 women, will be available on prescription, Dr. Douglass, Dr. Harold Hutchings, the company's medical director, told a press conference.

Called Ovulen, the pill contains only one milligram of active ingredient, compared with two, fife, 10 and 25 milligrams in previous oral contraceptives.

C. N. Herold, vice-president of the Canadian company—located in Brampton, where Ovulen pills will be produced—said cost of the pill to the user was expected to be "less than current oral contraceptives.

Ann Landers

Cameras Too Candid Says Photo Finisher

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have something to say to the great American public and I know of no better way to reach them than through your column.

I work in a large drug store as a photo finisher for color snapshots. Every day I see thousands of pictures. I am one of four finishers so you can multiply my story by four and keep in mind, ours is only one drug store and there are thousands in the country.

ANN LANDERS

It is shocking how many people take pictures of half-undressed and undressed people and gag shots which are in shocking taste. Some of the stuff is downright pornographic.

Well-known people in this town keep bringing in film which would shock a mule-skinner. I realize, Ann, that a person has to be a little sick to take these pictures in the first place, but if they knew how many pairs of eyes saw them before they left the drug store they'd be a whole lot sicker.—YOUR FRIENDLY FINISHER.

* * *

DEAR FRIENDLY: Your letter should be a flag to these sick exhibitionists. A not-so-friendly finisher could finish a few careers if he felt so inclined.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are torn between his loyalty to his parents and an opportunity to advance in his firm. Wy don't promise to take your advice but we'd like to hear what you have to say.

John and I have been married six years. We have three children. John's parents live two blocks from us. They are good people, not the interfering type, and we all get along fine. The problem is they have few friends and no interests other than our family. Their lives are centred around us and our children.

John's company wants to send him to another state as a district manager. It would mean an impressive promotion and a substantial salary increase. My father-in-law says if John will pass it up and remain here he will make up the financial difference. He says money isn't everything and their lives will be empty without us. Comment please. — TORN.

* * *

DEAR TORN: True. Money isn't everything — but there's more involved here than money. Like independence. It is unfair of John's parents to try to keep him from advancing because they want him in town.

I believe he should accept the promotion. His parents can come to visit you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My mother has a friend who has had two years of psychology. She thinks this makes her an authority on everything.

This friend has turned my mother against several of my boy friends because according to her, "You can tell all about a person by studying his face."

Tom was sneaky, she said because his eyes were close together. Harold would never make a good living because he had a receding chin which was a sign of weakness.

Bill's forehead was low, which meant he was not intelligent.

Bob was mean and stingy, she could tell this from his thin lips.

Chuck, she insisted, came from peasant stock because his neck was thick and his hands were large.

Ben, she warned me, had murder in his heart, as evidenced by his stubby thumbs.

Is there anything to this? Please say yes or no. Thank you.—MERCEDES.

* * *

DEAR MERCEDES: No. And you're welcome.

* * *

"The Bride's Guide," Ann Landers' booklet, gives authoritative and complete information on how to plan a wedding. To receive your copy of this comprehensive guide, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 35c in coin.

100,000th Immigrant Welcomed

TORONTO (CP) — A shy, young, beaskind ballet student arrived at Toronto International Airport from England Wednesday and was greeted by an RCMP escort, John Nicholson, minister of citizenship and immigration, and Prime Minister Pearson.

She was Elspeth Whitley, 20, Canada's 100,000th immigrant of 1965, and had come to audition for a place in the National Ballet of Canada.

After a welcome on the airstrip, Miss Whitley was escorted to the airport's VIP lounge where she met Mr. Pearson, who was waiting for a flight out of Toronto. The welcome had been planned three weeks ago when Miss Whitley made the 100,000th formal application for entry as a landed immigrant.

"What are you going to do here" the prime minister asked.

"I'm going to audition for the National Ballet of Canada," the dancer replied.

"Then you'd better meet her, not me," Mr. Pearson said, gesturing to Celia France, artistic director of the National Ballet, who had come to the airport to meet Miss Whitley. The prime minister introduced the two.

COL. PHAY WILLS BRANCH

The Col. Phay Wills Branch, No. 587, Royal Canadian Legion (Ex-Servicewomen) held the first meeting of the fall season last Monday evening at the Legion Hall on Pinnacle St.

Comrade Janet MacDonald, the president, opened the meeting in the usual manner after which the ways and means chairman, Ina Rollins, announced that there would be a "hard times" dance towards the middle of October with Danny Fairman's orchestra to provide the music. A rummage sale is also scheduled for the near future.

The annual church parade will be held to St. Thomas' Anglican Church on October 17. Members are to meet at the church at 10.50 a.m. and proceed on into the church.

Since Remembrance Day is fast approaching the branch is again taking part in the Poppy Campaign. This is one of the Legion's most important projects which provided for needy veterans and their families.

GORE PROVED TOO REAL

EDINBURGH (CP) — Critics praised the realistic production of Macbeth at the Edinburgh Festival but it was too real for Margaret Waddell, sitting in the front row. When she came out of the theatre, she found her suit spattered with stage blood from the battle scene. The management footed her cleaning bill.

Short Course In People-Size Bedding Buymanship

Aren't all beds people size since people sleep in them?

That's true as far as it goes. But people have changed. They've simply gotten bigger. The average height of men reached 5' 10" this year, up from an average of about 5' 8", during World War II, according to the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers. Increases in weight and body dimensions of both men and women have more than kept up with the growth in stature.

People's attitudes have changed too. The compact car is declining in popularity and the standard-size car is on the upswing. People are demanding bigger bedrooms in new houses.

Yes, people have changed but their bedding hasn't. Untold millions of married couples battle nightly for sleeping space in the so-called "double" bed that gives them only the same space they had in their cribs. And millions more average height Canadians have their toes cramped by the too short standard length of 75 inches.

What, then, is people-size bedding in 1965?

It's 39 inches of width per sleeper and a length 9 inches longer than he is.

What bedding arrangement gives this for one sleeper?

A regular twin bed if he's not over 5' 6". If he is, a long twin—80 or 84 inches — should be selected to give 9 inches of toe room.

What arrangement gives people-size sleeping for two?

You start with a king-size headboard to which you attach two steel swing-away frames. On these you put two twin box springs. Now you have a choice. To go over the box-springs you can buy either a 77" x 80" (or 84") king-size innerspring mattress or two twin-size innerspring mattresses (80" or 84" lengths).

How big a room do I need to go king size?

Anything 12' x 14' (if windows and doors are reasonably well arranged) or bigger will do fine.

KING-SIZE BED and other furniture fit easily into 12' x 14' room. There is also wall space for dozen to two closets and bathroom.

What's my choice if my room is smaller?

Don't despair. A 60" x 80" queen-size bed will give you 5 square feet more space and it will fit in any room holding an old "double" bed. Your dealer can show you how your present "double" bedstead can be arranged to accommodate queen size.

Do I need new bedroom furniture to go people size?

Not necessarily. To go king size all you really need is a king-size headboard. This can give a lift to your whole room since it's the smart thing for the headboards not to match the furniture now.

What are my choices in headboards?

Traditional wood still predominates, but brass-plated or enamelled steel is gaining. A good choice is an inexpensive plastic-upholstered headboard which you can cover to match your drapes or bedspread.

Will long mattresses fit my twin beds?

Yes. Extenders will let you use the 80- and 84-inch innerspring mattresses.

What should I look for in new people-size bedding?

Any bedding is only as good as the support it provides. Ideally, the body should be supported so that the spine is always perfectly aligned. Since your hips and shoulders are the heaviest parts of your body, good bedding compensates with buoyancy and body conformability which keeps the spine straight. Only the coiled springs of an innerspring mattress can provide this kind of support.

Why are the box springs important?

The box springs are paired in construction features with the innerspring mattress. They are important because they are the foundation that supports the mattress which supports you.

A cautionary word: never try to economize by using old box springs with a new mattress.

How much should I spend for people-size bedding?

Considering that you spend about one-third of your life on it, and that it lasts many years, even the most expensive bedding is a bargain. Like almost everything else, the quality of mattresses and box springs is commensurate with price. Buy the best you can afford. The most expensive bedding you can buy will cost you only a penny or so more per night over its useful life than the cheapest kind. And you'll enjoy the benefit of top-quality bedding through the years.

RATE YOUR BEDROOM

Are you completely satisfied with your bedroom? Hardly anybody is. This quiz will give you a profile of your room's good and bad points. "Measure Your Mattress Month" is the ideal time to bring it up to modern standards.

SLEEPING. Let's face it. That's what a bedroom is for. It will never be any better than your mattress. All your answers should be "yes."

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Width — does it give 39 inches per person? This rules out the old "double" bed for two sleepers. | ☐ | ☐ |
| Length — is it at least 9 inches longer than you are? If you're over 5' 6", you need the 80- or 84-inch length. | ☐ | ☐ |
| Age — is it less than 10 years old? Most mattresses are old enough in years to register for college. | ☐ | ☐ |
| Condition — is it free from sagging borders, lumps, bumps and body slumps? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Appearance — are you proud to take the cover off it? Is it free from sideway, broken stitching, rips and tears? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Buoyancy — does it support your weight without any sinking feeling? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Resilience — is it good at give-and-take? Does it spring back eagerly when pressure is released? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Comfort — is it pleasant to sleep on even in very hot weather? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Individuality — is it tailored to fit your sleeping needs — soft, medium, firm or extra firm? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Recuperation — do you wake in the morning feeling refreshed? | ☐ | ☐ |

LIVING. Is thought given for all-day enjoyment of your bedroom, or do you just have to improvise with catch-as-catch-can?

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Is there a relaxation spot for reading, sewing or just loafing? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a place with comfortable chairs for morning coffee and bedtime snacks? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a chaise younge for those precious feet-up minutes during the day? | ☐ | ☐ |

COMFORT. The old idea of why bother much with a room in which you spend most of your time unconscious is passe.

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Is there a dressing area complete with private bath? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a room air conditioner for year-around comfort, close-window quiet and control of dust and pollen? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there lighting control to permit dimming or brightening lights to suit different moods? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there accessibility to a private sun-deck or patio? | ☐ | ☐ |

CONVENIENCE. With more and more demands on your time, things that save you time and trouble are well worth while.

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Is there an automatic coffee maker to help get the day off to a good start? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a clock-radio to let you go to sleep to music, wake you to music and turn the coffee maker on? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a bedside telephone? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is there a portable television set so you can feel less guilty about staying awake to watch the late late show? | ☐ | ☐ |
| Is opening your closet doors a dread? Use the wealth of organizing devices to bring order out of chaos. | ☐ | ☐ |

RATING. No need to get mathematical about it. You can tell where your weak areas are. The merchants advertising in these pages will be glad to help you do something about it.

Will I have to replace all bedcoverings?

Not necessary. Except for fitted sheets, "double" bed coverings are usable on twin and queen sizes. Twin-size coverings can be used on long twins.

What about king-size bedcoverings?

These were once a problem, both in availability and price. Now nearly every good-sized store stocks king size, and the price is only double that of twin size. King-size sheets and pillow cases come in colors and patterns.

What size sheets do I need for people-size beds?

Fitted sheets are ordered to same size as the mattress. If you're not sure, measure your mattress.

Flat sheet sizes are long twin 72" x 120"; queen 90" x 120"; king 108" x 122".

The king size, about 36 inches long, comes in the traditional shape and the bolster type with rounded corners.

What about people-size mattress covers and pads?

These are readily available at reasonable prices.

What about people-size blankets?

You have a choice of regular and automatic blankets. The electric blankets usually have dual controls so that he can sleep warm and she can sleep warmer. The new thermal blankets — they look like mesh and are often made of cotton — also come in people sizes.

What sizes in regular blankets are needed?

Long twin 66" x 90"; queen and king 108" x 90".

What sizes in electric blankets are needed?

Long twin 66" x 90"; queen 80" x 84"; king 103" x 90".

What about people-size bedspreads?

No longer do these have to be custom made at custom prices. You can buy them in stores in a wide choice of fabrics and colors. If you use twin-size mattresses with a king-size headboard, you can use two twin-size spreads or cover both with a king-size one.

Long twin 82" x 115"; queen 105" x 120"; king 120" x 120".

Bedrooms in Dreamy Colors

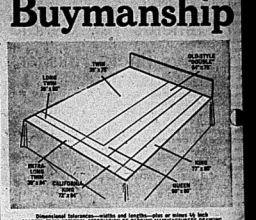
After the practical purchase of bed and bedding, you may let your imagination roam, because today you can buy the prettiest and most colorful bed linens ever made.

A bedroom is not only for sleeping. It's usefulness has expanded, although its dimensions in many cases have decreased. Cool colors, such as greens and blues, create the illusion of space and spaciousness. Fundamentally, the colors which are most flattering to you in fashion are the ones you should choose for this important room.

Leading psychologists have taken tests proving colors and designs help us relax and rest. Dressing the bed in these sheets adds to the charming atmosphere you plan to create. "The Look" in your bedroom can be varied with solid colored pillow cases to top sheets for special decorating effects.

The most important thing to consider in buying sheets and pillow cases for your beds is the material. You have your choice of cotton, linen, silk, synthetics, and synthetic blends. Of all of these, cotton leads the field. The yarn used and the thread count per square inch are the factors determining quality.

Muslins, which are usually made of carded cotton yarns, have a thread count of 128 to 140 threads per square inch — are medium weight and sturdy, but naturally, coarser to the touch.



Percale cotton sheets have a fine combed yarn content and a count of 180 threads to the square inch — which means they're soft to the touch. Light in weight, they're easy to launder.

Pima cotton sheets are made of extra fine combed yarn. Used primarily in luxury sheets pima cotton counts from 180 to 200 threads per inch. Perfect example of this quality sheeting is Tiara by Springmaid. This is the first all-pima cotton sheet with a 220 count! It is available in apricot, aqua, pink, blue, yellow and white.

Good news is that stores stock sheets for king-size beds in many lovely designs. These over-size sheets were once "special" with prices to match. Now prices are comparable to standard-size beds, allowing for the extra material required.

Average requirements for a basic bed linen wardrobe are:

- 8 bottom sheets
- 8 top sheets
- 12 mix-match pillowcases
- 3 bedspreads
- 2 winter blankets
- 2 summer blankets.

Dimensional tolerances—widths and lengths—plus or minus ½ inch
ADAPTED FROM NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BEDDING MANUFACTURERS DRAWING

GREAT VARIETY of bedding sizes have outmoded the old "double" bed for two sleepers. Longer, wider sizes give space for sleeping.

PENNIES A DAY

Even the best innerspring mattress costs only pennies a day over its useful life.

NEW TREND

Architects predict a new trend in housing will be more livable, multi-purpose bedrooms.

October Is Month to Buy Bigger...Sleep Better

Everywhere during October you'll see the famous Linit "ring" emblem - character reminding you that We Measure Your Mattress and the time to stock in king-size, people-size beds.

Just a few years ago even rich could not enjoy the wealth of space and comfort in sleep equipment now on the market. Innerspring mattresses and box springs have been greatly improved during the past few years by a concerted effort of the bedding industry. The improvements are nearly all in the inner construction of the bedding where you can't see them.

You don't have to actually get out a tape measure to realize how little space you may have to live practically one-third of your life. If you're like most people, you haven't made any real progress since your birth. If you share an old-style "double" bed, you have the same 27 inches of sleeping space you had in your crib.

Actually, the average adult sleeper needs 39 inches of width. This is automatically provided for by a twin bed for one sleeper or by a king-size bed for a couple.

Adequate width is only half the space for sleeping story. If you're over 5'6" the out-of-date "double" bed's 75 inch length is too short for you. Long-twin and king-size beds come 80 and 84 inches long. Choose a length that is your height plus at least 9 inches pillow and toe room.

We seem to have a thing about our beds. Families that want the latest in interior decoration, clothes and cars are perfectly content to put up with beds that are completely out-of-date in style and probably too worn out for healthful, restful sleep to boot.

As one authority puts it, "we all know families living in $30,000 homes, driving $4000 automobiles — and sleeping on $50 bedding. It just doesn't add up! They wouldn't go around in tight shoes — yet many people sleep in beds that are uncomfortable because they are too small in size."

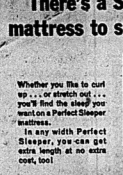
The cramped-space bedding story is bad enough, but the condition of the too - small bedding units in use is appalling. Bedding-industry research reveals that there are at least 27 million mattresses that are more than 16 years old. They are overage, obsolete, and obviously no longer capable of providing proper support to give the restful sleep a woman needs to revitalize and rejuvenate her beauty and youthfulness, and that a man needs to restore his vigor and energy nightly.

So, in millions of homes there is an opportunity to move up to people-size bedding and at the same time replace bedding that has outlived its usefulness. (A word of caution here: don't pass along your old bed! It's either in the family or outside. Whether you're motivated by economy or charity, don't do it.)

People-size bedding for one sleeper means a twin bed at least 9 inches longer than he is. For two sleepers the choice is a king-size bed — consisting of twin steel bedframes hinged to a king-size headboard — or separate twin beds. Select the 80- or 84-inch length that will be at least 9 inches longer than the taller sleeper.

Naturally, you want to be sure that a king-size bed will fit in your room. It will if the room is at least 12' x 14' and doors and windows are sensibly placed. Even if your room is not big enough for a king-size bed, all is not lost. You can get 5 square feet more space for sleeping in a queen size than in the old "double" style. The queen's 60"x80" size will fit in a 9'x9' room.

Another queen-size bonus is that in many cases your present bedstead can be adapted to fit the queen-sized inner - spring mattress and box springs.



Since it's a modern trend for the headboard not to match the bedroom furniture, your switch to king size need not mean all new furniture.

Remember one thing. The innerspring mattress and its companion box springs are the heart of your bedding ensemble. Here if ever, is no place to skimp on quality. Over its useful life, the best bedding you can buy will cost only a penny or two more a night than a lower-quality set. And you'll enjoy the comfort and luxury of first-class bedding right from the start.

One Man's Bed Is Same Man's Sofa

Not in beds alone does modern man sleep. In countless millions he takes his nightly repose on the same piece of furniture he sits on during the day. While these sleek dual-purpose sleep pieces obviously descended from the daybeds of our fathers's time, they bear little resemblance to the cumbersome in styling, luxury and comfort.

Modern dual sleep equipment has solved the problem of the spare room. The trend in building now is to eliminate the occasionally-used guest room and put the space saved into larger, more livable bedrooms for the family.

When there is a guest room, dual sleep equipment allows regular use of the space as a study or sewing room. The dual-purpose piece transforms into a comfortable bed for overnight guests.

Just about any upholstered piece of living room furniture may convert into a bed. Sofas transform into beds for two sleepers. Some of them offer the luxury of king size. Chairs and hassocks turn into single beds.

Old - time dual sleep equipment came in a style called "Hide-Now convertible sofas come in all styles, and the best-qua.liy pieces in a regular sofa.

According to the National Cotton Council, most convertible beds are made of cotton and the spring construction is also likely to circulate freely. Upholstery fabrics stay firmly in place on cotton cushioning, eliminating the "ill-fitted" look of fabrics after the bed is covered back to a sofa.

STYLISH LOOK of 1965 dual-purpose sleep equipment, like this sofa by Simmons, makes it indistinguishable from regular living room furniture. Sofa converts into a comfortable bed for two.

Don't Hope That Spring's Eternal

You use your mattress more than anything else in your home. What other household item do you use eight hours a day every day of the year? While you may think of your mattress as something essentially inert on which you just lie all night long, sleep researchers have found that each of us gives the mattress rough treatment.

For one thing, we shift position 40 to 50 times a night. Just imagine sitting in an upholstered chair for eight hours and bouncing our weight around in it 40 or 50 times. The chair would have to be well-designed, well-engineered and well-made of high-grade materials to stand up under this punishment.

The same is true of your mattress. Quality innerspring mattresses perform the way they do night after night because they are made to strict scientific standards. Adherence to these standard is assured by quality-control tests and inspections from raw material to finished product.

Steel spring wire is, of course the most basic material for innerspring mattresses and box springs. While a steel spring is one of man's simplest and most dependable devices, its performance can be guaranteed only by precise manufacture and testing of the wire.

If you had the opportunity to go through U.S. Steel's big, modern rolling mill, you would be amazed at how much testing and inspecting is done during every step of production.

Don't hope that spring's eternal! Springs lose some of their resilience over the years, and wear and tear take their toll on other mattress materials. If your bedding doesn't look and feel the way it should, why not look at some new innerspring mattresses and box springs now? At the same time you can bring your space for sleeping up to modern standards. That means a twin bed for one sleeper and a king-size if a bed is shared. And don't forget about the length. Anybody over 5'6" needs the 80- or 84-inch length.

Pass-Along Is Not Playing The Game

People will admit that among our common characteristics are kindness and generosity. Yet we practise some zany economies.

We might be insulted if a friend offered us an old coat, but surveys prove there is a ready "market" for pass-along mattresses. Surveys also reveal that at a time when children need a smooth, well-supported comfortable surface on which to sleep, their parents "grandsize" them to a mattress of an average age of 9½ years.

The awful truth of the matter is that unconsciously many of us establish a used - mattress pattern for our children by insisting, as their sleeping habits become more dependable, that they move to a different — although-not necessarily better — bed.

Actually, some 98 percent of mattresses passed along within households go to children under 13. Because they are young and healthy, youngsters seem to be able to sleep soundly on the proverbial board. A board would probably be better for their skeletal growth than a lumpy, saggy mattress.

Let this, then, be your commandment: Thou shall not pass along thine old worn-out bedding. Many communities have self-help agencies which employ handicapped workers to remake discarded household items for charity dispensing.

Call one of these to pick up your old bedding.

The second meeting of the Melrose 4-H Club was held on Sept. 27 in the basement of the Melrose United Church. The pamphlets " Fun with Flowers, Etiquette, and Table Service and Manners," were given to each girl.

Mrs. Mac Lester and Mrs. Roy McLaren the leaders, demonstrated the packing of a suitcase. For group work the girls practised writing thank - you notes. The discussion was based upon entertaining a guest, being a guest, thank - you notes, and packing a weekend bag.

For a home assignment, the girls will work on their record books. The next meeting will be held October 2 in the church basement.

Liberals Wait For Guy Dupuis To Make Move

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal party source said Wednesday the Liberals are trying to get Yvon Dupuis to make the first move in St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville riding.

Mr. Dupuis, former minister without portfolio in the Pearson cabinet, was drummed out of the Liberal party when he became involved in criminal charges of influence-peddling.

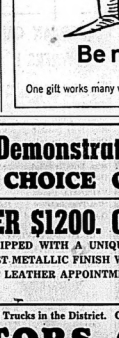
He has said he plans to run in the riding in the Nov. 8 election.

The source said Liberal headquarters will wait until Mr. Dupuis holds a nomination meeting before deciding on its next move.

Guy Favreau, president of the Privy Council and head of the Quebec Liberals, has said Mr. Pearson and he will name the official Liberal candidate. There would be no Liberal nominating meeting in the riding.

Jean David, former editor of Montreal La Presse, has indicated he is willing to run as the Liberal candidate against Mr. Dupuis. However, Mr. Favreau has said there are several "volunteers."

There has also been a report circulating within the Liberal party that the Liberals may not put up a candidate against Mr. Dupuis if there are strong indications that the Conservative incumbent will run away with the riding. This could be done simply by letting the Dec. 5 official nomination day go by without entering a candidate.



QUEBEC (CP)—The trial at Sherbrooke, Que., of Yvon Dupuis on influence - peddling charges cannot be started before the middle of November, a provincial justice department spokesman said Wednesday.

It could only be held that early if a special session of the criminal assizes in that city were called, the spokesman said.

A justice in St. Johns, Que., Tuesday ordered that the site of the trial be changed to Sherbrooke from St. Johns. The next regular session at Sherbrooke are scheduled for January.

Gordon Challenges Senator To Quit Senate and Seek Seat

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon Wednesday challenged Conservative Senator W. Wallace McCutcheon to quit the upper chamber and run for the House of Commons in the Nov. 8 federal election.

And he suggested that his own Toronto riding of Davenport would be a good place for the senator, a critic of Mr. Gordon's financial policies, to seek a nomination.

Mr. Gordon, Liberal campaign chairman, issued the challenge with a chuckle when asked by reporters at a campaign briefing what he thought of the senator's criticisms.

Senator McCutcheon has said that election of a Liberal majority would be dangerous for the country because it would give the finance minister the chance to continue what he terms anti-American and anti-business policies.

Mr. Gordon said he pays little attention to Senator McCutcheon's speeches because: "It he meant what he said . . . he'd have the guts to resign from the Senate and run.

Mr. Gordon said the Liberals had nominated 178 candidates as of Sept. 29 and a full slate of 265 is expected by the end of next week.

He said the party is running the campaign on a lower budget than in the 1962 and 1963 campaigns, mainly because there was less time to plan for this election than for the others.

Mr. Gordon said it is his guess that all parties aside from the New Democrats will have less money this time.

He said the reason Prime Minister Pearson is starting his campaign slowly and later than other leaders is because in the past there have been complaints about campaigns being too long.

"We decided, and Mr. Pearson agreed . . . since he is campaigning as head of the government it would be a good time to give an example of a campaign shorter than two months."

He did not think this put Mr. Pearson at a strategic disadvantage.

Mr. Gordon said that the government's medical care insurance proposals will be given emphasis, and a Liberal majority will be interpreted as a mandate to implement a program.

Asked whether the government could not have implemented the medical care program with its minority in the last Parliament, Mr. Gordon said he thought some parties were not "wildly enthusiastic about it—certainly not the Conservatives."

Mr. Gordon said the prime minister will make a statement about financing university education after the government receives the Bladen report, expected about Oct.

U.K. Will Not Be Pushed Out of the Middle East

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

By suspending the constitution of Aden and booting out the local administration, Britain has clearly indicated to Gamal Abdel Nasser and Arab nationalists that Britain is not to be pushed out of the Middle East. The crisis in the little colony near the southern tip of the Red Sea has been whipped up by unceasing terrorism aimed to be encouraged and supported by Nasser's United Arab Republic and by local Arab extremists which wants British military forces to pull out of Aden.

This, in effect, would cripple British influence in the Middle East and might even reduce British effectiveness in Southeast Asia and particularly in Malaysia which in turn has been weakened by its rupture with Singapore.

But while Britain has expressed the goal of bringing its dependence to the South Arabian protectorate, including Aden by 1968, there would be no question of whether Britain would be willing to pull out of Aden at this time. A United Nations committee on colonialism has recommended Britain yield Aden base as well.

In diplomatic working sessions that have broken down for want of unanimity, the British position appears to have been one of trying to urge Aden to form part of an independent federation of some 30 states which would have a sympathetic link with London.

Britain then would have reason to hope its military base in Aden would remain intact.

But the majority view in Aden opposes joining the federation and opposes continuance of the Aden base.

Britain still is attempting to recover from an international raid on the pound. The Labor administration has publicly stated it is renewing its so-called East of Suez policy. Many in Britain would like to see Britain's base folded in the Middle and Far East, with the leader of the tiny Liberal party even suggesting that such bases merely bring nothing more than unprofitable hardship and war.

Prime Minister Wilson's government in British suggests Britain show its mailed fist; that it should not be driven out of the Middle East by threats and murder.

Prime Minister Wilson seems to agree. He says it is still his Labor government's aim to get out of South Arabian Federation independence by 1968, but this must be done through orderly stability and security—not through murder and terrorism.

In effect, Britain will stand its ground. It will be up to the Nasser forces to attempt to outmaneuver the British military position in Aden.

Diefenbaker Sets Gruelling Pace In First Five Days of Campaign

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker has completed the first short leg of his campaign trail—a five-day grind through the Maritimes and Quebec—and his initial pace threatens to leave his entourage in a state of physical exhaustion.

After five days, nothing stood out more than stamina. But many of those who followed him were too tired to notice.

Whether the 70-year-old campaigner can keep up the gruelling grind for more than five weeks remains to be seen. He says he can. "I never felt better in my life."

Mr. Diefenbaker's main schedule for the first five days included three major speaking engagements, at Halifax, St. John's, and Brownsburg, Que.

He spoke for 65 minutes in a hot Halifax auditorium where 2,000 packed the place. About 700 Newfoundlanders heard him go on for 30 minutes in even worse heat in St. John's. At Brownsburg, some 70 miles east of Ottawa, Mr. Diefenbaker had to pull on a heavy sweater before beginning a 40-minute talk in a 45-degree arena.

SET TORTUOUS SCHEDULE

But it was between the speaking engagements that the campaigner set himself the tortuous schedule.

Up at 6 a.m. Friday, Sept. 24, he was in Montreal for a 9 a.m. press conference, in Halifax two hours later for an airport reception, in Dartmouth two hours after that for another reception, a series of meetings over dinner, and then his speech that went on until 10:30 p.m.

After that he met party workers and did not get to bed until 1 a.m.

Mr. Diefenbaker was said to be at work before 7 a.m. Saturday, and he held another press conference two hours later. He left for St. John's, Nfld., at noon, shook hands with about 300 people at the airport there, and got into his hotel in time for dinner.

Another series of local meetings, and the Conservative leader was ready to speak again. He finished at 10:30 and went immediately to a reception until midnight.

By 8 a.m. Sunday, with his hat perched jauntily on his head, Mr. Diefenbaker was walking briskly in the St. John's waterfront to see the Portuguese sailors cleaning their masted vessels. Then he was off to a fire hall where he was treated to a demonstration of pole-sliding.

Time for church. Mr. Diefenbaker read the lesson in the Baptist church at St. John's, and raced immediately to the airport. Within minutes of take off for Halifax he left the first-class compartment on the plane and talked to reporters who were in the economy section.

He also visited the plane's cockpit because the co-pilot, Doug Evans of Toronto, was the son of a woman who had lent Mr. Diefenbaker a chair once used by Sir John A. Macdonald.

By coincidence, Peter C. Newman, author of The Renegade in Power, was visiting the cockpit at the same time. The author and his subject met at close quarters for the first time since the book came out two years ago and the first greetings were exchanged.

"Hello," said Mr. Diefenbaker. "Hello," replied Mr. Newman.

TALKED ABOUT CHAIR

Then they both talked to Mr. Evans about the chair.

Mr. Diefenbaker left Halifax in his private railway car at 7:15 p.m. Sunday and he was greeting some 200 people in Truro two hours later.

At 7 a.m. Monday, when the first groggy reporter raised his blind, he saw Mr. Diefenbaker, wearing an engineer's cap, striding along the platform at Campbellton, N.B., to meet the train crew.

More than a dozen times during the day, he was jumping off at station platforms to meet anywhere from eight to 150 people. He shook hands with about 600 by the time he reached Montreal where another 100 or so waited. He was in bed by midnight.

At 6:15 a.m. Tuesday the hotel switchboard operators began phoning reporters with the message that Mr. Diefenbaker was leaving half an hour ahead of schedule, and they were to board their bus by 7:30.

This started the most exhausting day of the campaign. Driving some 200 miles through the Laurentian mountain area, Mr. Diefenbaker addressed a meeting gathering at St. Adolphe, visited school classrooms there, and then went 35 miles to Harrington for the same thing over again.

Another 45 miles took him to a roadside restaurant to greet another welcoming committee. He stayed long enough to grab a sandwich before visiting two factories, and speeding an hour and a half on an open market place. This was followed by another reception.

Then, finally, at 5:45 p.m. he went into a motel room for half an hour.

After this break, he went to a Legion reception in Lachute, and then four miles to the Brownsburg arena, where his speech ended at 10:30 p.m.

MAKE CANCER ADVANCE

WASHINGTON (AP)—A one-two punch employing radiation and surgery has resulted in dramatic advancement in the control of cancers of the tonsils and soft palate, a Texas doctor reported Wednesday. Dr. Gilbert H. Fletcher, chief of radiotherapy at the University of Texas' hospital and tumor clinic at Houston, said the method employs cancer - killing doses of radiation from cobalt or a high-energy accelerator, followed in six weeks by surgery.

SPORTS SLICES

Betty Ingram's golf broom did not sweep the district tournament slate entirely clean but it brought a lot of silverware and glory to the Bay of Quinte Country Club's trim woman champion this year.

Betty, who believes that golf is a great sport but a good cigar is a smoke, enjoyed her best season this year on the links since she swung her first club thirteen years ago.

BETTY INGRAM

Betty caused a mild furore at the Waterdown Country Club when she up and beat Dorothy Slegg a year ago. An amazed newsbound approached her. It was perhaps the first time he had seen a woman puff on a cigar.

"What's wrong with it?" asked Betty. "I understand a certain royal princess occasionally smokes one of these."

"She must be a nut," quipped the scribe.

"Well, then, so am I," back-quipped Betty.

She recovered from what she called a bad attack of "wood" trouble early in the season to win several major women's tournaments from Grandview to Perth.

Apart from winning tournaments, perhaps her biggest golfing thrill came when she finished in the top sixteen to qualify for the Ontario Women's Open Championship at Kingston. She was eliminated by one of Ontario's best after a tough, hard-fought round.

Another spin-tingling event came when she set the Country Club's course record for women—which she still holds—with a brilliant 77.

Betty admits she has had "good days and bad days" on the firing lines, but not the smallest feather in her well-appointed cap of achievement which bespeaks more than average amount of consistency, is her seasonal average of 81.

This was indicated in three of her toughest tournament stints of the year. She swept the Peterborough Golf Club and the Kawartha Golf Clubs women's field day honors but had to go to the 19 holes respectively. She carried the Quinte flag to victory in the Perth Country Club tourney after going to the 20th hole.

Over Watertown way they're beginning to look with some degree of amazement at the slim trim gal from the Bay of Quinte. Twice, I think they were consecutive victories, she took top honors at Watertown Ladies' Invitational Tournaments.

Add the Trenton RCAF and Grandview field days' titles and the 1965 Quinte ladies' championship and you've got the majority of the golfing gems in her seasonal crown.

She took interest in and played in the Business Girls' Golf weekly tournaments inaugurated two years ago by two other well-known "Betty's", Walmsley and Weymark, and this year donated a trophy for the event.

She will take added interest next year. I understand she has been named ladies' division games co-captain with the "skipper" Betty Walmsley, who served her games' "apprenticeship" last season with the 1966 women's president, Claire Hopwood-Jones.

WRESTLING

The ad card calls it "The Battle of the Brutes, An Explosive Main Bout." To me it looks like a miniature third world war.

This is no right-against-might affair. It's rough-against-tough." There could be blood-letting, scalp-raising and muscles shredded into hamburg.

In a thundering closing session of the current wrestling season, they've matched the Bloods Rondabella, Rougis and Terry Garvis, against the Masked Mayhemmers called "The Hangmen."

There's as much love lost between this foursome as between a couple of bull moose in mating season. Last week they fought it out after getting the help of a Hangman in a six-man tag-team affair, turned on him after being beaten and almost alive-ared, shattered and spattered him.

There's none of this good-guy stuff. It's muscle-and-mayhem and mayhem-and-muscle.

And don't go away. The "Mad Mongrel" will also be on tap. This guy will help baffle Mike Derman tangle with Roger Littlebrook and Frenchie LaMonie in an hour's "death battle" of the mighty midgets. This is a show-stealer in itself. The little fellas have always been great crowd-pleasers here.

In the hors-d'ouvres department there are two thirty-minute limit bouts.

Koufax Blanks Reds; Dodgers 2 Up

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sandy Koufax, whose dazzling curve and fast ball have brought him lost about everything a pitcher could want now has a fork-ball.

He displayed it Wednesday night, fashioned a two-hitter and gaining his 29th triumph as Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Cincinnati Reds, 2-0 for their 12th straight victory and increased their National League lead to two games over San Francisco Giants.

The Giants lost 8-4 to St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday and now face a four-game, season-ending series with Cincinnati. The Dodgers play their last four games with Milwaukee Braves. If they win only two of them, the Giants have to sweep all four of theirs to gain a tie.

"Try hard to tell one game of Sandy's from another, he's so consistent," Dodger manager Walter Alston said after the game.

But there was one difference —the forkball. And Koufax was appropriately proud of it.

GOT THEM OVER

"I had a good curve, and my control was as good and it's been all year," the left-hander said. "Then I threw five or six forkballs—got 'em over, too."

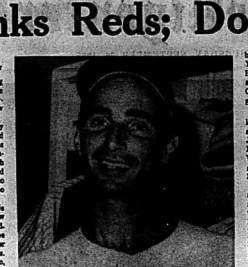
Koufax, 30, has been experimenting with the pitch this season but had thrown it only once or twice in any game before Wednesday night.

It only foreshadowed worse things to come for Dodger opponents, who have stood by almost helplessly while Koufax has compiled a major league record 382 strikeouts, eight shutouts and 26 complete games in 40 starts this season.

Koufax' 25 victories also equal his personal high achieved in 1963 when he won the Cy Young Award. He lost five that year compared with eight this season. He also reduced his earned-run average to 2.06 as the Dodgers eliminated the third-place Reds from contention.

In other NL games, Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed New York Mets 4-3, Milwaukee Braves beat Houston Astros 5-4 and Philadelphia Phillies edged Chicago Cubs 7-6.

STRUCK OUT 12



Koufax, who struck out 12, allowed only singles by Vada Pinson in the fourth and Deron Johnson in the seventh. The Dodgers' big blow was Maury Wills' three-run triple in the seventh off Jim Maloney, now 20-6.

The Giants went down to their sixth defeat in the last eight games despite a six-run rally in the ninth. Bob Gibson, 20-12, held them to two hits until they losing, but Curt Simmons and Hal Woodeshick had to come on before the Cardinals got out of it.

Jim Davenport hit a three-run homer in the rally, but that was nullified by Gibson's first major league grand slam in the eighth. Jim Pagliaroni's two-run homer in the seventh carried Pittsburgh past New York. Don Cardenas singled across a Pirate run in the fourth, then scored another in the same home as Bill Mazeroski singled.

Ken Johnson stopped Houston on five hits, bringing his record to 16-10. He received support from Mack Jones, who clouted a two-run homer.

The Phillies edged the Cubs on Billy Hoeft's two-out, bases-loaded walk to pinch hitter Bill Sorrell in the ninth.

Ontario Lacrosse 'Sissy'

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — "They're making lacrosse a sissy's game in Ontario," says Keith Jackson, coach of the western junior lacrosse champions.

"They're trying to take all the contact out of it," Jackson said in an interview Wednesday before the senior New Westminster Salmonbellies.

They lost the best-of-seven Canadian junior final in six games to Oshawa Green Giets.

Jackson said his club had the same problem in Oshawa as Brooklin, Ont., Merchants had in their national senior final here. The senior New Westminster squad won that seven game series 4-3.

"I understand Brooklin complained bitterly about the difference in the interpretation of the rules here. I can understand the problem. In Ontario they're calling penalties for breathing heavy."

Jackson said he didn't think the difference in refereeing beat his team. "We lost because we didn't play as well as we could have."

Playoff Flip Won By Giants

LOS ANGELES (AP)—President Warren Giles of baseball's National League conducted a coin flip and a drawing Wednesday to determine playoff arrangements in the event of a tie, and San Francisco Giants won favored positions.

If the Giants wind up in a tie with Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League pennant race, the first game of a best-of-three series would be in Los Angeles Monday. Then the teams would shift to Candlestick Park in San Francisco for games Tuesday and Wednesday, if necessary.

In the history of the National League, the Dodgers have figured in four two-way ties, 1946, 1951, 1962 and 1963 —and won three of them. The Giants have been in two—1951 and 1962—and won both.

Surtees Said On The Mend

TORONTO (CP)—John Surtees, the ace British racing driver seriously injured in a trial run here Friday, Wednesday tors his first real indication Wednesday that he's on the mend.

He asked for a cup of tea.

The 31 - year - old racing driver, hurt at Mosport track 40 miles east of here, blamed a mechanical failure for his crash, his father-in-law says.

Jack Burke, a company director in Winchester, England, said his son-in-law told him:

"As I came into that downhill curve, I found I had no steering. I said to myself, 'This is it,' and curled up, ready for the crash.

"I think as upright had snapped on the front suspension and the casing of the wheel to collapse."

First Prediction
Riders Will Top EFC Says Clair

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP)—Red O'Quinn has been studying statistics this year and has come to one vital conclusion:

Ottawa Rough Riders will have to finish in first place in the Eastern Football Conference to entertain any serious hope of reaching the Grey Cup final.

The Riders general manager said he had checked back over the last 10 seasons, "and the first-place club went to the final nine times."

"The only exception was the 1960 Ottawa team—which went on to win the Cup after a second-place finish."

That was the season the Riders eliminated Montreal Alouettes in the semi-final and went on to beat Toronto Argonauts in the two game total-point final after blowing a 20 - point lead in the first half of the second game.

Coach Frank Clair went out on a limb for the first time in his coaching career this year and predicted Ottawa would lead the EFC.

TIED WITH TICATS

To date, his forecast doesn't look too bad since Riders have are tied for first with Hamilton Tiger-Cats and have a game in hand.

But the next two weeks will tell the story. The Riders start a road trip this weekend with three games in 10 days, all against tough opposition.

The Riders start their tour Saturday in Calgary against the Stampeders and move on to Regina Monday to meet Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The Stampeders lead the Western Conference, and Saskatchewan is tied with B.C. Lions for the third and last Western playoff berth.

Monday, Thanksgiving Day, rates as the key game of the season as the Riders finish their road schedule with their third and final game against Hamilton.

"That's one game we have to win," O'Quinn added.

The Riders close out the season at home against Toronto, Montreal and B.C., and although the Argos and Als have been doomsday in the East, they have shown signs of reviving.

Can Hunt Ducks In Pelee Park

OTTAWA (CP)—Duck hunting will be permitted in Point Pelee National Park this fall but no decision on future policy has been made, the resources department announced Wednesday.

Hunting in the southwestern Ontario peninsula that juts into Lake Erie has been a thorny problem for years.

Regular hunting seasons are prohibited in all other national parks but duck hunters have been allowed access to Point Pelee since it became a national park more than 40 years ago.

Duck hunters and several interested organizations met with the Point Pelee advisory council last month at Leamington, Ont., in an effort to resolve the problem but no decision has been made.

RELEASE CURRINGTON

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference Wednesday released import halfback Bob Currington after two games and signed two more players. The new players are Jim Copeland, a Canadian defensive back, and John Atamian, a guard-linebacker from Notre Dame University who played two games this season with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the EFC.

THE NATIONAL Hockey League season doesn't open for another three weeks. All six clubs still have players to sign. But Boston Bruins are playing for money, as of now.

The news was broken to the Bruins Wednesday by Hap Emms, their new general manager, and it wasn't exactly greeted with cheers. For the money they'll be playing for is their own.

Before sending his players on to the ice at London, Ont., for a scheduled 90 - minute workout that ran overtime, Emms told them anyone sent off the ice by coach Milt Schmidt for laxity would be fined $50.

Schmidt said afterwards he was pleased by the response.

Emms, who comes to the last-place Bruins after leading Niagara Falls Flyers, their junior farm club, to the Memorial Cup, took personal charge of a defensive drill.

SIGNS FOUR

The 32-year-old general manager also signed four players—defencemen Leo Boivin and forwards Ed Westfall, Ron Schock and Tommy Williams.

Hull, who walked out Saturday when Reay wouldn't allow his sons, Brian, 5, and Bobby, 4, to skate with the team, said he would not press the issue.

"I understand now why the management wants to keep the dressing room strictly for players during training," he said. "We have a lot of young players trying to make the team and they shouldn't be distracted."

Still unresolved was the NHL scoring leader's salary for the upcoming season but he squelched the rumor that he was asking for $100,000. Hull and Ivan said they had discussed his contract Wednesday and were "a little way" apart.

At Montreal, coach Toe Blake praised his Stanley Cup champion Canadiens for their offensive efforts and, in the next breath, criticized his goaltenders and defencemen for making the scoring achievements possible.

Captain Jean Beliveau, hero of the playoffs last spring, scored two goals in Wednesday's workout, as did Dave Balon, John Ferguson and Yvan Cournoyer. Goaltender Charlie Hodge, defenceman Terry Harper and wingers Claude Larose and Dick Duff signed their contracts during the day.

At Peterborough, where Punch Imlach is still haggling players to determine Toronto Maple Leafs' lineup, the coach said he will rest centres Red Kelly and Ed Joyal and rookie left-winger Brit Selby for tonight's exhibition game against New York Rangers.

Tim Horton, one of Toronto's top defencemen, will be moved up to right wing for the game and rookie forwards Terry Clancy and Mike Walton will be in action.

At Kingston the Rangers announced the signing of veteran goalie Don Simmons and Vic Hadfield, one of their top right wingers.

MORRIS HURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference placed halfback Ron Morris on the 30-day injured reserve list Wednesday and reactivated guard Willie Taylor.

SETS RECORD

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP)—Art Arfons, holder of the world land speed record, set a world record of 268.62 miles an hour in the quarter-mile Wednesday. He used his jet - powered Green Monster.

Nicklaus, Lema Favored

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Jack Nicklaus arrived in Madrid Wednesday and immediately set the Canada Cup golf conversation afire by carding a birdie three on the opening hole in a practice round with teammate Tony Lema.

Nicklaus and Lema form the United States team in the matches starting over the 7,096-yard, par 36-36—72 Club de Campo course today.

The Americans are favored to win the team title at the end of 72 holes of medal play Sunday. The long-hitting Nicklaus, biggest money winner in one year in the history of golf, is the favorite for the individual crown.

Two-man teams from 35 countries, plus Hawaii and Puerto Rico, are shooting for total-stroke honors over a course baked by sun for six months and now made soft and soggy by days of heavy rain.

The Canadian team is George Knudson of Toronto, top Canadian money winner on the U.S. Professional Golfers Association tour this year, and Wilf Hensaniuk of Winnipeg.

The United States, South Africa, and Australia are favorites for the team crown.

Nicklaus has won the individual title the last two years. He joined with Arnold Palmer in winning the team title in 1963 and 1964.

The United States has won the team title seven times. Australia has won twice and Argentina, Japan, and Ireland each have one victory.

PRINCE VISITS

TORONTO (CP)—Prince Takahito Mikasa, younger brother of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, arrived here Wednesday from Montreal with his wife and daughter for a two-day visit. The party will go to Niagara Falls today.

Associated Press Sports Writer

What pitcher is striking out batters at a faster clip than Sandy Koufax?

None other than Sam McDowell of Cleveland Indians, whose individual performances have been overshadowed in recent weeks by the American League pennant race. Without fanfare, he has joined Koufax as a member of the exclusive 300-strikeout club.

McDowell, 23, in only his second full major league season, raised his strikeout total to 311 Wednesday night by fanning 12 in a five-hit, 5-3 victory over New York Yankees.

The left-hander, who has a 17-10 record with a league-leading 2.17 earned-run average, has struck out 10 or more batters in 17 games this season and is only the fifth pitcher in major league history to hit the 300-strikeout plateau.

Only Koufax in the NL and Rube Wadell, Walter Johnson and Bob Feller in the AL have reached that level.

In addition McDowell is fanning batters faster than Koufax, 29, despite the fact the Los Angeles Dodger left-hander has struck out a major league record 382. Koufax, who has worked 326 2-3 innings, has a 1.1 strikeout-per-inning rate to 1.2 for McDowell, who has pitched only 283 innings.

END WINNING STREAK

While McDowell was adding to his laurels, champion Minnesota Twins ended Baltimore's nine-game winning streak by edging the Orioles 3-2. Jim Kaat of Washington Senators five-hit Kansas City Athletics 9-2 and Boston Red Sox edged California Angels 2-1. Chicago White Sox and Detroit Tigers were idle.

Fred Whitfield and Max Alvis supplied the only support McDowell needed. Whitfield hit a three-run homer in a four-run third inning while Alvis, who went 4-for-4, singled home the other run in the uprising and then hit a homer in the eighth inning.

Jim Grant, the lone 20-game winner in the AL, gained his 21st victory against six losses when Bob Allison won it for the Twins with a two-run homer in the eighth inning. Allison also tripled and scored the first run on Andy Kosco's fourth-inning single.

Kaat brought his record to 1-1, pitching the first shutout and first complete game in his four years with the Senators. Ed Brinkman singled home two runs in a four-run first-inning rally.

Tony Conigliaro snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning, boosting the Red Sox to their victory over the Angels with his 32nd homer. A crowd of 402 was on hand at Boston—the smallest turnout of the season in the major leagues.

Makes Second NHL Bid

VANCOUVER (CP)—A second bid for a National Hockey League franchise was announced here Wednesday night by the owner of Vancouver Canucks in partnership with a group of businessmen.

The application was filed by Fred Hume, owner of the Western Hockey League team and a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame.

One businessman in partnership with Hume is Ozvus McLean, chairman of the British Columbia Telephone Co., who also is a director of Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast Baseball League.

The nine other businessmen involved in the bid were not identified by the Canucks.

The first bid for an NHL franchise for Vancouver was filed by a group headed by industrialist Frank McMahon.

McLean said there is no shortage of money among the Canucks group.

"Naturally, we picked people with money. But they include some Vancouver people who have a yen for getting things done without necessarily trying to make money."

He added that an NHL franchise would "just be a licence to lose money for a while . . . it will take a lot of money to establish a team, and we're willing to help build an arena if we can."

Almost all the money needed for a 16,000 - seat, NHL - class arena here has been pledged to the Pacific National Exhibition, owners of the Forum where WHL games are played.

NHL Has Many Changes

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Hockey League doesn't mind competing with big league baseball's early-season games but it has an aversion to battling for space on sports pages with the World Series.

And so baseball's big show will be well out of the way when the NHL makes its latest start in 30 years this fall—Saturday, Oct. 23, as Detroit Red Wings visit Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks meet the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

There has been a bit of criticism of the league's decision to run its regular schedule till April 3, latest finish in history, but NHL President Clarence Campbell isn't worried about the effect on the gate.

For one thing, professional and college football, which provides a certain amount of competition for the fan's dollar in autumn, will be safely out of the way next spring.

And besides, says Campbell, "we have never had any difficulty selling out earlier that late before."

Officially the schedule was designed to finish April 10, which would push the end of the Stanley Cup playoffs well into May, but "we compressed it and still retained 24 weekends of hockey."

ALL-STAR LATER

With the regular season starting later, the annual all-star game will also be later. Chicago coach Billy Reay takes his all-stars into Montreal Wednesday, Oct. 20, to meet the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens.

The game usually has been held on Saturday in other years but no one doubts the Montreal Forum will be filled for the mid-week match.

Along with scheduling changes and some rule amendments, there will be some significant differences noticed by fans — mainly familiar names with new clubs.

For first, you'll never guess Detroit finished first last season by the number of switches.

Parker MacDonald and Al Langlois have gone to Boston Bruins, Ted Lindsay has retired again, and Ed Joyal, Marcel Pronovost, Larry Jeffrey and Lowell MacDonald have moved to Toronto.

Andy Bathgate, Billy Harris and Don McKenney have been acquired from the Leafs.

Toronto, which finished third and like Detroit was knocked out in the first round of the playoffs, has also obtained Onslaught Kurtenbach from Boston Bruins for Ron Stewart.

Biggest change in the goaltending department could be the New York Rangers. With Jacques Plante having retired, they're relying on a new pair in Ed Giacomin from Providence of the American League and Gerare Mantiago from the Montreal system.

FINE FOR SLASHING

There have been a large number of minor rule changes during the off-season but Campbell says those are largely interpretations of existing rules.

However, there are two changes of interest to spectators. One is a $200 automatic fine for any player using his stick for a weapon, whether he connects with another player or not.

This fine will be levied by the league a s if the game officials have sent in their reports to headquarters.

"A player could get a minor penalty for slashing during the course of a game and still be assessed a $200 fine," Campbell says.

"Officials have a natural reluctance to award a match penalty because of the player imbalance it causes, so now the players will be assessed for less-obvious displays after the officials' report."

The other change is that each team must carry two goaltenders and that both must be dressed for the game, with the alternate sitting on the bench.

"There will be no delays for injuries to a goalie. The rule requires that the substitute be ready to board the ice when available, and the injured player will not be reinstated to action on the ice."

The pre-game warmup will be different and fans wanting to see the home team in the early skate-and-shoot period will have to be there at least 45 minutes before game time.

The full ice surface will be used for warmup with netminders at both ends. The home club takes the ice 45 minutes before the game and the visitors 30 minutes before the opening whistle. The remaining 15 minutes is used to resurface the ice.

NEW CHIEF REFEREE

To start the 49th season the NHL has a new referee-in-chief, chosen by the board of governors at the annual meetings here in June. Ian (Scotty) Morrison was picked to replace Carl Voss, who retired after 15 years.

A native of Montreal, Morrison will supervise the official-ing staff from an office in his Toronto home. He will be responsible for officials in the American and Central Pro leagues as well as the NHL but no longer has jurisdiction over the Western League.

Ron Ashbrener, the league statistician, says the NHL will start to count shots on goal this season rather than saves by goaltenders as in previous years.

Under the new system a shot on goal is defined as any "deliberate" action taken by an attacking player to "shoot or deflect the puck with his stick into or toward the opposing net."

This means the puck might miss the net or be stopped by a defenceman and still be counted.

Mele Was Cagey In Basketball As Well

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Basketball was fun Mele's first love. Had the Second World War not interfered, he might have become a professional cager.

"I don't know if you could compare me with Bob Cousy," the manager of the American League pennant-winning Minnesota Twins said, "but I think I was pretty good."

Born Jan. 31, 1922, in New York City, Mele excelled at both baseball and basketball as a youngster, but baseball was the favored sport at New York University, which he played for three years in the early 1940s.

Boston Celtics drafted Mele No. 1 in 1943. Mele, however, joined the marines.

He got out of the service in 1946, found his basketball was a trifle rusty and signed a baseball contract with Boston Red Sox.

Boston sent Mele to Louisville and Scranton in 1946. He had trouble handling the pitching at Louisville, but hit .342 for Scranton in 119 games.

That earned him a shot with the Red Sox in 1947 in an outfield which included Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio. Sam and he knew it.

He broke in with a bang, hitting .302 in 123 games and winning the American League rookie-of-the-year honors.

He played 10 years in the major leagues with Boston, Washington Senators, Chicago White Sox, Baltimore Orioles, Cincinnati Reds and Cleveland Indians, compiling a lifetime average of .267.

His playing days over, Mele managed for a second for the Senators in 1959 and became a coach the following year.

In 1961, he came to Minnesota with the Griffith organization as a coach under Manager Cookie Lavagetto.

When the 1961 Twins got off to a poor start, Calvin Griffith fired Lavagetto June 23, and named Mele as his successor.

In 1962, Mele nearly led the Twins to a pennant, finishing only five games behind New York Yankees. In 1963 the Twins were third, but in 1964 the club tumbled to a tie for sixth.

Mele's job was in jeopardy all season.

BC Junior Hockey Has Future

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia, short of natural ice but strong on indoor skating rinks, could become the hotbed of Canadian junior hockey, says Gordon McLeod of New Westminster, commissioner of the Pacific Coast Junior Hockey League.

He says B.C. junior hockey "is on the threshold of greatness" and just needs a push and financial help from a National Hockey League team.

Vancouver is planning a 16,000-seat arena on city property, a major stipulation by NHL governors if Vancouver is to have an NHL team in time for the 1967-68 season.

"B.C. could supply as many players to a Vancouver NHL team as Quebec does to Montreal Canadiens," McLeod said.

Charge Training Plan Puts Out Only 'Joe Boys'

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Canada's vocational training program does nothing more than turn out "Joe boys for odd jobs," the Ontario legislature's select committee on youth was told Tuesday.

Criticism of the program came in a 19-page brief submitted to the committee by Local 524, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Ind). The committee, headed by Syl Apps, member of the legislature for Elgin, is conducting hearings across the province into the problems of modern-day youth.

The brief claimed that apprentices are often denied rights set out in collective agreements and it is "suicide" for them to file a grievance.

It called for government-controlled programs to guard against malpractice, set standard courses and wages, and provide apprentices with immunity from layoff.

The union also charged that Indians are being deprived of their rights, and referred to a "criminal lack of facilities for decent living conditions."

Wounded Man Innocent Yet Officer Freed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A jury of eight men and four women has acquitted a police lieutenant accused of shooting and wounding a youth he mistakenly believed had raped his daughter.

The jury deliberating Tuesday found Lieut. Thomas E. O'Neal, 41, not guilty of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

Conviction could have brought a prison sentence of 14 years.

O'Neal shot the wrong man, police said. Carl E. Norman, 21, was cleared of a rape charge, recovered and testified against O'Neal.

While O'Neal was being tried, five men police say did commit the attack on his daughter were on trial, a few doors away, on rape charges.

Parts of the same story were told to both juries. O'Neal's daughter, Shirley, 19, testified in both courtrooms.

A jury of 12 women is hearing testimony in the trial of the five men.

Desalination Of Water Will Be Subject

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists and government officials from 33 countries will exchange and discuss research methods in Washington Oct. 24 at the first international symposium on water desalination.

While Canada is one of the few countries without a serious fresh water shortage, it will have a 15-man delegation at the meeting. Most will be there as observers.

"We have vast resources of water now but we have to make long-range plans now to ensure we keep it," said J. A. MacDonald, assistant deputy minister of the resources department and leader of the Canadian delegation.

"We don't want to be caught in the position of having to start a costly crash program if we should run short in the future."

USES A MEMBRANE

Dr. Srinivasa Sourirajan of the National Research Council has been studying the removal of salt from sea water for 10 years and is sure he has found the answer with a thin membrane that allows only fresh water to flow through when salt water is pumped into a simple vessel under pressure.

"I'm confident we can even double this figure in a short time," he said.

Dr. Sourirajan, who will deliver a paper on his method at the symposium, said his cellulose acetate membrane has produced more than 20 gallons of fresh water a day per square foot of membrane. The only other equipment required is a pump to keep the salt water under pressure.

Canada has also been removing salt from water with nuclear reactors. The enormous heat produced in the nuclear fission process is used for water distillation. This type of operation is expected to become practical in the near future, especially if it can be used in a combination station producing electric power as well as fresh water.

California Geologist Renews Search For Mystery-shrouded Treasure

By DON ANGUS

OAK ISLAND, N.S. (CP)—A California petroleum geologist, who read about this tiny island and its mystery-shrouded treasure troves as a boy in Colorado, has renewed the hunt for buried wealth that for weeks ago lured four men to their deaths.

Robert R. Dunfield, 56, of Canoga Park, Calif., said in an interview Tuesday he has purchased the controlling interest in treasure rights from the widow of Robert Restall, a 59-year-old Hamilton steelworker and motorcycle acrobat whose six-year search ended in tragedy Aug. 17.

Mrs. Restall, her son and daughter are to retain a small percentage, Mr. Dunfield said, but major shares in the venture are held by Jack Nethercott of Beverly Hills, Calif., Dan Blenkenship of Miami, Fla., G. R. Laperle of Bakersfield, Calif., and himself.

He said his shark probably would amount to 37 percent and total investment in the hunt chief participants would run to about $35,000. Mr. Dunfield was optimistic about recording whatever is hidden beneath this 275-acre island's hard clay surface within a month.

CERTAIN OF SUCCESS

"The way we are going about it we certainly should know within a month. I'm convinced there is something there. What it is and how to get it there I couldn't venture any opinion."

Mr. Restall, a few months before he died in a gruesome shaft, estimated the fortune to be at least $30,000,000. But Mr. Dunfield would not "hazard a guess." He also holds no theories of his own regarding where the legendary treasure came from and who buried it under the labyrinthine layers of oak platforms and intricate network of dead tunnels.

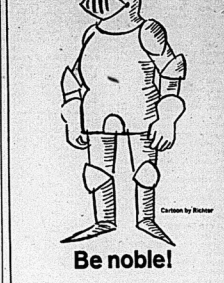
Generations of romantics have speculated that the English pirate Capt. Kidd, other Caribbean pirates or the crew of a French pay ship on an ill-fated voyage to besieged Louisbourg in 1758 placed the booty here—a snug shelter one mile from the Nova Scotia coast in Mahone Bay.

The island is pockmarked with numerous shafts and drill holes clawed or bored in the earth by several undiscovered expeditions since two young boys found the "money pit" in 1795. The futile efforts brought up only three pieces of gold chain, a fragment of parchment, now in the possession of owner M. R. Chappell of Sydney, and some scraps of cocoanut fibre. There were never any records of serious injuries or fatalities.

ISLAND KILLED FOUR

Mr. Restall died, apparently of carbon monoxide poisoning, when he tumbled into a water-filled shaft and three others, including businessman Karl Gruber of Long Island, N.Y., and Robert Restall, Jr., 24, perished after they went to his assistance.

Mr. Dunfield said he has been interested in Oak Island since reading its history in the Denver Post as a youth, but only decided to invest in the venture earlier this year after he had corresponded with Mr. Chappell and Mr. Restall.



He came to Nova Scotia in July to work at the enterprise and was with Mr. Restall a few days before he died. He said Mrs. Restall asked him to purchase a share of the treasure-seeking rights from the estate and to continue the search.

Now employing a crew of five and heavy machinery, Mr. Dunfield said two bulldozers have flattened most of the island in preparation for the arrival of a diggling claim"—a 100-ton ma-chine with which the new operator hopes to dig a hole 300 feet deep and 100 feet in diameter.

"If there is anything there it should come out," he said.

Canadian-born Artist Rolof Beny Photographer of Great Talent

By DAN POWERS

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)—Coming from anyone else, the words might sound pretentious.

But when Rolof Beny says he and his camera "react visually" to people, places and things, you don't smile.

Having earned international acclaim with his work, the Canadian-born artist and photographer obviously does more than merely snap the shutter.

And there is evidence that he does react visually—and provocatively.

It came out during an interview at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. F. Beny, where he related a few of the impressions of his travels in Canada in the last, three years.

For example, Canada's new flag: "Bold and inelegant. . . . Whenever I see the flag it looks dirty. The red is a weak pimento color."

The architecture of the Montreal and Edmonton airports: "Acres of corridors, purple and black leatherette chairs, functional chrome ash trays, bone-white walls and overhead lighting without excitement in design. They make the travellers feel like a number in a prefabricated no-place."

The work of Canadian artists: "There is too much indifferent expression being turned out. I feel so many of these movements, such as pop and op art, are superimposed on the individual. . . . I'm still rather old-fashioned and like those who can draw."

SOME IS GOOD

There were also some favorable impressions.

Place Ville Marie in Montreal "has a dynamic tension which very much suits the spirit of French Canada," he said.

Toronto's new city hall "is an exciting contribution to the moulding of the space of the city . . . a shock at first and a delight to the eye."

The 41-year-old native of Medicine Hat, Alta., is producing photographs of Canada to be published for the Canadian centennial in 1967 by Thames and Hudson of London.

Dogteam, horse-back, bush plane and Cadillac have been some of his means of getting around the country since he undertook the assignment. But he hasn't neglected the rest of the world.

Out of a three-month stay in Japan last spring will come Dust Before the Wind, a book of color photos.

A personality file of photographs of "people who do things," a project that Beny began as a hobby, will be ready in book form shortly.

He is working on three books of photographs that examine the great eras of man—classical Greece, imperial Rome and the Renaissance—for the Time-Life book division.

EXHIBIT AT EXPO

In November Beny goes to London for an exhibition of textiles and photographs. He will also have a large contribution in the photographic exhibition at Expo 67 in Montreal.

At a cocktail party in London last December, he met Helen Jackson, a charming and attractive former stage manager. She became his secretary and accompanied him on his latest round of travels in Canada.

Beny's dark, curly hair makes him look younger than his 41 years but his accomplishments, in fifths of a decade, suggest someone much older.

From years spent in the Mediterranean area he has produced: An Agean Notebook, 20 lithographs published in Lethbridge in 1950; The Thrones of Heaven and Earth dazzling photographs of the ruins of ancient Mediterranean civilizations published in 1958 by Thames and Hudson; A Time of Gods, a companion volume to Thrones published in 1962 by the same publisher, and Pleasure of Ruins, in which he interpreted in photographs the texts of Dame Rose Macaulay.

Primarily a painter before he lost his equipment in Spain and was forced to depend on his camera for sketches, he had 25 one-man shows of his paintings in Europe and North America by 1962.

LIKED TO BE ALONE

He has provided articles and photographs for such magazines as Harper's Bazaar, the Sunday Times of London, Chatelaine and Queen.

His friends, some of whom have provided texts for his photographic works, include Thames and Hudson publisher Dr. Walter Neurath, Jean Cocteau, Noel Coward, Herbert Read, Stephen Spender, Freya Stark, Julian and Lady Huxley, J. B. Priestley, Sir Laurence Olivier and Peggy Guggenheim.

A voracious reader (Thomas Mann, Chekhov, Gogol) as a youth, he took art lessons from a woman in Medicine Hat, later winning a scholarship for two summers of instruction at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

He found he could not work with others and preferred to be alone, also that he was not interested in talk about ears in which his father, an auto dealer, used to engage with Rolof's older brother Charles.

Feeling hemmed in, he wanted to get away. He studied English, philosophy, art history and architecture at the University of Toronto.

In Ontario he gave many exhibitions of his paintings, the theme of which usually was the Prairies during the Depression —"the dereliction of farms, churches, space and natural phenomena."

Strangely, the Prairie life he had sought to avoid remained in his work, giving it depth and perspective.

ENGRAVINGS SOLD

He studied graphic art techniques at the University of Iowa in 1945 on a fellowship, and studied art history and archeology on scholarships at Columbia and New York universities.

Beny lived in a cold water flat on New York's East Side when he got his break in 1947. His color engravings, Ecclesiastes, had won him a prize at the Brooklyn International Museum and this brought him to the attention of the Knoedler Gallery, agents for the Bortes and Harvard museums, which purchased the complete set for $1,000.

The next day he moved to a penthouse on Madison Avenue.

He went to Greece the same year as a guest student, at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

In Paris in 1952 he won a $3,000 Guggenheim fellowship in art.

Today he has studios in New York and London but his headquarters is a 12-room penthouse apartment in Rome.

He hasn't had a real vacation in 10 years and still isn't ready to slow down.

"Photography," he says, "still has such an explosive message to give esthetically."

Development Promised by NDP Leader

By BEN WARD

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — Stressing a party plank that Canada's resources should be developed where they are found, T. C. Douglas told an audience of 500 Wednesday night his New Democratic Party is the only one dedicated to making northern Canada a major manufacturing region.

Mr. Douglas appeared a bit weary after a day of election campaigning at Timmins, hard on the heels of a rugged overnight drive from Sault Ste. Marie, but drew heavy applause when he stressed his party's dedication to the principle of matching major industrial plants with mineral discoveries in the north.

The NDP leader had sunny, cool weather Wednesday for his tour of Timmins and Kirkland Lake, a sharp contrast to the rain that greeted his arrival in Sault Ste. Marie Tuesday and washed out his scheduled chartered flight to Kapuskasing Tuesday afternoon. He was forced to drive 360 miles to Timmins, most of it over secondary bush highway.

MEETS 200 -

He shook hands with about 200 persons at a free luncheon in the Moose Hall in Timmins which was sponsored by the Murdo Martin campaign committee. Mr. Martin is seeking re-election for a fifth term as a member of Parliament for Timmins. NDP member Arnold Peters also is in the running for a fifth term in Timiskaming, the riding that surrounds Kirkland Lake.

Mr. Douglas resumed his criticisms of Prime Minister Pearson's decision to call the Nov. 8 election. He said the Liberals were hoping to win it by default.

"The Liberal party has a slogan 'Let's keep Lester down on the farm'," he said, referring to the prime minister's limited campaign schedule.

"That's a very good idea the Liberals have."

He said Finance Minister Gordon is directing the Liberal campaign and this is a sign for the opposition parties. Mr. Gordon had dreamed up the vote - losing gimmicks of 1963 "and if he can't louse this one up, nobody can."

Socred Leader Thinks Payoff Made in Pact

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — "There must have been a payoff some place, in connection with the Canadian - American automobile agreement," Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Wednesday night.

Mr. Thompson told a political meeting in his home riding here "it is estimated that General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and Rambler in Canada will gain $30,000,000 as a result of the trade agreement in the next three years.

"The government says they must have this money to enlarge their Canadian plants to increase expected production.

"What industry in a private economy ever before had its money handed on a silver platter to it before it started out?"

Mr. Thompson told the small "meet - your - candidate" gathering the government must "answer why the benefits of this trade agreement were not passed on in the form of savings to the Canadian people."

He told a reporter after the meeting:

"I would like to ask Mr. Gordon how many dollars these companies paid to bolster the Liberal campaign. It would be an interesting fact.

"I don't know where they (the Liberals) get their $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 in campaign funds except from such sources. And I fail to understand the policy of Finance Minister Walter Gordon that permitted such a thing to happen.

"There must be a payoff some place."

P. M. Promises Increased Aid To Housing

By DAVE McINTOSH

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday the federal government certainly will have to consider an increase in housing aid to the provinces and municipalities.

He also said in a speech to the Ontario Association of Housing Authorities that new legislation in the housing field will have to be given consideration.

He steered away from politics in an address to the gathering but the federal government certainly will have to consider an increase in housing aid to the provinces and municipalities.

About the only political remark Mr. Pearson made was that he has had to move in great many times in his life.

He was accompanied to embassy to the home of the Opposition leader by the prime minister's residence.

"I think I should stay in this last place longer," he added. "Many landlords are trying to evict me."

Mr. Pearson flew here from Ottawa, arriving at noon, and returned to the capital immediately after his speech.

He flies to St. John's Nfld., today for a political speech and on Friday addresses the Canadian University Students Overseas organization in Ottawa.

Next week the prime minister will make political forays to Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Winnipeg, Dauphin, Man., and Windsor, Man.

At the airport here, on his way home, Mr. Pearson met beautiful and blonde Elspeth Anne Whitley, 20, of Surrey, England, the 100,000th immigrant to Canada this year.

She will join the National Ballet.

Mr. Pearson said federal housing aid now amounts to many millions of dollars a year. He said there will certainly have to be consideration given to legislation and to increasing the assistance required.

He said the federal government has three responsibilities besides financial aid to housing.

These were: To interest itself in helping to ensure that the assistance achieves the desired results; to establish national standards which would be objectives for the provinces; and to make sure the poorer provinces receive the special help necessary to reach these objectives.

Canadian-born Chinese Girl Joins Japanese Ballet Group

By KO SHIOYA

TOKYO (AP)—A pretty, Canadian - born Chinese ballerina now in Japan as part of a planned Asian tour says one of the reasons that prompted her to visit the Orient was the hope of meeting her father, whom she has never seen.

"That's one of the reasons why I left Canada," said 26-year-old Linda Yee.

Miss Yee, who graduated from the University of British Columbia in 1963 with a teaching degree, arrived in Japan recently and now is with the Komaki Ballet Company, one of the leading ballet groups in Japan.

Miss Yee, who makes her home at Victoria, said in an interview, "I wanted to join a ballet company in the Orient because I'm curious about the Orient." She plans to stay in Japan up to 12 months before moving o to Taipei, Singapore, Manila, Bangok and Hong Kong.

She said her father is in Hong Kong but she doesn't know where. "I have an uncle there, though," she said. "I will write to him and he will contact my father."

She explained her mother left her father in Shanghai and went to Victoria before she was born.

Though she is sometimes mistaken for a Japanese, Miss Yee doesn't speak the language and admits that is her biggest problem here.

"The other day a Japanese came up to me and I assume he was asking me street directions. All I could reply—in English—was 'I'm sorry, I don't speak Japanese.'"

Miss Yee hopes to make a debut in a Japanese professional ballet this fall, but said:

"That's all I want to do. I don't want to be a ballerina. I just want to have experience."

She said she has so many things in mind that she really doesn't know what she will be in the future. She plans to visit China "purely out of curiosity."

Her life in Japan seems pleasant. She goes to the ballet school at 10 a.m. every week day and comes home around 2 p.m. She spends the rest of her time reading, writing letters and talking with her friends.

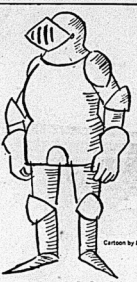
Miss Yee, who was born in Victoria and is a graduate of the University of British Columbia, said she joined the Japanese ballet company because she was curious about the Orient. ## Dinah Shore Says Charges 'Outrageous'



HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress-singer Dinah Shore is accused by her former husband of committing adultery with five men, court records disclosed Tuesday.

Miss Shore declared the charges are "outrageous" and "utterly, completely false."

The charges were contained in a divorce suit brought last Friday in Superior Court by contractor Maurice Smith, from whom Miss Shore received an interlocutory divorce decree Aug. 21, 1964.

Under California law, Miss Shore's divorce would become final a year later. But neither she nor Smith had filed for the final papers before he offered a counter-suit for divorce, listing five John does.

"The charge is outrageous—it is utterly and completely false—and the matter is in the hands of my attorney."

Hope Opens 16th Season With Stars of First Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Network television has been a topsy turvy place for the last few weeks with so many new shows and old shows with cast changes. Thus, it was comforting Wednesday night to find an old friend in a familiar content—Bob Hope in his first NBC comedy special of the year. Nothing has changed, and nobody wanted it to.

Hope in his opening monologue—often the brightest spot in the program—fired off his usual sharp remarks at his favorite targets — Los Angeles traffic conditions, smog, the Beatles, the Mets, LBJ, plus some new ones like the New York water shortage and even the impending visit of the Pope.

Hope now is in his 16th television season and as a sentimental gesture had three guest stars who were on with him the first television show—Dooglks Fairbanks, Jr., Beatrice Lillie (Mrs. Robert Lady Peel) and Dinah Shore.

Fairbanks and Hope were in a comedy sketch on a pair of astronauts locked in space for three years, but they had a tough time getting much humor out of the situation.

SATIRE'S BEST

The most amusing sketch was a satire on television and its kind of secret agent stories. Hope played a private eye hired to investigate the head of television program ideas in a network. Dinah Shore was the spy, in a sequin gown, for the other network. The setup gave Hope an opportunity to make fun of TV commercials, network executives and show business protocols generally.

A hit musical picture, Cat Ballou was Hope's final target for the night, a sketch with Miss Lillie who played the title role. The British comedienne is considered to be the funniest woman alive by a legion of devoted theatre - goers — this viewer among them — but for some reason her special style just doesn't come across in television. But then, neither could Ethel Merman's electric stage presence, more's the pity.

Another NBC show that probably can run as long as Hope's is The Virginian, a 90-minute western with surely a flexible format that it doesn't really need the continuing characters.

The show almost always consists of pretty familiar western plots, but that may even be one of its charms. At any rate, the viewer can tune in at almost any point along the way and in a minute or so know what has happened—and what will happen.

Louis Armstrong, Blowing Horn 52 Yrs., May Retire

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Louis Armstrong, who has been blowing the sweetest trumpet this side of Gabriel for 52 years, may retire next year.

"I got 12 weeks off next January," says old Satch, "and I may just dig this retirement jazz for size."

He was interviewed between rehearsals for a Dean Martin television show after having played the night before at Disneyland until 2 a.m.

Louis was about to take off on 42 one-nighters that will take him up the Pacific coast to Alaska and then down into Texas and Louisiana.

"Man," says Louis, "there just ain't no days off. Just lookin' at all that country makes me tired."

MAY HIT ASIS

There's also a possibility that he will go to South Viet Nam and play for the troops.

"It's up to the state department," he says. "Pops will swing anyplace."

Louis even blew behind the Iron Curtain.

"I had crowds in Budapest like I did in Ghana," beams Satchmo. "Those cats all swing like."

At age 65 Satch's health is good and so is his lip—which is never given a rest. He blows a show almost every night and practices every day—a ritual he began as a boy trumpeter in a

Teen-age Canada Students Will Be Given Newsletter on the UN

By JACK BUTTON

If you've read your newspapers this week or listened to newscasts you have heard the same phrase over and over — the United Nations.

There have been few front pages since midsummer that haven't referred to the world assembly dealing with the problems of our future.

How many Canadian students really know what is behind this 20-year-old experiment in providing a safety valve for the tensions of a rapidly changing world?

High school and university students will have the chance early next month to sample the first newsletter aimed specifically to them as members of the U.N., a newsletter that will seek their views and opinions.

I heard about the United Nations Echo from Tom Schatzky, national youth secretary for the United Nations Association, a personable young man who is also an executive member of the Canadian University Service Overseas.

Glaring headlines about clashes between India and Pakistan these past few weeks have meant more to Tom than mom Young Canadians in Ghana as a CUSO volonteer last year.

The Echo (the French version will be L'Echo de l' UNU) will invite book reviews, cartoons, articles — an entire spectrum of young Canadian opinion.

"It won't be confined to U-N activities, either," Tom said, "I hope students will write in to us to raise other issues such as Canadian unity and separatism. It's their newsletter."

Plans call for 2,000 copies of the first issue which means that not every secondary school in Canada will get one. But any school or student can.

"We'll naturally include all schools where we have UN Clubs or Current Affairs Clubs" said Tom. Once 600 high schools either belong to the national association or are affiliated in some way.

KEEN INTEREST

Which age level will the newsletter be aimed at? Association spokesmen believe students in Grade 10 or higher grades will be most naturally interested — but that doesn't rule out Grade 9 students.

Close to 2,000 Canadian high school students demonstrated a keen interest in the world organization this summer by attending seminars organized by the national association.

And, according to Tom Schatzky, the discussions were on a level that would tax many adults. "Students have an intelligent understanding of problems and issues that many don't suspect," he said.

Another color high school students, selected by their local schools, will attend a week-long seminar at the United Nations in New York next Easter.

"I think the first mistake people make about the UN is to associate it entirely with the debates on foreign policy that receive the most publicity," said Tom.

"The truth, as students quickly find out, is that the UN has a host of important but little known subsidiary organizations that are doing tremendous work. They need far more public recognition and support."

If your school isn't one receiving the Echo, how to see it? "I'd be delighted to hear from anyone interested in it" Tom. "And we also welcome material or ideas for articles."

Write to Tom and address your letter directly to Tom Schatzky, national secretary.

The editor of the most worthwhile student ventures that will be launched in Canada this year. Will I see your name in print?

AT THE PARK — Richard Hadya is going to get the surprise of his life when he wakes up to find a lion as his bedmate in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Clarence, the Cross-Eyed Lion" opening tonight at the Park Theatre, comedy drama of a cock-eyed King of beasts. The new Ivan Tors production in color also stars Marshall Thompson, Betsy Drake and Cheryl Miller. On the same program added thrill feature in color "Hercules, Samson and Ulysses". Both features are first Belleville showings. Complete shows at 7.00 and 8.40 p.m.

DERBY DELIGHTS DWAYNE in "WILD BIKINI" MUSICAL

Many a person has nursed a secret if inconsequential ambition since childhood. A case in point is comedy star Dwayne Hickman who admits he has always wanted to wear a derby hat, but never had the nerve or chance to do so.

His wish was fulfilled quite unexpectedly this year when for his starring role with Annette in American International's "How To Stuff a Wild Bikini," now showing at the Belle Theatre he had to wear the headgear. His role as dutiful Ricky opposite Annette Funicello in the color and Panavision musical, called for the long thwarted Dwayne to don the derby.

"Never again," said Dwayne after seeing himself in the hat, "now I wonder why I ever nursed that ambition, but then again, anything like that is always a no-no as anti-climax when you've waited so long."

General Spry Quitting Post After 14 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Maj.-Gen D. C. Spry, director of the Boy Scouts World Bureau here, is relinquishing his post after 14 years, it was announced Wednesday.

"I trust you will endeavor in the years ahead to ensure that boys become men who have faith that good overcomes evil, that confidence conquers fear, and that love and compassion illuminate men's roadway to peace and happiness."

His message is included in the bureau's annual report which shows a 7.1-per-cent increase in participation in scout-ing activities between 1963 and 1964.

Persons registered in scout organizations by the bureau to-talled 10,035,540 at Dec. 31, 1964, compared with 9,366,362 two years earlier.

French-language Station at Chatboro, Que., Turned Down by the Governors

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposal for a new AM (medium-wave-radiation) radio station at Lon-don, Ont., was recommended for approval Wednesday by the Board of Broadcast Governors.

The board, announcing deci-sions after a public hearing earlier this month, also gave approval for a new FM (fre-quency modulation) station at Tillsonburg, Ont., but turned down bids for a French-langu-age station at Chatboro, Que., to serve the lower Ottawa Val-ley and a Gravenhurst, Ont., substation to extend services on CKAR in nearby Huntsville.

Also recommended for ap-proval by the board were pro-posals for new French-language stations at Mont-aux-Sables, Que., both to be served by existing studios of CFCL in Timmins.

Both recommendations were made with the condition that the new stations be operated as part of the CBC French-langu-age network, as is CFCL.

MUST BE APPROVED

Proposal for the London sta-tion was by Middlesex Broad-casters Ltd., headed by busi-nessman H. J. (Joe) McManus. His September appearance was his second bid to operate on 1290 kilocycles in London.

After his first, the board sug-gested a year's delay to allow CKSL London, which had changed frequency from 1200, to get settled on its new band.

The bid was opposed by CKSL and CHLO in nearby St. Thomas. Both maintained the area could not support another station without cutting drast-ically into their revenues.

NO OPPOSITION

There also was no opposition to the proposal by Tillsonburg Broadcasting Co. Ltd., which operates CKOT, a day-time AM station. The FM operation would extend into the night as well.

The CKAR proposal for a station in Gravenhurst to be served from its Huntsville stu-dios was the second time the station has been turned down by the BBG on similar propos-als.

The proposal this time was for a daytime - only station. CKAR told the board it was li-censed as Muskoka - Parry Sound Broadcasting Ltd. but, because of high ground condu-tivity in the rocky Muskoka country, did not get an ade-quate signal into Gravenhurst although this community would be considered in its area.

The bid was opposed by CFGB in Orillia, which main-tained it is giving good service to Gravenhurst.

GIVES REASON

The BBG noted in its recom-mendation that it had denied the previous application be-cause of a general policy that applications to extend a re-broadcast service into an area already served by one or more Canadian stations "will not nor-mally be given favorable con-sideration."

It saw no reason to change this view in the light of the pre-sent application, it said.

The rejection of the Chatboro station was the third for a group headed by Donald H. Aitfield of Ottawa. The propo-sal this time was for a French-language daytime-only station. The previous one was for a bi-lingual operation to serve the population in the Lachute, Que., and Hawkesbury, Ont., area in the lower Ottawa River Valley.

"The area concerned should be permanently denied a lo-cal French-language radio sta-tion," the BBG said this time. "However, there is of the opinion that the controlling in-terests of such a station should have a French-Canadian back-ground in order to provide a sa-tisfactory French - language service."

The Aitfield bid was opposed at the hearing by CFML, a French - language station in Cornwall.

Proposals for the Hearst and Kapuskasing stations to pick up CFCL Timmins were made by J. Conrad Lavigne at a June hearing.

Approval for a series of ham shack licences was re-commended by the board.

One is for sale of CJRL in Kenora, Ont., also operating a satellite station at Dryden, Ont., by Stuart King to brothers Hec-tor Fraser Dougall and Chris-topher Dougall, operators of CKPR in the Lakehead.

The purchase was for a bi-lingual operation to serve the population in the Lachute, Que., area.

50-50 partnership in operation of radio station CJCH in Hali-fax. The other would bring Mr. Waters and Newfoundland broadcaster Geoff Stirling into partnership with Ralph Snel-grove, operator of CKVR-TV in Barrie.

In Poland 75 Per Cent Of Reds Are Catholics

WARSAW (AP)—At St. John's Cathedral, which still wears the imprint of a German tank that helped wreck it during the Second World War, there is a lifesize wooden statue of Christ on a cross which carries an isolating legend.

The statue is crowned with a wig of flowing black hair—genuine hair.

The Polish belief once was that the hair actually grew, and was trimmed secretly by pure young virgins. But one night a non-virgin slipped up to the altar and applied the shears, so goes the legend, and from that day the hair ceased to grow.

The lifelike statue of the crucified Christ forms a backdrop to the ancient, rebuilt centre of worship in Warsaw's Old Town.

People go to church in Communist Poland on Sunday. They go in droves, rough peasants in working clothes, entire families with small children dangling from their parents' hands.

Church spires stab the blue sky over this picturesque, war-battered city. The hammer and sickle is not in sight.

RELIGIOUS CHOICE

"The people in Poland have a freedom of religion," a young college student said. "They may believe what they wish and worship where they please, but it is best not to believe in anything."

It was a sarcastic reference to the Soviet ideology that there is no God and that all things come from the state.

Poland is 85 per cent Catholic, a Jesuit priest said. About 75 per cent could be termed "devout, practising Catholics." They regard Protestants as a strange breed and talk of them in whispers.

"Even 75 per cent of the Communists are Catholic," a worshipper said. "They don't try to hide it."

On Sundays—in contrast to Russia—Poles close their shops, go to church and take their families in their best Sunday clothes, strolling down the broad sidewalks of Nowy Swiat, Warsaw's FIFH Avenue.

At the Holy Cross Cathedral, where the heart of Chopin is enshrined according to his dying wish, services are held every hour, from 9 a.m. to noon. In one area there are seven Catholic churches in the space of a few blocks. Poles say there still aren't enough.

ORNATE BUILDINGS

Most of the churches are ornate with sculpture, frescoes and murals. Priests wear full-length black robes.

Services, as a rule, are relatively simple. The Mass is conducted in Latin, the Gospel is read in Polish. Mass dialogue or responsive reading has not caught on yet. The response is made by the acolyte or altar boy.

The percentage of women at the masses is about 3 to 1, many of them with small children.

The practice is to buy a flower at the door and carry it to an altar dedicated to one of the saints. This replaces the lighted candle.
